"We blush with shame for being Englishmen, and feel humiliated and dishonored. Please send me all newspapers you can addressed to French post office. It is useless sending them to the British post office." These sentences from a letter sent from Constantinople to London, and published in The Chronicle, indicate that the day has passed when all British subjects are sure of protection everywhere. The same letter says that the sultan of Turkey was duck shooting in his park at Yildiz the day of the recent massacres, and that he went to a concert in the evening. "Don't believe any rumors that the sultan is ill or a drunkard," says the writer. "He is a cynical, cruel fanatic, and very suspicious, but quite free from the taint of intemperance and debauchery. One thing he has made up his mind to, and that is the extermination of all Armenian males and the drafting into Turkish and Kurdish harems of all Armenian women."

IN BRIEF.

The first definite notification as to the American Board meeting at Toledo, Oct. 6-9, appears on page 456

San Francisco has won the honor of entertaining the next International Y. P. S. C. E. Convention, which will be held July 7-12.

We are asked frequently as to the pronunciation of the happy nom de plume which Dr. Watson employs. It is E-an Maclar-en, the "a" being the broad Scotch.

At our request a number of persons have sent us some account of their summer reading, and the setting forth of what they have individually gained will be an interesting feature of next week's paper.

Rev. H. H. Kelsey of the Fourth Church, Hartford, is doing the public a great service in calling attention to Connecticut's remissness in not establishing a State reformatory similar to New York's at Elmira and Massachusetts's at Concord.

What a relief it must be to editors of religious newspapers, who have conscientious scruples against taking any decided position on political questions in America till after the election, that they can tell the Turkish nation just what it ought to do!

One prominent newspaper in the West is said to be owned by men who believe in sound money. But the paper advocates free silver because the owners believe that to be the best policy to bring in dividends for themselves in that section. And yet that paper declares that this is a campaign of moral issues!

An interesting act of comity is foreshadowed in the announcement that Harvard University's share in the restoration of St. Savior's Church, Southwark, London, will be the gift of a memorial window of John Harvard, who was baptized in that church, Nov. 29, 1607.

Mr. Capen's address at the Boston Ministers' Meeting, which we print in full this week, was delivered with all his characteristic animation, and everybody said, Amen. It is being copied widely and read thoughtfully. Thus it will prove one of the most telling documents of the campaign.

The Scottish Congregational Year-Book shows that ninety-seven churches, with an estimated church membership of 15,000, have no fewer than 16,500 pupils in their schools and classes for the study of the Bible, which seems to show that our Scotch brethren are as much given to the study of the Word and doctrine as their fathers.

We New Englanders are inclined to think that our section of the country is headquarters for righteousness and that the verdict in Maine and Vermont for sound money may not indicate that there is as clear vision and honest purpose to preserve the integrity of the Union in the Interior and West. But it should not be forgotten that, while in Eastern States drafts were necessary to re-enforce the army to put down the Rebellion, Kentucky alone furnished her full quota of men without a draft.

Sabatier, the French Protestant biographer of St. Francis of Assisi, in a recent address at Grindelwald, after reviewing the present religious condition of Italy, France, Germany and England, insisted that nothing was more necessary than a revival of St. Francis's spirit, and he asserted that it was necessary for a few to live in absolute poverty in order to rebuke mammonism, for more to resort to manual labor, for all to show real humility and voluntary effort in social reconstruction and acceptance of Christ's ethics. Unless some such reformation comes he predicts an era of unparalleled social and political cataclysm. Who the Luther will be he does not say.

An official proclamation for a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer would be in accord with national precedents at this time, in view of the social and political crisis through which we are passing. But as that could hardly be expected we welcome a call, wisely worded, free from any political bias and showing a prophetic apprehension of the possible and probable results of present conditions, to observe Thursday, Oct. 8, as such a day of prayer for our country. It is issued from Chicago by a mass meeting of Christian ministers and laymen called by Mr. D. L. Moody. We trust that lovers of our country and of righteousness, who have faith in God, will everywhere unite in the churches in this day of prayer.

The visit of Lord Russell to this country for a second time recalls the fact that on a former visit, as he walked with Hon. W. M. Evarts alongside a wide stream across which George Washington is said to have hurled a silver dollar, Mr. Evarts told the tale recounting the physical prowess of the Father of His Country. The width of the stream and the proportions of the story caused Lord Russell to elevate his eyebrows as Mr. Evarts repeated the assertion. "You know a dollar went further in those days than it goes now," said Mr. Evarts blandly. "Ah," replied Lord Russell, not to be outdone, "and it must have been easy enough to Washington who threw a sovereign over across the Atlantic." As a witticism Mr. Evarts's remark was characteristic and excellent, but as a statement of fact it was not. The dollar of our fathers did not begin to have the purchasing power of the dollar of today.

Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia, in addressing Union and Confederate veterans in Washington last week, said:

Our continued existence depends upon our national morality, and our national morality depends upon religion. Therefore, he who seeks to undermine religion is the greatest enemy of his country. Of course, this opinion does not imply any union of church and state, which, in our circumstances, is out of the question, but separation of church and state does not imply separation of God and state. We justly boast of the great liberty of speech allowed in this free Republic, but, we may ask, may not such liberty occasionally degenerate into the most dangerous license? It does so when it is used to poison the intellect and the hearts of men by evidently false principles. Soldiers of the Republic, honest men, frown down and, if necessary, I am almost tempted to say, strike down the dishonest man who would thus seek to ruin the country which your fathers shed their blood to liberate and you shed your blood to perpetuate.

And yet with Archbishop Ireland and not a few of the priests saying the same thing, the fact remains that most of the Roman Catholic journals of the country are supporting Mr. Bryan.

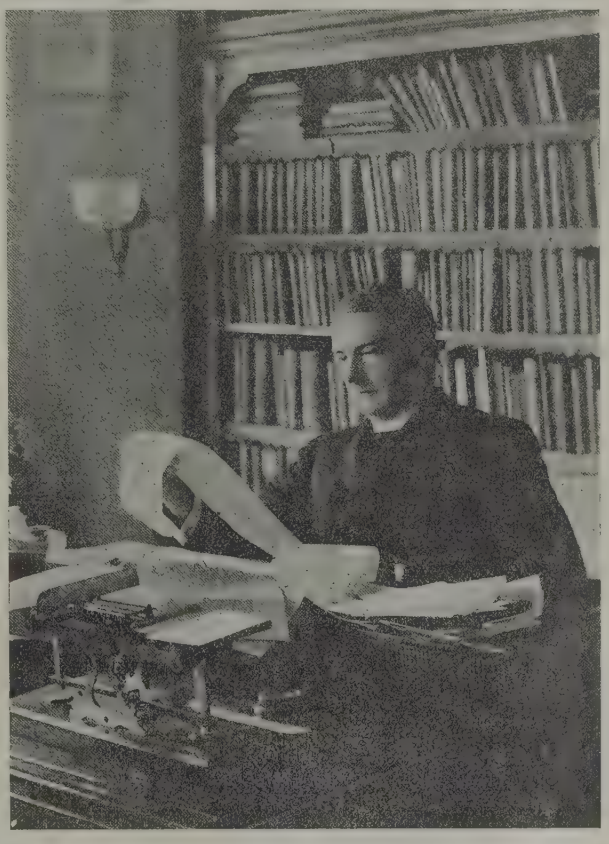
Such has been the response of the churches to the suggestion of a union missionary periodical that the missionary societies have come to a unanimous agreement. The societies included are the American Board, the Home Missionary Society, the Church Building Society, the American Missionary Association, the Sunday School and Publishing Society and the Education Society. Three of them have their central offices in New York and three in Boston. The name of the paper will be Congregational Work. It will be of sixteen pages and will be published monthly, excepting July and August, under the direction of six editorial representatives, one from each society. The publication of the paper has been intrusted to the C. S. S. and P. S., and the office of publication will be in the Bible House, New York city. The first number will be dated January, '97, but will be issued about a month before Jan. 1. All communications respecting the proposed periodical should be addressed Congregational Work, Bible House, Astor Place, New York city. Circulars to the churches calling for subscriptions will be sent out.

Ian Maclaren at Home.

A Quiet Hour With the Writer and Preacher.

By Albert Dawson, London Editor of The Congregationalist.

It requires a mental effort to associate the idylist of Drumtochty with a big, busy commercial city. But it is an indubitable fact that whilst Ian Maclaren has been moving the heart of Christendom, as it rarely is moved, by his pictures of life in a Scottish glen, Rev. John Watson, D. D., has been ministering to a large Presbyterian church in Liverpool. Dr. Watson's study shows signs of a full and varied life; it is emphatically a workshop, in which the useful makes no concession to the ornamental and the worker is too busy to aim at spick-and span orderliness. Piles of letters, a pocket Bible, an unfinished page of closely written manuscript, a copy of the Bookman, several volumes lying ready to hand are some of the things I cannot help seeing on the writing tables whilst I await the author of Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush. On the bookshelves such diverse productions as the works of Augustine, Letters of Jane Welsh Carlyle, Montaigne's Essays, Don Quixote, a set of Thackeray, works of T. H. Green and Dr. Martineau rub shoulders in a way that would have shocked the orderly soul of Dr. Dowbiggin. A few engravings hang on the terra cotta colored walls, and as my eyes rest on the Angelus the door opens and a strong, firm hand grasps mine.



IAN MACLAREN IN HIS STUDY.

The figure is tall and substantial; the head, notable in size and shape, is set on the broad, square shoulders like a tower on a rock; the clean-shaven face is strongly marked and the features pronounced—forehead broad and high, eyes dark and keen, mouth firm yet mobile; the voice is deep toned and the accent distinctly Scotch. The total impression is one of strength, equipoise, decision, fearlessness—of all the qualities, in due proportion and harmonious working, that go to the make-up of true manhood, the whole personality being pervaded and enriched by a broad human sympathy that, one feels especially, would make this strong fibered soul deal very tenderly with the infirmities of his weaker fellows.

At first I feared Dr. Watson would be as uncommunicative as the beadle of Pitscourie, but as conversation proceeds his whole manner changes, the reserve wears off, the somewhat austere face is softened by a genial smile, the expression of the eyes rapidly varies—now flashing with strong feeling, now twinkling with humor, now moist with emotion, words are enforced with sudden gestures and quick turns, until at last you can hardly believe that this animated, vivacious talker is the reticent person you first addressed, and the longer you stay the more difficult it is to tear yourself away from his fascinating presence.

It is sixteen years since Dr. Watson came to Liverpool from Glasgow, where for three years he had ministered to Free St. Matthew's Church, of which Dr. Stalker is now pastor. He was born Nov. 3, 1850, in the village of Manningtree, Essex, Eng., of Highland parents, who, when their son was four years old, returned to Scotland, and in his mother's native county of Perth most of his boyhood and early manhood was spent. At sixteen he went to Edinburgh University, and at twenty took his M. A. degree. He studied theology first in New College, Edinburgh, and then at Tübingen. Licensed by the Free Church of Scotland in 1874 to preach, after serving for a year as ministerial assistant in an Edinburgh church, he was ordained and appointed pastor in the Highland parish of Logiealmond, i. e., "Drumtochty." Here he remained only two and a half years, but it should be understood that whilst Ian Maclaren lays all his scenes in Drumtochty his character delineations are the result of observation and intercourse throughout the whole of Perthshire and during a longer period than the term of his Logiealmond ministry.

I asked Dr. Watson whether during his residence in the Glen he had any thought of writing such sketches as he has since published. "Yes," he said, "but I abandoned the idea." "Why?" "Mainly because I was dissatisfied with what I wrote. When I went to Glasgow ministerial work kept me fully employed, and on coming here to a new congregation I worked extremely hard. I had no time to think of writing." "Then how came you to write at last—seven een years after leaving the scenes and people you describe?" "Dr. Robertson Nicoll, though we had never met, wrote more than once asking me to contribute to the Expositor, but I declined. In the summer of '93 I stayed with him a night in London, and the next day he asked me to write for the Expositor a series of practical articles on the teaching of Jesus and for the British Weekly some stories illustrative of Scottish life. I refused to do either, because I did not consider my work would be sufficiently valuable for the Expositor, and I had made no experiment in regard to Scotch stories. Afterwards he wrote pressing me to write a story, and I at last sent him a short sketch. This he returned, saying it was not just the thing he wanted and telling me what he did want. I sent him another story, which he printed, and owing to his encouragement and the appreciation of the public I have since continued to write so far as my professional work allows." This was the "discovery" of a writer in a very literal sense, Dr. Nicoll having detected Dr. Watson's peculiar faculty after a few hours' conversation and without having previously seen a stroke of his writing.

That his rare power lay dormant so long is evidently due to Dr. Watson's modesty in underestimating the quality of his writing. He confessed that he might have written sooner if he had had confidence in his work. "I am pleased the public have approved what I have written, but that does not prevent me seeing its imperfections. I find myself in cordial agreement with every unfavorable review. If when I began to write a friend had come to me and said, 'Those stories are utterly worthless; you ought to have some regard to your reputation as a public man,' I should at once have put down my pen. Nor have I yet acquired confidence. That, I think, is constitutional. Highlanders are very pessimistic about themselves. I envy those men who are so self-confident that they consider whatever they do excellent though the whole world condemn it. I have always felt that the next story would bring the smash. Therefore," this in lugubrious tones, "I have no pleasure in my writing; I feel the catastrophe cannot be long delayed."

When a man of genius talks like this, one finds it hard to believe that he means what he says, but I can assure the reader that Ian Maclaren spoke with perfect sincerity, though possibly with a touch of unconscious exaggeration. No man is more amazed at the success of Ian Maclaren than Dr. Watson. "It is difficult," he said, "for a man who suddenly becomes popular to grasp the situation; sometimes I think it is a dream. Were I a young man I might be lifted, but," with a quiet, self possessed smile, "this literary fame has come to me in middle life and I know how to estimate it. The success of my writing is, I consider, partly due to accidental causes—for example, the reaction from 'realistic' fiction, the present tendency toward what is called the literature of locality and the wish for simple human writing. In a word, it is the return to the country, which is the spirit of the age, literary as well as economic."

It was amusing to watch Dr. Watson hunting about for reasons outside himself to explain the popularity of his books. He told me that what pleases him most is the large number of plain, simple folk on both sides the Atlantic who write to tell him that they have derived both pleasure and help from his writing. From every part of America, including the West and out of the-way corners, he has received appreciative letters, and as it has been impossible for him to reply to them all he asked me to say through the Congregationalist that he values them as his best reward.

"Do you write easily?" I asked.

"I don't write easily at all," he replied. "Although the stories I have written may seem very simple, they are very laboriously done. This kind of short story cannot be done quickly. There is no plot, no incident, and one has to depend entirely upon character and slight touches curiously arranged and bound together to produce the effect. It is not scene painting; it is nearly all miniature work," and as he spoke Dr. Watson, who was sitting (somewhat restlessly, I fear,) at his desk, made microscopical designs with his pencil on the blotting pad. "Each one of the Bonnie Brier Bush's stories went through these processes: (1) slowly drafted in arrangement; (2) draft revised before writing; (3) written; (4) manuscript revised; (5) first proof corrected; (6) revise corrected; (7) having been published in a periodical revised for book; (8) first proof corrected; (9) second proof corrected." It is hardly surprising that Dr. Watson has never read any of his work after publication in book form, except when he has had to refer to make connection. He would rather write a series of short stories, each one rounded and finished, though all connected, than a long story. Speaking of his serial, Kate Carnegie, now appearing, he volunteered the remark that it would be a perfectly just criticism to say that it is a series of short stories or studies strung together on a thread of love.

All know that "Ian" is Gaelic for John; some may have suspected that "Maclaren" is Dr. Watson's mother's maiden name; probably few have seen the full significance of the title Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush. The Jacobites sang, "There grows a bonnie brier bush in our kailyard," and wore the white rose as their sign. A Highlander, and with Jacobite traditions, Dr. Watson has always loved the simple, beautiful flower, which is found in many country gardens in Scotland. Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush was originally the title of the story of George Howe, the scholar, who, when he came home to die, used to sit in Marget's garden "beside the bonnie brier bush, whose roses were no whiter than his cheeks." "When a title was needed for the volume," Dr. Watson explained, "I chose this, because the suggestion of the book is that in every garden, however small and humble, you may have a flower. That is the whole idea of my writing—to show the rose in places where many people look only for cabbages. It is not my mission to explain, as so many writers are doing, what cultured morbid people are thinking about themselves, but to set forth what plain people, who do not analyze their feelings, really do and suffer. A clergyman sees a great deal of real life which is quite unknown to writers who engage in subjective analysis in their studies and describe moods which are purely imaginary or very limited."

It is part of the art of Ian Maclaren that the names he chooses for his characters, whilst perfectly natural, are subtly suggestive. Drumsheugh suggests a solid, well-to-do man, why it would be hard to say, and one feels that Jamie Soutar must be alert and keen. For a woman of fine character what better name could be chosen than Margaret—or in the Scotch vernacular, Marget? Dr. Watson remarked that the advantage of selecting extraordinary names, as Dickens did, is that they stick in the memory, but, being odd names, the tendency is to have not character but characters.

All who have wept over A Doctor of the Old School like to think, indeed can hardly help thinking, that Dr. MacLure really lived. I asked the author whether some of his characters are not individual portraits. Strictly speaking, "hardly any" he replied. "They are all types. People are continually writing to me to ask whether Dr. MacLure is 'real.' All I can say is that I have known several doctors like him and they all sat for the portrait. A composite picture is truer to life than a single portrait. You don't get life by individuals, you get it by types. I do not think any of my important characters could be fairly identified with any one person, living or dead." Some subsidiary characters are recognized in the district, notably the railway guard at Methven (i. e., Kildrummie), Sandy Walker—"an excellent man" Dr. Watson called him—whom tourists delight to address as "Peter Bruce." The surgeon who performed the operation on Tammas Mitchell's wife is popularly identified with Sir George Macleod, queen's surgeon, brother of Norman Macleod. Sir Andra, in "The Days of Auld Lang Syne," who takes the Servant Lass from the London hospital to his home to die, is put down as Sir Andrew Clarke. Some critics have singled out this incident as being improbable and therefore inartistic, but it so happens that it is taken literally from real life, though Sir Andrew Clarke was not the doctor. In pulpit and in home Dr. Watson has always spoken highly of the medical profession, to which some of his dearest friends belong. Two of his four sons (daughters he has none) are thinking of becoming doctors.

I sought Dr. Watson's assurance that his characters are really typical of people living in the Glen. "You don't exaggerate their good qualities?" I suggested.

"I don't think so," he responded. "But it is only fair to say that I have given prominence to good qualities and omitted or only suggested bad ones. One dark side of Scottish life I have not touched upon—the high percentage of immorality in some rural districts. But I let it be seen that Drumtochty men are apt to imbibe a little too freely at times, that they are hard at bargains and perhaps overthrifty and near. They reveal also a good deal of self-conceit, which is characteristic of the Scotch, and also an outward hardness and curious sort of cowardice about showing feeling which sometimes leads them into strange positions. But, despite defects, they are remarkably fine fellows. Their parlor manners may not be distinguished but the manner of their soul is good." The people in the Glen are evidently of superior intelligence, for Dr. Watson told me that young farmers, ploughmen and workmen used to come to his manse to read Tennyson with him and that it was not at all unusual to see a man studying a poet as he drove his cart. Many tourists now go to Drumtochty, and the inscriptions in the visitors' book in the Free Church vestry show that they come from all parts of the world. Ian Maclaren occasionally visits the Glen to revive his recollections.

Dr. Watson does not allow his literary work to interfere with his ministerial duties. Those who have made his acquaintance through his books naturally think of him first as author and then as minister. But he puts his church in the forefront, and restricts himself to a few hours a week for writing. "I never can be a man of letters," he remarked. "I have no leisure. I am now devoting five hours a day four days a week to pastoral visitation. The mornings I spend in correspondence, reading and pulpit preparation. At half past one I go out, and return for dinner at seven. Free evenings I give to literary work."

"You apparently have no intention of relinquishing your pastorate?"

"None whatever. As far as I can see so long as I live I shall continue in the ministry. Consequently I can never do very much literary work." Dr. Watson receives enough offers from editors and publishers to employ his whole time, but he accepts very few. He has undertaken to write a series of short stories to appear next year on both sides of the Atlantic, and after that he has a very important engagement which at present can only be mentioned.

Dr. Watson does all his writing without the assistance of amanuensis or typewriter. Though he pens his sermons in full, he never takes manuscript into the pulpit. As a rule he writes two new discourses every week, and rarely delivers an old one. "I frequently preach on an old subject again, but the sermon is not the same. I cannot preach an old sermon, because I must be enthusiastic about my subject. Preaching is very hard upon me. I get up a subject till I am quite full of it and feel as if there were nothing in the universe but this particular truth. You can't pick up an old sermon and redeliver it as if it were something new. You can't get into the mood. The sermon was yours once, but you have now no more to do with it than a tree has with last year's apples. All organic connection has ceased. You outgrow sermons as you outgrow clothes; you would look and feel strange and awkward in an old suit. A man should be measured for his sermons every week."

Although Sefton Park Church is Presbyterian, Dr. Watson's congregation comprises people of many denominations; university graduates, doctors, professional men and leading merchants are well in evidence. They are a broad minded, tolerant people, yet of an earnest, evangelical spirit. During their sixteen years' union, pastor and people have worked together in perfect harmony. The membership is 660, the building, which is one of the finest in Liverpool and cost £23,000, holding about 1 000. As soon as it was discovered that Ian Maclaren was Dr. Watson the church became inconveniently crowded. The mob came expecting to hear something witty or sensational. "A course of sermons of a severe character," said Dr. Watson, dryly, "soon scared them." His regular hearers include a considerable number of Americans, and it has long been his custom in the prayer of intercession to mention after the Queen the President of the United States.

In one part of our conversation Dr. Watson testified to the abhorrence with which all true Britons regard the idea of any conflict with America, and mentioned a remarkable incident that occurred when the recent crisis was at its hight. He was preaching in Barony Church, Glasgow, (where Norman Macleod used to minister) and expressed the strong conviction that war between two nations so closely akin would be a crime and must be prevented at all hazards. Instantly, for the first time in Dr. Watson's experience, a decorous and reverent Scotch congregation broke into applause as irrepressible as the cheer that saluted Dr. MacLure the Sabbath after his victorious Fight with Death.

Speaking of the ties which bind the two countries together, Dr. Watson told me that he had followed with much interest The Congregationalist's pilgrimage and deeply regretted his inability to go to London to meet the party. To the question whether there was any likelihood of his accepting an American pastorate he replied, with a smile, that never having been offered one he had not considered the matter.

CURRENT THOUGHT.

The New York Evangelist renews its plea that the Vrooman case be not made by the Synod of Illinois the cause for renewing the warfare within the Presbyterian fold. "The church cannot afford to keep up this irritating warfare. It is really beneath her dignity to get out her great guns of 'discipline' on every occasion of personal difference, and her power is being cheapened thereby. It is drying up the sources of her charity, because so sensitive is the heart of our piety that a false touch becomes worse than false teaching, and if love is wounded the wreckage becomes universal. Our finances, it is to be feared, reflect not only the hard times, but somewhat the 'hard feelings' which these controversies have evoked and keep alive. And the spiritual life of the church is suffering, no matter who talks to the contrary."

Shall clergymen preach politics, in this or any other campaign? This is a live question now and every such scene as occurred in Rev. Thomas Dixon's church, New York city, recently, furnishes an instructive answer to the question. The Boston Herald, in a sensible, balanced editorial on The Pulpit in Politics, sums up thus: "Here is the sphere of the pulpit. Clergymen may apply them [moral principles] to questions of the day when they directly bear upon such questions; but, in going into the details of politics, they should be entirely sure of two things—first, that they understand the points on which they undertake to enlighten the people; next, that they are able to do this without detracting from the dignity of their sacred office and impairing the reverence felt for it among the people. There are few clergymen who can do this with safety. It is a hazardous undertaking, even when morality is put into the concrete, in the cases of slavery and of patriotism—we mean, of course, not in the treatment of principles, but of methods. In the present campaign, when the question is one of action in finance, a point on which the pulpit is not at all an authority, the risk is very much greater."

On the Continent of Europe.

Significant Events and Conditions.

A Royal Priest. The consecration of Prince Max of the royal house of Saxony as a priest, July 26, at Eichstadt, and his celebration of his first mass, Aug. 1, in the cathedral in Dresden, are rightly regarded both by Protestants and Catholics in Germany as an event of broad bearings. Protestants have no objections to make if the young man has entered the priesthood from convictions of duty, but they fear lest there be political objects connected with the course he has taken. Catholics everywhere speak of the occurrence as a turning point in this German history. It is reported that the pope has written a letter expressive of his joy over the event both on account of his personal affection for the young man and his anxiety for the welfare of the church. He conveys his fatherly blessing to the new priest, together with a gift. It is eighty-four years since the last priest of the house of Wettin, Clemens Wenceslaus, Elector of Treves, Prince Bishop of Augsburg, died. With the exception of a Bonaparte Rome has had no priest of royal blood to represent her in Germany since that death. It looks as if she desired some one to serve her as a church politician rather than as a simple officer of the church, and as if she had found one after her mind in the person of this promising young prince.

Such events as these are arousing the Evangelicals to greater efforts to reach the people with a pure gospel, and to push with increasing vigor the work of their Evangelical Bund, a society which seeks to prevent Romanists from gaining undue advantages from the government. The last meeting of this bund, in July, was attended by ministers and laymen of high standing from every part of the land. The energy which Roman Catholics are exhibiting in Germany is also leading to larger gifts to the Gustav Adolphus Verein (a church founding and church building society) which operates chiefly in provinces where the prevailing influence is Romanist.

In Hungary. The spirit of the Vatican has also shown itself in recent orders sent to the bishops in Hungary. They are not only directed to animate their clergy, but to see that proper religious instruction is given in the gymnasia, that academic societies be formed in which anything stated in the lectures to which Catholic youth listen, contrary to the teachings of the church, may be at once corrected, that bishops look after the reading-books used in the schools, and that a demand be made for the full control by the bishops of the University of Pesth. In a word, ultramontanism is seeking to direct and determine the nature of religious life in Hungary. It is doubtful if this effort to introduce a Kultur-kampf into this country will succeed. Neither the bishops nor leading citizens approve it. There are too many married priests, too many church officers in high standing whose children are well known, too much friendliness between Catholics and those outside the church, too much love of independence on the part of Hungarians, for such an effort as this to succeed. The government, friendly to Rome as it is, will be slow to enter upon such a crusade against the liberties of its subjects. If the Vatican persists, it will be interesting to see whether, as Hungarian papers say, Rome will eat her food as hot as she has cooked it.

Is the Pope Re-entering Italian Politics? Has the pope again become a factor in the political life of Italy? His letter to King Menelik June 1, asking him to free the Italian prisoners and sent by special messenger, though apparently the outcome of personal sympathy with the sufferers, is generally regarded both in Italy and in Germany as the re-entrance of the Vatican, after an isolation of twenty-five years, into the management of public affairs. The Crispi press see in the movement the hand of Austria, an attempt to strengthen the papacy against the government, a first step toward the return of the clergy into political life. The letter was sent through Monsignor Macarius, patriarchal vicar of the Coptic Church of Alexandria. At about the same time that the pope was preparing his letter a committee of high born ladies gathered money, clothing and medicine for these prisoners, and selected a priest by the name of Weisonitz to convey them to their destination. The commissions are said to have been entirely independent of each other, but this is not believed. The priest and the vicar met at Port Said, hardly by accident, went thence on the same French ship, continued their journey together. There joined them also a Dr. Nerazzini whom the government sent out to secure the freedom of the prisoners. It is also significant that the Vatican seems to have had the first news of success, and that messages announcing the triumph of its policy were sent here and there to church magnates in Italy before reports could be made through the regular channels. It is not unnatural that the journals of the church should be in high glee, or that those who dread her return to power should be outspoken against her methods, even though they be shown in so natural a way as the sending of a friendly letter to a semi-barbaric king in the interests of humanity.

Awake to Social Issues. German church circles are showing a growing interest in social questions. Matters connected with the condition of wage-earners, small farmers and men engaged in a business which hardly sustains life are not only discussed with greater intelligence than ever in the public prints, but gatherings are held every year by bodies of men of the highest character and the greatest ability in the interest of the poor and unfortunate. The Evangelical Social Congress, recently convened at Stuttgart, is an illustration of the interest the Christian public takes in social affairs. Its sessions were brilliant. Financially the results were such that a surplus of more than 1,800 marks could be sent to Berlin. More than 200 new members were added to the organization. The political press reported the meetings fully. Some of the religious papers of the city made no reference to them, others attacked the positions taken by such men as Pastor Naumann, others were friendly and gave such accounts of the meetings as their space permitted. It is said that the feeling in the church circles of the city was almost wholly favorable. When it is remembered that the famous Dr. Stoecker, former court preacher in Berlin, has founded a new political party for the advocacy and defense of the principles of Christian socialism, and that such papers as Die Hilfe of Pastor Naumann are rapidly increasing in circulation and influence, it will be seen that more and more importance must be attached to these voluntary gatherings of gifted Christian men, whose single aim is to better existing social conditions.

For a More Positive Theology. A short theological course, to last from Oct. 5–17, and to be held in Stuttgart, has been arranged. Some of the ablest men in the country will take part in it. Its object is to furnish theological students and young ministers an opportunity for knowing the positions held by the positive branch of the church, and to present arguments in favor of the older evangelical views. It is thought that more attention is given in the universities to modern opinions than is justifiable, and that something should be done to supply this defect in ministerial training. Instruction will be by lecture.

The true basis for an estimate of a nation's wealth is to be found in the enjoyments of its members.—Prof. Arthur T. Hadley.

A Right Appreciation of Riches.*

By Ian Maclaren.

Much has been written in Holy Scripture and said by teachers of morality regarding the subtle snare and evil effect of riches, and no one can have seen anything of life or have any insight into character without indorsing such charges. Riches, more than any other influence, have blinded their possessor's mind to the exquisite beauty of Jesus' life, to the radiant splendor of God's kingdom, to the severe dignity of character, to the visions of imagination. When one falls under their baneful tyranny he loses all sense of proportion in life, he is deceived by false standards of rank, he becomes arrogant in manner, he is coarsened in thought. On account of the greed of money families have been rent in twain, lovers' hearts have been broken, high ideals have been flung aside, conscience itself has been besmirched and horrible deeds of cruelty have been done. The secret sin of many a saint has been the love of money. As the gold was concealed in the hair of the young girl of Browning's poem, the public stain on many a great man's reputation has been the taking of bribes. For thirty pieces of silver Judas Iscariot sold his Lord, and with money Simon Magus desired to buy the Holy Ghost.

If God has bestowed upon any one more of this world's goods than is necessary for the support of himself and his family—which superfluity may be called riches—then it is evident that this is a perilous gift, and it is intended to be a discipline for the soul. One must not be self-confident and take for granted that because he was in earlier years generous and unselfish he may not grow hard and mercenary in later years. Nothing is more common, nothing is more painful, than the decay of character with the years, so that the spring of fine impulses dries up within the man and his capacity for liberal deeds withers before our eyes. Cases there are, no doubt, where one has passed into liberty as he grew in riches—marvelous deliverance of divine grace—but for one such there are ten where increase of wealth has ended in meanness of soul. And surely there can hardly be a sadder irony than a man building larger barns for his goods, while an ever decreasing space will hold his illiberal and churlish soul.

It were, however, an extreme and unreasonable view to regard riches as a necessary and unmitigated curse. Were this the truth, then the path of duty and religion for one and all of us would be monastic poverty, and he only had done the will of God who had left all to follow Christ as did St. Peter and St. Matthew. This, however, were to change the whole organization of society and hardly for the better, since the day of this general surrender would be the beginning of general degradation. One has only to think twice on this matter to discover that the ethical good to be obtained in connection with riches will not as a rule be their refusal, but their management, and that the man who does his duty best for the race is not he who, through indolence or stupidity, acquires nothing, or having acquired something flings it away, but rather he who, having labored and received, uses his just reward for the highest good of his family and his fellowmen. This is the appreciation of riches.

From this standpoint riches afford three benefits to their possessors, and the first is achievement; and one means that in the effort, by fair means, to obtain riches certain solid qualities are created and fostered. One is thinking, of course, not of the people into whose hands riches have flowed, but of the people who have wrought hard to gain them. There are those who have inherited their possessions, who are often envied, but ought rather to be pitied. Others there are who seem to have obtained their wealth by some accident or turn of life, but who, it is more likely, have simply seized an opportunity for which they had prepared. Some may have amassed unholy gains by oppression and dishonesty, but their prosperity will be short lived. All those classes are to be left out of account in any ethical judgment, for it is evident that in their case the acquisition of riches cannot have gone to the formation of character. Take rather the man—representative of so large and honorable a class in a modern commercial city—who was the son of poor parents and began life in humble circumstances, who has prospered with the years and is now like unto Joseph of Arimathea. It has been the fashion of literature to put this man in the pillory and to make play with him, and to leave the impression that any scribbler who could string together a few verses, although neither he nor his verses had any claim to character, stood higher by the truest standards of worth and was of more value to the community. This man is also apt to give himself away by too often insisting on his own history, and speaking as if with his own sword and bow, and not by the good favor of the Almighty, he had achieved his success. But it is common speech which does him most injustice, and quite confuses the situation, for it is asked, "How much is he worth?" and then the answer is given in figures. If this were indeed his exact value, surely his life had been a sad fiasco and he himself was of no account. What he is worth is another thing from what he possesses, and if you go into the matter his fortune becomes a mere symbol to be translated from figures into qualities. Just as half a dozen books stamped with university arms show that a young scholar has made a fair beginning in culture, or a simple bronze cross on a soldier's breast proves that he has played the man on the field of battle, so does honorable success in business bear witness to character. It means that a fellowman called to do his work in his calling has not been idle and careless, flinging away his opportunities and denying his duties. It means that he has not yielded to the lower impulses of his nature and done foolishly, to the weakening of his mind and body. It means that he has resisted temptations to trickery, deceit and unprincipled work of all kinds. This ten or hundred thousand pounds are in themselves only dust and vanity. But consider them as x, and work the equation out, and they read industry, perseverence, thrift, intelligence, self denial, integrity. This gold is but another word for brain and conscience.

The second benefit of riches is opportunity, and this must be patent to every mind. Has not every one of us at times envied a rich man, not for his money, but for the good he could do; not for the pleasant garden in which Joseph walked of an evening, but for its use when he consecrated it to the Lord? Did ever the high office of wealth receive a more convincing illustration than when a millionaire of Jerusalem rescued the body of Jesus from outrage and laid it to rest, with honor, in his rock hewn tomb? In order of beneficence the prophet must stand first, for he declares God, and with him, as being of the same kin, must be classed the poet, the painter, the master of music. None have done so much for us as those messengers of God who have preached to our souls the kingdom of God and magnified its treasures. But after them for solid service give place for Joseph of Arimathea when God has touched his heart. Gold may be only yellow dust, but what is there its possessor cannot accomplish with it? He can enter a home when the head has been stricken with dangerous sickness and send him where the air is dry and the sun is shining, and so restore the husband to the wife and the father to his family. He can find some poor lad whom God intends for a scholar and open to him the gates of knowledge, and so fulfill one of the purest passions of the human heart. He can pull down a nest of evil houses and replace their hideousness with green grass and flowers, so that where disease and crime once reigned little children will play in their innocence. He can secure noble works of art and house them in a fitting building, so that the humblest of the people may possess those things in their souls eye hath not seen nor ear heard. He can raise in the midst of the care and labor of the city some house of God wherein the weary shall have a place to pray and the evangel of Jesus shall be preached.

And so riches also must be a joy for the great reward their Christian use brings to their steward. No man must give to God in order that he may get from God, for this were a base spirit that can bring no blessing; yet God is not unfaithful to forget any labor of love. No one can purchase heaven by his riches, yet one may so invest his means as to bring heaven within his heart. The recompense of liberality is automatic and spiritual. What victory is greater than his who, having the world at his disposal, makes it not the minister of his pleasures but the servant of his brethren, and so is baptized into the spirit of Jesus! What joy can be sweeter than his who has caused the sun to shine on bleak and narrow lives, and so is filling life with peace and plenty! What comfort is like his who in the straits of life is upheld and guarded by the prayers of the widow, the orphan, the poor and the needy, which, like the mighty angels of God, do continually protect him! What wisdom can be compared to his who has exchanged this poor currency of earth for the lasting treasures of heaven, so that when he departs from this world he leaves nothing behind save his worn out body, and finds on the other side all he ever gave with a thousand fold of increase! For he has made a happy exchange who gave to Jesus a garden tomb and received of him our Father's house.

*Copyright, 1896, by John Watson.

Charity Chance.*

A Serial Story by Walter Raymond.

Summary of the Previous Ten Chapters.—Charity Chance becomes engaged to Graham Poltimore, nephew of her benefactor, Miss Graham. His friend, Alfred Prentice, a poet, so prevails upon her impressionable nature as to detach to some extent her affections from her fiancé. Mr. Poltimore-Briggs, a pompous and self-seeking politician, who has charge of Miss Graham's property, is running for Parliament. Charity attending a political rally meets the poet and goes to his room.

XI PLEADING IN VAIN.

THE appearance of the room shocked her sensibilities, it was so small and mean. The corners were not square. The ceiling was so low that a taller tenant might have touched it with his hand. It had not the dignity of a garret, for the bay window was pretentious, and the paltry furniture and tawdry German prints upon the wall marked it the lodging keeper's own. Theodosia was right; he must be miserably poor. But how contemptible to tattle of it! And he too proud to accept their patronizing hospitality. She loved him for that. She could have been proud herself.

She stood in the window, which came almost to the floor. The backs of the populace were toward her, but she was in full view of the platform. A stranger was now speaking. He majestically pointed to Mr. Poltimore-Briggs, and all the ladies clapped their hands.

"A strange ambition!" sighed Alfred Prentice, with the condescension of a lesser god looking down upon mortals, as he handed her a chair.

The little man had shouted an interruption, and was being hustled in the street below.

"They make it all personal. They misrepresent so unjustly, when they only disagree," cried the girl, impatiently. She recollected and resented the absurd attack upon the integrity of Poltimore-Briggs. To know a person was, with her, to believe in him, and dislike could not shake that confidence.

Alfred Prentice looked at her intently. She was excited, and her face glowed with animation at the mere thought of injustice.

"I have missed you so much during these last miserable days," he said, slowly. "I have neither read nor worked. I could not concentrate my mind upon anything, because of a haunting fear that you despised me."

"Despised you! That was impossible. How could you think so?" she cried, almost with resentment, for this indeed pained her.

"You did not come into the wood. The interviews that were so precious, so rich in profit to me, were at an end. I had driven you from your retreat; perhaps deprived you of your greatest solace. And that reflection was more bitter to me than my own despair."

He nervously thrust his fingers through his long black hair. He was so emotional that he quivered with excitement at the sound of his own voice. Nothing could be more despairing than his utterance of the word "despair."

The loud aggression of the orator from a distance, driving home his points with the persuasiveness of a sledge-hammer, came through the open window, mingled with the laughter of the crowd. Every word was clear, but she did not hear what he was saying. She instinctively pushed back her chair. The people in the street were so close they would witness her agitation and read her heart.

"I could see no good in coming after what you said. It could never be unsaid, or—or—forgotten," she told him, sadly.

"No good!" he echoed. "When you were an inspiration to me. When every word was like the breath of spring, and the freshness of your belief in life gave me new hope, new faith, so that you became a necessity. No good!"

"I meant that—that nothing but unhappiness could result from our meeting each other. I felt it was not—not honorable. Yet I should have come once more if I had not seen you today."

Her voice sank. It sounded pitiful, this confession of weakness wrung from her in a moment of passion. It was a lament over a broken ideal.

He strode two steps across the little room, and threw himself upon his knees.

"Yes," he whispered, fiercely; "you would have come because you love me. I know you love me; you cannot deny it, if you would. I can see it—I can hear it in your voice and feel it in your presence here. But say it; tell me the truth."

She could make no answer. Her tongue dared neither utter the secret of her heart, nor hide it in a lie. She made an effort to be free, but he held her fast.

"Say it," he insisted, and she could feel his breath upon her cheek. "A love unspoken is a song unsung—a jewel hidden from the light—a gift of heaven rejected. Tell me you love me."

His words were impetuous and irresistible. In a voice so low it scarcely seemed her own she murmured: "I love you."

For a moment she abandoned herself to drift upon the full flood of acquiescence. She was carried, she knew not where—far from the squalid little room to an island of enchantment and forgetfulness. The outbursts of the people in the street sounded far away, like the beating of summer breakers against distant rocks. One moment of joy and exultation, and she awoke with his kisses burning on her lips.

She tore herself away from him, and again stood up in the window. She was in a tumult of resentment, and crimson with shame.

"I am going now," she cried, angrily; "I shall go straight home. I care nothing about the meeting. It is horrible to me, and I wish I had not come. Look! Look! What are they doing there? They are fighting. Where are they going to carry the man?"

She pointed toward the quay-side. The stranger whose contemptible party spirit had been displayed in those absurd comments upon the financial condition of Mr. Poltimore-Briggs, by impertinent interruptions brought upon himself the indignation of surrounding electors. "Duck him! Duck him!" yelled the crowd. He was seized on, and civil war raged around his luckless body.

HE WAS SEIZED ON, AND CIVIL WAR RAGED AROUND HIS LUCKLESS BODY.

The girl looked on with horror, but Alfred Prentice took little heed. To him it was only an argument to defeat her intention. "You mustn't go yet," he said, eagerly. "It is not safe."

"I cannot stay. I ought not to have come. But I wanted—I don't know what it was—I wanted to say something—but not that. I wanted to thank you—to show that"—

Her anger had melted away, and in the misery of hopelessness she burst into tears.

"Charity," he begged, quite tenderly, "you have said you love me. Come away with me. Tonight it is too late. We should get no carriage with all this foolery going on. But tomorrow—or next day."

* Copyrighted, 1896, by Walter Raymond.

She stared at him with her great astonished eyes.

"Do you mean run away?"

The frank wonder of the question made him hesitate.

"I mean take our destinies in our own hands and live out our lives unfettered by other people."

"Whatever I do shall be avowed and open," she replied, proudly. "Good-by."

"It would be useless to tell. I am poor. They would not let you"—

"That would be nothing to me. Good-by."

He did not take her proffered hand and she turned hastily and went out of the door. He called after her by name. "Charity. One moment, Charity." But without a word she passed down the stairs and into the street. Fearlessly she pushed her way amongst the excited people on the outskirts of the crowd, but when she came upon the quiet road she ran. Her great longing was to reach unheeded the solitude of her own room and think.

But Miss Graham's quick ear heard her crossing the hall.

"What, Charity, back so soon! Come here, child."

"I was late and the place was full. There was shouting and fighting. It was horrid and I hated it."

"Of course you did," purred the little lady. "Why, you look frightened into a fever. Graham ought to have known."

(To be continued.)

THE NEW BROOKLINE CHURCH.

The starting on Sunday, Oct. 4, of a new church in Brookline, Mass., means something to the denomination as well as to the neighborhood immediately affected by it and interested in it. When Congregationalism pushes out into a prosperous and growing suburban region or into a hitherto uncultivated section of a great city the denomination at large is interested to know how it is done and what is the outlook. That is why so many people are following carefully and hopefully Dr. Stimson's undertaking on the west side in New York City, which begins its services next Sunday, and a similar watchful sympathy is already assured for the new Brookline movement from persons far beyond the bounds of its own immediate range.

It will be remembered that the cultivation of this Brookline territory has long been considered one of the duties and privileges of local Congregationalists. Leaders in the denomination, like Samuel B. Capen, City Missionary Waldron, Secretary Coit of the Home Missionary Society, Dr. Quint, the late Charles Carleton Coffin, and the city pastors generally, have felt for several years that it was desirable to found a church in the vicinity of the Reservoir. But no organization or individuals were quite ready to take the necessary steps until last November, when afternoon services were begun. One or two objections were raised, to the effect that the new Episcopal church on Beacon Street ought to be allowed a monopoly of the field, but inasmuch as the objections did not emanate from persons who have ever been very strenuous in their desire that Congregationalism should perpetuate itself in the world, the projectors of these afternoon services went bravely forward. They reasoned that there was now and always would be a constituency for both churches, and this view of the case was shared by Rev. D. D. Addison, rector of All Saints Church, and by his people. He was present at the opening service and made a fraternal address, welcoming the new movement and expressing his purpose to maintain friendly relations with it. Mr. Addison has amply fulfilled this promise and the pastor of the new Congregational church will have no warmer friend among the Brookline ministers.

After services had been maintained through the winter and spring, through the generous co-operation of local pastors, it was felt that the time had come to make a poll of the neighborhood and find out how many would commit themselves in favor of a permanent movement. The result of the canvass justified a forward step and a number of pledges of financial assistance were made. Just at this juncture the new Congregational Church Union of Boston and vicinity put its strong shoulder to the wheel and voted to make such a gift as would enable the men on the ground to offer a larger salary than they had at first thought themselves able to give. It is to be hoped that in the course of two or three years at most this grant will be refunded to the Union. But the substantial help it has promised was one of the important factors in bringing about the present consummation.

Rev. H. G. Hale, who has been secured as leader of the movement, is thirty-one years of age. He comes of a Salem family and graduated at Harvard University in 1887 and at Andover Seminary in 1891. He went immediately to Warren, Mass., where he has labored for five years to the hearty satisfaction of his congregation. The Warren church has upwards of 300 members and is one of the strongest and most generous in the Brookfield Conference. Its membership has largely increased during Mr. Hale's pastorate, not only in times of revival but through the ordinary course of church life. Mr. Hale has succeeded also in systematizing and increasing appreciably the benevolences of the church and has taken special delight in his contact with the young people in their Endeavor Society and the Boys' Brigade. As a citizen he has concerned himself with all that makes for the welfare of the community. He has endeared himself to the churches of the neighborhood and to his brethren in the ministry, who spoke in high terms of him at the council called a month ago to dismiss him.

REV. H. G. HALE.

Mr. Hale is a thorough scholar, standing at the head of his class in Andover, and is a progressive thinker. But his preaching is not less spiritual than it is intellectual, and one of his Andover instructors, Professor Churchill, said of it the other day, "I should be quite content to sit under it from Sunday to Sunday myself." A man of high moral ideals and earnest spirit, Mr. Hale can hardly fail to impress himself upon the community and win for himself a place in our ministerial and ecclesiastical circles.

The opening service will be held at the Casino, Beaconsfield Terraces, Oct 4, at 10.30 A.M., when Mr. Hale will preach. A Sunday school and prayer meeting will also be immediately established and the council for the organization of the church will be held sometime in October. It is expected that at least fifty persons will constitute the charter members. For the present the Casino will be used as a meeting place and the exact location of the edifice which will eventually be erected will be determined later. Meanwhile the good will of all who believe in a wise extension of Congregationalism will follow the growth of this new plant.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. H. A. BRIDGMAN.

Topic, Oct. 4–10. Why I Believe in the Atonement. Heb. 9: 11–28.

The simpler the way in which we can look at the atonement the better. We are not theologians or philosophers, and we need not enter into the wordy wars which they have had with one another with regard to this doctrine. Indeed, the phrasing of our subject does not call for entering into the field of debate. It is well, probably, to understand that the theory about a thing is not quite the same as the thing itself. Little children know and enjoy the brightness of the sunshine long before they comprehend the Copernican theory of the universe. The death of Jesus is the fact; the explanation why it was necessary and what it accomplished is the doctrine. The fact never alters; the theory changes just as there are constant and variable elements in the atmosphere we breathe.

I presume I do not believe in the atonement just the way in which my grandfather did, or in just the form that certain great teachers have stated it, but I do believe that Jesus died for our sins. I confess that some of the expressions used by the writers of the epistles when dealing with this subject, even some in the passage now under consideration, are not immediately intelligible. If I had been brought up in the Hebrew faith, as were those to whom this letter was written, it might be easier to discover exactly what these phrases mean. To me the best approach to the subject is by way of the gospel narratives, which describe in such simple, yet thrilling, language how the Son of Man was crucified. No one who reads thoughtfully those great final chapters in Matthew, Mark, Luke and John can be a disbeliever in the atonement. He may not accept any other man's theory about it, but he must conclude that Jesus would not be his perfect Saviour had he not yielded up his life to the uttermost, that the death of Jesus is not simply the inevitable and beautiful ending of a life which was one long self-sacrifice, but that it was absolutely essential to bring to men a right idea of God, of sin and of salvation.

I believe in the atonement because the woe of the world calls for one. A religion without a cross in the heart of it would not meet the world's necessities. How else can we recognize the woes and injustices, the sin and the shame that are evident on every hand? Jesus must do something else for us than to preach about goodness, or even exhibit in himself a perfect character. He must put his great heart close to humanity's aching, sin-stricken heart, even if his own heart is thereby broken.

Pain is essential to the restoring of relations that have been strained or sundered. You have broken with a friend, and grieved and wronged him. Perhaps he may be entirely in the right, but he will suffer as well as you while the separation continues, and if you are ever reconciled it will be by the mingling of his tears with yours. Christ has suffered, first of all because he could not help it, both because he was God and because he was man. And he has suffered in order that we might come into new and larger relations with God, and thereby learn how ourselves to suffer, as Phillips Brooks used to say, "splendidly."

The Home

THE LAST VICTORY.

So faint with mortal weariness I lie
I cannot lift mine eye
To where the hills rise and the strong stars burn.
The voices of the night speak words of cheer
That fall upon mine ear
Only to break the rest for which I yearn.

Foes I have met undaunted. Pain and strife
Were ministers of life.
I greeted danger as one greets a friend.
Hopes died, but fears died with them. All my heart
Leaped to the hero's part.
So I were true, what need of other end?

But now—to feel my courage faint and fall;
To know death's grim, sure call,
Nor flash a quiver with exultant thrill;
Though unafraid, to sink in mute dismay,
O'erwhelmed with shadows—yea,
Even mine own faltering I can face, and will.

—Prof. Mary S. Case, in Wellesley Magazine.

OVER THE HILLS IN A STEAMBOAT.

BY MRS. HARRIET W. DUNNING.

Yes, really, that is the way we crossed the Swedish peninsula from Stockholm to Göteborg. The journey occupied three days and included every sort of water travel—canal, lake, river and ocean. The boat was necessarily small, but neat and comfortable, and the staterooms of about the ordinary size. The weather was beautiful and our ride such a pleasant, pretty one, and in some respects so novel, that it may be of interest to others.

Leaving Stockholm from its central island, near the king's palace, the Astrea turned inward to the lakes. Any one who has visited the Thousand Islands or the lakes of Maine can imagine this scenery, though he will need to omit the blue hills that sometimes form a background to Moosehead's wooded shores. The southern part of Sweden has no mountains and the hills rise so gradually that they do not often form an important part of the landscape. But we know they are there, else why must we climb 300 feet by about thirty-seven locks and then descend through as many more to reach the sea level from which we started?

After about two hours on the lake, which we had spent admiring rugged pines and picturesque wooden cottages along the banks, we approached a shore where there seemed to be no opening, but a little bridge modestly withdrew and permitted us to enter the Södertelge Canal. Its banks were lined with people who had come out to witness one of the events of the day, and women and children reached out their hands with packages of fruit and cake that found willing purchasers. The lock detained us but a few moments, and then we journeyed through the town that names the canal. Houses of quite the American style are on either side, with breakfast tables in the open air, and many evidences of happy country life. The summer in Sweden is short but people certainly make the most of it. Their gardens come to the water's edge and the boat goes slowly lest its wash should injure the banks.

From the canal we emerge among the coast islands, quite as numerous as those of the lakes but less wooded and more rocky. Occasional glimpses are had of the open sea, but the islands break the swell till we reach one special point, where our little boat rolls in a manner that shows she was built for lake and canal rather than for ocean travel. The roll does not last long. Some benevolent islands come to her rescue and the slow-coming darkness finds us in another canal, where the lock-keeper's house stands out against a black background and three or four men and boys, with a faithful dog, are the only spectators to our passage.

Morning dawned bright and fair, and while the Astrea climbed the fifteen locks of the canal between Lake Roxen and Lake Boren some of our party improved the time by visiting a church. It was a very simple matter to step from the side of the boat to that of the lock. Passengers were taken on or off as suited their convenience, and we would sometimes see one hurrying along at her side to connect at the next resting place. The Wreta Klosterkyrka, once belonging to a Cistercian nunnery of the twelfth century, the second oldest church in the kingdom, was worthy of a visit even if one could only see its exterior, and the happy ones who rose in season for it were warmly congratulated by those who missed it and who had to content themselves with a glimpse of its white spire among the treetops.

In this neighborhood the country resembles Holland. The meadows with their thatched-roofed cottages lie below the water level and the valley has a sheltered, prosperous air. One of the most picturesque points, however, breaks the resemblance, and as we overlook the smiling waters of Lake Roxen, from which we have climbed in a graceful upward curve, we realize that Holland cannot claim this charming landscape, but that it must be remembered by a Swedish name.

As we approach Motala, with its great engine factory, the paths are mostly shaded, and knowing that there are still more locks to detain us at the town we jump to the shore and walk quietly on, feeling the calm beauty of the morning and resting under the fine old trees that shade Von Platen's grave. This great water way, the dream of centuries, owed its completion to his untiring efforts, and his resting place is fitly chosen on a beautiful bank that overlooks its northern shore. We reach Motala in advance of the boat and have time to look about a little, to see the thrifty, well-kept homes of this manufacturing town and to stroll through a churchyard before we hasten back to the lock that ushers us into Lake Wettern, one of the largest and the most beautiful of the great lakes of south Sweden.

Lake Wettern is eighty miles long and about twelve broad. It lies northeast and southwest and we only cross the northern portion from Wadstena to Karlsborg. But what a lovely sheet of water it is! How clear and pure it looks and how far we can see down into it! Its northern banks are flat but some hills are seen towards the south, and the old castle of Wadstena and Karlsborg's modern fortifications give it the historic touch that so enhances natural charm. It is not always so serene, but has rather a bad reputation for sudden and dangerous storms. But it smiles sweetly upon us and our little boat sails boldly up to the very walls of the castle into the old moat, now used as a harbor. Karlsborg, just opposite, is the strongest inland fortress of the country, and commands not only the shore of the lake but the entrance of another canal that crosses to Lake Wenern. This canal is in places extremely narrow and it is impossible for boats to pass one another, so they signal from point to point. We spent the early evening on the Astrea's topmost deck, where the trees almost met above us, and watched the children, who in turn were watching us from the little path beside. Between the two great lakes of Wettern and Wenern is a small one, Lake Wiken, and between the two last named a memorial stone marks the highest point of the Gota Canal. From here we descend 155 feet by twenty locks and enter Sweden's largest lake.

Our second night is passed mainly on this lake, where the scenery is pretty though in no way remarkable, but the most picturesque and romantic part of the journey comes on the third and last day. The Falls of Trollhättan, over which more water rushes than at any other fall in Europe, formed the chief obstacle to the construction of this great water way. A canal avoiding them was attempted early in the last century, abandoned after many years of labor, begun again in 1800 with added locks which still proved insufficient, and finally completed about fifty years ago. The great staircase now leading down from Lake Wenern to the sea level is composed of sixteen locks and from six to seven thousand vessels ascend and descend it annually.

Of course it takes time and that is just what the tourist wants that he may visit the falls. Bright little boys are ready to be our guides and, though hardly needed, we choose one to accompany us. The falls are six in number, besides several rapids. They are broken by islands containing sawmills and other manufactories, between which the little bridges afford numerous fine views. The Toppö Fall, forty-two feet, is the grandest, but there is another beautiful one of more than half that distance. Over them all, large and small, and along the rapids, the immense volume of water tumbles with such a hearty, downright, joyous motion that one watches it with delight. It is so fresh and pure coming from the crystal lake above that even the factories do not soil it and as a clear green river it hurries on to the sea. From the falls a pleasant wooded path leads back to the canal and here we see our little boat, looking really quite majestic as she stands poised high above us. A clumsy trading schooner is just beginning the ascent, but she is hauled to one side in a basin for that purpose, and the "Astrea" steps quietly, slowly and serenely down to her place in the river.

Along the Göta Elf we now ride to Göteborg. It is a pretty stream with some rocky hills on the left. Towards the sea it broadens and forms an excellent harbor for Sweden's greatest commercial city. We approach it in the golden sunset light and our thoughts return to Stockholm, stately city by the sea. They can only be most friendly rivals, these two great towns. While Stockholm keeps the palace of the king and the prestige of historic and patriotic association, Göteborg, by her industry and commercial activity, secures the wealth that enriches both, and they are firmly bound together by that noble chain of waters that blesses the entire nation.

Little Clarence: "Pa!"

Mr. Callipers: "Well, my son."

"I have just been reading that there are no nails in use in Japan."

"That is probably true. What of it?"

"Well, then, pa, what do you suppose they do with their campaign lies?"—Puck.

AFIELD WITH YOUNG NATURALISTS.

OXYCOCCUS.

BY MRS. S. J. BUCKLIN.

Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems or gold;
Once more with harvest song and shout
Is Nature's bloodless triumph told.
—Whittier.

We will talk this month, young naturalists, of a small plant with a long name, pronounced ox-e cock-us. Some of you familiar with botany will know at once what plant I mean, but I will ask those who are not so wise to try to guess the popular name of this interesting, important member of Flora's procession, the end of whose train is fast approaching.

Perhaps you noticed in some meadow last July that certain parts were so thickly carpeted with a small, delicate, pink tinted blossom that the surface of the bog looked white. The flowers belonged to a creeping, evergreen shrub with small oval leaves growing along the edge of a stream or in the dampest part of the meadow, covering sometimes acres of ground. If you visited the same meadow in August you saw that the flowers had disappeared and on each stem were hanging several berries in different stages of growth. In September these berries ripen. Some of the early varieties have already turned red or deepened to a rich, dark hue, almost black; others are white, flecked with tiny dots of scarlet. Some are round, others oval or pear-shaped. The berries are so abundant that the surface of the ground looks crimson, and over the banks of ditches which cross and recross the meadow hang beautiful clusters of ruddy fruit.

When the dreaded Jack Frost "slides to the earth on a starbeam" Oxycoccus must be guarded with care, for its fruit has a market value and yields a large financial return. On a frosty night if the narrow ditches are filled with water a fog will rise, which protects the fruit. On one occasion, in a dry season, the owner flooded his meadow, using all the water in his reservoir. He dared not draw it off lest frost should come, and was obliged to hire a number of Indians, who went over the meadow on a raft and gathered the berries with long-handled rakes. This was laborious and expensive harvesting. When most of the berries are "white" the harvest begins. On a "wild" meadow men with box-shaped rakes having long, curved, steel teeth deftly collect many bushels of the fruit in a day. Merry boys and girls pick up the scattered berries by hand.

Oxycoccus is a member of the heath family and a relative of the blueberry. Under cultivation a "bog" is covered several inches deep with clean, coarse sand, which chokes the growth of grass and promotes the ripening of the berries. I have somewhere read that the cultivation of this plant started in New Jersey, where a crippled man and his wife living on the edge of a swamp gathered and sold the fruit of Oxycoccus to eke out their scanty income. The man noticed that whenever a piece of the vine was covered with sand it rooted, and so "Jerry" thrust his wooden leg into the sand and planted in the holes the vines which his wife had cut into pieces. The experiment succeeded, and in a few years "Jerry" was earning a comfortable livelihood by the cultivation of "the fruit of the vine." His success attracted the attention of capitalists, who bought extensive tracts of what had been worthless marsh land, which under cultivation became fruitful gardens, in New Jersey, Wisconsin, Michigan and New England, especially on Cape Cod.

Men, women and children are employed in large numbers on cultivated meadows, for the fruit is all picked by hand because rakes tear up the vines. The pickers camp out or live in barracks. They toil all day and spend the evening in mirth and merry-making. The work is hard but fascinating. The picker crawls on hands and knees. When day is done he feels lame and stiff in every joint, but a good night's rest refreshes him, the fresh air, the jovial life, attractive fruit and the money he will earn lures him again to the field.

If berries are raked they must be left some time in the chaff, that is, the grass and leaves caught by the rake, to "color." They are winnowed by pouring from one basket to another on a windy day or by a machine which has a number of fans and drawers. The chaff and dry berries are blown out and the soft ones are separated from the hard ones, which "bounce" into the drawers. They are then picked over on a board, around which eight or ten pickers can stand. The upper end is raised higher than the lower end, which is temporarily closed to keep the berries from running out. The fruit is poured on above a screen formed of a number of parallel iron rods. The rotten, dry and small berries fall through into a box beneath. The hard berries race down the incline like marbles on a bagatelle board. A skillful "sorter" sits at the lower end and watches the berries carefully as they run into a barrel. It requires a quick eye and hand to catch the poor ones. All imperfect berries are thrown out. The fruit is sent to New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and Western markets in barrels and boxes. The overplus is shipped in kegs of water to England, France and the West Indies. A small, pale red variety of the Oxycoccus grows in England, but the fruit is considered worthless by American growers. A beverage made from this berry is sold in the streets of St. Petersburg, and in Siberia the fruit is made into wine. It comes to American tables in the form of jelly or sauce, and no Thanksgiving day or Christmas dinner is considered complete without Oxycoccus.

Now, young naturalists, can you guess what it is?

A GOOD WORD FOR THE SUNBONNET.

President Frost of Berea College, in an excellent illustrated article on Appalachian America in The Ladies' Home Companion, gives a man's opinion of woman's headgear which is not without suggestion and value. He confesses to a peculiar admiration for the girl who wears a sunbonnet:

Her face is not public property; it must be sought for. The turned up "hat," perched on the top of the hair, far from protecting its owner, seems rather to be saying, "Look at me!" But the sunbonnet preserves the complex on of the wearer, and has, withal, an air of modesty. If you wish to see the face of the girl, you must get at just the right angle; and when it is revealed, you behold it framed and shaded like the heart of a violet.

Christ did not ground his Christianity in thinking or in doing, but first of all in being. —Ian Maclaren.

She who marries a man to save him will later divorce him to save herself.

Closet and Altar

Thy large bestowing makes us ask for more.

One adequate support
For the calamities of mortal life
Exists—one only; an assured belief
That the procession of our fate, howe'er
Sad or disturbed, is ordered by a Being
Of infinite benevolence and power,
Whose everlasting purposes embrace
All accidents, converting them to good.
—Wordsworth.

"Blessed are they that hunger and thirst." Think of the picture that that suggests—the ravenous desire of a starving man, the almost fierce longing of a parched throat. Is that a picture of the intensity, of the depth, of our desires to be good? Do we professing Christian men and women long to be delivered from our evils and to be clothed in righteousness, with an honesty and an earnestness and a continuity of longing which would make such words as these anything else, if applied to us, than the bitterest irony? O, one looks out over the Christian Church and one looks into one's own heart and contrasts the tepid, the lazy, the occasional and, I am afraid, the only half sincere wishes to be better with the unmistakable earnestness and reality of our longings to be rich, or wise, or prosperous, or famous, or happy in our domestic relationships.—Alexander Maclaren.

Realizing that God is our Father, our wish should be that his name shall be hallowed and that his kingdom shall come. He and his righteousness are first; our personal plans and wishes come afterward. The pronoun "thy" must march at the beginning of our prayer; the lesser pronoun "us" must march humbly in the rear.—C. E. Jefferson.

Have thou thy way with me, O God!
Although I beg my own;
Heed not the body's noisy cry,
But the soul's undertone.

Have thou thy way with me, O God!
And O, my soul, take care
To have thy daily attitude
In keeping with thy prayer.
—Charlotte Fiske Bates.

Almighty God, we use the same prayer and lift up to thee the same supplication as thy child of old, "Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us." May we behold that light in all the goodness and brightness there is in nature and more especially may we see it in all the goodness and truth there is in man. May we see the light of thy countenance when the sea shines with wondrous brightness, the light of thy countenance in the putting forth of the beauteous things of the earth, in the faces of those that love, in the glory of friendship, in the splendor of genius, in the ripples that come over the face of those that are stirred by the divine things of art. But teach us that the sweetest light of thy countenance is that which speaks of love and pity, of mercy and truth. When we have lost thine image then give us light; light that shall pierce through all the caves and chambers of the heart; light that shall reveal the dark places; light to run the race that is set before us; light to do thy work, before the night cometh in which no man can work. Of thy mercy bear these our supplications, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The National Crisis of 1896.*

By Samuel B. Capen, Vice-President of the Business Men's Non-Partisan Sound Money League of Boston.

I am not here to discuss current political events with any attempt at oratory. This is not a campaign of torchlight processions, fireworks and campaign stories. It is a serious hour, and men all over the country are giving careful thought and study to the great problems before us. We are here as Christians to reason together about the things which relate to our nation and, because of this, to the kingdom of God in the world.

Not since the foundation of the Republic has there been an election of such infinite importance as the one which is so soon to be decided. Not even that of 1860, which involved the slavery issue, went deeper to the very foundations of our national existence. It is a serious hour, and every patriotic citizen should be ready to contribute whatever he may possess for the public good. It is not a time for harsh or bitter words, and it certainly is not a time to raise a sectional cry, for the questions are not and cannot be sectional. This nation is one and our interests are common interests. And that man is a public enemy who attempts to array class against class, the farmer and the laborer against the "gold bugs" and "Wall Street."

It is equally foolish to make it a question of parties. There is a deeper question than that of Republican against Democrat. It is not a question of politics and policies, but takes hold of the warp and woof of the national life. It is not simply the question who is to be president from 1897 to 1901, but what is to be the policy of the country at home and its place abroad during the coming generations. It is a time for men of all parties, who would prevent disgrace and shame, to stand together as in 1860 to 1864, regardless of old party ties. There is one class of persons for whom we can have feelings little short of contempt—those who say openly that they oppose the platform laid down at Chicago, but who propose, in the same breath, to vote for the candidates nominated upon that platform!

Leaving out this class we must not forget that there is a very large class of our fellow-citizens who are honest in their convictions in supporting the Chicago ticket and to whom we ought, if we may, point out the better way. It should be a campaign, not of personalities and abuse, but of education. The Chicago Inter-Ocean puts the case accurately when it says: "There is serious work to be done. It will not be done by making fun of the fifty-cent dollar or by caricaturing Populists. The people are full of trouble. There are thousands of homes in distress that under ordinary circumstances would have plenty and to spare. They are looking for a way out of their troubles, and if they are saved from the demagogues it must be by showing them a better way to find peace and prosperity than is offered them by the propaganda of the Coliseum convention plan."

THE CONDITION.

And let us ask first the condition of our country. We find throughout our broad domain a condition of depression which we call "hard times"; many men are out of employment; factories are idle and few new enterprises are undertaken. Farm products are also lower than ever before and bring so little in the markets of the world that there is oftentimes but little profit left for the producer. The great and almost universal prosperity of the nation for the twenty-five years preceding 1892, a prosperity which excited the wonder and admiration of the world, has passed away and become largely a memory.

THE CAUSE.

Is it not timely, before we take up the question of how we can better our condition, to seek, if we may, more definitely its cause? If we can fairly determine that we shall be the better able to find the remedy.

First. We should not forget the overproduction which has followed the rapid increase in the use of machinery during the past one or two decades, the results of which are changing the old conditions. A girl working on a cotton loom today can do one thousand times as much work in ten hours as a man could do a century ago working twelve hours; and this rapidity of production has been greatly increased during the past few years. In the business with which I am most familiar, that of carpets, the machinery in this country can weave in six or eight months, when running on full time, all that can be consumed in twelve. Such an increase in the power of production has changed materially our economic problems.

A second cause can be noted in the working out of the old and universal law of supply and demand. To illustrate, the American farmer, who formerly received a dollar a bushel for wheat, because he had little competition, now has new competitors in the Argentine Republic and in Russia, who, with their cheaper labor, have taken to a considerable extent our market. The price of wheat is made in Liverpool, which is the great center of the wheat trade and is therefore open to the markets and the competition of the world. The wheat product of the world increased in the five years from 1889 to 1894 by the amount of 429,000,000 bushels, while the world's consumption, judged by the increase of population, is estimated to increase only about 15,000,000 bushels annually. Under such conditions how could it be otherwise than that the price of wheat should decline all over the world?

A third cause arises from the fact that during the past few years the income of the government has not been equal to its expenditures. As a result there has been a lack of confidence, enterprise has been checked and all business has suffered. An individual cannot long live beyond his means and be obliged to give notes to pay his expenses without getting into trouble, nor can a government, which is an aggregation of individuals, however strong, follow such a course toward bankruptcy without impairing its credit and causing uncertainty in all business matters.

A fourth cause of unrest has been due to what we often see in the selfishness of great wealth, and the feeling that it does not bear its full share of the burden of taxation.

A fifth cause of poverty and want in multitudes of homes can be traced to the evils of intemperance. This is not a new evil, but it is well to remind ourselves anew of the size of our enormous drink bill, which now amounts to $1,200,000,000 per annum. The total taxation of the country, national, State, county and municipal, is said to be less than our liquor and tobacco bill; and this consumption of liquor is greatest in the large cities, where there is the most wretchedness. Out of a total consumption of beer in the United States of 33,469,661 barrels, New York city drank 4,691,446 barrels and Chicago drank 2,648,335 barrels. Tens of thousands of homes where there is want now might be full of joy if the curse of intemperance had not come over them.

THE DEMOCRATIC-POPULISTIC REMEDY.

With this brief diagnosis of the disease, let us now turn to the remedies proposed by the two great parties.

And first the old Democratic party, in its Chicago platform, has adopted for substance the doctrines of the Populists, and proposes as its chief panacea for our ills the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation. In other words, it asks that permission shall be given to any one who has 371¼ grains of silver, the amount which our dollar contains, to present this at the mint and have it stamped one dollar. That silver is worth today a trifle over fifty-one cents; when the Chicago convention met it was worth about fifty-three cents, but it has declined nearly two cents more in about a month.

One or two things are often forgotten in this matter which should always be kept clearly in mind. The first is that the real intrinsic value of gold and silver is fixed in the markets of the world like that of any and all other articles. People seem to think that because of their adaptability to being used as money, as a basis of exchange in the markets of the world, they are in some way not subject to the same laws as apply to iron or coal or wheat. Supply and demand fix the relative value of gold and silver throughout the world just the same as any other article of merchandise. The United States Government might just as well try to change the laws that govern the tides as to try to change these intrinsic values.

And the second thing we must always keep in mind is that these metals have a two-fold value, the commercial or intrinsic or bullion value, and their mint or money value, which latter gives them their value as legal tender under the law. What our Government has been trying to do, and what it so far has succeeded in doing, is to make the 371¼ grains of silver, which really costs about forty cents to mine and which has a bullion value of fifty-one cents, have the same money or legal tender value as 23 22 grains of gold, which has both a bullion and money value of one dollar in any part of the globe. And it has been able to do this thus far because of the faith of the people in the power of the Government to keep the parity of the two metals. Twenty years ago it was easy to do this, because there was a hundred cents' worth of silver in the dollar, but it has been steadily depreciating year by year. The strain has been severe, many times almost too severe, but still faith has carried the day. Let me illustrate just what I mean. I hold in my hand a paper dollar. Its intrinsic value is absolutely nothing, only what it is worth as old paper. Its money value, however, is one dollar, because it bears the government stamp as good for that amount. All there is that gives it value is faith. In this silver dollar there is a combination of values. The commercial value is fifty-one cents, and because issued by the government there is forty-nine cents worth of faith in it, which makes its money value a dollar. In this hand I have a gold dollar; there is no faith needed in that at all. Its commercial value and its money value are the same. But suppose all faith is destroyed, then the intrinsic value is all that is left, the gold being worth one dollar, the silver about half that amount and the paper practically nothing.

*An address delivered at the Boston Ministers' Meeting, Sept. 21.

Now every one ought to see that if the mints of the United States are to be opened to the free coinage of all the silver in the world, for the benefit of the individual owners, all faith that the Government could keep the two metals at a parity would be gone, and gold, as in our late war, would be driven from circulation. The effect would of necessity be a panic, the worst the nation has ever experienced; for the more than 500,000,000 of gold, which is the basis of credit, having gone out of circulation, it would be necessary, in order to prevent so enormous a contraction of currency, to coin from 500,000,000 to 1,000,000,000 of silver. But the total capacity of the mints of the United States is only 40,000,000 silver dollars per annum. How long would it take to fill this void? Furthermore, with a debt accumulating all the time, our credit gone at home and abroad, and as a result an empty treasury by March 4 next, what is going to carry on this Government then? Would not the next resort be to the printing press and fiat money, to be followed by the whole chapter of indescribable woes which would logically come in its train?

DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.

We have already seen that the bullion value of a silver dollar is but fifty-one cents. Does any one ask why this rapid decrease in the value of silver? Is not the answer to be found in the old law of supply and demand? The world's production has been enormously increased, while the closing of the mints of the civilized world has diminished the demand in a still larger proportion.

In 1873 the world's production of gold was 4,653,675 ounces and of silver 63,267,000 ounces. In 1893 it was gold 7,605,909 ounces and silver 161,776,100 ounces. In other words, while the production of gold has increased 65 per cent., the production of silver has increased 155 per cent. Germany closed her mints to silver in 1875, and the nations of the Latin Union, France, Italy, etc., followed in 1876.

In 1873 the whole world produced but about 63,000,000 ounces of silver, and the silver in the dollar was worth $1.04. But when, in 1895, the world produced 161,000,000 ounces of silver, with the reduced demand as noted above, no wonder that it is worth only about fifty-one cents. Recently the potato crop in this country was 170,000,000 bushels and the average price fifty-three cents. Last year the potato crop was over 300,000,000 bushels, and the average price fell as a consequence to twenty-six cents. I ask again, How could silver do otherwise than depreciate? In the light of these official figures, would it not be the hight of folly to think of keeping up a parity of the two metals?

SILVER MONOMETALLISM THE RESULT OF FREE COINAGE.

Nor can we have two units of measure any better. The civilized world makes gold the unit of measure, and it is as useless to try to have two standards existing side by side as to have two kinds of yardsticks or bushels or pounds. With the present enormous production of silver and the vast accumulation of it in the world, free and unlimited coinage of silver by the United States alone, on a ratio of 16 to 1, would surely result in silver monometallism and a degradation of the United States from its proud position among the nations to a level with Mexico and India and all the other silver countries. Suppose Congress should pass laws in conformity with the Chicago platform, which (1) forbids any further sale of bonds to keep up the gold reserve; (2) gives Government the option to pay its bonds in silver if it chooses; (3) opens our mints to the free coinage of silver on a basis of 16 to 1; and suppose the mints of other countries continue to be closed to silver, then what? Not bimetallism, but silver monometallism. The statement is sometimes made that the Government is to pay $1 29 for every 412½ grains of silver; in other words, that the United States issues its decree or fiat that it proposes to make $1.29 the value of an ounce of silver, and that when the United States takes this position this would fix the price the world over and it would not fall to a lower level. But such statements are based wholly upon an error of the effect of the free coinage law proposed. Under the operation of this law our mints are simply to take silver bullion, turn it into silver dollars and hand the dollars back to the owner of the bullion. It is simply an offer to give silver dollars for bullion. The United States purchases nothing, and its part in the transaction will add no permanent value to the bullion coined. The idea that free coinage will restore the old price of bullion is an idle dream.

We have had one illustration out of the past that it would seem might suffice. In 1873 Germany demonetized silver, but the nations composing the Latin Union, viz., France, Switzerland, Belgium and Italy, continued its free coinage; but silver went on steadily declining in value until in 1876 these nations were compelled to close their mints to the coinage of silver on individual account. Now, if the Latin Union, with all its power, could not succeed, how is it possible for the United States, single-handed, to do this when silver has fallen from $1.29 to sixty-seven cents per ounce, or to very nearly one-half its former price, and the production of the metal has increased more than twofold? The metals could not be kept at a parity, and this country would inevitably come under the action of what has been called since the reign of Queen Elizabeth the Gresham Law, which is that when a country has two kinds of currency, and one is more valuable as a commodity than the other, it goes out of circulation and is exported, if the country owes abroad, while the less valuable remains. The attempt of the United States alone to have bimetallism must be a failure, and we should immediately have silver monometallism.

THE CRIME OF 1873.

May I say a word about what is called the "crime of 1873," about which so much has been said, as though our Government did something "on the sly"? Certainly nothing could be further from the truth. At the international monetary conference held in Paris in 1867 the United States was represented, and the civilized nations voted to give up the free coinage of silver and make gold the standard. In 1873 the United States acted in harmony with the nearly twenty leading nations of the world. But so far from being done in secret, it was debated in the Senate and House in 1870, 1871, 1872 and 1873, and the proceedings occupy 150 columns of the Congressional Record. Not only this, but in 1874 Senators Jones and Stewart of Nevada declared that gold was the true standard of value.

Moreover, it is foolish to talk about the demonetization of silver in 1873, for at that time there was neither gold nor silver in circulation in this country. Paper currency, being so much cheaper, had driven both the better kinds of money out. Do the people realize that the increase in the silver in circulation since its so called demonetization has been nearly two hundred fold? At no time prior to 1873 could there have been over 3,000,000 silver dollars in circulation, while at the present time we have in circulation, or represented by silver certificates, nearly 550,000,000.

As so much has been said about this "crime against silver," involved in suspending the coinage of non-circulating dollars, it should be noted that in 1873 the Government coined only 296,600 silver dollars and in the first six months of the present year it coined 7,500,412 which is 900,000 more than it coined in the whole seventy-three years up to 1873.

Furthermore, the per capita currency in 1873 was but $18.58 and today it is nearly $23, or an increase of about twenty-five per cent. Yet, in the face of all these facts, we are constantly told that the fall of prices during the past twenty-five years has been due to the contraction of the currency occasioned by the demonetization of silver. If this argument is a correct one, that the price of corn and wheat is made by the amount of circulation, as there is 182 times more silver in circulation now than there was before 1873, wheat and corn and everything else would be 182 times higher than they were then! For a long time it has seemed to me that there has never been anything in our history which has apparently been so misrepresented and misunderstood as this.

Carl Schurz, who was a member of the Senate in 1873, said in his memorable address in Chicago, Sept. 5: "I wish to be scrupulously courteous to my opponents. But as a conscientious student of contemporaneous history, I am bound to say that in the forty years during which I have been an attentive observer of public affairs I have never witnessed nor heard of such unscrupulous, shameless, persistent, audacious, cumulative, gigantic lying as has been and is now done with regard to the act of 1873, its origin, its nature and its consequences."

PROGRESS UNDER GOLD STANDARD.

Since this "crime" was committed, what has been the result upon the condition of the United States? We know very well that in Europe things have not improved, debts have increased, and the condition has nearly universally gone from bad to worse. How is it here? Since 1873 the United States has added to its national wealth a sum greater than all its people had saved from the settlement of the country to that year. From 1880 the market value of the property in the country increased from less than $44,000,000,000 to over $65,000,000,000 in 1890. In 1880 our whole public debt, national, State and municipal, was $60.73 per capita and in 1890 it was but $32.37. In 1880 the amount of property per capita was $870, in 1890 $1,039. It is no answer to this to say that this wealth has gone largely into a few hands. We are willing to admit that too much of it has, but after conceding this there has been, especially compared with conditions abroad, very general prosperity. The accumulations of the common people in Massachusetts have been largely increased in the past twenty-five years or since the adoption of the gold standard. In 1870 there were in Massachusetts 488,797 depositors with $135,745,097 on deposit. In 1895 there were 1,302,479 depositors with $439,269,861 in deposits, an average of $337 apiece. Taking the nation as a whole, there was reported in 1875 a total deposit of $849,581,693. In 1896 there were nearly 5,000,000 depositors with a total deposit of about $2,000,000,000, an average of about $400 apiece. These figures show the substantial gain during this period.

It should be noted that in 1870 the average wages paid to laborers in this country was $302 per year; in 1890 the average was $485, or an incraase of fifty per cent, while commodities have fallen on an average about thirty-three per cent.

Especial emphasis should be laid upon the fact that the purchasing power of wages in this country has been steadily increasing. A few years ago a committee of the United States Senate, composed of representatives of both parties, by the aid of experts, made an exhaustive report. It was found that starting with 1860 at 100 per cent., in the ten years 1870–79 the relative purchasing power of a day's labor (one hour shorter than before) was 122 per cent; 1880–89 151 per cent; 1890–92, 180 per cent. The laborer is from fifty to seventy-five per cent. better off than in 1870. Compare this with the condition in silver countries, where just the opposite is true, and then ask if we wish to experiment in this direction. A single illustration given by R. F. Campbell, the mayor of El Paso, Tex., is worthy of general notice. Mr. Campbell makes an extended list of the wholesale price of common articles of merchandise in the city of El Paso, Tex., and the City of Juarez, Mex., just across the Rio Grande, Aug. 7, 1896. We give a few as illustrations:

	United States.	Mexico.
Ham per pound	11½ cents.	32 cents.
Molasses per gallon	75 "	$1.69
Beans " pound	3 "	17 cents.
Cheese " "	12½ "	29 "
Tea " "	35 cents to $1.00	70 cents to $1.50
Sugar " "	5½ cents.	10¾ cents.
Flour " "	2½ "	6½ "

Unskilled laborers earn in the large cities from seventy five cents to $1 50 per day in Mexican silver, and skilled laborers $2.00 per day. In the interior the wages are from twenty to thirty per cent. less than the above. By this table it would take a farm hand two or three days to earn enough to buy a gallon of molasses. With such an example before us, in contrast with the proved results under the gold standard for more than twenty years, how can we be willing to risk the consequence of the proposed change?

EFFECTS OF CHANGES PROPOSED.

Facing now the future, let us ask who is to be benefited by this proposed free coinage plan? I would say (1) the owners of silver mines, (2) the speculator who thrives on uncertainty and sharp fluctuations, (3) such debtors as are not also creditors to an equal amount, and (4) employers of labor. I am sure there is no reason why this comparatively small proportion of our population should be benefited at the expense of the rest; and this would be the inevitable result.

For let us notice who would be injured. First there is a large creditor class, most of whom are worthy. There are in this class nearly a million of Union soldiers, their widows and orphans, who are creditors to the country nearly $150,000,000 every year. As noticed before, there are nearly 5,000,000 depositors in savings banks and similar institutions, with deposits of $2,000,000,000. Think of the loss it means to these people, who have deposited good gold dollars, to be compelled to lose one-half of their savings.

In this connection let us note especially the immense department of insurance. The fire, marine, life and casualty insurance reported in the State of New York alone last year was $26,000,000,000, contracted to be paid for in gold at 100 cents on the dollar. Can any one estimate the loss that is to come to all classes, especially to widows and orphans, when life policies are reduced one-half in amount?

Second. Great injury would come to all who are upon salaries, all those who have fixed incomes and especially upon the millions of the laboring classes. As has been noted above, these classes have all gained over their condition of twenty-five years ago. The 16 to 1 plan would change all this. The price of all commodities would increase, but it is a universal rule that the price of labor does not increase proportionately to the cost of living. The statistics of our late war prove this conclusively.

Third. I believe in the end it would work very great injury to the farmer. The plea has often been made in his behalf that he has mortgaged his farm, that the currency has appreciated so much, as measured by the value of his products, that it is only just that he should have the chance to pay now in a depreciated currency. In reply, let it be said that only about one third of the farms are mortgaged at all. Furthermore, most of these mortgages have been made within a few years, and there can have been but little, if any, appreciation in the currency since they borrowed their money. They certainly ought not to want to pay a debt at 50 cents on the dollar. But even if they should do this, their losses in other ways would more than offset this. The argument is often used for them, "We have had a hard time; we cannot be worse off and we may be better." But are they sure of this? If a man has had the neuralgia in his left cheek for several months will it help him to be paralyzed in his right arm? This nation is one body and when one part suffers all the parts suffer together. The many things he has to purchase, farming utensils, clothing, etc., would be greatly enhanced in price. The gain from the sale at an advance of the few articles which any one man produces would be largely offset by the increased price he would have to pay for the many articles he does not produce. Really what the farmer needs is general prosperity throughout the whole country, so that he can have a quick and sure market for his produce. He wants all men at work on living wages. During the late war prices for goods of general consumption were increased 116 per cent., but the wages of labor increased but 66 per cent. In other words, the purchasing power of the wages of labor was reduced more than one-third. Suppose you bring about a similar condition now and reduce by one-third the wages of twenty million people, depriving them of the power to purchase as much wheat, corn, etc., will not the farmer be the sufferer? He has seriously and permanently injured his best customer. No, the proposed legislation would be an evil and only an evil to the farmers. The remedy would be worse than the disease.

There are, of course, large classes that in a series of years would neither gain nor lose to any appreciable extent. I refer to the owners of real estate and merchandise. They would immediately advance the price of what they had to sell to a point which would cover all loss that would arise from depreciation in the currency.

I think there could be no better illustration of how we suffer together, and how the injury to one is an injury to many, than is evidenced by a comparison of the railroad earnings of the country in 1873 with those of 1895, taken from a recent issue of the Financial Chronicle. In 1873 there were 66,237 miles of railroads in operation and the dividend payment was $67,120,709. Last year, with 180,657 miles of railroad in operation, the real earnings for dividends was but $56,116,259. There was a larger amount paid out, but it came from the surplus of preceding years. In other words, with nearly three times as much road and two and one-half times as much stock outstanding, the railroads in the United States in 1895 earned $11,004,450 less for their stockholders than they did twenty-two years ago in 1873. And the reason of this is found in the fact that the freight charge per mile in the whole United States has decreased from an average in 1873 of 2.210 cents per ton per mile to 0.839 cents in 1895, a decline of 1.371 cents, or 62 per cent. And it is not a sectional decline, but seems to be quite uniform all over the country, as follows:

	1873	1895	Decline
N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R.	3.78	1.66	2.12 or 56 per ct.
Lake Shore	1.335	0.561	0.774 " 58 " "
Chi., R. I. & Pac.	2.29	1.05	1.24 " 54 " "
Mobile & Ohio	3.83	0.88	2.95 " 77 " "

Compare these figures with the yield per acre on the farm, as taken from the official sources, and we find:

VALUE OF YIELD PER ACRE ON THE FARM IN GOLD.

	Crop of 1873	Of 1895	Decline
Wheat	$13 39	$6.99	$6.40 or 48 per cent.
Corn	10.47	6.91	3.56 " 34 " "
Cotton	24.81	14.74	10.07 " 41 " "

The average decline of these great staples is thus seen to be forty-one per cent., while freight charges have decreased sixty-two per cent. It will thus be seen how the great railroad interests of the country have suffered with the farmers, and that the statement sometimes made that "railroad rates have not been reduced to keep pace with falling prices" is incorrect.

Finally, let it be said that even if more money was in some way put into circulation no more would be given to any individual except in exchange for labor or property.

"Free silver" is not to be given away to all comers. We shall get it only by honest toil or by exchanging it for some personal property or real estate. If free coinage of silver is really to give us only about a fifty cent dollar is it an honest dollar to pay debts with, and ought we to advocate it? If it means a 100 cent dollar, as some claim, equal to a gold dollar, it will cost us just as many hours to earn one then as it does now. Then where is the gain? The remark is sometimes made that the people in the country fared pretty well from 1860 to 1864, wages were good, etc. But the condition then was entirely different from that of today. At that time a million men were withdrawn from industrial pursuits to enter the army, and there was an enormous customer in the person of the national Government, which was buying goods of various kinds by the hundred million and borrowing on the future to pay the debt. But today there is no army to call for men, and there is no such customer to buy our produce and our manufactures. Certainly there can be no such comparison between 1860 and 1896.

THE OTHER PLANKS.

There is space only to refer briefly to the other points in the Democratic platform as a cure for our ills. Our citizens are no longer to be permitted to make contracts in the world's standard; the national Government is to have no right in time of peace, when its revenues are not equal to its expenses, to issue bonds; and the civil service is again to be the spoils of the politician. But more perilous than all is the declaration, "Arbitrary interference by Federal authorities in local affairs is a violation of the Constitution of the United States and a crime against free institutions." The power of the national Government to put down mob law when the State authorities fail is thus called in question, and the old issue, which we supposed was forever settled at Appomattox, viz., the absolute supremacy of the Federal power in every State, is reopened. Of course, this plank is the result of the action of the United States Government in the Chicago riots in 1894, when there was a condition bordering on anarchy and the whole nation dreaded the outcome. No one can fail to remember the relief that came to the nation at the prompt action of the President; and the Senate, by very nearly a unanimous vote, voiced the universal feeling in the following words: "The action of the President and his Administration has the full sympathy and support of the law-abiding masses of the people of the United States, and he will be supported by all departments of the Government and by the power and resources of the entire nation." With this recent history before us, it would not have seemed possible that any political party would dare to appeal to the nation for votes upon the plank above quoted.

And what shall be said about the attack upon our Supreme Court, the crown jewel in the plan of our American republic, which again and again has delivered its decree, to which Congress and the President have bowed? Granted that all its decisions have not been acceptable to our people; yet, as a whole and in a series of years, it has stood as a great conservator of the public interests. To suggest now that for political reasons this final tribunal shall be enlarged, or its judges removed, or its province in any way interfered with, is the severest blow that can be struck against the national safety. No wonder that the great conservative forces of the nation, irrespective of party, are rising above partisanship, feeling that the questions involved in this campaign touch the very foundations of the nation's existence.

THE REPUBLICAN REMEDY.

In contrast with all this, the Republican party proposes, as the first step to a remedy, to restore the public confidence. It declares that it is "unalterably opposed to every measure calculated to debase our currency or impair the credit of our country. We are therefore opposed to the free coinage of silver, except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote; and until such agreement can be obtained the existing gold standard must be preserved." It recognizes the great truth that no nation alone, however strong, and with large business interests all over the world, can possibly cut loose from the universal standard of the civilized world, and that the only possible hope for bimetallism must come through united action. The success of the 16 to 1 plan in this country, which would open our mints to the thousands of millions of silver in the whole world, enabling other nations to unload their surplus upon us, would be a deathblow to all international bimetallism for a decade at least.

The Republican party is unwilling to have the currency debased. It is the lifeblood of the nation's commerce, and when it is vitiated there is a poison and disease through the whole body.

On the tariff issue it proposes such duties "as will not only furnish adequate revenue for the necessary expenses of the Government, but will protect American labor from degradation to the wage level of other lands." It also pledges anew its purpose to renew our reciprocity arrangements with other nations, so that we may "secure enlarged markets for the products of our farms, forests and factories."

It is not more depreciated dollars that we need but more customers. It proposes such a policy as shall keep our mills busy, as shall foster new enterprises, as will keep our labor employed, so that the farmer can have a better home market for his products, while at the same time enacting such laws as shall enlarge our markets abroad.

Free silver will not destroy our competitors abroad or give us a single new customer. What we need is universal activity of all classes. This can come only by a restoration of the public confidence, which this silver discussion has so largely destroyed. It has been true in every country and in every age that there can never be confidence or faith in the future unless there is stability in the currency.

What the newer parts of the country especially need today is capital to enable them to develop their boundless resources. That capital they can obtain in any reasonable amount when confidence is restored, but until then there is, and there will be, paralysis. It is unreasonable to expect capital to be loaned in new ventures if it is uncertain whether or not it is to be returned in a depreciated form.

In short, what the Republican party proposes is such legislation as will prevent the necessity of the further sale of any bonds, as will enable capital to be put at work without further risk, as will keep our factories and shops busy and the pay of our wage-earners the very best, as will give full value to the pension of the soldier and the life policies payable to the widow and orphan, as will give the farmer a broader and better market at home and abroad for his produce and bring new prosperity and safety to our whole people. It furthermore proposes, by continuing a sound currency, to keep our pledge of honor among the nations, believing that there can be no greater peril than for our people to feel that they have been guilty of national disgrace.

SUMMARY.

To summarize briefly this whole discussion let it be said:

First. Legislation cannot create values any more than it can make water run up hill.

Second. A surplus of money does not prove great prosperity any more than giving a lot of promissory notes increases my property.

Third. Labor is the chief producer of values. When a man goes into a coal mine, when a farmer goes day by day into his field and in the fall produces a bushel of corn from a few kernels planted, when a carpenter takes a piece of wood and makes a desk, then new value is created. A bar of steel is worth but $10. Suppose you work it over and make it into knife blades, it will be worth $100. Work it further and make it into cambric needles and it will be increased still more in value. Suppose you make it into hair springs for a watch and it is worth $1,000. It is not the original steel but the labor that has given this value. In some of the finest numbers of cotton thread ninety per cent. is labor. Hence it is this labor that we need most carefully to guard, and there is never any distress when labor is well paid. The prosperity of the working classes depends upon steady work and a currency which does not fluctuate.

Fourth. In all times of depression the laborer is the first to suffer and the last to recover. If the proposed 16 to 1 policy should prevail the wage-earner who now earns $15 a week should earn $30 even to be as well off as he is now. But all history shows that he would not get more than $22 or $23. He would not even get this at once, for idle labor, made by depression, would be in competition and prevent for a time any increase. A depreciated dollar always means depreciated labor.

Fifth. The farmer's interests are bound up in the general prosperity of the whole country. On the 16 to 1 plan the purchasing power of the wages of the twenty-two million wage-earners in this country would be reduced one-third. The statistics of the war showed this. You therefore deprive them to this extent of the power to purchase wheat, corn, etc. The farmer needs the general prosperity of the whole nation to give him prosperity.

Sixth. No part of this nation can either suffer or prosper without its effect being felt upon the whole. No section liveth to itself. Civilization has been well called "universal co-operation of the shop, the forge, the mine, the bench, the farms, the store, and the basis of it all is confidence, confidence that what we produce will be needed by some one and confidence that it will be paid for in a permanent and not a debased standard. A blow against mutual confidence is a blow against civilization."

Seventh. No one has yet been able to tell us how, under the free coinage of silver, with the present conditions, gold and silver are to be kept at a parity or how any one is to get any increase of salary or wages.

Eighth. No one has yet been able to show how changing the unit or measure of value is going to affect the real value. The wheat, the corn, the merchandise of the shop will not be made more or less by changing the method of computation. There are ordinarily about fifty yards in a roll of Brussels carpet. If the yard is decreased to eighteen inches there are 100 yards in the roll, and if it is increased to seventy-two inches there are twenty five yards in the roll, but the size of the roll of carpet is not changed in it all. We may call fifty-three cents a dollar, but by the commercial standard of the world the intrinsic value will not be altered in the slightest measure. To pass such a law is to make us the object of the ridicule of the world.

Ninth. Some results of the effect of free silver elsewhere would seem to be sufficient as object lessons. In Mexico a factory hand gets but thirty cents a day and pays $13 to $16 a barrel for flour. In Japan in 1873 the gold standard was abolished and silver put in its place. The result is that their yen, which answers to our dollar, has depreciated about one half; laborers receive about 18 cents a day, the purchasing power of which is only about one-half of what it was before. It is no answer to this to say that the United States and Japan are two different nations. Yes, they are, but the laws of trade as well as those of gravitation and of the tides are the same everywhere.

Tenth. One of the follies of this time is the feeling sometimes expressed that if this nation went upon a silver basis we should come into closer touch with the silver nations, Mexico, China, Japan. To say nothing about the difficulty of dislodging England and Germany from the hold they now have on these markets, suppose we could trade off the business we now have with the gold nations for this trade with the silver nations; then what? We should have given up a large and sure business for a small and uncertain one, for all the statisties show the great superiority of our present trade over what we could get in the exchange. Could there be greater business folly?

Eleventh. But as great as is the business folly, what shall we say of the wickedness of the public statement expressing willingness that the American laborer should take his chance with the wage-earner in Mexico and China? These latter may be busy all the time and contented, if you please, but upon what a low plane! Study our consular reports and see the quality of the food used and compare it with what is used by the American workman. Look at the scale of wages, and do not ask us to take a course which means degradation to millions of our fellow-citizens.

It should be repeated with constant emphasis that the greatest enemies to this country at the present time are those who seem to be busy stirring up strife. Our people as a whole are in touch one with the other, and desire that the best interests of the whole nation shall be considered and legislated for. There is sympathy especially with those who are poor and who are making a brave battle for existence. The condition of the farmer the past few years, when he has been in debt, has in many cases been most pitiable. As years ago the men on our Western prairies took away the market from the English farmer, so, in turn, other nations have taken theirs. In their extremity they have doubtless many times been imposed upon by those representing capital. Farmers are so scattered that it is not easy for them to get together and work as one for common ends. But the farmers can be sure that the East will be ready to aid them in all efforts to secure justice and better their condition. We are opposed to monopolies as well as they. It is well also to remember that ninety-five per cent. of those who go into trade on their own account at some period in their career go into bankruptcy, and the difficulties in mercantile business have greatly increased the last few years. We have been suffering together, but we are persuaded that the expedients proposed in the Chicago platform will not only be useless as remedies but will aggravate the present ills. Restoration to health and vigor and new prosperity does not lie along that path.

We think there was never a more misleading statement than to call the cause of free silver the "cause of the people," in contradistinction to what is called the capitalist class. The one class who might profit in the business wreck which would come with free silver would be these same capitalists, with money in hand to purchase property at forced sales, while those who would suffer immeasurably would be the common people. They may well cry to be delivered from such friends.

In this great crisis every Christian man, and certainly every minister, has a solemn responsibility. It is always safe to appeal to the conscience of the American people, and, with all the perils involved, no one has a right to be silent. During the war of the Revolution and in the great rebellion it was the ringing words from the pulpit which stirred men's souls and inspired the people to that which was right and true. In this new and even greater crisis to whom ought we to look so certainly as to the minister of the gospel of Christ? It is he who should show the crime of trying to array class against class, and the certain disaster to the missionary work at home and abroad which is sure to follow the debasement of our currency. The American republic, which has held the first place among the Christian nations, is now once more on trial before the bar of the world. One path leads to greater national honor and prosperity, the other to semi-repudiation and national disgrace. Our whole people are studying the grave problems which confront us as never before, and we are fully persuaded that they will decide them aright, and that the evils which are threatened will be averted. We have received a glorious inheritance from our fathers; we must pass it on to our children without these stains upon it. May God help every man to vote with a full consciousness of what is involved for the coming generations.

That man will be successful who promptly fits himself by severe and strenuous study to overcome competition and hold his own in the feverish contest of life.—F. A. Atkins.

A sermon must be a bow and arrow, pointed right at somebody, and stretched to high tension, and the arrow quivering as if about to strike.—D. John A. Broadus.

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM NEW YORK.

The New School Year.

As a matter of course the coming together of our public schools with over 161,000 enrollment on the first day, under care of 4,400 teachers, revives the chronic complaint of want of room. Brooklyn utters it nearly as loudly as New York, and for that matter so do most of the larger New Jersey towns and the country generally about here, so far as heard from. Last year 24,000 New York children of school age were shut out for lack of room, although more than 17,000 sittings were provided before the close, and further enlargement was planned for this year but was mostly stopped by the failure to sell the city bonds authorized for the purpose. Want of funds also delayed repairs on a dozen or fourteen school buildings to the exclusion of 13,000 children till these repairs and changes can be completed. Then there will be from 180,000 to 185,000 seats ready. The official report is that nearly or quite 50,000 boys and girls are in the streets, of whom not more than 5,000 are there of their own choice—a sad state of things, surely, in a city like this. The Board of Education will ask for nearly $6,000,000 for school expenses this year, being upwards of $221,000 more than last year's outlay.

Brooklyn also had several buildings for her 120 public schools of all grades unready at the opening, when about 110,000 pupils applied for admission, to be increased by probably 15,000 before the month closes. The Board of Education will apply to the next legislature for authority to issue bonds for $500,000 for new school buildings. Special attention is to be given to elementary tuition in physiology and hygiene—teaching the pupils how to secure health by wise eating and drinking. Lovers of vocal music are complaining of inadequate instruction in the art for lack of money to employ the needed teachers.

The City College and the (Girls') Normal College are both overwhelmed with numbers beyond the capacity of their buildings, the latter having over 2,400 pupils. The authorities of the University Law School have appointed as dean of its faculty, in place of the late Dr. Austin Abbott, Mr. Clarence D. Ashley, born in Boston in 1851, a graduate of Phillips Andover Academy and Yale College (1873). He studied law here and in Berlin, and has gained high repute as a lawyer, teacher and organizer.

Brooklyn's Ideal Water.

There are few things of which Brooklyn people have been more proud than their Ridgewood water. And with good reason, as all candid water-drinking visitors in the last twenty years will testify. Not often anywhere in city or country has been found clearer, more palatable or more healthful water. But for the last two months or so a great change has come over Brooklyn temperance people's favorite beverage, a change of color, taste and smell, most offensive to at least three of the senses. The scared people's outcry led to speedy and earnest efforts by the authorities. Expert chemists, bacteriologists, microscopists, etc., used all the appliances of science without finding adequate cause for the indisputable nuisance. Their one comforting word was that the water contained nothing dangerous to health and life. Analysis of specimens from all parts of Ridgewood Lake revealed none of the objectionable qualities so evident to the eyes, the palate and the nostrils of Brooklyn drinkers. Two or three little streamlets not up to the mark were shut off, the "dead ends" of Brooklyn mains were flushed and the remedial work is still going on. But the more intelligent citizens are satisfied that larger sources of supply than Long Island affords must be sought for her doubled and rapidly growing population. But where? New York has laid hands on the nearest available supply of really good drinking water, and some of the wise men are talking of Lake George, Lake Champlain, Ontario or Erie. Well, if London draws from the Welsh mountains and Glasgow from lovely Loch Katrine, why may not Brooklyn, and by and by New York, drain Lake George or Lake Champlain?

Ministerial Personals.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, with Mrs. Abbott and their youngest son and daughter, are on their way home on the slow steamer Manitoba, purposely to lengthen the recuperative sea voyage. Their summer stay has been in England, Scotland and Switzerland. On an Alpine pass, 8,000 feet above the sea, the Doctor and his son enjoyed the treat of a genuine Swiss snowstorm July 30. Dr. A. H. Bradford and his sister arrived on the Majestic, Sept. 16, and the same steamer brought home the widow, two daughters and son-in-law (Mr. R. L. Maitland) of the late Dr. W. M. Taylor. The friends of Dr. A. J. Lyman will be glad to know that there remain but the slightest reminders of the trouble caused to his arm by its contact with the railing of his berth as he slept on his outward voyage. He arrived on the Lucania, Sept. 18. Drs. McLeod of Clinton Avenue, Behrends of the Central, Meredith of Tompkins Avenue, Kent of Lewis Avenue, McElveen of the New England were among the Brooklyn pastors who were back from their vacations last Sabbath. Dr. F. F. Emerson of Worcester preached for the Broadway Tabernacle people.

The Chicago Invasion.

Everybody knew that Chicago had annexed to itself all Illinois and part of Indiana, but some surprise was felt at its beginning to absorb New York. The initial step was taken by a syndicate with $5,000,000 that alighted here some months since and tore down the major part of the block between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets, and on the ruins put up a palace under the name of a "department store." Simultaneously with the failure of Hilton, Hughes & Co., Chicago appeared here in person last week, opened its grand bazar, invited in "all the world," and the world came to see a "store" in which it was claimed that everything man, woman or child can ever want could be found. And they found it: dry goods, clothing, boots and shoes, groceries, drugs and apothecaries' fixings, post office, bank, telegraph and telephone, intelligence office, manicure, barber, nursery, menagerie, doctor's office, hospital—but these are only the beginning. They promise to fill in every day. The "opening" was not altogether of the pleasantest. Thousands thronged to see it, some of whom saw it, but more of whom felt it. Barriers were swept away by the inrush. Seekers of cheap bicycles broke down the iron railing of that department, overthrew the young lady cashier's office, scattering that tender young female, her desk and her cash promiscuously over the hard floor; but it is promised that things shall go more softly and smoothly by and by. It is to be hoped so. The multitudinous array of electric lights in, on and over the building, with "the longest and strongest search light in the world" (Chicagoese), turns night into day all over that part of the city, largely to the saving of gas in the homes of the poor. When Chicago gets the other blocks on which she has her eye, gas bills and much gas may be dispensed with.

HUNTINGTON.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Visit of Astronomers.

Prof. W. H. M. Christie, royal astronomer of Great Britain, Prof. H. H. H. Turner of Oxford and Capt. Hills of London, on their return from Japan, where they had been to observe the eclipse, gave up Friday of last week, Sept. 11, to a visit at the Yerkes Observatory. President Hughitt of the North western Railway placed his private car at their disposal and accompanied them on their trip. Several of the professors of the university and the trustees acted as hosts. Prof. George E. Hale, as director of the observatory, had the party in charge. The guests expressed themselves as delighted with what they saw and predict great results from the work which will be done in the observatory.

Sound Money League in Chicago.

An association of business men, irrespective of party, has here been formed in order to circulate information in regard to the dangers which are threatened from the proposed silver standard. It is composed of the best men in the city and up to this time has in its ranks quite as many Democrats as Republicans. The address of Carl Schurz a week ago and that of Bourke Cochran last Saturday were delivered under its auspices. There is no denying the influence which these addresses have had in opening the eyes of working men, especially, to the losses to which they would be exposed were a silver standard to be adopted. The league, now thoroughly organized, will use every possible effort to enlighten voters on the real issues of the present campaign.

The Campaign.

From this time on till November there will be meetings every evening except Sunday in a big tent on the West Side, which will hold ten or fifteen thousand people. Speaker Reed of Maine will be heard and numerous other men of the first rank politically. At the same time smaller places will not be neglected. Thus far there have been very few personalities in the speeches made in this vicinity, and it is hoped that this feature of some previous campaigns will continue to be absent. There is no doubt that the results of the Maine election have strengthened the hopes of Republicans in what are claimed by the Bryan party as doubtful States. Still, here in Illinois at any rate, less emphasis has been laid on party differences than upon the dangers to which the country is exposed through the possible triumph of the principles of the Chicago platform. Neither Mr. Schurz nor Mr. Cochran gave utterance to a word that could be called partisan, although both criticised Mr. Bryan. Both were patriotic in the extreme. In what they said they reminded one of the noble addresses which patriotic men delivered just before and in the early months of the Civil War. It is reported that the workmen in the steel mills at South Chicago have sent a request to Mr. Reed to address them on those issues in the present campaign which affect their interests, and also to address the stock yard men in some hall near the place where they work. Fair and honorable statements are what most voters wish to hear. Then they are able to decide for themselves as to the men for whom to cast their vote.

Ministers' Meeting.

The general subject of Social Purity was discussed under a report on rescue work in Chicago. The story of the Star of Hope Mission Home for women, located at 110 South Green Street, founded and managed by Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Mackey, as given by Mrs. Mackey, was full of cheer. It is crippled for lack of means, and yet its managers have been able to accomplish a great deal on a very little. Their hearts are in their work. Instead of less than half a dozen homes like this in a city as large as Chicago there ought to be at least a score. The main address was by Mrs. McCulloch of Evanston, who has been brought into this rescue service through her connection with the Civic Federation. She places the number of lost women in the city at 10,000, although others double these figures. She complains of the well-nigh total lack of interest in the evil here represented, and appeals to the Christian people of the city to do something to prevent the increase of the evil, and to save some of those who have already suffered from it. Resolutions of sympathy with Rev. W. A. Waterman were passed and arrangements partially made to supply his pulpit. He is improving slowly and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Ballington Booth.

The leader of the Volunteers spent a busy Sunday in the city and its suburbs. In the morning he addressed a large meeting near Oakland, in the afternoon he was at Evanston, in the evening on the West Side. At ten o'clock Monday morning he met the ministers of the various denominations, stated his reasons for withdrawing from the Salvation Army and beginning the Volunteer movement, and asked their sympathy and assistance. He reports 115 posts already established under more than 300 officers. Fifty-one of these posts are in the West and 135 officers. Colonel Fielding, with the rank of brigadier general, is in charge of them. Monday afternoon Mr. Booth was ordained by Bishop Fallows, in accordance with the rites of the Reformed Episcopal Church. The ceremony was performed in Bishop Fallows's church and was private, only fourteen persons witnessing it. This was at Mr. Booth's request. It is said that Mr. Booth will now ordain several of his officers, ostensibly that they may have legal authority to marry people, but more probably that they may come into closer sympathy with the churches and be competent to administer the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper.

A New Gift for the University.

The papers have it, though the authorities have not yet confirmed it, that Mr. and Mrs. Robey have granted the university the use of Wolf Lake, which is in Indiana, just over the line from Illinois, for a biological station. It is now an ideal place for the study of biology. In the near future the land will undoubtedly be wanted for commercial purposes. Till that time its owners propose to allow the university to use it.

Chicago, Sept. 19. FRANKLIN.

Strengthen me by sympathizing with my strength, not my weakness.—Alcott.

Tangles.

[For the leisure hour recreation of old and young, Any reader who can contribute odd and curious enigmas, etc., of a novel and interesting kind is invited to do so, addressing the Puzzle Editor of The Congregationalist.]

83. RIDDLE.

GAMES.

I.

Aristocrats, all in a row,
Looking over the heads below.

II.

Burn a heretic at each end,
Irons between; will you play, my friend?

III.

Pitchers with ears, and bats without wings;
Masks and gloves, and several low things.

IV.

Bloody noses and broken shins;
Fame and glory to him who wins.

V.

Ladies and gentlemen, all for style,
Whacking with sticks for many a mile.

E. A.

84. GEOGRAPHICAL SUGGESTION.

(What counties of New England do the answers name, partly by sound?)

1. Certain British noblemen. 2. Two letters of the alphabet. 3. A modern harbor. 4. A heavy weight in the laundry business. 5. A pleasing tract of land for the farmer. 6. A place where stags cross a river. 7. A song of praise. 8. A swaying thigh of an animal. 9. A joyous Scotchman. 10. A turning end over end. 11. Blows. 12. A tropical fruit.

P. T. J.

85. CHARADE.

Pleasant it is to idly wander
Thro' fields on TOTAL summer days,
Or thro' the woods the hours squander,
And learn Dame Nature's lays;
To breathe the sweetly scented air
That silent floats as light of morning;
To seek her nodding children fair,
That irksome earth are now adorning.

'Tis said that sweetest are the flowers
Of all things sans eternal soul;
They make more PRIME our happy hours,
And comfort us in dole.
These surface jewels of the earth,
Tho' valued not at most high prices,
Give soul of man a newer birth,
And lure him from his sins and vices.

O pure, ennobling, lovely flowers,
TWO all-wise Hand hath sure you made
And sent you to this world of ours
To be our joy and aid.
Your floral language have we learned—
We read it from your open faces—
And truly have you ever turned
Men's hearts to good in all the races.

NOVUS HOMO.

ANSWERS.

77. To 12 inches (a dozen brothers, a foot) add 33 inches, and the result is 45 inches, an English ell (L).

78. Pen.

79. 1. Fares, faces. 2. Meets, meats. 3. Hopes, homes. 4. Truth, troth. 5. Ribs, rides. 6. Filly, fitly. 7. Coins, corns. 8. Recks, reeks. 9. Chaps, chips. 10. Banks, backs. Republican, Democratic.

80. 1. Cab-man. 2. Coal-man. 3. Swords-man. 4. Pen-man. 5. Brake-man. 6. Police man. 7. Whale-man. 8. Lands-man. 9. Fire-man. 10. Show-man. 11. Boat-man. 12. Fisher-man. 13. Horse-man. 14. Milk-man.

81. 1. Pansy. 2. Nasturtium. 3. Aster. 4. White rose. 5. Marigold. 6. Geranium. 7. Honeysuckle. 8. Jasmine. 9. Rhododendron. 10. Tuberose. 11. Zinnia. 12. Tulip. 13. Pink.

82. Vile, evil, veil, Levi, live.

Among solvers of Tangles of August 27 were: Bertha B. Felt, Carthage, N. Y., 75; C. L. P., Lowell, Mass., 75; G. Safford Torrey, Providence, R. I., 75; M. A. M., Lowell, Mass., 75; C. E. Browning, Roxbury, Mass, 75; L. A. Haynes, 75; Mary M. Peckham, Westboro, Mass., 75; Mrs. D. H. Burnham, Riverside, Cal., 75; Jennie L. Tupper, Concord, Ill., 75; M. E. Bullock, Denver, Col., 75; Charles P. Stetson, Worcester, Mass., 75; C. P. C., Mendon, Ill., 75; Mrs. C. M. Tuttle, North Haven, Ct., 75; I. E. Stiles, Worcester, Mass., 75; Mrs. M. A. Harrington, Webster, Mass., 74, 76; S. E. Pearson, Dorchester, Mass., 75; A. C. B., Salem, Mass., 74, 75, 76; Florence M. Roberts, Hudson, Mich., 75; Paul B. Pitkin, Akron, O., 75; May Louise Wheeler, Irasburg, Vt., 75; Belle Preston, Hinsdale, Ill., 74, 75, 76; Newton W. Williams, Chicago, Ill., 75, 76; Mrs. Mary P. Howard, Kansas City, Mo., 75, 76; Catherine T. Bunnell, Stratford, Ct., 75; Miss L. M. Coggeshall, Providence, R. I., 75; Sarah E. Jenkins, Palmer, Mass., 75; M. Louise Fuller, South Beach, Ct., 75; Ida Mansfield, Sharon, Wis., 75; Ida E. Hackett, Lowell, Mass., 75; Mrs. J. D. French, Braintree, Mass., 75; Anna P. Gleason, Rockland, Mass., 75; Mrs. F. E. Cotton, Woburn, Mass., 75; H. W. P., Northfield, Minn., 75; Lucy M. Beane, Providence, R. I., 75; W. W. O., Malden, Mass., 75; Henry Lincoln Bailey, Middletown Springs, Vt., 75; Librarian Harwood Library, Wauwatosa, Wis., 75; Miss L. E. Wright, Natick, Mass, 75; Mrs. Bella Ewen, Rupert, Vt., 75; Mrs. M. C. Rodgers, Newtown, Ct., 75; May E. Munson, New York, N. Y, 75; Nillor, Middletown Springs, Vt., 74; Mary E. Reech, Phenix, R. I, 75.

Of the solutions of 75 five or six were complete and correct, making it necessary to select the prize winner by neatness. In some respects the answer of Mrs. F. E. Cotton, Woburn, Mass., is neater and better arranged than any other of the complete ones, and she is accordingly awarded the book of poems.

CHAT ABOUT FOODS AND DRINKS.

Tough meats or fowls can be made tender by putting a table-spoonful of vinegar into the water in which they are boiled.

As this is the season when typhoid fever is most prevalent especial care should be taken to secure pure milk and drinking water, because their impurity is one of the chief causes of this dread disease. In all cases of doubt it is safest to boil the water. Active disease does not always follow from drinking polluted liquids, but the vitality of the system is invariably lowered thereby, making it more susceptible to zymotic infection.

The Ladies' Health Protective Association of New York is to be commended for its effort to prevent the exposure on the sidewalks and in shop windows, where they are liable to dust and decay, of many articles of food. Especially should the carcasses of animals, which are most offensive to many eyes, be kept from view. The food we eat should be handled hygienically. These grosser articles could easily be replaced by flowers and certain kinds of fruits, making our markets more attractive as well as more healthful.

Sir Henry Thompson says: Many children manifest great repugnance to meat at first, and are coaxed and even scolded by anxious mothers until the habit of eating it is acquired. I am satisfied that if children followed their own instinct in this matter the result would be a gain in more ways than one. Certainly, if meat did not appear in the nursery until the children sent for it, it would rarely be seen there, and the young ones would, as a rule, thrive better on milk and eggs, with the varied produce of the vegetable kingdom.

Apples are plentiful this year, and no more healthful fruit is grown. A ripe and juicy apple eaten just before going to bed is now recommended by many physicians. A household exchange says: "The apple is excellent brain food, because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digested shape than other fruits. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. This is not all. The apple helps the kidney secretions and prevents calculus growths, while it obviates indigestion and is one of the best known preventives of diseases of the throat."

A classified list of beverages was published recently in The Chautauquan, of which we give a partial summary: Those which best relieve thirst are the sour liquids—lemonade, raspberry vinegar and other fruit juices. The carbonated and mineral waters are best for eliminating waste material. Hot drinks, as tea, coffee and hot water, also do this, particularly through the kidneys and skin. The liquids given to soothe irritated or inflamed surfaces in coughs and fevers are mucilaginous like flaxseed tea, gruel and arrowroot. The nutrient beverages are cocoa, chocolate, malt extracts and, because of the milk and sugar added, tea and coffee.

Three Generations.

"I always use Cleveland's baking powder, as did my mother and my grandmother before me in their successful cake and pastry baking."

Mrs. E. F. M.,
Tuxedo.

Better bread and more of it.

"Duluth Imperial" Flour

always leads. It's way ahead of the so-called "best" flours. Housekeepers know now about DULUTH IMPERIAL, and

"20 loaves more to the barrel."

If your grocer doesn't keep it, and won't supply you, don't get another flour—get another grocer; or send us a postal, and we'll tell you where to get it.

DULUTH IMPERIAL MILL CO., Duluth, Minn.

The Conversation Corner.

OUR old Captain seems, from the letters which he brings, to have been on a trans-continental trip this week.

RIVERSIDE, CAL.

Dear Mr. Martin: I would like to be a Cornerer. My grandpa has been a subscriber of The Congregationalist ever since I can remember. I used to spell out the words written in large print for little folks and now I read the Conversation Corner with as much interest. I am twelve years old. I have three hundred stamps. We have a great many wild flowers and birds here. In winter I hear the robin or the bluebird when I wake and go to sleep with the mocking bird's shrill note sounding in my ear. We have a little wild flower with a white center, which we call baby blue-eye. If any of the Cornerers know the scientific name, will they please tell me? I have a cat and a dog. My kitty is black all over, and we call her Black Beauty. Our dog is generally out on the lawn gnawing away at a bone when it is time for bed. About midnight we are awakened by his bark. We go to the door and call, "Rover, Rover, Rover, come, Rover." But it doesn't seem to make any impression upon him, and he barks the rest of the night.

ETHEL S.

Can any one answer the floral question? "Blue-eyed Mary" is a Western flower. Probably botanists would ask Ethel for a fuller description—hight of plant, size and shape of leaves, number of petals and of stamens, etc.

PACIFIC BEACH, CAL.

Dear Mr. Martin: To illustrate the Sunday school lesson of the pounds I gave to ten children of my infant class recently a cent apiece, and asked them to invest it and make as much money as they could. These little tots, some of them only four years old, went to work at once, selling candy, pop-corn, etc., and at the end of a week brought me a dollar and thirty-one cents. I told them the story of Pomiuk, and they were anxious that the money should be used for him. M. G. C.

I can almost see and hear the crippled boy on the north-east shore of the continent swinging his flag "tied to a crutch," and shouting "Nak-u meek" to the boys and girls of the "Pacific Beach" in the Southwest! The next two letters show that we have some Corner readers over four years—or twelve years—old.

NORDHOFF, CAL.

Mr. L. H. Martin; Dear Sir: I noticed in the Corner an inquiry for the lines, "'Twas autumn, and the leaves were dry." They were stowed away in my memory years ago among other "attic treasures," and I give them as nearly as I can. Your Despotic Foreman will give the right punctuation! As those who write for the Corner usually give their age, I will subscribe,

SEVEN TIMES ELEVEN.

OMAHA, NEB.

. . . I noticed the inquiry in regard to the poem, "'Twas autumn, and the leaves were dry." I have long wanted to know the author and have the poem complete. I learned it from my mother over fifty years ago, and can only recall a part. MRS. H.

I will forward her one of the numerous copies which have been sent to the Corner. It is but a step from California to Japan, the scene of the funny illustration shown you this week, although it comes to us directly from CHICAGO, ILL.

Dear Mr. Martin: I am one of those who are always interested to read the "Corner," and I have just read with great interest the letter of Helen B. [August 20] about the Japanese "Pull-man car," and your comments on it. Helen's description is very interesting—the best account of the jinrikisha I ever read. You said you wished that some one could have got a snap-shot of that jinrikisha with Dr. B. and the dog upsetting together, I happen to have a photograph of the same accident, not of course of Dr. B, but of some native Japanese. You know such things happen quite frequently in Japan and really it is a curious sight if one happens to see it. So they make pictures of the scene and sell them to foreign visitors. T. M.

Thanks to our correspondent for loaning us this photograph. What a comical face the jinrikishaman has! The passenger seems to be begging the pull man with eloquent gesture to stop—a request which evidently is entirely unnecessary.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Dear Mr. Martin: . . . I am glad Pomiuk is getting strong again. We were not swept by the cyclone; its path was about three miles south of us. I passed through the district lately and many of the houses were still down. I did not pay any attention to the "Popocrat" convention, but when the Republican convention was here I went down to see the Massachusetts delegates, for papa and mamma came from Massachusetts. I went to Indiana in June with papa and brought home two turtles. I went to the Mercantile Library to read about turtles and found they were the box tortoise. But during a storm one night they got away and I have not seen them since. WALTER R.

So there is one boy in the Mississippi Valley who is in favor of "sound money" in the presidential contest!

THE WRECK OF A JINRIKISHA.

SPOKANE, WN

Dear Mr. Martin: I had a fine Fourth. I had a bunch of big firecrackers and a bunch of little ones. I would like to know about the different kinds of squirrels. CARRIE S.

If any member of the Corner family cares to make out a list of the more common members of the S. family, I will send it to this girl in the northwesternmost State of the Union. Are any of our Western members acquainted with the so-called "federation squirrel?" Its thirteen lines, running longitudinally along its back, every other one being spotted, suggested the name by their resemblance to the Stars and Stripes.

MOSCOW, MINN.

Dear Mr. Martin: Over in our park some of the neighboring turkeys are in the habit of roosting nights in the trees. It is interesting to watch them getting settled for the night, especially when three families of little ones of different ages must be coaxed up into high perches by the three mothers. But they are wary birds and do not enjoy being watched. This was the way little Persis solved the difficulty. I heard her saying to herself: "I want to watch 'em going to bed, but they are afraid of me, so I will climb up here in this tree and they will just think I am one just like themselves!" M. G. N.

Persis would better join the Squirrel family; then she can make herself at home in the tree, and watch her fellow-lodgers to her heart's content!

Mr. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

Presidents of the United States. A lady writes from Plainfield, Mass., calling attention to two mistakes in the list of presidents published in the Scrap book of Aug. 13:

Benjamin Harrison was from Indiana, and not from Ohio as in the list. We think that Grant was from Illinois, and not from Ohio as stated in your list. M. W. P.

Both statements were correct in the list—and both incorrect. Benjamin Harrison was born (in the house of his grandfather, President William Henry Harrison) at North Bend, O., and General Grant was born at Point Pleasant, O. But Harrison was of course a citizen of Indiana when elected president, and the list was made with reference to residence, not birthplace. General Grant had resided wherever the United States Army was from 1861, but was understood to hail from Illinois in 1868. So that those who put that list in their scrap-books should make these two corrections. But there are very many who think that in place of these names lost from Ohio a resident of that State will be the next president!

Future Indiana Candidates? The newspapers say that two babies have recently been christened in the town of English, Ind., with the respective names: Abraham Lincoln Ulysses Grant William McKinley and Thomas Jefferson Andrew Jackson James Monroe William Jennings Bryan. Would it not be funny if these boys with rival names should be presidential candidates about 1948? [But they could not be candidates, Mr. M.; do you not know that English-born persons are constitutionally ineligible to the presidency?—D. F.]

Vice-Presidents of the United States. So much interest has been taken in the tabular list of presidents that a similar list of vice-presidents is now presented. It is doubtful whether one out of a hundred of our members could give at once the names of all these officers. The first name is that of the president with whom he was associated. The State is that from which the vice-president came.

1789	Washington.	John Adams, Mass.
1797	John Adams.	Thomas Jefferson, Va.
1801	Jefferson.	Aaron Burr, N. Y.
1805	Jefferson.	George Clinton, N. Y.
1809	Madison.	George Clinton, N. Y.
1813	Madison.	Elbridge Gerry, Mass.
1817	Monroe.	Daniel D. Tompkins, N. Y.
1825	J. Q. Adams.	John C. Calhoun, S. C.
1829	Jackson.	John C. Calhoun, S. C.
1833	Jackson.	Martin Van Buren, N. Y.
1837	Van Buren.	Richard M. Johnson, Ky.
1841	W. H. Harrison.	John Tyler, Va.
1845	Polk.	George M. Dallas, Pa.
1849	Taylor.	Millard Fillmore, N. Y.
1853	Pierce.	William R. King, Ala.
1857	Buchanan.	John C. Breckinridge, Ky.
1861	Lincoln.	Hannibal Hamlin, Me.
1865	Lincoln.	Andrew Johnson, Tenn.
1869	Grant.	Schuyler Colfax, Ind.
1873	Grant.	Henry Wilson, Mass.
1877	Hayes.	William A. Wheeler, N. Y.
1881	Garfield.	Chester A. Arthur, N. Y.
1885	Cleveland.	Thomas A. Hendricks, Ind.
1889	Benj. Harrison.	Levi P. Morton, N. Y.
1893	Cleveland.	Adlai E. Stevenson, Ill.
1897	? ?	? ? ?

Remarks on the List. It will be seen that John Adams and Daniel D. Tompkins were the only ones who served eight years with the same president. George Clinton and John C. Calhoun were the only others who served two terms. Of course Tyler, Fillmore, Johnson and Arthur had no vice-presidents when they were promoted to the presidential office. Mr. King died in April, 1853, Mr. Hendricks in November, 1885.

Questions on the List. What are the duties of the vice-president? Who would have succeeded to the presidency if the president had died in any of the six cases when there was no vice-president?

L. N. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR OCT. 4. 1 Kings 1: 28-39.

SOLOMON ANOINTED KING.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

We enter now on the most splendid period, externally, of the history of Israel. It was a time of close affiliation with foreign nations, of lavish expenditure and gorgeous display, which consumed the wealth that David had gathered, and mortgaged what the next generation might inherit or acquire. This period is of interest to us because of its relations to the kingdom of God, for which the reign of Solomon helped to prepare. The ideas of regal splendor which belong to the kingdom founded by the Messiah are for the most part suggested by the kingdom of Solomon. Six lessons of this quarter are devoted mainly to his personal character and history, besides the two on the building of the temple. In order to maintain the interest, each lesson should distinctly emphasize the feature made prominent in its title. This one introduces Solomon to public life and includes his early history. It brings into view:

1. David's oath to make Solomon king. It appears from David's statement that in Solomon's early childhood he had solemnly promised Bathsheba to place her son on the throne. The influence of this woman in sacred history is very remarkable. Through her David fell into the greatest sins of his life, yet to the day of his death she retained over him greater influence than any of his other wives. Matthew in his gospel traces the ancestry of Jesus back to David through Solomon, and Luke through Nathan. But both were sons of Bathsheba. From sinful parents God can raise up the holiest men. His only begotten Son sprang from an ancestry on the human side which was connected with deeds of wrong and shame. No one need despair because of the sins of his fathers. To every human being there are unlimited possibilities of goodness, because he may be begotten anew by the Holy Spirit and realize the life of a child of God.

Solomon was the first son born to Bathsheba after her marriage with David [2 Sam. 12: 24]. From his birth he was regarded with special favor as beloved of God. For this reason he received a name from Nathan the prophet, who undertook his education. His teacher took great pride in him, and when the crisis came which was to decide whether or not he would be king it was Nathan who looked after his interests and secured to him the kingdom. Whatever may now be said against ministers preaching politics, there can be no question that the influence of their predecessors was potent in the national affairs of Israel. David's oath, made many years before, was binding on him, but he would not have acted on it had not the prophet summoned him to do his duty.

2. Solomon crowned king. Adonijah was the eldest living son, and naturally the inheritance of the kingdom would fall to him. As David drew near his end, two parties distinctly appeared. Some of the oldest representatives of the army and the priesthood pledged themselves to Adonijah. But as strong a company refused to support him. However, he gathered his followers at a fountain just across the ravine to the east of Jerusalem and there made for them a great feast. He had for some time assumed the position of the heir apparent. He invited to his feast all his brothers except Solomon. The prominent men who supported Solomon's claims to the throne were also omitted Thus the meaning of the festival could not be mistaken, even by those who were not admitted to the secrets of Adonijah.

In that crisis Nathan the prophet appealed to Bathsheba and both appealed to David. The energy of the feeble old king was once again rekindled. He chose his men and issued his orders. In a short time another assembly gathered at the fountain of Gihon on the west side of the city, within hearing distance of Adonijah's company. It was led by the prophet Nathan, the priest Zadok and the general Benaiah, with an armed host, the bodyguard of the king; and in the midst was young Solomon mounted on his father's white mule. The priest anointed the lad with sacred oil, the blast of the trumpet resounded through the hills, and the shout of the people, "God save King Solomon," came across the valley and fell on Adonijah's ears, the death knell of his hopes. Brave old Joab knew what the noise meant. The king had chosen his successor—and he was not Adonijah. The army and the people were with David, and the frightened company in silence left their feasting, each one stealing away to his home.

Meanwhile, Solomon went back to his father, and the officials of the court solemnly announced in the royal presence that the new king had been crowned. David sanctioned the act he had ordered, and blessed God that he had seen his own will carried out and that Solomon was already accepted in his place.

3. Solomon accepted by the people. Their approving shout was the guaranty that the young man would be secure on the throne. From the beginning of the Israelitish nation the ideas of democracy shaped and guided it. The people obeyed the absolute authority of Moses only because they believed that he represented to them the will of God. He taught them that it was the divine purpose that they should all be sovereigns [Ex. 19: 5, 6]. The prophet Samuel anointed Saul to be the first king, but he did not rule till the people ratified the choice, and then he was really their servant. In great crises their will prevailed, not his. When he sought to sacrifice his own son in fulfillment of his vow the voice of the people effectually forbade him [1 Sam. 14: 45, 46]. David accepted the place for which he had been anointed only when all the people ratified the choice [2 Sam. 5: 1]. The kingdom was forever rent asunder because the son of Solomon refused to be a servant of the people [1 Kings 12: 16].

The religion of the Hebrews taught that every child of God was both a king and a priest. It made the chief business of government to be to enlighten the people so as to fit them, for their position and duties as sovereigns. Christ emphasized the fundamental principle of that religion when he told the Jews that if they would learn of him they should know the truth, and that the truth would make them free [John 8: 32]. Religious freedom brings inevitably civil liberty. To the religion which God gave to men through the people of Israel we owe the honor and privilege of a free country in whose government every intelligent man may have a voice.

Solomon, before he was twenty years of age was thus suddenly called to the responsibilities of governing a people chosen by God to give the greatest blessings to all nations. He had enemies in his own household, while in every department of state were those who sought to fulfill their own ambitions while they cared nothing for him. Yet he was placed on the throne by the king, his father, by leaders of the people and by the people themselves. Above all, he was chosen of God to be king of Israel. Never had a man greater responsibilities or a greater opportunity. We shall see in following lessons how far he fulfilled his duties and improved the great opportunity which at the beginning he well understood.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, Sept. 27–Oct. 3. Striking Personal Spiritual Experiences. Gen. 32: 24–30; 2 Cor. 12: 1–10.

Turning points of life; new sense of sin; new views of God; special revelations. Gratitude for peculiar providences.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

Everybody Knows

that carelessness, chemicals and common soaps make combination in the laundry which is simply fatal to shirts, collars, cuffs and other linen, and more people are finding out every day that by the modern methods of washing clothes, the sunlight methods, and the clothes not only receive no injury in the wash, but are actually preserved, as the dirt which would produce wear and decay is taken out without rubbing, without boiling, without chemical action.

Sunlight Soap

Sunlight Soap Saves Clothes

Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson & Harrison Sts., New York.

Van Camp's Boston Baked Pork and Beans

Prepared with tomato sauce. Ever ready, palatable hot or cold. Choicest beans, juicy meat. Three sizes. Send 6c for sample can.

VAN CAMP PACKING CO., Indianapolis, Ind.

Send for booklet; postal card will do.

WHEATLET

Is superior to all Self-Raising Griddle Cake Flours.

TRY IT.

Sold in 2-lb. packages by all leading Grocers.

SOMATOSE a perfect food, tonic and restorative for the invalid or convalescent. Send for free pamphlets.

SCHIEFFELIN & CO., New York.

DON'T BOIL Whitman's INSTANTANEOUS Chocolate—doesn't need it. Made in a jiffy, with boiling water or milk. Sold everywhere.

OUR BOOK, How to Disinfect, Sent Free.

We desire to mail free our complete illustrated book, prepared at great expense, giving rules in cases of infectious diseases, and also in everyday life. The care of sinks, sewers, etc. Remember — the intelligent use of true disinfectants is the surest defense against one half our sickness. Send your address to-day.

"How to Disinfect,"

* * "Sanitas" Co. Ld., 636 West 55th St., N. Y.

Literature

BOOK REVIEWS.

SCOTT'S ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE NICENE THEOLOGY.

This volume contains a series of lectures given at the Princeton Theological Seminary. It treats of topics which are at present much debated. The author has evidently studied the ancient authorities and the recent German books pertaining to the subject. There are manifest the characteristic signs of knowledge to some extent recently acquired, but this always gives life to a discussion, despite the occasional effect of a not fully complete digestion of materials freshly gathered. The sub title advertises the reader that the Ritschlian theology is to be reviewed. There is a double purpose to be carried out. This duality of aim proves detrimental to both branches of the undertaking, tending to interfere with its unity and to breed confusion in the mind of the reader. Mingled with a record of the development of the orthodox creed on the person of Christ is a running attack on Ritschl and his school. This kind of guerrilla warfare is carried along, not only in the text, but also in numerous marginal notes which bristle with hostile reflections and with quotations from other writings of like purport. What Ritschlianism is the reader is left to gather up in fragments out of a pretty steady stream of denunciatory criticism. He is obliged to wait until near the end of the book [p. 315] for a list of undeniable merits of Ritschl, and even the insertion of this catalogue appears to have been suggested by the example of certain German antagonists of that theologian. The work is tinged with the spirit of the old-fashioned Scotch polemics of the days when Captain Salathiel Bangtext (in Walter Scott's romance) led to battle his troop of fighting saints. It is a pity that polemical theologians cannot learn that if their object is to convince gainsayers, and not simply to fortify their own followers in their beliefs, it is enough to confute, without stopping to cudgel, their adversaries. Nothing is lost by temperance in speech and civility of tone. A critic who feels constrained to be severe should learn to be "severe and parliamentary at the same time." Much is said of the class of writers who, a great many times, are grouped together under the designation of the "Ritschl men." It is chiefly in scattered notes that we find the qualifications which the truth requires to be made with regard to some of the most prominent representatives of the class thus stigmatized.

Professor Scott, zealously and with success, confutes the theory of "value judgments," the theory, namely, that doctrines like that of the divinity of Christ reflect only practical relations of the gospel, impressions wrought in us, but not of necessity objective realities. He contends earnestly likewise against the opinion that the miraculous facts of the gospel form no indispensable part of its contents and are nothing but an adjunct which may be dropped without detriment to the Christian faith. The fact is that eminent Ritschlian leaders more and more recognize the reasonableness of ascribing objective validity to Christian beliefs heretofore deemed fundamental. This fact, however, is mostly left by our author to be discovered here and there in the smaller print of his foot-notes. Revised statements of this nature occur respecting Kaftan, Herrmann, Hering, Loofs, Von der Goltz [pp. 33, 34, 35, 54, 161, 260], etc. These movements in the right direction and distinct avowals of Ritschlian leaders should save the "Ritschl men" from being habitually huddled together. Professor Scott takes the field against the views of Harnack and Hatch as to the alleged Hellenizing transmutation of the gospel. He brings forward weighty arguments adverse to their position. But here, also, justice requires of the historian to admit that New Platonism was one factor in determining the patristic definitions of God and his attributes. This is allowed by orthodox scholars generally, while at the same time they reject the extreme opinion that the Nicene Creed is a perversion of the primitive doctrine. The relation of Ritschlian theology to the Kantian philosophy is another point on which a more careful discrimination might have been profitable. So far as the Ritschlians favor a barely ethical theology, a bare moralism backed by a religious sanction, there is good ground for opposing them, yet in emphasizing the moral grounds of our primary religious convictions the Ritschlians, as well as Kant, agree with the soundest thinkers on the orthodox side.

In this book of Professor Scott—not to speak now of the large admixture of anti-Ritschlian matter—the inquisitive student will find much that is interesting and instructive. The ante Nicene writers are severally examined. The principle of historical development is virtually acknowledged, yet, as, for example, in the case of Tertullian, the particulars of difference from the mature Nicene conception might well have been exhibited more fully. Important questions concerning the meaning of Athanasius in his assertion of the Homoousion and of other points in the Nicene Creed receive a scant measure of attention.

We have already implied that Professor Scott's work would be more attractive were it free from the peculiar tone of antipathy and contempt in reference to dissenters. A minor fault is the infelicities in expression which not infrequently occur. Mention is made of "a couple of anecdotes" which had been told to the author, of the "double strainer" through which Ritschl is said to make the words of Christ to pass, of Hatch's "lopsided view of Christianity," of a theory of Harnack which "seems to stand the early church on its head." The ungrammatical interchange of will for shall which is fast coming into vogue meets us on page 24 (the italics are ours): "If, then, the consciousness of Christ can be reached, we will have Christianity and will know whether the lofty Christology of the Nicene Creed," etc. Despite blemishes of manner and matter, which we are not disposed to magnify, the work before us deserves praise for its vigor and learning, and will suggest to rash theologians, older and younger, the duty of hesitation in laying hold of the new interpretations of Christianity which are controverted on its pages. [Chicago Theological Seminary Press. $1.50.]

BIOGRAPHY.

A Cycle of Cathay, or China, South and North, with personal reminiscences by W. A. P. Martin, D. D., LL. D. Ex-President Martin is well qualified by long residence and unusually varied experience as missionary, diplomatist and educator to tell us of the real life and thought of China. This he does very entertainingly, stringing his knowledge, for the most part, somewhat loosely on a thread of autobiography. If we are in search of information and are disposed to quarrel with this rambling order of impartation, an excellent map and topical index put us in a position nevertheless to find what we want without delay. Dr. Martin's centers of activity were Ningpo in Southern China and Peking. In his connection with the Presbyterian mission in Ningpo he first learned the Ningpo colloquial, which was not a written dialect but which he expressed in Roman alphabetical form astonishing the mandarins by teaching men to read their own tongue in a few months. To this he added the mandarin or classic written language and made himself so much a master of the classic books that he was able to use them in apt quotations in his later intercourse with the literati. We have not space to tell the story of his removal to Peking after the capture of the city by the British army and his work in the Imperial University. The book is full of interesting characterizations of Chinese life and of notable personalities. The illustrations from native artists are interesting. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $2.00.]

Robert Whitaker McAll, Founder of the McAll Mission, Paris, with portraits, facsimiles and illustrations. Few books have a more interesting theme than this, and few that we have seen are more in need of competent editing. Mrs. McAll was herself so much a part of her husband's career, having been his constant companion in toil and travel, that she speaks from sufficient knowledge of her theme, but there is no index, no consistent progress of events and no appreciation of the ignorance of her readers. She takes it, apparently, for granted that everybody knows as much as she does about people and events, and the consequence is that, through confusion in the use of pronouns and other lapses, the average reader is not sure much of the time in the opening chapters whether it is Dr. McAll, his father or his grandfather, or even somebody else, that is the subject of the moment's consideration. In the French saying (and one of the faults of the book is its reckless use of French on all occasions), "You cannot see the wood for the trees." It is a striking tribute to the inherent interest of her subject that the reader's attention overcomes all these obstacles of manner in the desire to reach the story of a wonderfully consecrated and influential life. A minister in the third generation, Dr. McAll began life as an architect, changed to the ministry, served various Congregational churches in England until 1871, when, on a visit to Paris, he was so impressed by the spiritual needs of the working men of the city that he left his church in Hadleigh, Eng., and gave himself to their evangelization. The story of his twenty-one years of honored service in France is familiar to most of our readers, and forms much the least nebulous part of this book, which must be described, in the author's own word, as a "souvenir" rather than a serious attempt to present the world with a clear and orderly account of a highly significant life. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.50.]

RELIGIOUS.

Sowing and Reaping, by D. L. Moody, is made up of characteristic sermons on this general theme. It is an admirable specimen of the evangelist's practical, vigorous and pungent style. In paper covers this has been one of the most popular of the Chicago Institute Colportage Library and has sold by the ten thousand. [Fleming H. Revell Co. 30 cents.]

The qualities of imagination, spiritual insight and devout thought which we have recognized in many previous volumes by Rev. F. B. Meyer are found in Through Fire and Flood, which is a beautifully printed and bound series of sermons dealing with the Christian life; and The Secret of Guidance, which deals with practical difficulties in a very practical way. [F eming H. Revell Co. Each 50 cents.]

Rev. Dr. George Wolfe Shinn of Newton, Mass., has published a collection of short popular lectures under the title Some Modern Substitutes for Christianity. He considers the claims of theosophy, Christian science, spiritualism, socialism and agnosticism, and rejects them all upon their own showing. The book might in some respects have been made clearer and stronger, but most of its positions are well taken and satisfactorily expressed, and it will be useful in meeting this brood of intellectual and spiritual temptations. [Thomas Whittaker. 50 cents.]

The Sanctuary of Suffering, by Eleanor Tee, with a preface by Rev. J. P. F. Davidson. The author approaches the mystery of pain with a reverent and loving belief in the presence and good purposes of God. She has much that is stimulating to offer and succeeds in saying it with a simplicity and power that is helpful in interpreting the meaning of the experiences of sorrow. Her chapter upon intercourse between the seen and unseen will arouse some criticism among Protestants, who do not believe in prayers for the dead, but she only expresses the current thought of the ritualistic Anglican believers of today. [Longmans, Green & Co. $2.00.]

STORIES.

In Sight of the Goddess, a Tale of Washington Life, by Harriet Riddle Davis, illustrated. This is an unusually bright and clever story of Washington life. The interest is concentrated on the relations of a young man of good family and high social standing to a cabinet officer from the West, whose private secretary he becomes and to whose family he comes to stand in intimate relations as social guide and helper. The theme is well worked out and the story cleverly told. [J. B. Lippincott Co. 75 cents.]

The Flaw in the Marble, by Harry C. Edwards, one in the Twentieth Century series of short novels, is an interesting study of the workings of heartless ambition in the person ot an eminent actress, who sits as a model for a poor sculptor and is the means of bringing him both fame and fortune, albeit his heart is broken in the process. Naturally the scene is laid in Paris, but the story lacks those offensive features that too often accompany pictures of art life in the French capital, and is told with genuine delicacy and pathos. The hardening influence of an inordinate love of money upon a woman, her utter insensibility to human pain and the resultant atrophy of all natural affection are skillfully wrought out with artistic, if not with an actually moral, effect. [Frederick A. Stokes Co. 75 cents.]

The Babe, B. A., Being the Uneventful History of a Young Gentleman at Cambridge University, by Edward F. Benson. This book is hardly as frivolous and futile as it proclaims itself in the dedication. It is a story of under-graduate life as spent in Cambridge University and there is too much college slang to make it easy reading to the uninitiated. We discover, however, an undertone of seriousness running through the book, which makes it reasonably wholesome. We may, nevertheless, very cheerfully admit its claim to be the lightest of light reading, and take it up only for the amusement of an idle hour. It is well-printed and illustrated. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1 00.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

With My Neighbors, by Margaret E. Sangster. Many of these sympathetic papers on practical home topics first appeared in The Congregationalist, and the book is dedicated to the editor of our Home Department, so that it is with a sense of pleasant familiarity, as well as expectation, that we take it up for review. Mrs. Sangster is admirably successful in understanding and meeting the needs and troubles of our common life, and it is a surprise to see how wide a range of helpful criticism and comment upon life she has covered in this volume. Three characteristic poems, two of which first appeared in The Congregationalist, are added to the essays. [Harper & Bros. $1 25.]

America and Europe, a Study of International Relations. Three papers are included in this book: (1) The United States and Great Britain, by David A. Wells; (2) The Monroe Doctrine, by Edward J. Phelps; (3) Arbitration in International Disputes, by Carl Schurz They are all valuable and timely and are admirably printed, making a useful number in the Questions of the Day series issued by the publishers. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. 75 cents.]

Mr. Raymond L. Bridgman devotes a little book to an argument against Biennial Elections for the State of Massachusetts. He believes that it is wholesome to keep the power close to the people and that the adoption of the proposed amendment would serve the purposes of the politicians rather than the State. We cannot enter into the merits of the question here, but we commend Mr. Bridgman's argument to careful consideration. [D. C. Heath & Co. 50 cents.]

NOTES.

—— An almost unnoticed anniversary was that of Sept. 7, which completed fifty years of the life of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

—— There is a prospect of cheaper Browning in England. The London Bookman notes that many of the copyrights on his poems have expired or are soon to expire, and that numerous editions at a reasonable price are already planned.

—— Sir Joseph Crowe, who died in London recently, was joint author with G. Cavalcasele of the standard works on Italian painting. In addition to this he was foreign editor of the London Daily News and had a long experience in the English diplomatic service.

—— Mrs. Stowe wrote the most popular and successful book of the century but its financial gain to herself was small. Her estate inventories a little over $42,000, of which $10,000 represents the value of her house in Hartford and $8,750 the amount due from a publishing firm.

—— That artists and writers drift naturally toward the larger centers is abundantly shown by the migration of Canadian writers across the borders. In Europe Bjornstjerne Bjornson has recently left Norway to take up his residence in Germany, and Henrik Ibsen, the Dane, now lives in Munich.

—— Another convenient list of books relating to the coinage question is Fifty Books on Bimetallism, Free Coinage of Silver, Paper Money and Banking. It has been prepared by Professor Laughlin of the University of Chicago, and is issued by Charles Scribner's Sons. The list has been compiled for general readers rather than special students. It is classified and prices are given.

—— Mrs. Mary Cowden Clarke, who was Mary Novello, is perhaps best known in America as the author of the Shakespeare concordance. She is still living in Genoa and is soon to print her autobiography, which will contain interesting reminiscences of Charles Lamb, Keats, Hazlitt, Leigh Hunt, Dickens, Gounod and most of the musical people of note who had dealings with her father, Vincent Novello, the head of the great London firm of musical publishers.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

ORATIONS OF CICERO. Allen and Greenough's edition. pp. 672. $1.40.

LA PRINCESSE DE CLEVES. By Mme. De La Fayette. Edited by B. F. Sledd and H. Gorrell. pp. 152. 70 cents.

BIOLOGICAL LECTURES. Delivered at the Marine Biological Laboratory of Wood's Holl, 1895. pp. 188. $2.15

Copeland and Day. Boston.

THE LISTENER IN THE TOWN. By Joseph E. Chamberlin. pp. 143. 75 cents.

THE LISTENER IN THE COUNTRY. By Joseph E. Chamberlin. pp. 126. 75 cents.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

MUSIC STUDY IN GERMANY. By Amy Fay. pp. 352. $1 25.

JEWISH LIFE IN THE MIDDLE AGES. By Israel Abrahams. pp. 452. $1.75.

HISTORY, PROPHECY AND THE MONUMENTS. Vol. II. By James F. McCurdy, Ph. D., LL. D. pp. 433 $3.00.

Eaton & Mains. New York.

EPWORTH LEAGUE READING COURSE. Vision of Christ in the Poets. Edited by C. M. Stuart. pp. 304. The Social Law of Service By R. T. Ely, Ph. D., LL D. pp 276. Torchbearers of Christendom. By Robert R. Doherty. pp. 288. In League With Israel. By Annie F. Johnston. pp. 303 Per set, $3 80.

THREE OLD MAIDS IN HAWAII. By Ellen B. Maxwell. pp. 394. $1 50.

THE CHRISTIAN DEMOCRACY. By John McDowell Leavitt, D. D, LL. D. pp. 391. $1 50.

NATURE AND CHRIST. By Joseph A. Beet, D. D. pp. 184 75 cents.

Oxford University Press. Fifth Ave., New York.

TEACHER'S BIBLE. No. 0865½ x. $10.00.

Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.

THROUGH EGYPT TO PALESTINE. By Lee S. Smith. pp. 223. $1 25

HOW THE CHILDREN RAISED THE WIND. By Edna Lyall pp. 65. 50 cents.

THE HOLY SPIRIT IN THE NEW TESTAMENT. By William C Scofield. pp. 302 $1 00.

EVOLUTION OR CREATION. By Prof. L. T. Townsend, D D. pp. 318. $1 25.

TYNE FOLK. By Joseph Parker. pp. 200. 75 cents.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

A LONELY MAID. By Mrs Hungerford ("The Duchess"). pp. 262. $1 00.

HEAVY ODDS. By Marcus Clarke. pp. 380. $1.00.

American Baptist Publication Society. Philadelphia.

THE HATHAWAYS' SISTER. By Anne K. Benedict. pp. 204. 75 cents.

Curts and Jennings. Cincinnati.

A STORY OF MADEIRA. By Della Dimmitt. pp. 125. 60 cents.

PAPER COVERS.

Directors of the Old South Work. Boston.

Leaflet No. 66. WINTHROP'S "LITTLE SPEECH ON LIBERTY"; No. 68. THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TEA. By Thomas Hutchinson. No. 70. DEBATE ON THE SUFFRAGE IN CONGRESS; No. 72. THE DUTCH DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE. Each 5 cents.

Rev J. L. Hill. Salem.

THE SCHOLAR'S LARGER LIFE. Commencement Address Delivered at Washburn College. By Rev. J. L. Hill.

Longmans, Green & Co. New York.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A TRUTH. By Edna Lyall. pp. 112. 30 cents.

B. R. Tucker. New York.

PRUDHON AND HIS "BANK OF THE PEOPLE." By Chas. A. Dana.

Johns Hopkins Press. Baltimore.

HISTORY OF TAXATION IN CONNECTICUT. By Frederick R. Jones. pp. 70. 50 cents.

MAGAZINES.

September. TRAVEL.—PANSY.—AMERICAN MAGAZINE OF CIVICS.—GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.—BOOKMAN (English).—AMERICAN JOURNAL OF SOCIOLOGY.—MUSIC.—HEALTH CULTURE.—LEND A HAND.

October. THE QUIVER.

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, Sept. 28, 10 A. M. Address, Hon. Jonathan A. Lane. Subject, Impressions of a Pilgrim in Old England.

ESSEX NORTH BRANCH, W. B. M., semi-annual meeting at Union Church, Haverhill, Wednesday, Sept. 30, at 10 15 A. M. Basket lunch.

WORCESTER SOUTH CONFERENCE, Sutton, Oct. 28.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING, under the auspices of the Woman's Board of Missions, in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 o'clock A. M.

A. B. C. F. M.'S EIGHTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING will be held in Toledo, O., in the First Congregational Church, beginning Tuesday, Oct. 6, at 3 P. M., and closing Friday noon, Oct. 9. Free entertainment will be given to officers of the Board and their wives, missionaries of the Board. corporate members and their wives, officers of the Women's Boards, Professors and students of our theological seminaries, and officers of the Congregational benevolent societies.

The Eastern, Central and Western Traffic Associations have granted a rate of one and a third fare to those attending the meeting. To secure this rate the purchaser will pay full fare going to Toledo, and must ask for and secure a certificate from the agent that full fare was paid to that point. This certificate will be visé by a special agent of the associations at the place of meeting, and will then entitle the holder to purchase a return ticket at one-third the usual rate.

FALL STATE MEETINGS.

Oregon,	Portland,	Tuesday, Sept. 29.
Wisconsin,	Antigo,	Tuesday, Sept. 29.
Wyoming,	Wheatland,	Sept.
Idaho.	Boise,	Oct.
New Mexico,	Albuquerque,	Oct.
Utah,		Oct.
California,	Sacramento,	Tuesday, Oct. 6.
Colorado,	Denver,	Tuesday, Oct. 6.
California, South'rn,	Claremont,	Tuesday, Oct. 13.
Nebraska,	Harvard,	Monday, Oct. 19.
Alabama,	Shelby,	Wednesday, Nov. 11.
Connecticut Conf.,	Winsted,	Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Benevolent Societies.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY is represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No. 9 Congregational House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin B. Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room No. 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. Annual membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Contributions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS, Congregational House, No 1 Somerset Street, Boston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles E. Swett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in New York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Congregational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; Miss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible House, New York. Missions in the United States, evangelistic and educational, at the South and in the West among the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Congregational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street.; Cleveland office, Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may be sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY —Church and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D. D., Secretary; H. O. Pinneo, Treasurer, 59 Bible House, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Including work of former New West Commission.) Aids four hundred students for the ministry, eight home missionary colleges, twenty academies in the West and South, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New Mexico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congregational House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

ONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.— Contributions used only for missionary work. Rev. George M. Boynton, D. D., Secretary; W. De Duncan, Ph. D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treasurer, Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.— Treasurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, Boston Address applications to Rev A. H. Quint, D. D., Congregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little timely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign missionaries and ministers and their families, the committee of the National Council asks from each church one splendid offering for its permanent invested fund. It also invites generous individual gifts. For fuller information see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year-Book, 1893, page 62. Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, New Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B. Forbes, Hartford, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trustees of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States" (a body corporate chartered under the laws of the State of Connecticut) [here insert the bequest], to be used for the purpose of Ministerial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States at its session held in Chicago in October, 1886.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, established by the Massachusetts General Association, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies Careful attention is given to applications from without the State. Room 22A, Congregational House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

THE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized 1827. Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. Open day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. Daily prayer meeting, 11 A.M., Bible study, 3 P.M. Sunday services, usual hours. Meetings every evening except Saturday. Branch mission, Vineyard Haven. Is a Congregational society and appeals to all Congregational churches for support. Send donations of money to B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Congregational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort bags, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, 287 Hanover St. Bequests should read: "I give and bequeath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum of $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and purposes of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT ON THIS WEEK'S NEWS.

We commend the book club idea of the St. Louis Ministers' Meeting to pastors of limited means in cities lacking theological libraries.

The arrangements, subjects and membership of a Maine association of ministers combine so as to result in profitable occasions at every meeting.

Despite the calamities of the past and the present outlook, that New England church is redoubtable enough in spirit to have completed a century with prosperity.

To find no abatement, but rather the fruits of growth so evident after the summer's respite must have been a large incentive to that Massachusetts pastor to resume his place.

Four pastorates in a Connecticut church averaging twenty-five years each, followed by thirteen averaging about five years each suggest the trend of the pastoral period as to length.

The Kansas pastor, who, by spending a half-day each week in the public schools, identifies himself with the cause of education and gets in touch with the school life of his young parishioners, will reap a choice harvest.

Boston does not claim all the credit of working up permanent interest in suburban Congregationalism. A large Interior city, already a stronghold, adds to its stability by planting a new enterprise in a growing quarter.

It must be hard for the Washington H. M. S. to meet the needs of neglected communities with an empty treasury. Those consecrated laborers who respond to the mute appeal with no prospect of financial compensation are laying up heavenly treasure.

Twenty years is a pastorate of rare length in the West. That minister in Minnesota must be gratified at the place his two decades of service have won for him in the hearts of his people, who give liberally out of deep poverty rather than let him go. May such instances of mutual devotion multiply.

THE MINNESOTA ASSOCIATION.

After an interval of nineteen years the churches gathered again in the beautiful city of State institutions and colleges, Faribault, Sept. 15–17. Frequent showers fell at the opening of the association, prophetic of the larger blessings which came upon the members of the forty-first annual meeting. This is one of our oldest and most influential churches, graciously presided over by our host, Rev. G. S. Ricker. For the first time in the history of the association it elected a moderator at the close of last year's meeting, who has co-operated with the business committee in preparing the program. The plan is well pleasing to the churches. Rev. G. E. Soper of Alexandria took the helm and at once started the business well on its way. The moderator gave an opening address on Our Opportunity, emphasizing especially the far-reaching results of the home missionaries' self-sacrificing work in the northern part of the State. Rev. D. W. Cram of Staples was elected scribe and Rev. H. A. Risser of St. Paul assistant.

Prof. George Huntington gave a clear, helpful paper on The Congregational Idea. He was followed by Rev. C. H. Patton on The Opportunity of Congregationalism in Minnesota—a strong plea for the adaptation of our polity to the conditions in the northern half of the State, God's vast tree farm so rich in resources and possibility and rapidly filling up with people. Although our churches are well planted on the frontier, still, if we wish to keep up with the tidal wave, we must have more men and money for this important region.

The sermon was preached by Rev. T. M. Edmands of Brainerd, and was an earnest and comprehensive plea for intelligent, discriminating love, which will insist on thorough preparation for the ministry and a scientific study of the fields. It will also prompt to that self-sacrifice abounding in knowledge and discernment. Following the sermon Judge Mott gave the address of welcome and Hon. D. C. Bell responded.

On Wednesday morning the first matter was the reports of committees on Carleton College and Windom Institute. Urgent appeals were heard, especially in behalf of Windom, that every church in the State make some offering before the close of the year. Both these institutions are suffering from the financial stress, but each has an enlarged attendance and the work, both preparatory and collegiate, is of a high order. Members of the faculty are giving one-quarter of their salary this year to Carleton College for the purpose of meeting the financial obligations. The last half of the morning was devoted to Christian Endeavor work. Mr. H. T. McBride gave a helpful paper on the devotional phase and Miss C. E. Holbrook spoke on practical work for Endeavorers—a suggestive address.

Wednesday afternoon saw the house crowded to hear the work of our State H. M. S. Supt. J. H. Morley gave his annual report, showing total receipts for the year of $6,543, of which the Woman's Union gave $2,566. Mrs. Joseph Ward of Yankton, S. D., gave an inspiring address on Home Missions, and stirring appeals were made by missionaries on the field, especially for money to man the opening work in northern Minnesota.

A mass meeting was held in the Opera House in the evening, at which Miss Bye spoke in behalf of Fisk University. Dr. L. H. Cobb made a felicitous speech on the Meeting House and the Millennium. The Present Situation in Japan was placed before the audience in a masterful and impressive manner by Rev. G. E. Albrecht of Kyoto. This was one of the strongest addresses of the three days' meeting. Mr. Albrecht had a live subject and he spoke words that found a deep response in his audience.

The last day of the association opened with a report of the Bible school work by Rev. R. P. Herrick, the State superintendent. The work is being pushed vigorously throughout the State, and the manifold agencies employed by this society are yielding excellent results. In April of this year the business department opened a branch in Minneapolis, the net profits from sales to go toward the extension of missionary schools.

Prof. A. H. Pearson gave a carefully prepared paper on The Pedagogical Aim in Bible Study, followed by an Illustration of Bible Study from the Twenty-third Psalm by Dr. G. R. Merrill. This was perhaps the most helpful hour of the association in stimulating Bible study. Four things were emphasized—material, organization, study and teaching. Minnesota is much interested in the Ministerial Aid Fund, and after listening to Dr. N. H. Whittlesey a resolution was passed that every church in the State be urged to place this society on its schedule of benevolences.

Christian Citizenship had a prominent place on the program of the last afternoon. Rev. H. H. Hart spoke on the general topic and Harington Beard gave an address on The Message of the Church to the Citizen. The excellent work and hopeful results of the Good Citizenship League of Minneapolis gave good cheer to the churches, and in some of the smaller cities earnest Christian men are organizing themselves against machine politics. Dr. J. E Roy spoke for the A. M. A. At the closing session Rev. George D. Black gave a searching address on The Modern Spirit, and Dr. D. N. Beach followed with a most impressive address on Acquaintance With Christ.

The woman's home and foreign missionary societies held some of their meetings jointly with the association and in part by themselves. Their work for the year has been especially efficient in the face of hard times. Their receipts for the home land societies have been over $5,000. Foreign missionary receipts $5 900. Other features which made the meeting helpful were the carriage drive among the six literary and State institutions, and the central social feature, the banquet on Wednesday evening. The refreshments were delicate and generous, served by the Ladies' Social Society of the church. The after-dinner speeches were unreportable. As nominees for corporate membership in the American Board the following were named: W. H. Laird, Esq., and Miss Margaret J. Evans if eligible; if not, F. W. Anderson, Esq.

The association meets next year in the western part of the State at Montevideo with Prof. Horace Goodhue of Carleton College as moderator and Rev. J. A. Stemen of Minneapolis as preacher. The meeting adopted strong resolutions in protest of the lynching which recently took place at Glencoe in this State. A recommendation was also adopted for a petition to the coming legislature in favor of submitting to the people the matter of county option in temperance. The music furnished by children of the public schools and the institution for the blind was a delightful feature.

The distinctive characteristics left upon the 200 delegates were deep, spiritual hungering, thorough co-operation, wise discernment, loving adaptation and an undaunted purpose to move forward and possess Minnesota for Christ. J. A. S.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Bangor.

The seminary year opened Sept. 3 most favorably, the Juniors numbering 18, Middlers 15, Seniors 15 and one special student.——The Students' Association has elected E. H. Newcomb, '97, president, and J. F. Scott, '99, secretary, for the ensuing year.——The students report an enjoyable summer in their various fields under the Maine Missionary Society.——A reception was given to the Junior Class last Friday evening at the home of Professor Denio.

Andover.

The seminary opened on Sept. 16. Twenty-one new students are registered, 18 as Juniors and three as Seniors. They come from Harvard, Amherst, Dartmouth, Bowdoin, Berea, Doane, Oberlin and the French-American College of Springfield.——This year marks the beginning of Professor Harris's service as president of the faculty and of Professor Churchill's as Bartlet professor of sacred rhetoric.

Oberlin.

The term begins the 23d of the month. The opening lecture will be given by President Fairchild Thursday morning. Council Hall has received more than the usual summer renovation. The newly decorated parlor and the refurnished reading room are very attractive.——Prof. G. F. Wright spent two weeks during the vacation lecturing at Lakeside, O. He has also been in Buffalo, has addressed the Oberlin alumni at Omaha and has been geologizing in southern Iowa. Professor Currier spent a part of the summer at Bay View, Mich., and has since then taken charge of the First Church during Dr. Brand's vacation. Professor Bosworth spent his summer at Elgin and Lake Geneva, Ill., at the latter place delivering a course of lectures before the Secretarial Institute of the Y. M. C. A. Professor Swing has been at Lake Bluff, Ill.

Chicago.

Considering the times, the seminary opens auspiciously with about 150 students, of whom 50 are in the foreign departments.——The subject of the conference last Thursday afternoon was The Duty of Educated Men to Study the Social Condition of the Industrial Classes. An address was given by Mrs. Florence Kelly, factory inspector of Illinois.——Mr. A. N. Fox, instructor in the German department, has returned from the University of Halle, where he spent the summer. Prof. C. A. Paeth devoted most of the vacation to a visitation of our German Congregational churches in the Interior and on the Pacific Coast. Professor Risberg of the Swedish department, during his connection of 11 years with the seminary, has traveled more extensively in the United States than any other member of the faculty through his annual missionary journeys among the Swedes.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

VT.—An exceedingly interesting meeting of the Windham County Conference was held in Marlboro, Sept. 9, 10. Every pastor of the conference save one was present, and a large representation from the laity. The reports showed a hopeful condition. Papers on Sunday School, Temperance and C. E. Work were presented. Timeliness in Christian Enterprise was also considered. The prayer half-hours were a prominent feature. Home and foreign mission work were given much attention. Sec. C. H. Merrill and Mrs. Caswell of New York and Dr. Daniels and Miss Lamson of Boston were present.

IO.—The semi-annual meeting of Denmark Association was held with the pastorless Eddyville church, Sept. 15, 16. The associational sermon of Rev. F. N. White of Burlington was an able exposition of the law of service. Secretary Douglass's theme was The Currency Question as Related to Home Missions. His treatment was strictly non-partisan. Subjects of especial interest were: The Distinctive Place and Work of Our Denomination; What a Pastorless Church May Do; Has the Bible Lost Its Hold Upon the People? Parables and Fables of the Bible; Home and Its Rivals. There was also a symposium on Christ in Scripture, in Literature, in History and in Modern Preaching.

At the Webster City Association meeting at Iowa Falls, Sept. 15, 16, the topics discussed in a series of symposiums were: The Scriptures—in Civilization, in the Individual; The Holy Spirit—His Personality, Our Relation to Him; The Ideal Christian—Wrong Conceptions, Traits of Character; The Church—Its Significance, Its Responsibility, Its Hope. The associational sermon was by Rev. Edwin Ewell of Clarion. The last evening was given to the missionary women and the address of Secretary Douglass, concluding with a discussion of the Lord's Supper, followed by its observance.

KAN.—Southern Association met at Altoona, Sept. 10. The Distinctive Mission of a Christian Academy, Church Finances, The Comparative Importance of Pulpit and Pastoral Work, The Deaconess Idea Applied to Pastoral Problems, and the Y. P. S. C. E. were prominent topics. Supt. A. S. Bush spoke on The Bible and the Child, and Supt. L. P. Broad on Home Missions. Spiritually the meeting was one of the best.

CAL.—Sonoma Association held its autumn meeting in the beautiful new edifice at Guerneville, every church but one being represented. Supt. L. L. Wirt of the C. S. S. and P. S. and Rev. Messrs. John Kimball of The Pacific, J. C. Perkins of India and H. H. Wikoff, coast secretary of the C. C. B. S., each represented the interests committed to him. Guerneville is a lumber town, surrounded by rich farming land. The church, not yet two years old, is raising the money needed to secure a grant from the C. C. B. S.

CLUBS.

WN.—The Puget Sound Club met with Plymouth Church, Seattle, Sept. 9, with small attendance but a good degree of interest. Rev. W. H. Scudder, the new pastor of First Church, Tacoma, was the guest of the club and spoke on The Opportunities of Congregationalism Evidenced by Its History.

NEW ENGLAND.

Boston.

CHARLESTOWN.—Winthrop. Rev. C. R. Brown preached his farewell sermon last Sunday. Last week the church considered his resignation at a special meeting and, owing to Mr. Brown's reasons for his departure, voted to accept his request to be released. Last Monday the dismissing council closed the relations of pastor and people.

DORCHESTER.—Pilgrim. The inaugural concert with the new organ was held last week. Soloists and a chorus assisted in the program, which was of high excellence throughout. The new instrument is of the most modern style and improvements, and its cost was about $4,000.

NEPONSET.—Trinity began its fall church work by observing a week of prayer. The communion service has been changed to the afternoon. The social life of the church was started this week by the second annual church and parish reunion.

Massachusetts.

BROOKLINE.—Harvard. Rev. Reuen Thomas, D. D., occupied his pulpit last Sunday, being the first since his return from Europe. The English papers report that he has had large and interested audiences in the City Temple, London, where he has been preaching during the summer.

MEDFORD.—Mystic. New carpets, cushions and newly frescoed walls and ceiling greeted the congregation Sunday morning, Sept. 6, as they entered their church building. The expenses have been largely met by the Ladies' Social Circle. The pastor, Rev. John Barstow, is preaching a series of sermons on The Ideal Worship of God's House.

NEWTON.—Center Students of Atlanta University occupied the evening last Sunday and received a collection of over $50. On the return of the pastor, Rev. E. M. Noyes, from his vacation, eight persons were found awaiting admission to membership.

GEORGETOWN.—Memorial. The Salvation Army made a two weeks' stay on the park in August, marked by a special interest, with a series of week night meetings addressed by neighboring ministers. Then an evangelist, Mrs. H. A. Walker, labored two weeks and 14 conversions were reported. Through the instrumentality of Rev. W. M. Gay union meetings have been held. Last Sunday evening there were 250 persons at the first meeting in the town hall.

BROCKTON.—First. The corner stone of the elegant new meeting house in course of erection on the old Parish Green was laid with appropriate ceremonies on the afternoon of the 15th. Various documents of historical interest were deposited beneath the stone and an address was given by the pastor, Rev. Alan Hudson. The prayer was offered by Rev. Walcott Fay, who has supplied the church for several months. The building is to cost $70,000, an amount which is entirely provided for.——Porter has met with a serious loss in the death of its senior deacon, Mr. G. C. Cary, who for 30 years has performed the duties of this office with rare fidelity. For more than 20 years he served the church as clerk and treasurer and for a still longer period led the singing in its prayer meetings.——Waldo. Rev. R. L. Rae, who has served this church since its organization last April, was on Tuesday evening of last week duly installed into the pastoral office. Rev. W. H. Allbright of Boston preached the sermon. Rev. Mr. Rae was formerly assistant pastor of the Porter Church.

WEST BOYLSTON.—The church celebrated its centennial Sept. 15, a large number being present. Addresses were given by former pastors. The anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. A. Z. Conrad of Worcester, after which there was a roll-call of the church. At preliminary exercises the preceding Sunday the pastor, Rev. J. C. Villiers, preached on The Gains and Losses of the Past Century. At union services in the evening Deacon E. B. Rice gave a historical address. This church, during its 100 years, has suffered at times by fire and lightning stroke, and now has the prospect of the site of its meeting house being flooded by the waters of the great metropolitan reservoir.

SOUTHWICK.—The exercises of the ordination and installation of Mr. H. O. Hannum last week Wednesday found a large congregation at the church. The candidate's paper was clearly and concisely presented with entire satisfaction to the council. Dr. P. S. Moxom preached the sermon. Mr. Hannum graduated from the University of Minnesota and studied at the Yale and Harvard divinity schools.

Maine.

AUBURN.—The Maine Ministers' Association held its fifth meeting in High Street Church, with good attendance. The expense of travel is borne equally by all attending and reduced rates are obtained. Prof. C. A. Briggs, D. D., was the principal speaker and made two addresses, one on Church Unity and a public evening address on The Biblical Doctrine of Redemption. Supper and social exercises occupied the time between the afternoon and evening meetings, with many short, bright speeches. This organization, which meets three times a year and includes ministers of all denominations, seems to grow in interest and helpfulness.

CARIBOU.—Gen. O. O. Howard, who has been speaking through the State on politics, spent last week Sunday here and gave an evening address. Veterans from all the region came to hear him, and the edifice could not hold all who wished to see and hear this Christian soldier.

THOMASTON.—Electric lights have been introduced into the house of worship, and the event was celebrated by a supper in the vestry and gathering of earned dollars by the ladies, who have been making an effort this summer.

BROWNVILLE.—The congregation was much interested in the recent sermons of Dr. J. E. Adams, and especially the discourse of the evening on Changes in the Church During My Personal Experience.

LEWISTON.—Pine Street. The pastor, Rev. G. M. Howe, has organized a class of young men, who will study under his leadership the Sunday school lessons in connection with topics of the day.

New Hampshire

MEREDITH.—Spiritual interest has been quietly but steadily rising since last winter, especially since evangelistic services last May by Rev. Ralph Gillam. A midweek Bible study class is a new promising feature of the work. The Sunday evening service is also growing in gradual favor. Rev. R. T. Osgood is pastor.

NORTH WEARE.—The new members added at the last communion afford cause for great encouragement. A deep religious interest is everywhere manifest and the outlook seems more promising than for a long time.

MARLBORO —A legacy of $2,000 has been left the church by the will of the late James S. Nason, which with the amount received from three other donors makes a total of $12,000 received within the past four years.

MANCHESTER.—First. Following the late city centennial the pastor, Rev. T. E. Clapp, on Sept. 13 preached a timely and stirring sermon on The Beginning of Another Fifty Years of Life as a City.

Vermont.

SPRINGFIELD.—Mr. O. S. Davis was ordained Sept. 14 as pastor of this church. He is a graduate of Dartmouth College and Hartford Seminary and has studied abroad two years. Rev. M. D. Bisbee preached the sermon.

Rev. Allen Hayes, D.D., has closed his summer work at Hartland.——Mr. G. H. Wright of Andover has finished preaching in Warner ——Mr. E. C. Gillette has ended his period of work in Westmore.

Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE.—Edgewood. Circulars are out with handsome half-tone pictures of the church building that is to be, and the statement of facts on which the appeal to the churches of the State is made. One dollar from each Congregational family, with an equal amount from individuals, will give the church $10,000, just doubling the sum it has been able to secure by its own efforts. The community especially needs the help of the church. Rev. D. T. Torrey, the pastor, has been with the church all summer.——North. The resignation of Rev. F. H. Decker was read Sept. 6. Although on the way to recovery Mr. Decker does not feel ready for the full work of the pastorate.——Central. The assistant pastor, Mr. J. J. Walker, has resigned with the intention of further study at Harvard University.——Elmwood Temple's vestry was beautifully decorated with golden-rod and barberries in honor of the coming of Rev. E T. Root and his family Sept. 16. Music, recitations and refreshments made up the program, while the warm welcome of a large company manifested the interest of the people in the new and hopeful outlook for the church.

TIVERTON.—Amicable. The church celebrated its 150th anniversary, Sept. 16, with services afternoon and evening. Addresses by former pastors, a historical paper by Rev. Samuel Rose, the present pastor, greetings by neighboring ministers and a sermon by Rev. Wallace Nutting, besides special music, commemorated the event. In the historical paper it was stated that the former building was used as a soldiers' barracks in the Revolution. To repair the damages of that time the General Assembly granted permission to hold a lottery to obtain the $1,500 needed. In 1844 the Revolutionary structure was abandoned and the present meeting house was built in 1846. Eighteen pastors have ministered during the century and a half.

NEWPORT.—Union. The 28th anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Mahlon Van Horne occurred Sept. 6. Special services in the afternoon commemorated the occasion.

Connecticut.

WILLINGTON.—The church edifice has been newly frescoed and painted inside and out, a new ceiling put in and a general renovation made. Services of rededication last week Sunday were largely attended. An interesting history of the church was given. In the first hundred years the church had but four pastors against 13 in the following 68 years. The dedication sermon was by Rev. A. J. McLeod of Stafford Springs, and the exercises were followed by the communion. This is the fourth dedication the church has had during its existence.

PLANTSVILLE.—A committee was recently appointed to report a plan for the organization of a Young Men's Sunday Evening Club. Meetings have been held since, and plans are under way for an organization that shall be a power for good in the vicinity.

NEW HAVEN.—The concluding open air service on the steps of the Center meeting house, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., was held a week ago Sunday evening.——Howard Avenue. Evening services have been resumed.

HADDAM.—Rev. E. E. Lewis is doing double duty for a few weeks, preaching for his own church in the morning and for the Baptists in the afternoon during the absence of the pastor on his vacation.

OXFORD.—General repairs are to be made on the church building, including painting inside and out, new frescoing and a general redecoration of the interior.

The church in West Suffield has raised $60 for the Armenian sufferers.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

SCHENECTADY.—Rev. C. A. Alden, the pastor, announces that his resignation is absolute. It takes effect Jan. 1 next.

New Jersey.

PARK RIDGE.—After six years' service as an ordained miniater the pastor now becomes a student at Union Seminary. This will not sever his relations with the church, however. The church is enjoying a series of special services conducted by the blind evangelist, Rev. Thomas Houston.

ELIZABETH.—A joint anniversary of the Y. P. and the Junior Endeavor Societies was held Sept. 13. One feature of the exercises was the graduation of six of the juniors into the older society.

THE SOUTH.

North Carolina.

ASHEBORO.—A new church of 14 members, five on confession, was organized Sept. 12, 13. The sermon was preached by Rev. A. W. Curtis. Rev. E. W. Stratton, A. M. A. pastor of the church at High Point, has charge of this new work.

THE INTERIOR.

Illinois.

CHICAGO.—The pulpits are nearly all filled again as usual.——Puritan. During the seminary vacation 25 new members were received to the church. ——Grace. The reports at the annual meeting this month show a prosperous condition. The change of time for this yearly gathering is considered a benefit.——The committee of the Interior of the C. S. S. and P. S. gave Mr. J. H. Tewksbury a parting lunch at the Union League Club last Friday, where after a pleasant hour a resolution was passed expressing sorrow at the withdrawal of Mr. Tewksbury, for the past nine years manager of this branch of the society, to occupy a larger field at Boston, and extending to him the affection and best wishes of the committee. A hearty welcome was also given Mr. Brown, who comes from Boston as Mr. Tewksbury's successor.

Michigan.

DETROIT.—Boulevard. This new chapel was dedicated a week ago Sunday. Rev. Morgan Wood preached the morning sermon and Dr. Nehemiah Boynton the dedicatory sermon. The service of the evening was devoted to Sunday school work largely. The building cost $1,825 and was consecrated without debt. Of the total sum $530 were received at the afternoon service. The location of the chapel is exceptionally favorable.

ALMONT.—The resignation of Rev. Edwin F. Norton was withdrawn at the unanimous request of church and society.

CONKLIN.—Plymouth laid the corner stone of a meeting house Sept. 15, to cost $1,200. Rev. John Stapleton is pastor.

Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE.—The Scandinavian has purchased a lot and will build as soon as money can be raised. Services have been held for five years in a hall over a saloon Rev. J. M. Westlund has just resigned to return to his native country. The church is in good condition and accomplishes efficient work. ——Plymouth. The Sunday Evening Club opened its fourth season auspiciously Sept. 6. The club also manages the Plymouth Popular Lecture Course, now in its 10th year. Lieutenant Peary, Booker Washington, Camilla Urso, Hamilton Mabie and Dr. Hillis, Professor Swing's successor, are already on the list for the coming winter.

THE WEST.

Missouri.

ST. LOUIS.—In connection with the Ministers' Meeting, which resumed its sessions Sept. 7, a Book Club has been organized, whose sole officer is a secretary and treasurer. The initiation fee and annual dues are each $1. The secretary purchases as they come from the press the best new books of interest to ministers. The members draw the books for two weeks with privilege of renewal. At the close of the year's meetings in June the books are sold at auction to the members. Last year 50 volumes were placed upon the table. By this means a good number of the current books are placed before every Congregational minister in the city.

NEOSHO.—This church has made marked progress during the past year under the pastorate of Rev.

Continued on page 461.

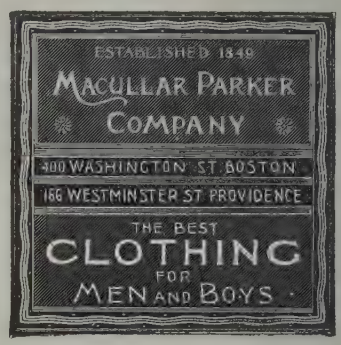
Fall Medicine

Is fully as important and beneficial as spring medicine, for at this season there is great danger to health in the varying temperature, cold storms, malarial germs and prevalence of fevers and other diseases. Danger may be avoided by taking

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

The best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills assist Digestion and cure Constipation. 25 cents.



RUSH SEATS.

There is a great demand on all sides for rush seats on dining chairs. It is a revival of the fashion of a hundred and fifty years ago, when every great manor house had its guest rooms and dining room furnished in this style.

Few fashions are more picturesque, and certainly no chairs are more comfortable for an erect seat. We have entered into the new revival in no uncertain way, and show twenty leading styles of frames finished with woven rush seats.

High backs and square backs, flat and dished seats, round and square legs, with heavy or light framing, and in all styles of decoration, we make a most attractive display of these rush dining chairs for this week.

Some of the frames have marquetry borders and panels, some are more elaborately inlaid, and some are artistically painted in the old-fashioned style.

Our prices are unusually low on these chairs.

JUST ISSUED.—General Catalogues for 1896-97. Square octavo, 256 pp., 300 illustrations. Sent to any address on receipt of five 2*-cent stamps for postage.*

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,
48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

SAVE YOUR CHILD.

Mark How Thin, Pale, Nervous and Puny the Little One Is.

How You Can Make It Well and Vigorous. Words of Wisdom by a Well-Known Physician.

A well-known physician writes a very interesting article in regard to what to give children, especially weak, nervous and run-down children, in order to make them strong, vigorous and well.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hallows, says this writer, of Peckham Street, Globe Village, Fall River, Mass., thank Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy for restoring the health and probably preserving the life of their little son, who, almost from infancy, was troubled with indigestion and nervous troubles. An attending physician, who was called, advised the parents to give the child such medicine as seemed best fitted to such a condition. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy was recommended.

The taking of a few bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura effected a cure, and the little one is healthy today, enjoying play with the other children. Mr. and Mrs. Hallows say they must give the credit of the cure to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

EVERETT HALLOWS.

What a change! The sickly child transformed into a happy, hearty, robust little one; and by the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great nerve and blood remedy. This medicine has proved a blessing to thousands of boys and girls throughout the world by giving them sound health and vigorous strength. Children who use it have less sickness, better health, better growth, and longer and more vigorous lives. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and parents should give it to every child who is not in perfect health. The discoverer of this wonderful remedy is the celebrated physician, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who allows all who wish to consult him personally or by letter, free of charge.

BRECK'S BULBS AND PLANTS
Beautify Winter Homes AND Spring Gardens
64 page Illustrated Catalogue with Cultural Directions. MAILED FREE.
JOSEPH BRECK & SONS (EVERYTHING IN WOODEN WARE. EVERYTHING FOR FARM, GARDEN AND LAWN. LOWEST PRICES WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.)
47 to 54 North Market St. BOSTON, MASS.
PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

The improvement to be expected in the general merchandise movement with the advent of the fall season, is apparent, although to a less degree than would be the case if conditions were entirely normal. The increase in the movement of goods now witnessed reflects the actual necessities of people rather than any confident buying. While the extent of the silver craze remains so uncertain, merchants will reduce their operations to the minimum, content with running along in a hand-to-mouth way. Consequently, it is the generally accepted idea that not much real, substantial improvement will come into the general trade situation until after the election.

As it is, the fall consumption of merchandise is reducing the surplus stocks of cotton goods and inspiring fair purchases of wool by manufacturers. The movement of seasonable fabrics is good, all things considered, although prices leave something to be desired. In the iron and steel industries the more confident tone still prevails and values are firmer than they have been for months. Iron men are looking for a revival in the demand for their staple, which shall advance prices several points.

At the principal centers a brisk movement in dry-goods, boots, shoes, hats and hardware is reported. The South is in fairly good shape, because of the rapidity with which the cotton crop is being marketed. While monetary conditions are less stringent than they were, rates are nevertheless high, and banks are not anxious to extend accommodations beyond their own customers. Commercial paper is not plenty for this time of the year, and must be first-class in quality to find sale. The continued gold imports inspire confidence, of course, but the large shipments of currency to Interior points to move the crops have prevented the influx of gold from exerting that softening influence on money rates that it would have had but for the shipments of funds to move the crops.

Collections continue poor, which is perhaps as unfavorable a feature as any in the general situation. In the stock market the temper of speculation is still bullish, but in the absence of outside buying the bull leaders can only carry prices up to a certain level. For this reason the market is called a purchase on declines and a sale on strong spots.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

ENOCH PRATT.

One of the many New Englanders who have gone South, prospered and blessed that section of the country died in Baltimore, Md., last week. Enoch Pratt, banker, merchant and philanthropist, was born in North Middleboro, Mass., educated in the public schools, and trained in business affairs in Boston. In 1831 he went to Baltimore, began a career as a hardware merchant, and in time became a bank president and railway director. In 1882 he gave to the city of Baltimore a public library costing more than $1,000,000. No good cause in Baltimore or Maryland failed to receive his generous support.

NOTEWORTHY FORTHCOMING MEETINGS.

Annual Congress of the National Prison Association, Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 26–30.

Massachusetts Sunday School Association, Northampton, Oct. 6, 7.

American Board, Toledo, O., Oct. 6–9

Indian Conference, Lake Mohonk, N. Y., Oct. 14–16.

American Missionary Association, Boston, Mass., Oct. 20–22.

Convention of the Open and Institutional Church League, Hartford, Ct., Oct. 20, 21.

Woman's Home Missionary Association, Annual Meeting, Boston, Oct. 28.

International Convention of Christian Workers, Louisville, Ky., Nov. 5–11.

National W. C. T. U. Convention, St. Louis, Mo., Nov 13–18.

Is your Brain Tired? Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

It supplies the needed food for the brain and nerves and makes exertion easy.

Fifty Years Ago.

This is the cradle in which there grew
That thought of a philanthropic brain;
A remedy that would make life new
For the multitudes that were racked with pain.
'Twas sarsaparilla, as made, you know
By Ayer, some 50 years ago.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla was in its infancy half a century ago. To-day it doth "bestride the narrow world like a colossus." What is the secret of its power? Its cures! The number of them! The wonder of them! Imitators have followed it from the beginning of its success. They are still behind it. Wearing the only medal granted to sarsaparilla in the World's Fair of 1893, it points proudly to its record. Others imitate the remedy; they can't imitate the record:

50 Years of Cures.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. CATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

£ A STANDARD FORM OF REMITTANCE:

Cheque Bank Cheques.

They represent Gold. They are as good as Gold. Anywhere and Everywhere!

Agency of
UNITED STATES CHEQUE BANK, L'd.
FREDERICK W. PERRY, Manager,
40 and 42 Wall St., N. Y.

SAVE ½ YOUR FUEL

By using our (stove pipe) RADIATOR. With its 120 Cross Tubes, ONE stove or furnace does the work of TWO. Drop postal for proofs from prominent men.

TO INTRODUCE OUR RADIATOR, the first order from each neighborhood filled at WHOLESALE price, and secures an agency. Write at once.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR COMPANY,
41 Furnace St., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

ESTABLISHED 1836.
ISAAC RILEY,
Successor to Baird & Riley,
PLUMBER AND SANITARY ENGINEER,
85 Joy St., Near Cambridge St., Boston.
Telephone, Haymarket 294.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

ALGER, Frank G., formerly of Oneida, Ill., accepts call to Blackstone, Mass.
BOSWORTH, Uriah C., Huntsburgh, O., to Chester and Kirtland. Accepts, with residence at Kirtland.
BRIMACOMBE, Geo. (Meth.), to Wautoma and Springwater, Wis. Accepts.
BROWN, Oliver, W. Grover, Vt., to Andover, Ct. Accepts.
CALKINS, Wolcott, formerly of Eliot Ch., Newton, Mass., to supply six months or longer at Clyde Ch., Kansas City, Mo.
COLE, H. Hammond, to the permanent pastorate at Weaverville, Cal., where he has supplied for a year.
CUNNINGHAM, John T., Lakeland, Minn., to Randall. Accepts.
DUFF, Ralph J., Georgetown, Ont., to St. Clair, Mich. Accepts.
DUNSMORE, H. Chas., Garnett, Kan., to Barrie, Ont.
EDMUNDS, John S., Oxford, Mich., to Chelsea. Accepts.
HELMUTH, Jos. W., Genoa Junction, Wis., and Richmond, Ill., to Hartland, Wis.
HURD, Alva A., Vancouver, Wn., to the Presbyterian churches at Springwater, Ore. Accepts.
JONES, Richard, Highmore, S. D., will supply at Wheeler and Bartholdi instead of at Worthing KILBURNE, Wm., Grand Rapids, Wis., to S. Kaukauna. Accepts.
MORSE, Morris W., Chicago Sem., accepts call to serve a year at Crete, Neb.
RIGGS, Geo. W., to remain another year at Edmore and Six Lakes, Mich.
SHANNON, Wm. H., Salem, Mich., to Wayne for a year. Accepts.
THOMAS, John A., Fifield, Wis., to Friendship and Quincy. Accepts
TICKNOR, Owen E., Reno, Neb., to Red Cloud. Accepts.
UNSTED, Owen, recently approbated to preach by Southern Assoc., Kan., to Lourton. Accepts.
WALKER, Wm. H., Chelsea, Mich., to First Ch., Emporia, Kan. Accepts.
WILLARD, Wallace W., Chicago, Ill., to First Ch., Moline. Accepts.
WILLIAMS, Mark W., to Birnamwood, Wis. Accepts.

Ordinations and Installations

DAVIS, Ozora S., o. First Ch., Springfield Vt., Sept. 14 Sermon, Prof. M. D Bisbee; other parts, Rev. Messrs. H. L. Ballou, J. A. Leach, E. T. Blake.
HANNUM, Harry O., o. and i. Southwick, Mass., Sept. 16. Sermon, Rev. P. S. Moxom; other parts, Rev. Messrs. F. L. Garfield, D. L. Keube, L. H. Blake, F. L. Goodspeed.
MCKINLEY, Chas. E., i. Union Ch., Rockville, Ct. Sermon, Rev. E. B. Webb, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. A. P. Wedge, W. J. Yates, F. R. Waite, S. G. Barnes, D. D., C. H. Daniels, D. D.
RAE, Robt. L., i. Waldo Ch., Brockton, Mass., Sept. 15. Sermon, Rev. W. H. Allbright, D. D.

Resignations.

DECKER, Frank H., North Ch., Providence, R. I.
HAYWARD, John S., Benson, Minn., not resigned.
HELMUTH, Jos. W., Genoa Junction, Wis., and Richmond, Ill.
JACKMAN, Geo. W., Bloomington and Blake's Prairie, Wis.
LATHAM, Ernest R., Fort Dodge, Io.
REED, Wm. E., First Ch., Dallas, Tex., to become missionary to Ecuador. Resignation will take effect Nov. 23.
TAYLOR, Horace J., Fidalgo City and Rosario, Wn., to take up H. M. work in Ohio.
WEBSTER, Franklin G., Oswego Falls, N. Y., withdraws resignation until April 1.
WESTLUND, J. M., Swedish Ch., Milwaukee, Wis., to return to Sweden.

Dismissions.

BROWN, Chas. R., Winthrop Ch., Charlestown, Mass., Sept. 21.
JUBB, W. Walker, Central Ch., Fall River, Mass., Sept. 16.

Churches Organized.

ASHEBORO, N. C., 12 Sept., 14 members. Rev. E. W. Stratton of High Point is in charge.
KRAGNESS, Minn., org. and rec., 14 Sept., 18 members.
LANTANA, Tenn., near Crossville, 23 June, 11 members.

Miscellaneous.

AMSDEN, Sam'l H., and wife, of Hooksett, N. H., while driving recently were thrown from the carriage and sustained severe injuries.
ANDREWS, Chas. E., of Deering, Me., is supplying the recently formed church at S. Portland, Me.
BACHELER, Francis P., and wife, have received a purse of $65 as a token of regard from the church in Hockanum, Ct.
BARNARD, Isaac D., has accepted an invitation to continue as pastor at Altoona, Kan., for six months.
BOURNE, Jas. R., has removed from Cleveland, O., to New Haven, Ct. He will supply pulpits if desired, and can be addressed at 423 Atwater Street.
CUMMINGS, Henry, recently received from parishioners and other friends in Strafford, Vt., the gift of $125.
CURTIS, Walter W., and wife, of W. Stockbridge, Mass., celebrated their silver wedding Sept. 8, assisted by numerous friends, who left valuable gifts.
DOOLITTLE, John S., and wife, on the 30th anniversary of their marriage were remembered with a purse of $50 by their people in W. Suffield, Ct.
HALLOCK, Leavitt H., recently of Tacoma, Wn., is at present supplying at Pilgrim Ch., Oakland, Cal.
IVES, Joel S., of Stratford, Ct., was taken seriously ill while in Maine, and has been compelled to prolong his stay there far beyond his original intention.
MASON, Philip H., Rico, Col., has been invited to supply three months at New Ulm, Minn.
WOOD, Abel S., of Maine, N. Y., recently sustained a partial sunstroke, but is recovering.

TICKETS for the Fitchburg Railroad Hoosac Tunnel excursion will be on sale at 250 Washington Street and Union Station, Causeway Street, Boston, on and after Sept. 23. Rate only $2.

AS OF YORE.—One of the fads of the times is the revival of rush-seated dining chairs, and they are all the rage in the best houses today. They are certainly very comfortable, and nothing could be more picturesque. But the strongest argument in their favor is their very low price. They show some delightful patterns at Paine's on Canal Street this week.

ONLY the best is good enough. The best cost no more than the worst; especially in medicines. Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam sells for 35 and 75 cents a bottle, and there's none better at any price. Your local druggist sells it.

THE Fitchburg Railroad announces their annual popular New York excursion for Thursday, Oct. 1. Tickets only $5 for the round trip, good going via Albany and the Hudson River steamers to New York and the Fall River Line to Boston.

WE would call attention to the fall opening of the millinery department of W. S. Butler & Co., the announcement of which will be found in another column. This house has gained considerable reputation on account of its extensive and attractive millinery store and the display this season is fully up to their high standard.

THINK IT OVER.—Have you ever heard of a medicine with such a record of cures as Hood's Sarsaparilla? Don't you know that Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier, has proved, over and over again, that it has power to cure, even after all other remedies fail. If you have impure blood you may take Hood's Sarsaparilla with the utmost confidence that it will do you good.

HOOD'S PILLS assist digestion. 25 cents.

Guaranteed 25 Years.

With
HOLMES & EDWARDS,
Sterling Silver Inlaid

Spoons and forks you have a well furnished table.

A piece of solid silver is inlaid in the back of the bowl and handle before plating.

See that the trade-mark is on each article.

E. STERLING INLAID HE.

For sale by all Jewelers.

The Holmes & Edwards Silver Co.,
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

New York Salesroom, 2 Maiden Lane, (2d door from Broadway.) 50

Fine Carpets and Oriental Rugs.

Joel Goldthwait & Co.

HAVE NOW READY THEIR

FALL STOCK.

FRESH LOT OF

ORIENTAL CARPETS AND RUGS,
AXMINSTERS, WILTONS, BRUSSELS,
TAPESTRIES AND INGRAINS,
NEW STRAW MATTINGS,
OIL CLOTHS (All Widths), ART SQUARES,
MATS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

Styles Never Better. Prices Never Lower Than Now.

Joel Goldthwait & Co.

163 TO 169 WASHINGTON STREET - - BOSTON.

WHY

WE SELL

Superior Phætons

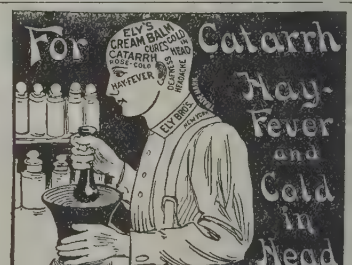
at much lower prices than any other firm in the world is explained in our Art Catalogue. Send for it!

The above cut illustrates "The Colombo," one of our popular styles. A low priced Phæton, with beauty, grace and strength. Can be fitted (if desired) with ball-bearing axles and rubber tires.

Columbus PHÆTON CO., Columbus, O.



ELY'S CREAM BALM is a positive cure. Apply into the nostrils. It is quickly absorbed. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; samples 10c. by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York City

PRICE REDUCED FROM $25.00 to $10.00.

The Electropoise

CURE WITHOUT MEDICINE.

THIS MOST WONDERFUL TREATMENT now within the reach of all.

The above price is ordered from July 1 to Oct. 1, 1896. $10.00 by Express, $10.25 by Registered Mail, with Book of Directions complete. Do not miss this opportunity.

L. A. BOSWORTH, 36 Bromfield St., Room 18, Boston, Mass., General Agent for New England States.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST., BOSTON.

Continued from page 458.

E. E. Flint. Expected home missionary aid was found unnecessary. The membership has been increased by 58 and the Sunday school numbers 150. A home department is successfully conducted. Two branches have been organized in the country. A commodious parsonage has been erected at a cost of $1,550, and is wholly paid for except the loan of $500 from the C. C. B. S. The benevolences have been largely increased, and aggressive work has been planned for the fall and winter.

Iowa.

CRESTON.—Rally Day was observed Sept. 13, and special music, handsome programs and elaborate decorations aided to make it a success. The morning address of the pastor, Rev. D. P. Breed, was an outlook upon the proposed work for the coming season. A men's club of 40 members has recently been organized and issues a rich program of social and public questions for its semi-monthly meetings. The tone of church life is progressive and inspiring.

WHITING.—During the three years' pastorate of Rev. G. H. Croker, just completed, the membership has increased from 69 to 191, of whom 88 are men; a house of worship has been erected and the church brought to self-support. This four year old enterprise was originally a branch of the Onawa church, and was served by the same minister. Mr. Croker is the first resident pastor.

Minnesota.

CAMPBELL.—Rev. R. F. Paxton has two churches under his care, some families represented living at a distance of twelve miles. He preaches at one church in the morning, teaches in the Sunday school, drives seven miles to the other church, preaches, returns to the first point to attend the C. E. meeting, conducts a singing service and preaches again. Campbell has paid $300 this summer on its debt, but a balance remains of $1,220. Interest is growing in all departments.

ELLSWORTH.—Through the aid of a student from Carleton College, who spent his vacation in religious work, Rev. W. J. Conard has been enabled to care for three churches with their Sunday schools and to conduct services at two new stations. Growth in all the schools is reported with five accessions to the churches.

MORRISTOWN.—This church, though yoked with Waterville and having no resident pastor, in the hope of eventually securing one has repaired its parsonage at a cost of $200. Both churches have succeeded in supporting themselves for a year, though some of the burden falls upon the pastor.

FREEBORN.—Rev. Wilbur Fisk, who has been here 20 years caring for two or three churches in the vicinity, has desired to leave, but the people will not consent, promising, even in their poverty, to raise as much as heretofore. His extended field makes long drives necessary.

EDGERTON.—The health of the pastor, Elijah Carter, was so poor in the spring that it was necessary to secure a student for the summer. It has now been partially restored and, as the student leaves, he will supply for the present, though giving less service than formerly.

MORRIS.—While the meeting house is undergoing repairs, the pastor takes his vacation. Considerable advance is reported during the year, a new organ having been secured and work developed in the surrounding country.

ROUND PRAIRIE.—The painting of the edifice, the erection of a meeting house at the out station Clarissa, with increasing interest in preaching services, are encouraging features.

PELICAN RAPIDS.—Rev. E. P. Crane accepts an invitation to remain another year, giving up services at West Dora where there will be no resident pastor for the present.

ST. PAUL.—People's. Miss Nellie Hanson has resigned her position as pastor's assistant to enter the State University, but will retain charge of the Gladstone mission school.

Kansas.

EMPORIA.—First. Activity has continued during the summer, though there has been no pastor. A reception was given Sept. 1 to students in the State Normal Institute. Mr. R. B. Guild of Chicago Seminary has supplied the pulpit acceptably for some weeks. The new pastor, Rev. W. H. Walker, began work Sept. 20.

BURLINGTON.—The large audiences include an unusual proportion of business men. The pastor, Rev. E. L. Howard, spends a half day each week in visiting the public schools, and addressed the County Normal Institute several times while in session in the city last summer.

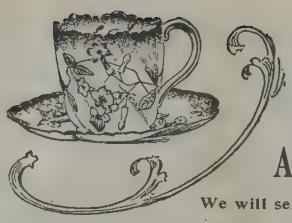
VALEDA.—The enterprise has been much strengthened during the summer by the labors of a student from Washburn College. The people work unitedly and hopefully in this needy field.

FREDONIA.—The pastor, Rev. H. D. Herr, preaches also at two country points. Audiences are large and the membership is steadily increasing.

Nebraska.

HARVARD.—This pastorless church has opened its doors to the General Association for its annual session, Oct. 19-22, and the invitation has been accepted. The town is conveniently situated, being reached by both the Burlington and Northwestern Railways. Mr. R. H. Potter of Yale Divinity School did excellent service here during the summer and has returned to his studies. A delightful reception was given him just before his departure and a generous thank offering made in recognition of his work.

Continued on page 462.



For The Asking

We will send our

New Art Catalog

Containing over 250 illustrations. It will be of great assistance in selecting your

Abram French Co.
223 Devonshire St., Cor. Franklin, BOSTON.

CHINA POTTERY and GLASS

Our White China Book for Decorators, 341 different articles, sent upon application.

TIME TELLS THE STORY.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES do Good Work DURING A LIFETIME.

There is a big difference between the cost of making a first-class sewing machine, embodying the best of materials and workmanship, and one made in the cheapest manner. The buyer of the cheap machine soon pays the difference of price in the constant cost for repairs, to say nothing of its annoying inefficiency.

Results Make Reputation.

Singer Machines, either lock-stitch or chain-stitch, are the successful result of long experience and constant improvements in the endeavor to make nothing but the best sewing machines for family use. The accomplishment of this result requires six of the largest, best-equipped factories in the world, the best inventive talent of the age, and the constant employment of twelve thousand workmen. Singer Machines are sold only by our employees, and not through dealers or department stores.

The Value of Reputation.

A reputation based on half a century's experience, dealing directly with the women of the family all over the world, is unique, and stimulates a worthy pride. THE SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY aims to maintain its well-earned reputation for fair dealing during all time. It is permanent, its offices are in every city in the world, and parts and supplies for its machines can always be easily obtained.

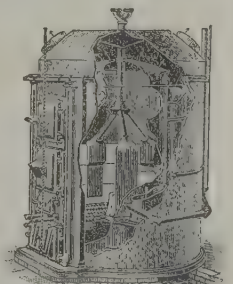
The Singer Manufacturing Co.

"SEWING MACHINE MAKERS FOR THE WORLD."

What's in a Name?

A great deal. Past reputation—Future possibility. You know them both when you hear the name

"MAGEE"



The name "MAGEE" is a synonym of quality, the standard by which others are judged. Magee Furnaces and Ranges increase the heat, save fuel, and insure good cooking and warm homes. Economical because best. Housekeepers everywhere testify to these facts. INSIST ON GETTING THE GENUINE MAGEE. Sold by leading dealers. Descriptive circulars free.

MAGEE FURNACE CO.,

32-38 Union Street, Boston.

Pacific Coast Agency, 27 New Montgomery St., San Francisco.
Western Agency, 86 Lake Street, Chicago.

Featherbone Edge

S·H·&M·

REGISTERED TRADE MARK

Ask for it the next time that you buy a

BIAS VELVETEEN SKIRT BINDING.

The featherbone flares and stiffens—the bias velveteen wears as only an S. H. & M. can wear. Especially suited for silk or wool petticoats.

If your dealer WILL NOT supply you we will.

Samples showing labels and materials mailed free.

"Home Dressmaking Made Easy," a new 72 page book by Miss Emma M. Hooper, of the Ladies' Home Journal, tells in plain words how to make dresses at home without previous training; mailed for 25c.

S. H. & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, N. Y. City.

HEMSTITCHED SHEETS AND PILLOW CASES.

Made of a superior grade, standard, linen-finish Muslin, with hand-drawn hemstitching. The Sheets are 2½ by 2½ yards and the Pillow Cases are 22½ by 36 inches. We will express a set (a sheet and two pillow cases) to any address upon receipt of $1.68.

We pay the expressage.

This is an opportunity that is seldom offered. Money refunded if goods are not satisfactory.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER

DRY GOODS. PHILADELPHIA.

A GOOD WATER SUPPLY

For GENERAL FARM USE, COUNTRY RESIDENCES, IRRIGATION, Etc.

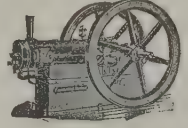
IS INSURED BY A PROPERLY ERECTED

ECLIPSE WINDMILL —OR— GASOLENE ENGINE.

Eclipse Wooden AND Fairbanks Steel Windmills & Towers.

TANKS.

Send for Catalogues.



FAIRBANKS-MORSE GASOLENE ENGINES.

2 TO 75 H. P.

For Pumping or Power. Send for Catalogues.

We have every facility for putting in complete WATER SUPPLY AND POWER OUTFITS, and will submit estimates upon application.

CHARLES J. JAGER COMPANY,

174 HIGH ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Continued from page 461.

CRETE.—The church is much gratified at the acceptance of its call by Rev. M. W. Morse, who has made a happy impression upon church and community during his three weeks' stay and will go forward at once with his work. He is a graduate of Dartmouth College and of Hartford Seminary, where he secured a fellowship enabling him to spend two years of special study in Germany. The past year he has been doing post-graduate work at Chicago Seminary under Prof. Graham Taylor.

SUTTON.—The summer work of Rev. J. U. Stotts, of the post-graduate class, Chicago Seminary, resulted in great good. It was feared that the church would be compelled to ask for home missionary aid, but the people raised a sufficient sum to pay the salary, a debt of $170 and to leave $25 in the treasury. The church is now ready to welcome a pastor.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The 23d anniversary of the Woman's Board of the Pacific was held in Bethany Church. Receipts for the year were $4,548, of which the Young Woman's Branch furnished $900. Mr. Watkins spoke impressively upon The Yesterday and Today of Missions in Mexico. Stirring addresses on India were delivered by Rev. J. C. Perkins and his sister.

WEAVERVILLE.—Trinity, with its out-stations, has voted to assume self-support for the first time in 23 years. Rev. H. H. Cole, after a year's service, has consented to remain as pastor.

LEWISTON.—After worshiping in a schoolhouse for seven years the church is about to erect a comfortable and attractive edifice.

Washington.

Rev. W. J. Gray, the new pastor at Everett, was heartily welcomed at his opening service Sept. 6. ——The North Yakima church has adopted plans for a new edifice, to be centrally located, and will begin building at once.——The people of Ellensburg are enthusiastic over their new pastor, Rev. E. C. Wheeler.

Rev. Messrs. W. J. Gilbert, J. J. Tompkins and R. Bushnell are occupying from three to five preaching points, each in communities where no other services are held, without compensation from the C. H. M. S. and with little support from the people themselves.

THE Deerfield Valley is now rich in autumnal foliage. Take advantage of the Fitchburg Railroad popular excursion of Sept. 26 and enjoy the magnificent spectacle. Rate only $2.

RICH

Dress Fabrics

We are enabled to show an unusually attractive collection of

FOREIGN

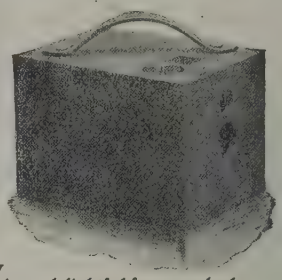
Dress Materials

in all the more fashionable weaves and colorings, most of which are our own styles exclusively and cannot be duplicated.

Chandler & Co.,

Winter Street.

Photography Simplified.



Picture taking with the Improved Bullet camera is the refinement of photographic luxury. It makes photography easy for the novice—delightful for everybody.

LOADS IN DAYLIGHT with our light-proof film cartridges, or can be used with glass plates. Splendid achromatic lens, improved rotary shutter, set of three stops. Handsome finish.

Price, Improved No. 2 Bullet, for pictures 3¼ x 3¼ inches, - - - - - $10.00

Light-proof Film Cartridge, 12 exposures, 3¼ x 3¼ - .60

EASTMAN KODAK CO.

Booklet Free. Rochester, N. Y.

SILVER PLATE THAT WEARS.

The trade mark "1847 Rogers Bros." on spoons, forks, etc., is a guarantee of quality the world over.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA COMPANY, Meriden, Conn.; 208 Fifth Ave., New York City.

BROWN'S French DRESSING

For Ladies' and Children's Boots and Shoes

Ask your dealer for Brown's French Dressing and accept no other.

Does Your Hair Fall Out?

Is it getting thin—lessening in volume? If so, I can help you. If totally bald do not write. Select family patronage for ten years. Send self-addressed stamped envelope to Miss RACHEL T. WYATT, Centerville, Mass.

A SURE CORN CURE

Removes the corn—and the roots—without pain or danger—A-CORN Salve, perfectly harmless. 15c. box.

At druggists or by mail.

GIANT CHEMICAL CO., 305 Cherry St., PHILA.

Marriages.

The charge for marriage notices is twenty-five cents.

HULL—BYRON—In West Medford, Sept. 16, by Rev. J. L. Hill, D. D., of Salem, Mr. Robert Wellington Hull of Medford and Miss Katharine Josephine Byron of West Medford.

RICH—BABB—In Holden, Mass., Sept. 9, by the father of the bride, Rev. Thomas E. Babb, Willis Doane Rich of Hyde Park and Mary Louise Babb of Holden.

Deaths.

The charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each additional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The money should be sent with the notice.

BAILEY—In Buffalo Creek, Col., Sept 9, Rev. Jesse Bailey, aged 36 yrs. A graduate of Bates College and Yale Seminary, he was ordained pastor of Emmanuel Church, Watertown, N. Y., in 1892, but in 1894 was obliged to give up his work and go to Colorado for his health.

BAKER—In Siasconset, Mass., Sept. 19, Rev. Louise S. Baker, formerly in charge of the Congregational church at Nantucket.

BARKER—In Santa Barbara, Cal., Aug. 30, of heart disease, S. A. Barker, aged 66 yrs.

BELL—In Pittsfield, N. H., Sept. 19, Mary E., wife of Rev. Samuel Bell.

CARY—In Brockton, Sept 12, Deacon George C. Cary, aged 65 yrs., 5 mos. and 7 days. He was for more than 40 years a member of Porter Church, having held the office of deacon since 1869 and that of clerk for the last 22 years.

COOK—In Gowrie, Io., Aug. 27, Rev. Levi H. Cook, aged 44 yrs.

GIBSON, Thomas R., United States Consul at Beirut, Syria, Sept. — of smallpox. He was an able diplomat and a Christian gentleman. His death is a serious loss to our consular service and to the missionaries of Syria, who highly esteemed him. His home was in Macon, Ga.

NOYES—In Abington, Mass., Sept. 15, Rev. Lewis Noyes, aged 75 yrs. He was for years connected with the work of the Little Wanderers' Home in Boston, and was well known in church circles throughout New England.

REVELL—In Evanston, Ill., Sept. 16, Mrs. Emma M. Revell, aged 80 yrs. She was the mother of Fleming H. Revell, the publisher, and of Mr. D. L. Moody.

SANGER—In Roxbury, Sept. 18, Helen, daughter of William H. and Ellen S. Sanger, aged 5 mos., 21 dys.

CHARLOTTE A. SMITH.

Died in Winchester, N. H., Sept. 23, Mrs. Charlotte Alexander Smith, widow of the late Rev. John C. Smith of the Ceylon mission. Mrs. Smith was born in Winchester in November, 1818, the youngest daughter of John and Polly Alexander. She was twice married. She was united in marriage with Rev. J. C. Smith, the veteran missionary, in 1843. Mr Smith died in 1884, at Hartford, Ct., at the home of Charles A. Jewell, Esq.

Mrs. Smith was a sister of the late Mrs. Pliny Jewell of Hartford, the mother of those once prominent and able men, Hon. Marshall Jewell of Connecticut and Harvey Jewell, Esq., of Boston. In the past twenty years particularly Mrs. Smith has received under her hospitable roof a large number of clergymen and missionaries, who will learn of her death with a deep sense of sorrow and loss. She was deeply interested in the work of foreign missions, and not only contributed generously to the treasury of the American Board but actively engaged in labors to promote the cause. It was her privilege to be helpful in material ways to the children of missionaries, and to them she was no less a spiritual helper. Indeed her life was spent in behalf of others. Her interest in the church at Winchester was deep and strong. She was always most generous in her suppport of it, and did not forget to extend to it her favor in her last will and testament.

Mrs. Smith was a woman of great force of character, yet gentle, sweet and winning in an eminent degree. She had a host of friends all over the land, who will tenderly cherish her memory. She leaves a daughter, Mary Smith, who tenderly cared for the dear mother in her latest days, and upon whom her mantle seems most naturally to have fallen. Mrs. Smith was prominent in the Ladies' Benevolent Society, and for a quarter of a century or more was the efficient and beloved teacher and superintendent of the infant department of the Sunday school. The daughter is now superintendent of that important work.

Our late sister united with the Church of Christ in Winchester in 1841, and spent fifty-five years in its service. Of her it can be truthfully said "She preferred (Zion) above her chief joy." Though her strong intellect was clouded at the close of life, her end was peace.

Her funeral was attended on the afternoon of Tuesday Aug. 25, at her late elegant and hospitable home. Rev. Elijah Harmon of Wilmington, Mass., former pastor, assisting the pastor in the funeral rites.

'Tis hard to take the burden up
When these have laid it down;
They brightened all the joy of life,
They softened every frown.

But O, 'tis good to think of them
When we are troubled sore;
Thanks be to God that such have been,
Although they are no more.

H. A. H.

AN ounce of prevention is cheaper than any quantity of cure. Don't give children narcotics or sedatives. They are unnecessary when the infant is properly nourished, as it will be if brought up on the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk.

USE it for pain externally or internally—Pond's Extract. Avoid base substitutes for the genuine.

THE new passenger station of the B. & O. R. R., at the intersection of Mt. Royal Avenue and Cathedral Street, Baltimore, Md, was opened for business Sept. 1. The new station, which will be known as Mt. Royal Station, is one of the finest buildings of its kind in America. It is located in the residential section of the city and is easily accessible by street railway service from all parts of the town. Camden Station will remain in use as heretofore, and all trains running over the Philadelphia Division will stop at both stations. All tickets to or from Baltimore will be honored to or from either station, and baggage will be checked to either station at the option of the passenger.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS. CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

NO MISREPRESENTATION on the part of our agents tolerated or of dealers or painters necessary. You know just what you are getting when you have painting done with

Pure White Lead

(see list of brands, which are genuine) and Pure Linseed Oil. Don't be misled by trying something else said to be "just as good." Any desired shade or color may be easily produced by using NATIONAL LEAD CO.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

NATIONAL LEAD CO.,
1 Broadway, New York.

. . . TAKE A COMBINATION BOX OF THE . . .

LARKIN SOAPS

On 30 Days Trial. From Factory To Family.

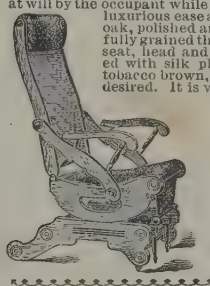
And get a "CHAUTAUQUA"

Rocker and Reclining Chair Free.

Subscribers to this paper may use the Goods 30 days before Bill is due.

Our Soaps are sold entirely on their merits, with a guarantee of purity. Thousands use them, and have for many years in every locality, many in your vicinity.

Chair can be adjusted to any position, and changed at will by the occupant while reclining. A synonym of luxurious ease and comfort. It is built of oak, polished antique finish, with beautifully grained three-ply veneer back. The seat, head and foot rests are upholstered with silk plush in crimson, old red, tobacco brown, old gold, blue or olive, as desired. It is very strong and perfectly simple in construction. It is fully guaranteed.



After trial you—the consumer—pay the usual retail value of the Soaps only. All middlemen's profits accrue to you in a valuable premium. The manufacturer alone adds Value; every middleman adds Cost. The Larkin plan saves you half the cost—saves you half the regular retail prices. Thousands of readers of this paper know these facts.

Many people prefer to send cash with order—it is not asked—but if you remit in advance, you will receive in addition to all extras named, a nice present for the lady of the house, and shipment day after order is received. Your money will be refunded without argument or comment if the Box or Chair does not prove all expected. We guarantee the safe delivery of all goods.

OUR GREAT COMBINATION BOX.

100 BARS "SWEET HOME" SOAP. Enough to last an average family one full year. For all laundry and household purposes it has no superior.	$5.00
10 BARS WHITE WOOLEN SOAP. A perfect soap for flannels.	.70
12 PKGS. BORAXINE SOAP POWDER (full lbs.) An unequalled laundry luxury.	1.20
1-4 DOZ. MODJESKA COMPLEXION SOAP. Exquisite for ladies and children. A matchless beautifier.	.60
1-4 DOZ. OLD ENGLISH CASTILE SOAP	.30
1-4 DOZ. CREME OATMEAL TOILET SOAP	.25
1-4 DOZ. ELITE GLYCERINE TOILET SOAP	.25
1-4 DOZ. LARKIN'S TAR SOAP. Infallible Preventive of dandruff. Unequalled for washing ladies' hair.	.30
1-4 DOZ. SULPHUR SOAP	.30
1 BOTTLE, 1 OZ., MODJESKA PERFUME. Delicate, refined, popular, lasting.	.30
1 JAR, 2 OZS., MODJESKA COLD CREAM. Soothing. Cures chapped skin.	.25
1 BOTTLE MODJESKA TOOTH POWDER. Preserves the teeth, hardens the gums, sweetens the breath.	.25
1 PACKET SPANISH ROSE SACHET	.20
1 STICK NAPOLEON SHAVING SOAP	.10
THE CONTENTS, BOUGHT AT RETAIL, COST	$10.00
CHAIR, WORTH AT RETAIL	10.00
	$20.00

All for $10.00. (You get the Chair Gratis.)

Write your order like this TO-DAY, while you think of it, or cut this out and sign it:

"You may ship me, subject to thirty days' trial, One Combination Box of 'Sweet Home' Soap, with extras, etc., and the Chautauqua Reclining Chair, upon your own conditions, viz.:

If after thirty days' trial I find all the Soaps, etc., of unexcelled quality and the Chair entirely satisfactory to me and as represented, I will remit you $10.00; if not I will notify you goods are subject to your order and you must remove them, making no charge for what I have used."

Name .....

Occupation..... Street No. .....

P. O...... State .....

Illustrations of other Premiums sent on request. THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

NOTE.—The Larkin Soap Company have used the columns of The Congregationalist for two or three years past in advertising their "Combination Box of Soap" sent in connection with an oil heater, desk or chair. The publisher of this paper has written personally to a number of subscribers who have responded to the advertisement and purchased the soap. Without exception they state that they are perfectly satisfied with the soaps and with the business methods of the Larkin Co. The letters speak in praise both of the soap and of the premiums that accompany it.—The Congregationalist.

NOTE.—After a personal trial we willingly take the responsibility of recommending the soaps sent out by the Larkin Co. of Buffalo.—New York Observer.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

DIURETIC IN CALCULI.

DR. HENRY M. WILSON of Baltimore, ex-President Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland: "My experience in the use of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER has not been large, but it is of such a positive character that I do not hesitate to express my preference for it as a diuretic in Urinary Calculi over all other waters that I have ever used."

Sold by Druggists. Pamphlet free. Proprietor, Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va.

Jingles of the Olden Time

"Old woman!
Old woman!
Will you go a-cleaning?"
"Speak a little louder, sir,
I'm very hard of hearing."

"Old woman!
Old woman!
Here's some SAPOLIO,"
Thank you very kindly sir,
It's virtues
well I know."

COPYRIGHT E.A.S.CO. 1887

IVORY SOAP

"HEALTH IS THE VITAL PRINCIPLE OF BLISS, AND EXERCISE, OF HEALTH."

No health—there is no hope of bliss,
No exercise—and health soon flies,
No bath with Ivory Soap—you miss
The best results of exercise.

Copyright, 1896, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cin'ti.

The Cyclist's Necessity.

POND'S

WILL CURE CUTS, BURNS, BRUISES, WOUNDS, SPRAINS, SUNBURN, CHAFINGS, INSECT BITES, ALL PAIN, AND INFLAMMATIONS. . . . . .

USED INTERNALLY AND EXTERNALLY.

GENUINE IN OUR BOTTLES ONLY, BUFF WRAPPERS, SEE OUR NAME, POND'S EXTRACT CO., NEW YORK, 76 FIFTH AVENUE.

EXTRACT

USE POND'S EXTRACT OINTMENT FOR PILES.

Sent by mail on receipt of 50 cents.

....THE....

Unit of Value

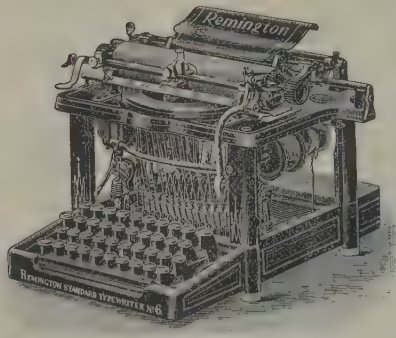
in Typewriters is the

REMINGTON

It sets a known and tested

Standard

of excellence.



Every one knows what it represents—the Best Work with Least Labor, Enduring Service, Unequaled Economy and Convenience. The Number 6 Model

BEARS THE STAMP OF

Unqualified Public Approval.

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT,
327 Broadway, New York.

Volume LXXXI Number 40

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 1 October 1896

REV. CHARLES R. BROWN.

Pastor-elect of the First Church, Oakland, Cal.

THEOLOGY grows less mechanical and more vital. We do not speak today of imputed forgiveness and imputed righteousness. That would be mere tying of fruit to a dead tree. We find in Christ a remission of sins which actually takes them away by the communication of new and holy life. We obtain in him a righteousness which consists in the fruits of the Spirit growing out of the man. Being saved is a vital process. . . . This vital process of salvation strengthens men in the right way. A starved man who totters does not want canes and crutches; he wants food. Feed him and he will stand, not by outer props but by inner vitality. The method of Jesus is not to prop men from without with fictions of imputed righteousness, but to make them stand erect because they are alive.—Mr. Brown, in a sermon on Christ the Bread of Life.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, SEPT. 25.

From the numerous inquiries with regard to the resuming of the missionary prayer meeting it has been evident that the day has been earnestly anticipated, and it was therefore not much of a surprise when eighty ladies assembled in Pilgrim Hall at eleven o'clock on Friday. Mrs. A. C. Thompson, in reading from the second chapter of Ephesians, gave as the keynote to the meeting the depth from which we have been called, the mercy we have received, the blessed service open to us; and Mrs. Capron voiced the fervent petition that these thoughts might find a practical fulfillment in our lives.

The topics on the prayer calendar for the week had all been on China, the last two days being especially for native pastors and churches and for village schools. As Miss Child had so recently visited China her words carried double weight as she spoke of the impressions received by her in that land. First among these were of the swarms of people, their seemingly uninteresting appearance, the monotony in the color of dress—usually a light or a dark blue—all the more noticeable in contrast to the bright and varied coloring of costumes in India. Looking upon these swarming masses it seemed to her an apparently hopeless task to bring them to Christ, until she recalled the words of Dr. A. J. Gordon, that we cannot bring the heathen to Christ, it is too much of a dead weight. But we can bring Christ to the heathen.

Mrs. H. F. Gulliver offered earnest prayer for the work in China. Mrs. James Smith of Ahmednagar, recently returned to America, spoke of Miss Child's visit in India as having done very much good in forming a tangible link between the missionaries and the workers at home. Miss Nugent of Ahmednagar was also present, and it was a privilege to look upon her face though we might not listen to her voice.

Miss Emily Wheeler of Harpoot said that one of the ameliorations of coming home to this country was in the thought of coming to this meeting. She wanted to pledge the support of one of these village schools in China, and thought that we might have faith to pray that the word of Christ may reach these stolid Chinese hearts. She desired more earnest prayers for the workers left in Harpoot, perhaps in danger of a repetition of the scenes of last November; prayers for Miss Shattuck alone in Oorfa—we in America have no idea what it is for a woman to be alone in Turkey; prayers for herself that she might be filled with the Spirit, and for her father that his sufferings may be lessened or that they may redound to the glory of God. Miss Wheeler fittingly followed her remarks with a few words of prayer.

Miss Abbie M. Colby of Japan spoke briefly but principally on the interest and strength which missionaries in the field find in these meetings. They look constantly for the reports in The Congregationalist, to see what was said, who was here and what was the leading thought of the hour.

In closing Mrs. Thompson urged the need of more constant, fervent and faithful prayer that God will bless the word as taught and preached in mission fields. Let us look to him who alone giveth the increase.

SHAMROCKS.

An Englishman chartered an outside car, on a very wet day, to see the sights of Dublin.

"What is that fine building?" he inquired.

"That's the post office, me lard," said the driver.

"And what are those statues on the top?"

"Ah, thin, they're the twelve apostles, yer warship."

"I see only four," said the puzzled stranger, pointing to Justice, Temperance, etc.

"Th' others never come out in wet weather, me lard," was the answer, given with an ingenuous smile.

On another day, when the skies left nothing to be desired, the driver accounted for the eight absent apostles in the following manner: "Sure, sorr, some av them does be down below, sortin' the letthers."—Westminster Gazette.

Squire: "And what are you going to make of the boy, Pat?"

Peasant: "That's what does be botherin' me an' his mother. He's that lazy and mischievous he's fit for nothing but a gentleman."—London Chips.

"THE DIVINE RIGHT OF BOLTING."

In one of his trenchant speeches this autumn Hon. Thomas B. Reed justified the right to bolt by saying:

It is a part of the business of a free country to get itself governed. We have no heaven descended people to do the governing for us, and no inspiration comes from heaven except what comes to us all. Hence the government by parties. I have never complained of the fact that a party did not take my view of things, or that it was desirous of governing in its own way and presenting its own propositions. Parties are made up of two classes of men, one of them progressive and the other conservative. I do not mean to be understood as saying that all men are equally aggressive or conservative, but that the mass of them range side by side, and that the dividing line shifts before almost every election. If nothing new comes up the line remains where it was before, but if some new question comes up—a question of importance in which men differ, and that difference becomes strong—some men of one party go over to the other and give them the victory. Some men say we ought always to be in motion, to have no settled convictions of our own. I differ with them. Ordinarily it is desirable for a man to stay in his party; yet there are conditions arising sometimes when it is the duty of a man, if his faith and belief guide him, to shift temporarily or permanently.

AN EFFECTIVE COMBINATION.

SIMPLE STRONG

SILENT SPEEDY

Perfect Design, Best Materials, Skilled Workmanship, Unequaled Facilities.

This combination produces best Sewing Machine on earth—THE SINGER.

The SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

Franklin Mills Fine Flour
Of the Entire Wheat

is the cheapest Flour ever known, as it will make more pounds of bread from the same weight of flour and give more food value for the same money than any other flour in the world.

Always ask for "Franklin Mills." All leading Grocers sell it.

75 cents for $1.00—

Would YOU take it? Then why take an inferior binding at the same price as

S·H·&M·
REGISTERED TRADE MARK

BIAS VELVETEEN SKIRT BINDINGS

Ask for the New S. H. & M. Cord Edge.

If your dealer WILL NOT supply you we will.

Samples showing labels and materials mailed free.

"Home Dressmaking Made Easy," a new 72 page book by Miss Emma M. Hooper, of the Ladies' Home Journal, tells in plain words how to make dresses at home without previous training; mailed for 25c.

S. H. & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, N. Y. City.

The Congregationalist . . SERVICES . .

THIRTY-THREE SERVICES READY.

100 Copies, 60 Cents, postpaid.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

IT WILL SERVE THE INTERESTS OF ALL CONCERNED IF, IN CORRESPONDENCE SUGGESTED BY ANNOUNCEMENTS IN OUR ADVERTISING COLUMNS MENTION IS MADE OF THE FACT THAT THE ADVERTISEMENT WAS SEEN IN THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

NO HOUSEKEEPER USING A

GLENWOOD RANGE

Will be bothered to know whether the oven is hot enough or too hot. The THERMOMETER on the oven door tells the exact heat, and when the oven is just right to cook Meat, Bread, Cake and Pies perfectly.

Sold in all prominent cities and towns throughout New England.

MADE BY WEIR STOVE COMPANY, TAUNTON, MASS.

Railroads and Excursions.

I'LL TRY GAZE'S TOURS GOOD IDEA.

52 YEARS OF SUCCESS

Escorted Parties leave as follows October 6:

ROUND THE WORLD	All Included	Choice of Routes	Programs Free By Post
Southern Europe and Italy	By American Line	By North German Lloyd	Sept. 30 and Oct. 3 & 31
Excursions to Rome	Sept. 19 and Oct. 10	Special Rates All Included

53 DAYS $280.00 UPWARD.
60 DAYS $450.00 UPWARD.

Write for Programs of Oriental Tours. Also First Class.

113 DAYS $860.00, All Included.

Independent Travel Tickets Everywhere. Good Steamer Berths by all Lines.

WRITE FOR TOURIST GAZETTE AND SAVE MONEY.

Post Free Upon Application.

H. GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,
113 Broadway, New York, or
W. H. EAVES, New England Agent,
201 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

PROGRAMS WILL BE FURNISHED NOW.

"Where Times are Prosperous"

IN THE

Rocky Mountains

TAKE THE...

ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

To Denver, Colorado Springs, or Pueblo.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO COLORADO SPRINGS, MANITOU AND PIKES PEAK

4 HOURS QUICKER TIME TO CRIPPLE CREEK

which should be included in your trip, and an investigation of the resources of this place may well repay your visit.

Tourist Dictionary ...Sent Free... Apply for it.

Address JOHN SEBASTIAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent, CHICAGO.

THE OVERLAND LIMITED.

The Fastest Train in the West.

RUNNING

EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR

VIA THE

UNION PACIFIC — THE OVERLAND ROUTE — WORLD'S PICTORIAL LINE

TO UTAH.
29 hours from Missouri River.
44 hours from Chicago.

TO CALIFORNIA.
2 1-2 days from Missouri River.
3 days from Chicago or St. Louis.

THE ONLY LINE
in the West operating Buffet Smoking and Library Cars.

Send for Advertising Matter. E. L. LOMAX, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt., Omaha, Neb.

IN CORRESPONDENCE SUGGESTED by announcements in our ADVERTISING COLUMNS, please mention that the advertisement was seen in The Congregationalist.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Paragraphs 469
- The Ancient World Rediscovered 470
- A Retrospect of Summer Reading 470
- Christ for the World 470
- Current History 471
- In Brief 472

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
- The Interior 473

CURRENT THOUGHT 480

CONTRIBUTIONS:
- Boston's Gift to Oakland. Rev. C. E. Jefferson 473
- The Duty of College Bred Men in the Present Crisis. Pres. Charles F. Thwing. 474
- Charity Chance. Chap. XII. Walter Raymond 475
- Pleasure and Profit in Vacation Reading. Experiences and Suggestions 478

THE HOME:
- The Land of Havilah—a poem. Amy S. Bridgman 481
- Paragraphs 481
- The Decline of Sentiment. Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster 481
- A Boys and Girls' Republic. E. Lawrence Hunt 482
- The Ideal Marriage—a selection 482
- Closet and Altar 483
- Mothers in Council 483
- Compensation—a selected poem 484
- The Hygienic Value of Color—a selection 484
- Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 485
- Corner Scrap-Book 485

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for Oct. 11 486
- Notes 495

Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for Oct. 11-17 487
- Notes 495

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 487

LITERATURE 488

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
- A Historic Pulpit Filled 490
- The Annual Conference of Maine 490
- New Hampshire's Annual Convocation 491
- The North Dakota State Meeting 491
- The Montana Conference 492
- San Francisco Interests 495

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 466
- Shamrocks 466
- "The Divine Right of Bolting"—a selection 466
- Notices 490
- The Secular and the Religious Press—a selection 496
- Biographical 496
- Marriages and Deaths 496
- Business Outlook 497
- Boston Ministers and the Pilgrims 497
- Noteworthy Forthcoming Meetings 497
- The Busy World 498
- Education 498
- American Missionary Association 499

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday,
At 1 Somerset Street, corner of Beacon Street.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.

On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 11½ inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.
READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

The Newest

Millinery

Gathered from the Fashion Centers of the world is now on exhibition in our parlors on the second floor, where we show autumn importations of Round Hats, Bonnets, Turbans, Dress Hats and exclusive Novelties personally selected in Paris and London for our house.

Everything in stylish headgear for Ladies, Misses and Children—nothing lacking to make this by far the best Millinery Display of the season. Come, if only to look.

Our prices are very moderate for work of superior excellence.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,
The Leading Millinery House,
Tremont and Bosworth Streets,
BOSTON.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

Soprano, good reader and experienced, desires position in church quartet or chorus. Moderate salary. "H. L. D.," Box 2782, Boston.

Wanted. A man of good business ability (reader of The Congregationalist) to manage the sale of an article needed by all players on organ and piano, and all other users of books, in any locality he may choose. J. D. Bartley, Bradford, Mass.

5 2-cent stamps get the 25c. "Dialogue on the Dollar"; the money question in words of one syllable for children and plain people. Part 1 of "The Bond and the Dollar," for wise people, by the historian Ridpath, goes free with the "Dialogue." Also 35 pp. songs free. Bible Kindergarten and Music Co., Chicago, Ill

THE HOLY CITY.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED LECTURES,

Fresh, entertaining, instructive. One thousand new and striking pictures, covering every topic of interest connected with Jerusalem and Palestine. At popular prices these valuable lectures are placed easily within the reach of Lyceums, Churches, Christian Endeavor Societies and Sunday Schools. Bishop Phillips Brooks said: "Dr. Merrill is the most interesting lecturer on Palestine that I have ever listened to." Address
SELAH MERRILL, Andover, Mass.

WORLD'S FOOD FAIR AND HOME CONGRESS.

Mechanics Building, Boston.

Monday, Oct. 5, to Saturday, Nov. 7. Daily, 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. Two hundred dealers in food products will distribute samples to the people. Most distinguished men and women in the land to participate in Home Congress (three sessions daily). Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer of Philadelphia lectures every afternoon on "Therapeutics of Diet." Season tickets at special rates. Five "Centurion" Bicycles given away to most popular teacher, pupil, mercantile or manufactory establishment employee, letter carrier, street or steam railway employee. It costs nothing to vote. Four hundred Souvenir Silver Spoons given away every day to first four hundred women purchasing tickets of admission. N. Y. Seventh Regiment, Reeves', Salem Cadet, Lafrican's Naval Brigade and Boyle O'Reilly Bands, also the Fadettes, Mendelssohn Club, etc. Nothing like it since the Peace Jubilee.

ADMISSION 25 CENTS.

The St. Denis,

BROADWAY AND ELEVENTH STREET,
Opposite Grace Church, NEW YORK.

EUROPEAN PLAN.

"There is an atmosphere of home comfort and hospitable treatment at the St. Denis which is rarely met with in a public house, and which insensibly draws you there as often as you turn your face toward New York."

TIMELY Congregationalist Leaflets

1. Planning.
3. Young Men in Politics.
4. Somebody is Wasting.
5. Renewal of Good Citizenship.

3 cts. each; 100 copies, $2.00.
THE CONGREGATIONALIST, Boston, Mass.

Educational.

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY.
Oldest and best known in U. S.
Established, 1855.
3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES.
4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-page Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & CO.

MASSACHUSETTS.

MASSACHUSETTS, DUXBURY.
POWDER POINT SCHOOL (FOR BOYS).
F. B. KNAPP, S.B., Duxbury, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS, SOUTH BYFIELD.
DUMMER ACADEMY (Home School).
Founded 1763. Thorough training for College and Technical Schools. PERLEY L. HORNE, A. M.

MASSACHUSETTS, BRADFORD.
CARLETON SCHOOL for Young Men and Boys. College preparatory and general course of study. Individual teaching. Gymnasium bowling alley, etc. Circulars.
I. N. CARLETON, Ph.D.

MASSACHUSETTS, MONTVALE.
ASHLEY HALL HOME SCHOOL
For Young Ladies.
Ten miles from Boston. Music, Art and Languages. Thorough preparation for college.
Miss WHITTEMORE, Principal, Montvale, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS, BOSTON.
College of Physicians and Surgeons.
Men and women. Rules of Assoc. Am. Med. Colleges 17th year opens Sept 16. Part tuition for clinical service. 20,000 med. calls in '95. Near Boston City Hospital. AUGUSTUS P. CLARK, A.M., M.D., Dean. (Send for Catalogue.) 517 Shawmut Ave., Boston, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS, WORCESTER.
HIGHLAND MILITARY ACADEMY,
Worcester ("The Academic City"), Mass. 41st year. Best preparation for College, Professional or Business life. Healthful location. Careful selection and supervision of students. Small Classes.
JOSEPH ALDEN SHAW, A. M., Head Master.

MASSACHUSETTS, BOSTON.
THE musical atmosphere means much to the earnest student. Arithmetic one hour, music the second and grammar the next, does not make the musician. Send to Frank W. Hale, business manager,
New England Conservatory OF MUSIC at Boston, Mass., for prospectus, giving full details. We send it free, of course.

CONNECTICUT.

CONNECTICUT, NORWALK.
MISS BAIRD'S INSTITUTE FOR GIRLS,
Norwalk, Conn. 25th year. Primary, Academic, and College Preparatory courses. Music, Art, and the Languages. Careful attention to morals and manners. New buildings, steam heat, gymnasium.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.
MRS. LESLIE MORGAN'S
Boarding and Day School for Girls, 15 West 86th Street, New York City. Re-opens Oct. 7th; Kindergarten, Oct. 15th. Thorough English from Kindergarten through College Preparatory. Miss Catherine Aiken's Method of Concentrated Attention in Mind Training a special feature; also conversational French and German. Home and Chaperonage for special students.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PENNSYLVANIA, PHILADELPHIA.
THE WALTON-WELLESLEY SCHOOL,
2101 and 2103 Spruce St., Philadelphia.
For Girls. Possesses finest private property in city. Boarding and day. 15th year. Academic, College Preparatory and Musical Depts. For illus. cat. and refs., address Dr. and Mrs. JAMES R. DANFORTH.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc., published under this heading at ten cents a line.

REV. C. H. WILLIAMS, of Hartford, may be addressed at the Norfolk House, Roxbury, until Oct. 1, by churches desiring his services.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

JAMES W. ELWELL, President.
REV. W. C. STITT. Secretary.
W. C. STURGES, Treasurer.

Fall Issues.

COUNCIL MANUAL.
Prepared by a committee of the National Council of the Congregational churches of the United States. By mail 10 cents each; 100 copies or more $5.00, postage additional. Leatherette covers, 20 cents.

THE TEARLESS LAND.
Poems on Heaven. Compiled by M C. Hazard, Ph.D. $1 50

THE ROCKANOCK STAGE.
By Prof. GEORGE HUNTINGTON. Price $1.50.

HIS BROTHER'S KEEPER.
By CHARLES M. SHELDON. Price $1 50.

THE POOLE'S MILLIONS.
By JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT. Price $1.50.

THE RAINPROOF INVENTION.
By EMILY WEAVER Price $1.50.

A SON OF LIBERTY.
By WILLIS BOYD ALLEN. Price $1 25.

THE FAIRIES OF FERN DINGLE.
By HARRIET A. CHEEVER. Price $1.00.

THE TWINS AND THEIR TROUBLES.
By L. AMELIA WILDER. Price 75 cents.

THE YOUNG MANDARIN.
By Rev. J. D. DAVIS. Price $1.50.

MONDAY CLUB SERMONS,
On the International Sunday School Lessons for 1897. Price $1.25.

PILGRIM SUNDAY SCHOOL TREASURY.
Illuminated cover. Price 4 cents postpaid; 100 copies $2.00, postage additional.

Congregational S.S. & Publishing Society,
BOSTON AND CHICAGO.

THE CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO. CINCINNATI, OHIO. SOLE MAKERS OF THE BLYMYER BELLS
FOR CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM &c
Catalogue with 2500 testimonials. Prices and terms FREE

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS In the World.
PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN).
Send for Price and Catalogue.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

BELLS
Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O

CHURCH REMODELING.
THOMAS W. SILLOWAY, Church Architect,
10 Park Square, Boston.
Mr. Silloway's long practice in building or remodeling over 400 church edifices enables him to save and utilize all the valuable parts, and for a comparatively small outlay produce a building preferable to a new one of much greater cost. He proposes to continue the work of remodeling as a specialty, and tenders his services to committees who would practice economy, and where the means are limited.

Church Cushions

Trustees and committees are urged to write us when contemplating the purchase of new cushions or the renovating of the old. Our Patent Elastic Felt Cushions are used in two-thirds of the churches in America.

Let us send you our free book, "Testimonial Wonders," and a free sample cushion, with samples of coverings.

OSTERMOOR & CO.,
116 Elizabeth St., New York.

FIFTY YEARS OF THE
American Missionary Association
By CHARLES J. RYDER, FULLY ILLUSTRATED,
in the October
New England Magazine
and a host of other attractions.
25 cents, at all news stands, or of the publisher,
WARREN F. KELLOGG, BOSTON.

A NEW HARVEST SERVICE
In the Autumn Time.
By MARION WEST. With original music and recitations for main school.
HARVEST FRUITS, GOLDEN GRAINS FOR LITTLE GLEANERS, GATHERING IN THE HARVEST, all three for Primary Department.
Harvest Recitations, 15 Cents, postpaid.
Harvest Concert Book, 50 Cents, postpaid.
Complete lists of others free.
HENRY D. NOYES & CO.,
13½ Bromfiel Street, - - - - Boston.

HIGHEST PRAISE. FOR SABBATH SCHOOLS. $30 per 100.
Christian Endeavor Hymns. $30 per 100.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

THE PILGRIM
Pastor's Register.
Prepared by GEO. M. BOYNTON, D. D.
Size, 9½ x 11½. 240 pages. Half Russia. $2.50 net. Postage, 23 cents.

This book provides a place for recording the work done by a pastor. It answers the same need for him which the "Pilgrim Church Register" is intended to supply for the church. It is planned for an active ministry of ten years in a church of more than average size.

He will find a place to record and index his pulpit work at home and abroad, and also such occasional addresses as he may be called to make.

His ministerial functions also find place in a record of marriages solemnized and of baptisms.

He can keep record of councils and other meetings to which he is a delegate, and of the various officers of the church during his pastorate. There is space also to record the church membership.

PASTOR'S
Vest Pocket Memorandum.
Prepared by GEO. M. BOYNTON, D. D.
Size, 3 x 5. 104 pages. Full leather. 50 cents net. Postpaid.

This little book will aid the pastor in keeping before him the residences of his people and the dates of his pastoral visits. The families are arranged by streets, as most convenient for reference, by the way.

It is also a reminder of things to be done, of engagements, of persons to be seen, etc. It has a place to jot down those sudden suggestions as to texts or topics which come often away from home, and which are apt to be most fruitful of all.

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,
BOSTON AND CHICAGO.

OLD BOOKS BOUGHT.
LIBRARIES AND SMALL PARCELS OF BOOKS PURCHASED.
Save the expense and delay of Auction Sales.
N. J. BARTLETT & CO., 28 Cornhill, Boston

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 1 October 1896 Number 40

CHURCH CLUB AGENTS
SHOULD BEGIN WORK
NOW.
Send for Terms and Sample Copies.

TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.
6 Months for $1.00
3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

LAST Sunday invitations were given to the congregations of our churches in Boston and vicinity to share in the privileges of entertaining at their homes the delegates who are coming to attend the jubilee anniversary of the A. M. A. We doubt not that the responses were many and hearty. Fifty years of a great work in delivering and uplifting needy races is to be reviewed. Plans are to be discussed and adopted for a greater work in the coming half-century. This Boston jubilee meeting must be made a memorable occasion. Old friends of the Negro, the Indian and the Chinaman in our country will come to revive memories of the past. New friends must be made for them—young men and women who will work to make this Christian, philanthropic and patriotic service still broader, wiser and more fruitful. Churches all over the land which contribute to this society should not forget that they are entitled to send delegates. It belongs to the churches and their representatives must do its business. Send them along and Boston will take care of them. It is time to elect them, for the meeting is at hand, Oct. 20–22. We learn that the prospect is good for a very large attendance.

President Thwing's article on The Duty of College Bred Men in the Present Crisis may serve as a spur to some who have not already acted, but already a sufficiently large number of our educated citizens have thrown themselves into the campaign in such a splendid way as to make any indictment untenable which charges American men of learning with lethargy or cowardice. It is only necessary to cite the example of such men as ex-President White and President Schurman of Cornell, President Low of Columbia, President Stryker of Hamilton, Professors Phelps and Sumner of Yale and Provost Harrison of the University of Pennsylvania to show the intense interest of prominent men in American institutions of learning in the right determination of present political issues. Never since the War of the Rebellion have so many college bred men gone to the caucuses and thrown themselves so unreservedly into the preliminary and routine work of a great political controversy. May their interest and service not cease after the decision at the polls, for while the principle at stake is simple, the details of the method by which national health is to be restored are by no means simple or clear.

Mr. E. L. Godkin, in his suggestive article in the October Scribner's on the Expenditure of Rich Men, says with truth that what our colleges, schools, museums and charities owe to our wealthy citizens is beyond computation, and that the phenomenon is something new in the history of the world. "They have set Europe an example in this matter which is one of the glories of America." Mrs. Julia Bradley of Peoria, Ill., who we understand is a Congregationalist, must be added to the ever increasing list of those who are included in Mr. Godkin's tribute of praise, for she has just announced her intention to give more than $2,000,000 to found and endow a polytechnic institute in Peoria which will be affiliated with the University of Chicago. President Harper of Chicago University, in announcing the gift, called especial attention to the interesting fact that Mrs. Bradley in her stipulations provided expressly for lectures on ethics based upon the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. In this respect the Bradley Polytechnic Institute will be far superior to most institutions of a similar character in this country. Mrs. Bradley, sixty years ago, received from her father a farm then in the country but now valuable property in the heart of Peoria. Some of the increment may have been unearned, but if so society certainly is to come to its own again.

In the Superintendent and Teacher for October the editor of the Watchman writes with feeling and force in criticism of the management of the International Sunday School Association. He charges in substance that the Evangel "exerted its vast influence to keep out of the Boston convention every delegate known to be friendly to any other system than the uniform lesson system"; that "the spirit that prompted the editorials of the Evangel ruled the convention"; and that the report of the Lesson Committee, which had been printed, was amended so as to exclude all reference to other lesson systems before being read to the meeting. The inference indicated and apparently intended by this article is that the convention, so far as it dealt with the lesson system, was managed in the interests of publishers, writers of lesson helps and owners of Sunday school journals. We do not think the evidence presented warrants this inference. We think there must be another side to the matter. Meanwhile, each Sunday school is free to choose its own lessons or to adopt any system offered to it; and it is pretty certain that publishers will be found enterprising enough to supply the systems of lessons most in demand, whether or not they are recommended by the International Sunday School Association.

Do the Protestants of Boston realize that there are now forty-seven Roman Catholic churches in the city, and that, to quote The Pilot, the local Catholic journal, the present is "a time of tremendous activity in church building in the city"? Two new parishes have been recently created in the Roxbury district, and the Brookline, like the Brighton district, will soon have two churches. The Syrian Catholics are preparing to build a chapel. The Poles have just built one, and the Lithuanians will soon have a place of worship. Old and established parishes are replacing old edifices with splendid new ones—not moving away to the suburbs. On the other hand Unitarian congregations like the Church of the Unity, formerly ministered to by Rev. M. J. Savage, are dying or dead and transferring their property to the Benevolent Fraternity. Moreover, not a few Trinitarian Congregationalists are still to be converted to a belief in the necessity of doing anything more than "marking time." Surely, in the face of such aggressive, masterly church extension work as Roman Catholics are putting forth in Boston today, the descendants of the old stock and the adherents of the old faith do not need to be spurred on to do their duty.

The opening of the college year involves both transfer and concentration of young life. It is often one of the problems and trials of the pastor that some of the natural leaders among his young people are absent during the greater and more active part of the church year, just as they are likely to become of use. It makes work harder, with only the compensation that it gives an opportunity to develop and make the most of talents which might otherwise have been neglected or thrust in the background. On the other hand, there are well recognized perils in the concentration of our young people in college towns—new temptations to be met, new influences of faculty teaching and student companionship which are likely to put religious opinions and habits to the test. Certain kinds of worldliness and doubt are especially prevalent in our colleges, and it requires a warm enthusiasm and the continual practice of devotion and helpfulness to overcome them. We cannot regret that our boys and girls pass through this experience of testing which is essential to the growth of strong character, but there should be an increasing provision of forethought and sympathy for the religious side of college life.

In political meetings many men go to take some part. They express approval or disapproval. They ask questions. They applaud the speakers. They cheer. There is magnetism in numbers. With such audiences men of only ordinary talent become eloquent. Why should not these effects be oftener produced in religious meetings? Their power depends largely on the audience. Christians can make these meetings like that at Pentecost. Get ready for worship by worshiping God before you start for the meeting. Think of divine love. Christ manifested it for you. He died for all men. He will give to every man who receives him the divine life he has promised. He will make them kings and priests. He will share his throne with them. The prosperity which will come to the nation from electing the candidate who stands on the best political platform is nothing compared with the blessedness to be gained by men and families and nations through loving obedience to Christ. Think on these things. Go to the prayer meeting and the Sunday service with your mind filled with them. Respond to the utterances of your brethren. Speak your own thought and feeling to them and to God. Then these meetings will be unsurpassed in interest. The minister will be eloquent. The entire community will come to listen, and many will remain to praise God.

THE ANCIENT WORLD REDISCOVERED.

In making known ancient history the spade is proving mightier than the pen. Silent mounds, forgotten ruins and desert sands have during the present generation been made to reveal more about old Assyria, Babylon, Arabia, Palestine, Egypt and Greece than had before been discovered in twenty centuries. A prehistoric world has been brought within historic knowledge. The chief impulse in this work is to find new light on the Bible; and in this we are most interested, though rare treasures of great intrinsic as well as historic value have rewarded the efforts of explorers.

Till within a few years it was supposed that the Bible contained the oldest literature in the world, but vast literatures are now at our disposal, in the very handwriting of their authors, much of it written many centuries before Abraham was born. For long ages little was known of Assyria or Babylon except what was told in Bible records. But the civilization and culture of these great nations, their government and social life and even the daily doings of the people may be accurately described from the clay tablets, inscriptions, buildings and implements which had been buried for thousands of years, but are now being brought to light by the explorer's spade. The volume, Recent Researches in Bible Lands, reviewed in our literary columns this week, places many of the results of these explorations before us in a popular form. Professor Hilprecht there expresses his conviction, for which he seems to have obtained good evidence, that a high degree of civilization existed in Babylonia centuries before the time when we used to believe that the human race was created. The records of the movements and battles of nations in that early period are being unearthed, their religious creeds, and the correspondence of their rulers with one another and with their officers. The story of the explorations at Nuffar during the last eight years is as fascinating as any of Jules Verne's fanciful accounts of journeys to other worlds.

These records help to make real and natural much in the Old Testament that seemed unreal and that was taken by many as legend. They afford satisfactory explanation of many things which had not before been explained. They not only confirm, but they vividly illustrate, many of the historical statements in the Bible. They help us wonderfully to comprehend the relations of the kingdom of Israel with surrounding nations. They indicate the religious beliefs which were held in common among different peoples, guide us in our judgment of the influence which was exerted from without on the religion of the Hebrews, and of the influence which its faith had on other nations. The Old Testament is likely to become in many respects a new book, and its importance in the history of Christianity much increased, as these archæological discoveries come to be clearly apprehended and applied. A very interesting and scholarly attempt so to use these discoveries appears in Prof. J. F. McCurdy's History, Prophecy and the Monuments, the second volume of which is reviewed in our literary columns.

The cause of Biblical scholarship is greatly indebted to the University of Pennsylvania, which has already expended over $70,000 in these researches, and to the Palestine and Egyptian exploration societies and other organizations which have collected funds in the United States and carried on this work in the various Eastern countries. It is a matter for congratulation, also, that the governments of these countries themselves are coming to take interest in the explorations and to preserve the treasures discovered. While the British Museum and other European collections have been greatly enriched in recent years by these treasures gathered by British, French and German archæologists, many of the most valuable of those now being discovered are being gathered into the museums of Cairo, Constantinople and Athens and arranged by skillful hands. The establishment of Robert College at Constantinople, the Syrian Protestant College at Beirut and other American institutions in the East have been most opportune in promoting Oriental research. The services of Professors Long and Haynes of Robert College, of Dr. Bliss in Palestine and Dr. Grant Bey in Egypt illustrate the large incidental fruits of missionary enterprise in foreign lands.

These discoveries of ancient records and life are the most valuable commentary on the Old Testament ever written and many of them antedate the Old Testament. They illumine the divine purpose as declared in the Biblical accounts of the history of Israel. They remove difficulties which have been great stumbling-blocks; and if they lead us, as they do, to rearrange our chronologies and to change some of our methods of interpretation they both confirm and illustrate the general historical accuracy of the Holy Scriptures. That they should be brought to light just at this period, when scientific attainments have for the first time made them intelligible and taught us their value, can but suggest the providential care of God over the Word which he has given to men. His truth written on buried walls and tablets, in the sacred books of his chosen nation and in the hearts of men, is the same truth through all the ages, and its record in every place bears witness to itself and to the mind which gave it.

A RETROSPECT OF SUMMER READING.

In the broadside of letters on summer reading which we present this week it is significant that more than half the writers have been using their vacation for careful and earnest study of the pressing political and financial questions of the day. It is an index of what has been going on all summer, not in rest times alone but as an added burden of study for those who were already busy. Action is forced upon us, and it is characteristic of our people East and West that they desire to know before acting. In this our correspondents are but representatives of the whole people.

Leaving out of the account this urgent call to study, we are struck by the variety of books which our correspondents have been enjoying. Except Ian Maclaren's Mind of the Master, not one book outside the sphere of economics is mentioned twice. This wide variety of material includes pure literature, philosophy, biography, science, homiletics, books of devotion, recent novels, reviews, magazines and newspapers. Evidently the land of good reading is not a narrow mountain pass, but rather a spacious realm of many paths and resting places and gracious outlooks.

Running through most of the letters also is a note of purpose which we are glad to see. Some of them begin with assertion of the duty of refraining from books in vacation time but the logic of opportunity is too strong for them and they go on to show in their own experience that even purposeful reading may be rest. The fact is that man in America, and especially the educated man, has become addicted to reading and finds it difficult to change except from more to less, or from reading by necessity to reading from preference. The stimulant or sedative of other men's thoughts he craves and will attain whether he picks up his material at random or chooses it with a deliberate purpose. Planning serves a double purpose, therefore; it crowds out rubbish and it insures variety. If one read Shakespeare all the year it would be no rest to read him in vacation, but how many of us will ever read him unless we read him in our leisure days? It is a question largely of better or of worse and men will choose their reading by default of choosing if they do not select by the exercise of forethought and deliberate care. And what is true of summer leisure is also true of the odd moments and brief opportunities of hurried wintertime.

CHRIST FOR THE WORLD.

These words often are used as a motto. They serve well in that capacity because they are so full of meaning. Did you ever think how human history would appear to one unfamiliar with it, if it were to be represented in a kind of panorama? All its events previous to the birth and life of Jesus Christ would be seen to be preparatory for them and all its subsequent events to be shaped and colored by them. The short period of the life of Christ would seem to be, as it was and is, the central, pivotal period of human history.

He is gradually conquering the world by the might of love. Before his coming the nations had been prepared for it, although they knew it not, and since his ascension their preparation has continued in a different manner for another and a different coming, which will reveal the superior closeness and power and beauty of his relation to men. He is coming in the spread of enlightenment, of the knowledge of righteousness, of loyalty to God, and of consecrated service for one's fellowmen. He is coming even by means of wars and floods and pestilences and whatever else turns human hearts away from material things and directs them towards God.

It is faith in his coming—not at any stated day or in any manner to be foreseen and particularly declared but in the spirit and with power—which is the inspiration of true missionary service, whether in one's own home or community, or in the remote regions of our own land or abroad. Every day brings that coming nearer, although it may not be a scenic display, comprehensive and dramatic, but only a revelation to the hearts of his people one by one. But whatever its form, its meaning is the same.

We are to pray for it. We are to labor for it. But are we not also to assume that it has indeed begun already? If Christ had not come to the world and claimed it irresistibly as his own and set himself to redeem it for himself, it would not be the world which, in spite of all its faults, it is.

CURRENT HISTORY.

Domestic Politics.

The Palmer and Buckner ratification meeting in New York city last week, at which both the candidates of the National Democracy spoke, was remarkable for its enthusiasm and the presence of almost all the former leaders of the Democratic party in the East who have had the reputation of being anything more than partisans of the most intense and narrow type. The following day those Democrats of the Empire State who rejected the Chicago convention's platform and candidates and spurned the action of the Buffalo convention the week before met in Brooklyn and named candidates for governor and presidential electors, selecting as their gubernatorial candidate Hon. Daniel G. Griffin of Watertown. While these men were going straight ahead and following to its logical conclusion the course of dissent which they entered upon when they bolted the Chicago platform, the followers of "the machine" were squabbling among themselves as to whether Mr. John Boyd Thacher, who had been nominated the week before at Buffalo, should or should not be forced from the ticket. Tammany, having reason to distrust Mr. Thacher's complete acceptance of the platform formulated at Chicago and reiterated at Buffalo, insisted that he must retire. Senator Hill, after a stormy struggle in the State committee, succeeded in defeating Tammany's purpose. When, later, the committee on notification informed Mr. Thacher of his nomination, he surprised them and added to the complexity of an already much-entangled and comical situation by declining to accept the nomination. The future complications no one can foresee nor the end of the factional warfare, but all agree in the forecast that everything is conspiring to give Mr. McKinley an unprecedented majority in New York State.

The situation in Massachusetts is quite as complicated and quite as ludicrous. Mr. George Fred Williams has been nominated for governor by the "machine" Democrats, who intend to betray him at the polls, and by his own faction. Both factions indorse the Chicago platform and nominees. The Democrats who believe in a gold standard, after filing a respectful protest, left the "machine" convention held in Faneuil Hall, and subsequently put forth a State ticket with ex-Mayor F. O. Prince of Boston as candidate for governor. The fight between the two silver factions is chiefly one for spoils and an effort on the one hand to retain and on the other hand to obtain control of the State party machine.

Mr. Bryan's tour through New England has demonstrated that many people wish to see and hear him. He has been received respectfully save in New Haven, where the students of Yale brought discredit on themselves and the college by their success in disturbing the meeting held on the Common. If he or his managers fancy that the thousands who have flocked to see and hear him have been converted to faith in him, they are deluded. Postmaster-General Wilson, Senator Gray of Delaware and Governor Ferrall of Virginia are the most recent accessions to the ranks of those who intend to support actively the Palmer and Buckner ticket.

Mr. Bryan and the Preachers.

Mr. Bryan asserted in his Brooklyn speech last week that Henry Ward Beecher, if living, would be a defender of the Chicago platform. Those who remembered Mr. Beecher's sermon preached in Plymouth Church in 1877, when it was proposed to pay gold bonds in silver, have done well to recall the fact that Mr. Beecher then said:

> No act of Congress can ever make one pound equal to two pounds! No act of Congress can ever make a thing inferior equal to a superior. Silver coin must be made proportionate to the value of gold as determined in the open markets of the world. Any other course is to teach men to cheat by law, it is to teach honest men to cheat without knowing that they cheat, it is to teach fraud by legislation, it is a high crime and misdemeanor, and if men in Congress do not know it, what are they there for? When the blind are leading the blind, and they all fall into the ditch together, it will not help them to find that the ditch is silver-lined.

Mr. Bryan's alleged indiscriminate attack on Christian clergymen made at Wilmington, Del., we have taken pains to investigate somewhat, and find much difference of opinion. Those present most worthy of confidence assert that Mr. Bryan was careful to discriminate between godly, self-sacrificing, sympathetic clergymen and the worldly, self-seeking and callous ones.

The Burdens of the Farmer.

A Chicago firm engaged in the business of loaning money to farmers recently sent to 4,000 agriculturists in Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri, to whom they had loaned money, asking them how they intended to vote at the approaching national election. Of the 1,267 who have answered thus far 979 say that they will vote for Mr. McKinley, 186 for Mr. Bryan, 48 for Mr. Palmer, the others scattering. These men are of the debtor class which is supposed to be most susceptible to the temptation which Mr. Bryan is setting before men burdened with debt. The condition of the farmers in Canada is much the same as it is in this country, and throughout the world for that matter, and therefore it is significant to note that those Canadian members of Parliament interested in promoting the welfare of agriculture and appointed to report to Parliament on the reasons for the agricultural depression, in a report which was adopted last week and which will be presented to the select standing committee on agriculture of the Dominion Parliament, made no reference to the demonetization of silver as one of the causes of the depreciation in prices. Tariff reform, reform in railway administration, better steamship service to Great Britain, construction of storage warehouses and abattoirs are all mentioned in the report, but not a word about the injury caused by low prices of farm products due to the gold standard. If the disease is a universal one, so must be the remedy.

Queen Victoria's Unparalleled Reign.

On Sept. 23 Queen Victoria passed the mark of the longest reign among her predecessors. By her own wish the public celebration which would be proper to so interesting an occasion has been postponed until June of next year, when, if she lives so long, she will have been queen for sixty years. The mayors of the English cities, however, telegraphed to her at Balmoral their congratulations, the bells of the churches were rung and the national anthem sung in the theaters. In every department the queen's long reign is memorable. The external growth of the empire by the control of India and the acquisition of the great African spheres of influence, the rise of a brilliant and distinctive literature everywhere known as the "Victorian," the establishment of the modern relation between the crown and the people made easy by her youth and conscientious devotion to duty, the vast political changes in the direction of an ordered democracy, postal improvements, civil service, army and electoral reform, the growth of invention and commerce, the revolution in industrial life produced by the adoption of free trade—all have combined to make a new and greater empire, in which her quiet influence has been one of the factors of progress. Americans will heartily join in the hope that she may be spared to receive the congratulations of her people and of the civilized world on her sixtieth coronation anniversary.

Mr. Gladstone's Speech.

It is difficult to see just where or how any practical result can come from Mr. Gladstone's great speech to four thousand citizens of Liverpool last week. It showed what all the world knew before, how intense is his righteous indignation, and it voiced the heart of Great Britain, but it did not go far enough to materially change the situation; and his suggestion that the British ambassador be withdrawn from Constantinople and the Turkish minister in London sent home does not win assent, for there is work for a British ambassador in Constantinople to do guarding defenseless Christians, European and native, even if he be impotent as a diplomatist. Mr. Gladstone's restraint, his failure to take the position that a time may come when Great Britain must act, whether other nations co-operate or not, may mean that he has reason to know that Lord Salisbury and the czar will come to an understanding while the latter is at Balmoral, the guest of the queen. If so, it is not probable that the czar will alter his policy unless Great Britain changes its attitude toward Russian occupation of much of European Turkey, including Constantinople. Evidence accumulates that Russia not only has France tied to her, but that Germany and Austria have been made her allies, while Italy, it is said, owes much of the leniency of Abyssinia's king to Russian influence and for the same must be duly grateful, hence at least neutral. If Great Britain can make France see how Russia is using her, if Egypt can be made a bond of union rather than a bone of contention between Great Britain and France, then Lord Salisbury has some chance of successfully challenging Russia's policy, whatever it may be, in Turkey. If something like this does not happen, then the outlook for Armenia is dark and the expulsion of the Turk from Europe still a dream. The veteran Baptist missionary in China,

William Ashmore, writes that Russia's influence in the far East is overpowering and practically unchallenged.

The Situation in Turkey.

The massacre of Armenians in their villages and towns has been renewed and a reign of terror still exists in Constantinople, Europeans and Armenians leaving the city in large numbers. The Young Turk party continues to distribute placards calling for a revolution and the deposition of the present sultan, and the Armenian revolutionists are not idle or awed, so that inflammable material is ready for the spark. The sultan rejoices in an autographic presentation copy photograph of the emperor of Germany, recently sent to him, to such a level of comradeship has the ruler of the land of Martin Luther come. Meanwhile throughout Christendom clarion voices are crying, "Shame! To arms." Poets like R. W. Gilder, in the October Century, are saying:

Let fall the ruin propped by Europe's hands!
Its tottering walls are but a nest of crime!
Slayers and ravishers in licensed bands
Swarm darkly forth to shame the face of time.

False, imbecile and cruel, kept in place
Not by its natural force, but by the fears
Of foes, with hand on hilt; even by the grace
Of rivals—not blood-guiltless all these years!

Aye, let the ruin fall, and from its stones
Rebuild a civic temple pure and fair,
Where freedom is not alien; where the groans
Of dying and ravished burden not the air.

Clergymen like Dr. Lyman Abbott are asking:

Do you suppose that he whose ears heard the cry of the few oppressed Israelites, that he whose eyes looked upon the massacres of the Roman Empire, that he who beheld with restrained indignation the lash and the chain in America—do you suppose that he does not see the thousands that have marched to a cruel grave in Armenia? That he does not know the silence of Powers that call themselves Christian? That he will have no word of accounting with England and Russia and France and Germany?

While in Great Britain men are saying, with Rev. Charles F. Aked:

How soon shall we hear some Lowell of our own demanding?

Wut'll make ye act like freemen?
Wut'll git your dander riz?

How soon shall we hear the voice of another Whittier writing to Englishmen and bidding us again

Tear from your flag its holy cross
And in your van of battle toss
The pirate's skull-bone blazon!

What sort of an answer do you suppose an Englishman in America can make to the question whether the British Lion has turned cur? When we remember Armenia, God only knows whether we shall ever respect ourselves again.

IN BRIEF.

Mr. Capen's address before the Boston Ministers' Meeting on the Crisis of 1896, published verbatim in our columns last week, has been commended by many as a clear statement of the principles involved in the present political campaign. Many pastors and others have expressed a wish to circulate this admirable paper, and we are glad to be able to state that it is to be issued in pamphlet form by the Business Men's Non-Partisan Sound Money League of Boston, with headquarters at 194 Washington Street. Those who desire copies can receive them free of charge by making an application to the league personally or by mail. Can pastors do a better service to the cause of national honor than by placing copies in the hands of every voter in their parishes?

Mr. Jefferson's characterization of his neighbor in the ministry on page 473 is a suggestive study of qualifications which many ministers are seeking after.

Four months of testing have reconciled the conservative male trustees of the Clarendon Street Baptist Church, Boston, to the appointment of a woman as sexton. Why not, pray?

As will be seen by referring to page 499 the A. M. A. Jubilee Fund has more than doubled since our last report. May it continue to grow in an increasing ratio, so that the Boston meeting, Oct. 20–22, may be a jubilee indeed!

Somewhat more cheering tidings are received from Rev. Dr. George Leon Walker. He has gained strength and is able to move the affected limb. He expects to be removed to Hartford this week. Hope for his recovery will move his many friends to more earnest prayer in his behalf.

The pope declares that "all ordinations made under the Anglican rite are absolutely invalid." The church through which Protestant Episcopalians trace back their cherished doctrine of Apostolic Succession thus denies their right to claim it. Yet no doubt they will continue to spell church with a capital C.

One of the most interesting and promising of recent attempts to win slum bred boys and girls to lives of self-restraint, self-respect and social usefulness is described in Mr. Hunt's article in the Home Department. A second "George Junior Republic" has been started at Lake Villa, Ill., and ere long we expect to see many.

The Blue Valley Association of Congregational Churches in Nebraska has passed a resolution censuring the Nebraska Congregational News because it expressed a preference for McKinley for president. Eleven voted for the resolution, eight against it, and seventeen, not voting, remained non-partisan. But no doubt their votes will be cast where they will count for something when the right opportunity comes Nov. 3.

Religion is not ignored even in the heat of the political campaign. All the people of Boston seemed to be out on the Common and in the streets around Music Hall last Friday evening to greet Mr. Bryan. Yet the audience at the revival meeting in Tremont Temple was larger than usual, listening intently to an earnest sermon, while the candidate for the presidency a few rods away was pleading the claims of his party.

The alumnæ and friends of Mt. Holyoke Seminary will grieve to learn that the historic structure on the top of South Hadley hill, the main dormitory and chapel, was destroyed by fire last Sunday afternoon. No lives were lost, and much of the personal property of the students and teachers was saved, but the insurance, $157,000, even if the full amount is allowed, will fall much below the loss suffered, and the loyalty and generosity of the friends of this noble institution will now be tested to the utmost.

The Christian Observer informs its readers that the ancient city of Nippur or Nuffar, which has lately been unearthed by archæologists, perished in the flood, and that the city whose remains were found above the oldest was built just after the flood. Noah, soon after leaving the ark, remembering the advantages of the place, located a new city on the spot where the former one was overwhelmed. These data furnished by our contemporary must be a great help to Professor Hilprecht and his colaborers in the valley of the Euphrates.

Tremont Temple was crowded last Monday at noon to hear Mr. D. L. Moody speak on How to Reach the Forty Millions of Non-church-goers in the United States. Before beginning his address he said that many thousands of bushels of apples, which might be given to the poor in Boston, were rotting on the ground. He named Messrs. Samuel Johnson, S. B. Capen and H. M. Moore as a committee to wait on the railroads and see if free transportation could be secured. He offered to send from Northfield 8,000 barrels of apples. Money is needed to secure their free distribution, and gifts for this purpose should be sent to Rev. D. W. Waldron, 19 Congregational House, Boston. If sufficient money is provided to pay the cost of handling the fruit, many thousand bushels will be distributed among the poor.

It is somewhat significant that the authorities of Union Theological Seminary in New York have arranged for a course of ten lectures on the general subject of Christian Worship, which such men as Professors A. V. G. Allen, Egbert C. Smyth, Drs. William F. Huntington, George Dana Boardman and other men equally learned are to deliver, and in which they will discuss Primitive Christian Liturgies, the Liturgies of the Greek, Roman, Lutheran and Reformed Churches, and the customs of Non-Liturgical Churches, the course naturally closing with a lecture by President Hastings of Union Seminary on the Ideal of Christian Worship. As these lectures are open to the public at noon on Fridays during October, November and December, it is to be hoped that they will be attended by those within the area of Greater New York who are, or should be, interested in the very timely subject which is to be considered.

The Baptists have a case of heresy to discuss. Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt of the Theological Seminary of Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y., was charged more than a year ago with rejecting the Baptist doctrines of the canon and inspiration of Scripture, the divinity and resurrection of Jesus Christ, the miracles in the Bible and immersion. He denied all these charges and declared his faith in a clear and manly statement that would be accepted by any Congregational council as sufficiently orthodox to qualify him for a pastorate or professorship. Still, he would admit to the Lord's table "all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity." Without further trial he was notified by the trustees that on complaint of the Baptist Education Society his relations with the seminary were ended. He protested that the action was unjust and illegal and that its object was "to suppress such honest investigation of Biblical problems as the Baptist freedom of faith allows." However, he has accepted a professorship of Semitic languages in Cornell University, and thus takes himself out of the discussion, which for some time will add piquancy to many assemblies of Baptists.

Rev. John Watson, D. D., (Ian Maclaren) and Dr. C. H. Parkhurst came into New York Harbor on the Germanic last week. We know that they met, for Ian Maclaren says they did, although their meetings would probably have been more frequent had the Scotch divine proved a better sailor. Dr. Watson spent Sunday in Lenox, and on Monday went to New Haven to begin his course of lectures to the students of Yale Divinity School, which will be given not in Marquand Chapel, as have all former Lyman Beecher course lectures, but in one of the college halls, seating 800 people. This has been found necessary, owing to the unusual number who desire to see and hear the author of The Bonnie Brier Bush and The Mind of the Master. While in New Haven Dr. Watson will be the guest of Prof. George P. Fisher. He begins his lecture tour in Springfield, Oct. 2. From several interesting interviews which have been published we learn that he is expecting to gain much profit and inspiration from his study of our life. His last long outing, seven years ago, was in Egypt, the great, mysterious and fascinating land of the past. By way of contrast he now comes to see the "land of the present and the future!" As he sailed up New York Bay he saw our White Squadron anchor and expressed the hope that it would always be found fighting alongside of the British navy. The sight of the statue of Liberty in New York Harbor made his blood go faster. Receptions for him at the Lotos and Aldine Clubs in New York have been planned, and students of Cornell, Oberlin, Princeton, Wisconsin University and the University of Chicago are to hear him. He is to preach in Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Jersey City and in Boston, Nov. 29, in the Old South Church. The subjects of Dr. Watson's lectures at Yale are admirable. They are The Genesis of a Sermon, The Technique of a Sermon, The Problem of Preaching, Theology —the Theory of Religion, The New Dogma, The Machinery of the Congregation, The Work of the Pastor, The Public Worship of God, The Minister's Care of Himself. An excellent critic writes to us concerning the impression made by his first lecture, "It was a most extraordinary and brilliant success."

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

D. L. Moody's Plans for the Future.

Mr. Moody has just addressed the ministers and as many laymen as could get into the large hall of the Y. M. C. A. His subject was How to reach the forty million people who in our country are not in the habit of attending church. He spoke with all his former fire and vigor and with more than usual tenderness and confidence. No man has been quicker to learn from experience than he, and no man more constantly ascribes, so far as human methods are concerned, his success in Christian work to the exercise of common sense in approaching people and to a boldness which the interests at stake warrant. He began by speaking of his work among the prisoners in the United States, of whom there are about three-quarters of a million, and the ease with which they are reached through the books which he has had printed for the purpose. He says that for its outlay no work has ever made quicker or more satisfactory returns. What he wants is more means for his prison colportage system. He has already put into circulation hundreds of thousands of volumes of Christian literature. He believes that these same books, which can be sold for fifteen cents each, may be used as an introduction to the homes of people who do not attend church at all. His plan is to have Christian men or women call at every house in the parish, leave one of these books in an envelope on which the price of the book and a list of other books in the series are printed, and promise to call for the book or the money within a week. At this time, Mr. Moody says, the mistress of the house will usually be ready to see the visitor, and will thus open the way for religious conversation. He also says that no minister need have any difficulty in reaching all the families in his parish once in two weeks. He would have all saloons visited every fortnight, and invitations given generously for the Sunday evening service. This service should be evangelistic, beginning with hearty singing and followed by a short, direct, interesting address. He would close with an after meeting, giving an opportunity for those who must retire to do so during the singing of some stirring hymn. No service, according to Mr. Moody, is so valuable as the Sunday evening service and no service ought to be so well attended. He would never use it for anything like secular purposes. This method, he is sure, will bring the non-church going population of the city within the influence of the gospel. To reach those living in rural districts he would utilize the schoolhouses which are commonly open for the purpose, and in the country as well as in the city employ laymen of wealth, social standing and ability as speakers to conduct religious services.

Educational Matters.

Beloit has the largest class in her history. Seventy-eight have registered in the Freshman Class, fifty five of them young men. It is difficult to find room for them in the town. There is a pressing demand for a dormitory for young women. About 150 students are now enrolled in Chicago Theological Seminary. There are thirty five Swedes, twelve Norwegians and nine Germans among the number. One young man, who has been a year and a half in Germany and is an M. A. of Yale, is studying for the degree of Ph. D. Three others are taking post-graduate courses. Two-thirds of the English students are graduates from some college. While it is sometimes very hard to refuse men who come hither without a college education or its equivalent, experience is showing the wisdom of their rejection. It is worse than useless to put men into classes for which they are not prepared, or to encourage them to take up studies for which they are without the necessary mental discipline. It may be that special courses for such persons should be provided, either in this seminary or some other, or in connection with some one or more of our colleges.

Peoria is to have a polytechnic school of large proportions. For its establishment Mrs. Julia Bradley of Peoria has made known her intention of providing at least $2,000,000. Work on the buildings is to begin at once. As soon as these are ready money will be furnished for the support of the necessary instructors. The course of study will be collegiate and mechanical. While science in all its branches is to be taught, the subject of Christian ethics will not be left out. Liberal provision will also be made for the study of literature, both ancient and modern. The institution is to be affiliated with the University of Chicago. Very earnest efforts are being put forth this year to secure an increased attendance upon the university extension courses. Eighty seven different courses are offered. These will be given by some of the best men in the university. More than 1,200 persons were enrolled in these courses last year. It is now proposed to set aside Oct. 3 every year as Class Day for university extension students. In the morning prospective students will meet one another and the professors, and learn what classes can best be entered and what work best be undertaken. In the afternoon those present will be addressed by President Harper and other prominent men. This year the day will be observed for the first time.

FRANKLIN.

BOSTON'S GIFT TO OAKLAND.

BY REV. CHARLES E. JEFFERSON.

For the last year or two church committees in search of a pastor have been making pilgrimages to Charlestown. Hereafter such pilgrimages must be made to Oakland, Cal., for Rev. Charles R. Brown is no longer the pastor of the Winthrop Church, but is now the pastor of the First Congregational Church in Oakland.

In sending Mr. Brown to the Pacific coast, New England is giving back to the West her own. Born in West Virginia and reared in Iowa, Mr. Brown bears many of the marks which the West stamps upon the most favored of her children. Breadth and freedom and energy—these are his in more than ordinary measure. His manners are unconventional. His language is blunt and simple. His mind is intensely practical. He believes in bringing things to pass, and things always come to pass where he is. He despises red tape. All sorts of cant are an abomination to him. None of the odor or starch of clericalism can be found in his make-up. Persons meeting him feel first of all that they are in the presence of a man. He wears no label, not even a white necktie, proclaiming to the world, "I am a clergyman."

In the pulpit Mr. Brown is unique. Like all men of native force he has a style of his own. Theological professors have left no earmarks on him. No other preacher in the United States preaches just as he does. The ease and patness with which he says old things in new ways at first surprises and then charms. The breeze of the prairie blows through his sermons. Although a diligent student of the best books, his pulpit efforts never smell of the lamp. He has studied elocution and rhetoric, but he does not remind his hearers of that fact. His rhetoric is unstudied to the edge of carelessness, and his elocution is as natural as that of a business man discussing pressing problems with his fellow-citizen on the street corner. His language is as homely and simple as De Foe's, and as captivating. Words and phrases from the farm and shop slip into his discourses in the most innocent and unexpected ways. He has not Latinized his English, as many preachers have, until it has lost its Anglo Saxon edge and fails to cut into nineteenth century hearts. The trail of the scholastic serpent is not over his speech. He preaches in the plain language of the plain people, and they hear him gladly.

Mr. Brown is a Bible preacher. He is a man of many books, yet he preaches but one. He feeds his people on the Scriptures. He drenches them in the spirit of prophets and apostles. He so opens their eyes that they can see no man save Jesus only. His sermons come out of a heart which beats in sympathy with people. He has not analyzed the Bible until he has lost the power of using it. Devotion to criticism has not sapped him. He is vital, full of the milk of human kindness, and instead of boring people by dissecting theories and balancing systems he ministers to life by keeping men close to the great facts of revelation. There is no claptrap in any of his methods. He shuns the tricks and devices which weaker men feel obliged to resort to. In his pulpit there is no fooling, no attitudinizing, no pumping words to fill up the gaps caused by the absence of ideas. Sentences are not padded out to give them rotundity, nor are anecdotes palmed off as a substitute for thought. He is a preacher in downright earnest to drive his message home. He makes a sensation, as every true preacher does, not by antics and oddities, but by the force of his ideas and the nobility of his spirit. He talks as a man to men. He tells them plain truths in straight ways. When he gets done he stops. He fills the pews with people because he knows how to fill people with the truth.

But his power as a preacher lies not in his words or ideas, but in his manhood. It is the man who preaches. Carlyle is right: "Get your man, and all is got." Mr. Brown is a man. He is not a priest, nor a pedant, nor a dilettante, nor a dealer in literary niceties and theological conceits. He is not cursed with the awful itch for place. He has grasped the meaning of servantship. He is not afraid of hard things. His early ambition was to be a foreign missionary. Insurmountable obstacles thwarted his plans. Born in the Methodist Church and until four years ago a minister in that denomination, he found himself not in sympathy with its polity and resolved to throw his life into the church of the Pilgrims. Coming East he preached in the pulpit of the Winthrop Church. This church was at that time passing through a crisis. The tide was going out. A beloved pastor had recently resigned. Influential men were dying and others were moving into other cities. Some feared the church was doomed to be stranded in the midst of a population hopelessly Roman Catholic. Mr. Brown looked the field over and liked it because it was counted hard. Obstacles were many but he was eager to grapple with them. Even an ebbing tide had inspiration for him. Instead of sitting in the Congregational House and waiting for some mighty church to come his way, he plunged into the work in Charlestown and demonstrated various things which wise outsiders had been questioning. He proved that Charlestown was not altogether Roman Catholic, and that of the large number of excellent Protestants in the city a good proportion of them were willing to worship in the Winthrop Church. The church was born again. Its rebirth became a topic of conversation among the Congregationalists of Boston and vicinity. The prosperity was no mushroom growth. It went on through the years until outside churches in search of a pastor began to send their committees to Charlestown. Several churches gave sweet invitations, which were respectfully declined. The wise young minister knew how to wait. He waited till his hour had come.

That Mr. Brown will succeed in his Western pastorate is something which may be safely taken for granted. California is not so different from New England as many untraveled New Englanders imagine. The First Church in Oakland is made up largely of New England people. Eastern Congregationalists lose none of their strength and loveliness on being transplanted to California soil. They retain all their former graces and add others that are new. Dr. J. K. McLean, for the last twenty-three years the pastor of the Oakland church, was once the pastor of the church in Framingham. Under the genial influences of California climate and the inspiring pressure of the problems of a growing commonwealth, he has developed into a noble leader of the religious forces on the Pacific coast. He has laid the foundations of the First Church deep and broad. In spirit and outlook Mr. Brown is not unlike his distinguished predecessor, and is admirably fitted to take up and carry on the work so auspiciously begun. Success, after all, is nothing to be worried about or striven after with anxiety and forebodings. A man whose head is sane and whose heart is sound, and who knows how to put the gospel of the Son of God into the language wherein men are born, is sure of having a successful ministry in any field to which the providence of God may call him.

THE DUTY OF COLLEGE BRED MEN IN THE PRESENT CRISIS.

BY PRES. CHARLES F. THWING, WESTERN RESERVE UNIVERSITY AND ADELBERT COLLEGE.

The one comprehensive duty of college bred men in the present crisis is the duty of utterance. Theirs is the duty of talking and of writing.

The chief question before us, the financial one, is in certain respects hard, in certain respects easy. Like most questions of political science, its elements are simple and present simple problems, but these elements when combined constitute and present problems exceedingly difficult, of which most people are ignorant. If they understand the elements of these problems —as many do not—they are yet dreadfully ignorant of the methods of solving them. But concerning these questions people do desire to know. They desire the light of the thinker, not the lightning of the politician. The truth they wish to know in order the right to do. The debtor class, be it composed of Nebraska farmers or Massachusetts manufacturers, has no desire as a class to escape the payment of just debts; the creditor class, be it composed of Boston banks or Chicago brokers, has no desire as a class to exact payments which equity does not allow. Humanity does not wish to lie or be lied to; humanity as humanity wishes to do right. It is the only basis on which civilization exists.

By reason, therefore, of this condition the duty of utterance is laid on college bred men. Despite their limitations—and they are subject to very evident limitations—college trained men, above every other class in the community, are able to do these very things which are now in urgent need of being done. They can judge, reason, weigh evidence. They are able to see that this financial question has two sides and what these two sides are. They can put themselves in the other's place. They are interpreters. Often are they so free from partisanship that they open themselves to the charge of indifference. They do not forget, too, that this great question of money has a history. From its history they are able to bring forth teachings for the present crisis. As students of the science of government they remember that in the history of the two great civilizations which have most deeply influenced modern life, whenever patriotism was dearer to the ruler's heart than ambition the stamp on a piece of money represented its absolute value; and they cannot forget that when personal ambition in the ruler expelled the love for his people he was in peril of debasing the coinage. They remember that Nero took about one-eighth of its value away from the denarius, although retaining the name of the coin. English history furnishes examples of similar ills. Such are some of the elements which college-bred men bring to the solution of our great problem.

These college bred men are largely either ministers or lawyers. Chief among their professional duties, therefore, is the duty of talking. In the great company of editors college bred men are numerous. In the management of their journals these men are doing much to allay the fears of those who see in the effects of extreme partisanship the possibility of the overthrow of democratic government. The power of the partisan editor to rise above partisanship is a happy augury of this time. The clergyman and the lawyer should use their tongues as well as the editor is using his pen. They likewise should be as free from partisanship. The burning question is a question of fundamental principles. The principles are of tremendous consequence. A distinguished editor writing to me says, "Never in your day or mine has there been a question of so great public interest, not even the great war for the abolition of slavery." In this contest the Republican clergyman and the Democratic lawyer may well talk together for sound money.

The college trained man is also found in the college as a teacher and as an executive officer. It is possibly significant that almost every college president who has spoken has spoken in favor of sound money. I speak under correction, but my acquaintance with Dr. Bradley, the esteemed president of the college of which the Democratic and Populist candidate for the presidency is a graduate, leads me to believe that he would repudiate the Chicago platform and decline to support the nominee of the Chicago convention. It is not to be forgotten that the colleges as financial institutions and the professors who are in receipt of salaries have a most vital interest in this campaign. Our colleges are possessed of more than $100,000,000 in interest-bearing funds. The establishment of the fifty cent dollar would mean an essential halving of this vast property. It would prove to be, to use the softest language, a most serious inconvenience to college professors, for the cost of living would be greatly enhanced, and the amount paid in salary to the college teacher could not be increased at all. The pecuniary hardships of the wartime would be again felt by the salary-receiving class. Men of college training and college work should speak and write. Not a few of them are already speaking and writing. Next to our foreign missionary societies no organizations would apparently suffer more than our colleges, and no men more than their professors.

Parallels of an active participation of college bred men in great public movements are not lacking. A hundred and twenty-five years ago George III. is reported to have said that had there been no Harvard College there would have been no American Revolution. It was the graduates of that college who were the leaders in the early stages of the Revolution. One does not forget how large a proportion of the signers of the Declaration of Independence were college graduates, and in particular one delights to recall the valiant service of President John Witherspoon of Princeton in favor of the great document, and his other distinguished labors at the same period. No memorial structures are more significant than the halls erected on college grounds and the tablets placed in college buildings in memory of college boys and college graduates who went to the war and never came back. How full of memory is the fact that no less than twelve hundred graduates and students of Harvard University fought in the great war. College bred men fought for their country. They are now called on to write and to talk for it. Let them be as faithful to the call of the nation in the time of peace as they were in the time of war.

Charity Chance.*

A Serial Story by Walter Raymond.

Summary of the Previous Eleven Chapters.—Charity Chance becomes engaged to Graham Poltimore, nephew of her benefactor, Miss Graham. His friend, Alfred Prentice, a poet, so prevails upon her impressionable nature as to detach to some extent her affections from her fiancé. Mr. Poltimore-Briggs, a pompous and self-seeking politician, who has charge of Miss Graham's property, is running for Parliament. Charity attending a political rally meets the poet and goes to his room, where he renews his protestations of affection.

XII. DISCLOSURES.

WHAT was she to do? Days passed; and this question, always present in Charity's mind, remained unanswered. She became silent and distraught. The affection of Miss Graham, expressed in a thousand delicate touches, to her difficulty heaped remorse. The girl could not steel her heart to hurt that tender friend. Thus life became a constant lie, and unbearable.

Amongst the summer hospitalities at Babblecombe House was one in which the little lady took peculiar delight. Once a year long deal tables were ranged upon the lawn, an urn of huge dimensions was hired from the town and the workhouse girls were regaled with unlimited tea and buns.

It was early in the afternoon, and Miss Graham had been wheeled out of doors to await the arrival of her little guests. She loved to watch them coming along the road. To look at these hapless children quickened her sentiment and touched her heart.

"They are coming, Charity," she cried, with enthusiasm. "Poor little things! How pretty they look in their blue cotton frocks!"

The girl watched the procession marching two and two along the road. She was unhappy, and the sight to her seemed infinitely sad.

"I resent the blue frocks," she said, warmly. "Why should they be marked for workhouse brats?"

The phrase sounded unkind. "Don't dear, don't!" expostulated the little cripple, with a pained look. But as the children filed into the garden her face beamed again, and she added: "How clean and well they look! Set them to play at once, Charity. The Mortimers will be here in a moment."

Scarcely were the words uttered when the expected visitors came hurrying into the garden.

"So sorry to be late," gushed Mrs. Mortimer, rushing up to the chair and kissing Miss Graham upon both cheeks. "How are you, dear Miss Graham? It is so sweet of you. I have brought all the dear girls, you see—to make themselves useful. Come, girls, come."

Her eye glanced from Theodosia to Amelia and Amy, and thence to the other six. The dear girls solemnly approached in single file, saluted Miss Graham according to priority of birth, and dispersed. Then Theodosia and her mother encamped upon stools, one on each side of the bath-chair.

The sun shone gloriously. Swallows darted to and fro. The plaintive note of the greenfinch, like a sweet wail of recollected sorrow, came from the wood.

The workhouse children were ranged in two rows, playing one of those singing games—the heritage forever of the humble who have no toys:

We've a-come to see Jinny Jones, Jinny Jones, Jinny Jones,
We've a-come to see Jinny Jones. How is she now?

Backwards and forwards they tripped to the rhythm of the song. The little cripple's face glowed with pleasure as she nodded her head to the time. In heart she was as young as they, and enjoyed the game as much—always at second hand. Their little twinkling skirts awakened a joy more tender than the early daffodils or the bluebells in the wood. Something came over her. She scarcely knew whether to laugh or cry.

WITHOUT A PROTEST FROM HER INDIGNANT HOSTESS SHE SAILED PAST CHARITY.

Jinny Jones is a-dying, a-dying, a-dying,
Jinny Jones is a-dying. You can't see her now.

Every one else being happy and busily engaged, Mrs. Mortimer found the moment propitious to push forward her sharp face with the hook-nose she loved to put into everything.

"I wanted to say something to you, dear Miss Graham," she whispered, mysteriously, "if you won't be vexed with me. I speak from a sense of duty and from the best and kindest motives, and because I feel you ought to know."

What shall we dress her in, dress her in, dress her in?
What shall we dress her in—dress her in now?

Miss Graham turned from the children with a sigh of regret. When Mrs. Mortimer spoke under moral compulsion she always said something unpleasant

"What is it?" she asked, simply.

"It is about Miss Chance—Charity, I mean. Dear Miss Graham, you know what the Babblemouth people are, and how they tattle." Mrs. Mortimer shook her head censoriously. "I wouldn't say a word myself for the world—only it is such a pity when a girl is talked about"—

"Talked about?" interposed Miss Graham, sharply. "O, yes, I have no doubt of it. Foolish, idle tongues cannot be stopped. So much the worse for them."

"Ah! how true that is!" sighed Mrs. Mortimer. "And you know I have always felt the deepest regard for—for Charity. She is so spontaneous, so impulsive, one cannot help being in love with her. You see, we who know her understand and appreciate these good qualities. You and I, dear Miss Graham, see her true worth. And, of course, things are always exaggerated. Perhaps I may be wrong in detail, but I will find out"—

"There is nothing to find out in Charity," cried Miss Graham, warmly. "Her faults are all on the surface. She is so transparent that any one may see to the bottom of her soul."

"Yes. And how beautiful that always is—that real ingenuousness. It endears her, and makes one feel all the more that—that one must speak. But this Mr. Prentice, with whom she has become so friendly—the poet, you know—Theodosia, you had better go and assist your sisters."

"Friendly with Mr. Prentice!" The little lady fired up, and her eyes flashed with indignation. "Friendly with Mr. Prentice! Why she scarcely knows the fellow. She met him once at Graham's; and saw him afterwards in the wood, so she told me. That is all. Do you think she could speak to a real live genius with long hair and not come home and talk of it?" In impatience with such nonsense, Miss Graham laughed outright, and abruptly turned her head to watch the children, still singing.

Black is for mourning, mourning, mourning,
Black is for mourning. That will do.

"Then I think, dear Miss Graham, you ought to be told the truth." Mrs. Mortimer pinched her thin lips in determination not to shrink from an unpleasant duty. "It would be no true kindness, either to yourself or Charity, to allow you to remain in ignorance. Besides, a word from you will do so much. It must, if there is any gratitude in this world.

She paused, shook her head in doubt, glanced at Charity, towering so tall and graceful above the little cotton-clad paupers, and sinking her voice poured forth an unceasing stream of whispered gossip. On and on it gurgled, like rain out of a gargoyle on a wet day—how Charity had met Mr. Prentice by appointment at the rock on the hilltop, not once nor twice, but every day for a fortnight; and Mr. Prentice was there the first thing in the morning to the last thing at night, so that Charity might run out when she could; for John Sprake had seen them, and John told William the coachman, who told Selina, of course, who, when she was dusting the dining-room the other morning, began to mention it—"not that I ever allow a servant of mine to utter one word about anybody, or listen to anything that is said; for I either check them at once, or give them a severe scolding afterwards; but when I found Charity going to his lodgings, and in fact with my own eyes saw her there on the evening of Mr. Poltimore-Briggs's meeting, I felt it my duty, for the sake of the girl herself, to let you know what is going on. I should have walked over on purpose if we had not been coming this afternoon, no matter at what inconvenience. Nothing should have prevented me."

*Copyrighted, 1896, by Walter Raymond.

Mrs. Mortimer, who had been drilling holes in the turf with the top of her parasol, suddenly looked up and cut short her harangue.

Miss Graham, sitting more than ever erect, was white with anger and wounded pride. But the little lady did not lose her self-control. "You are very good indeed," she said, so calmly that the compliment sounded sincere, but so coldly that Mrs. Mortimer felt quite uncomfortable. "If Charity has talked to him unknown to me, no doubt the conversation was too unimportant to repeat."

Mrs. Mortimer fidgeted upon her campstool. Something within warned her to desist, but the temptation to tell was altogether too much for her. Moreover, a relentless conscience commanded complete disclosure of the worst—how Theodosia had overheard—not that she listened, dear child, for none had a keener sense of honor than Theodosia—had overheard the most terrible conversation that night when she was picking foxgloves for the decorations. So that at first the poor child, believing it must be Graham himself, from feelings of delicacy crept further into the wood, to let them pass by undisturbed. But when she saw who it was, she was astounded. "Nobody knows what that poor thing suffered," sighed Mrs. Mortimer from the depths of a mother's heart. "For two whole days and nights she never once closed her eyes, nor ate enough to keep a sparrow. She is so peculiarly sensitive to considerations of right and wrong, she dared not breathe a word for fear of being mean. She could not say her prayers with such a load upon her mind. She could not sleep. At last she sent for me—in such a burning fever that I thought of calling in Bibberley—and told me all. I gave her two globules of aconite at once, and exhausted nature slept like a child."

"I do not believe a word of it," cried Miss Graham, fiercely. "I have never known Charity to do a wicked thing—or repeat an unkind one—or repeat an unkind one."

As she nodded to emphasize the repetition, Mrs. Mortimer winced and drew up her head.

"We know how you dote on Miss Chance, dear Miss Graham. It is only natural that you should. But others can be at least truthful. Let me call Theodosia?"

"I want no corroboration. Nothing would make me believe a word of it. Duplicity and deceit are contrary to Charity's nature. And you have always slighted and looked down upon her—every one of you, from the first. You are all envious of her."

Mrs. Mortimer clutched her parasol, for after all she was the rector's wife. "Envious—envious of Charity Chance!"

"Yes—envious. Because she has more mind, and a finer temper, and a truer soul. Hundreds of times I have seen and resented it in my heart. I could never resent it openly, here in my own place. But now she is to marry Graham she is nearer to me. Not dearer, but closer. And everything affecting her touches me—touches me to the quick."

Whilst speaking the little cripple unconsciously pressed her hand upon her bosom, and a red spot burned upon her pale cheek.

Mrs. Mortimer arose from her campstool with a dignity so stupendous that nothing human could keep it up.

"As long as I live," she bounced out, "I will never try to do a good action again!" The assertion sounded a little sweeping, and she stammered, between hysterical sobs: "I mean—I mean—I meant merely to give a hint for the sake of the girl. I thought you ought to know. Envious of Charity Chance! Theodosia you must walk home with me, dear. I am feeling a little upset. The other girls may stay if they have tempers fine enough and souls true enough to be of any service."

Without a protest from her indignant hostess, in consort with Theodosia, she sailed past Charity, the workhouse children and the wondering eight and disappeared through the iron gates.

The singing had ceased. There was a lull in the games.

"Go on playing, children," urged Miss Graham with a smile. She was so exasperated that she appeared calm. But the happiness of her little guests no longer gave delight. She was disturbed, humiliated and the excitement had brought on her hidden pain. She had taken part in a vulgar altercation—a scene. She detested Mrs. Mortimer for having moved her to anger. And yet was this prejudice against Charity to last to the end of time? What could the child have done to raise such a report? Spoken to the fellow in the street, perhaps, and set these Babblemouth canaille barking. Met him by accident in the wood and aroused the suspicions of Theodosia, indeed, who would have given her eyes to marry Graham. Yet a girl could not be too careful. She would say a word to Charity, tenderly, without wounding her sensibilities by telling how much Mrs. Mortimer had said. She sighed from the depths of her soul. Why was not everybody kindly and true and sweet? She shivered with mortification there in the warm sun. She neither heard the tinkle of the teacups nor gloried in the demolition of the buns. And when the workhouse children, at departure, filed past to courtesy before her chair she received each salutation as a matter of course, and was glad to get them gone. The Mortimer girls went also. She did not ask them to stay.

"Take me indoors, Charity. I will not wait for Sprake."

Charity wheeled the chair across the lawn to the French window, and together they slowly mounted the three steps. But safely upon the sofa Miss Graham still held the girl's arm.

"Sit down. I want you, child," she commanded in her abrupt way.

With a sinking heart Charity obeyed. Yet again a talk about her marriage, she thought.

In her refined tenderness the little lady hesitated, scarcely knowing how to begin. Then in a low voice she said: "Charity, as you go through life, dear, you will find thousands of things, indifferent in themselves, which nevertheless assume importance in their consequences. Since we have to live in the world we must do as the world does. Not in its follies and frivolities—I do not mean that—but in the observance of its little conventionalities. It doesn't do to do everything that has no harm in it. It is wiser to conform. There is an art of living to be learned—quite a fine art in its way. Now this Mr. Prentice, whom they tell me you have—how you tremble, child! I know there is no harm, of course—they say you have met"—

"I love him. I love him with all my heart!"

The cry, sudden and passionate, was both self accusation and excuse. The gentle confidence and affection expressed in every word Miss Graham had uttered sank into the girl's soul. The warm pressure of those nervous fingers, still resting on her arm like a caress, broke her spirit. She burst into a flood of weeping. Better never to have been born than to break the heart that had taken and cherished her. Better to be dead and in her grave. Then with the caprice of passion she dashed away her tears, shook off the restraining hand and stood up fearless and defiant.

"Yes, I love him!" she cried again.

"Charity, you are beside yourself. You let your imagination run away with you. Why you've scarcely seen the fellow. You are immodest—shameless"—

As she threw these words like missiles at the girl the little cripple rose, and, quivering with excitement, leaned forward upon her ebony stick.

"I wanted to do what was true, but there was no help for me," wailed Charity. "It seemed so easy when I said I would marry Graham. It was to make everybody happy. That was my only thought. But I did not know my own heart. How could I know?"

"Mere midsummer madness!" cried Miss Graham, striking her stick upon the floor. "A month ago you had never set eyes upon this—this rhymer. A day or so and he will be gone. Do you think he will ever bestow a thought upon you? Or upon anything when the moment of his shallow vanity has passed?"

This contempt for Prentice stung Charity into resentment. No longer pleading for pity, her spirit arose in revolt against such injustice.

"Whether he is a rhymer or a poet he loves me. He said so"—

"And you stooped to listen! You, having promised to marry, admitted this stranger to such familiarity that he dared to tell you so. No wonder they come to warn me. What they say is true. I can see it is true. You walked with the man you were to marry, and with his words still in your ears you crept down into the wood at dusk to meet this mountebank. I can believe anything now. And you went to his room. Did you go to his room?"

Miss Graham stopped, but the girl did not answer. For a moment they looked at each other. The habitual sweetness had melted out of the little cripple's eyes. Only the nervous, shrewd intelligence was left. Lifted above all tenderness and pity, she looked down from a hight of virtuous indignation. And a sense of wrong hardened the girl's pride to adamant.

"I am ashamed!"

With a deep sigh Miss Graham turned away. All her hopes were dashed to the ground. Her dignity was broken. No words could express for her a deeper degradation. She hobbled a few steps toward the door, and then, overcome by the bitterness of disappointment and a sense of the girl's ingratitude, she could control herself no longer.

"Yes, I am ashamed—ashamed that all these years could do no more than this. I took you from the first. I fed you, clothed you, taught you from my own lips. Everything that could soil your mind or cast a stain upon your soul I kept from you. Everything that was noble and sweet and good I set before your eyes. I poured it into your ears. I could not bear to let you out of my sight. When you came back from the school I watched you—your every step, every movement. I trembled lest vulgarity might have breathed upon you. I listened to every word, alert for a false note. I said, I will shelter her and provide against every ill in life, except the inevitable sorrows that nature heaps upon us. But I was a fool for my pains. An utter fool! It is in the blood. I might have known it when they told me so. But it was all so pitiful that I seized you eagerly. I would hear no word of counsel. There are poor enough, in God's name, who are well born. I might have taken a lady. I might at least have taken a child of decent folk"—

The girl moaned.

"Who was I?" she gasped.

Miss Graham felt no compunction. Her words ran on like a winter torrent, pitiless and cruel.

"You were nobody!" she cried. "A nameless child, cast away and picked up upon the quay, a workhouse brat, as you just now called them yourself, christened a grotesque name, the fanciful invention of a workhouse master. The pathos of it touched me. I must needs take you, fool that I was"—

"And everybody knows?"

"Everybody has always known but you. I kept it from you. You might have gone to your grave no wiser if"—

But the girl had already fled—through the French window, across the lawn and past the shrubbery into the wood. There, like a thing wounded to death, she crept out of sight between the larch trees and threw herself upon the ground. She wept and sobbed in a passion of misery and shame. She could not think. She did not feel. Even at the hight of her agony came a moment of intense calm, when she told herself that she did not feel. Something was wanting, some moral sense, some quality of heart. One vital spark of true emotion, and she must have loved Graham. One natural touch of tenderness, and to bring sorrow upon the woman who loved her would have been more terrible than death.

She hid her face upon the brown earth. She pressed her cheek upon the dry larch spines. She wished that she was dead.

She was nothing—a friendless waif thrown upon the world to be picked up by charity. All her life had been unreal, and this was the awakening. Why was she not left upon the quay to die? Why was she taken from the workhouse to live a dream of joy and wake into a terror of calamity? She clenched her teeth and cried that it was cruel. It was not pity at all. Miss Graham had made a plaything of her. It was like Eve in Eden, where she needs must eat and be driven out upon the earth.

She must go, the quicker the better, away from this place, where every object recalled her shame; from these Babble-mouth people, who looked down upon her with such scorn. But whither? In her whole life was only one thing real—her love for Prentice. And he loved her. He was a poet, with a heart above littleness, a sense beyond what was mean—and he loved her. He would take her at once as he had wished to do. Her heart rose in exultation. He was poor, and she loved poverty. He would be great, and she gloried in greatness.

A sudden doubt clouded the momentary gleam. When he knew her story would he change? Would he marry a workhouse foundling without a friend in the whole world?

She cast the thought from her mind. How mean even for a moment to have harbored it! With his vehement, generous love for reality he would laugh away the prejudices of the narrow-minded world. Was it her fault that she was Charity Chance? She cried in anger she would rather be as she was than as the people who came whispering malice and lies about her. She would go to him at once.

The way wound through a deep hollow, where, between banks abrupt and ragged, she was quite shut in. The solitude and wildness were in keeping with her lot. Her mind was made up. If he would take her, she was ready. In her excitement she strode on with impulsive haste.

Upon the road she met no one, but she saw the people turn to look at her as she hurried down the street. They knew her for the foundling and charity girl well enough. Upon the quay the loafers had stopped their gossip to gaze at a carriage from The George drawn up before Mrs. Dibbin's little bow-windowed house.

Her heart beat fast. This fell so aptly with what he had said that it took away her breath. She stopped, and for a moment clutched the iron railings with one hand. Then she went on again.

The door of the house was wide open, and, before she had time to knock, Alfred Prentice came running down the stairs. Upon his arm was an overcoat and in his hand a small traveling bag, which he put down in the passage to look at his watch. In great haste he almost pushed past Charity without recognition.

"Mr. Prentice," she whispered.

He threw the bag and coat into the carriage and came back to her.

"This is most delightfully opportune," he said, speaking very rapidly. "I have been called away suddenly, and there is only just time to catch the night train. An important editor wants to see me"—

"Something has happened," she gasped, "and I came to tell you."

Again he looked at the time.

"Come up stairs."

He beckoned and led the way, like a man of business with just one moment to spare. She followed, with faltering courage. His most trivial utterance had always sounded sympathetic and full of feeling, but now there was no tenderness in his tone. Even in her agitation she noticed that he was pale and excited. He glanced nervously down at the carriage in the street, as if every moment were precious to him.

"I came to tell you that everything is over." Her passion was too real, and she too frank to withhold or disguise anything. "When you spoke to me the other day I was not free. But they taxed me with meeting you, and I avowed it. I said I loved you. Nothing else was possible, after all you have said to me. It would have been as if I were ashamed of what I am most proud. Then she told me I was a pauper, a nobody, without a name to call my own. It is not possible to live at Babblecombe any longer. And I came to—to ask you what I must do?"

He paced across the room and anxiously back to the window. He was preoccupied, and she saw that he had heard her words without realizing the blow which had fallen upon her. "You must do nothing rash," he said, with grave deliberation, and paused.

Nothing rash! The most unpoetic soul on earth might utter trite wisdom such as that.

He passed his fingers through his long black hair. Then he caught sight of the look of wonder and terrified inquiry in her great frank eyes, and was himself again.

"Charity, you know how much I love you," he said, in a voice quivering with emotion. "But I should be the meanest man who ever lived if I allowed my poor passion to weigh against your true welfare. You must go back to Miss Graham. Self-restraint is the secret of all true living. Nothing can alter our love. And I will think—and write to you. That will be the best thing. I will write to you. But I must go. It is important I must be in London tomorrow."

He was tender, magnanimous, prudent and attentive to business, all in so many phrases. And it was all real, too—as images in a reflection are real. Then he hurriedly kissed her and ran to catch his train.

The driver cracked his whip, the carriage wheels rattled over the stones with which the quay was paved, and he was gone.

And was this all the help that love could offer in her time of need? In her dream he had taken her to his arms. "Come, we will marry at once," he said, and carried her away into a new and brilliant future beyond reach of the past. She stood there, as motionless as Niobe in the midst of her dead hopes. Hidden and unsuspected forces were shaking the garden of ideals. The green island of inexperience was crumbling under her feet. For the earth had opened and Charity Chance was on the brink of an abyss.

At last she aroused herself to return home. She did not notice the faded, little yellow-haired woman, who asked her whether Mr. Prentice lived there, as she was passing out of the door.

(To be continued.)

Money, position, influence, these are as nothing compared with brains, energy and perseverance.—F. A. Atkins.

Pleasure and Profit in Vacation Reading.

Experiences and Suggestions.

Some time ago we addressed inquiries to a number of thoughtful people as follows: 1. What have you been reading this summer? 2. What have you found helpful and stimulating enough to justify calling to it the attention of your friends? 3. What, if any, criticism have you to offer on any recently published books? We present herewith a group of interesting and characteristic replies.

PHILOSOPHY, HISTORY, ROMANCE.

1. The Philosophy of Thomas Hill Green, by W. H. Fairbrother, lecturer on philosophy at Lincoln College, Oxford—a fascinating and suggestive outline of the teaching of one of the most thoroughgoing idealists, who is also a scientist in method and a logician. His fundamental questions are, "What are the facts of my own consciousness?" and "What is the simplest explanation of the origin of these facts?"

The answers to these questions as he unfolds them give us: (a) the self-conscious person, a spiritual being, whose simplest act of perception proves that he himself, "so far from being an animal altogether, is not an animal at all, or even in part"; (b) the world, a spiritual cosmos, "a single, all-inclusive system of relations"; (c) God, whose ideas are manifested in the world, and his nature in his children, without whom we cannot explain man as we find him. The aim of morals is to discover and attain the "abiding satisfaction of an abiding self." Morality arises when a man "conceives himself as, in his very nature, a part of some larger whole," and acts upon that conception. Only in social life is man himself. Politics is a moral science.

Some of the questions discussed in Fairbrother's volume are approached from another standpoint by Professor Jones of Glasgow in Browning as a Philosophical and Religious Teacher, a delightful book, which might well be read in connection with the other.

2. The English Parliament, by Dr. Rudolph Gneist of the University of Berlin. A painstaking and solid discussion of the progress of representative government in England through a thousand years. It might almost be termed a study in the geology of politics. Buried centuries are opened to disclose the earlier forms of civil life and the storms which have swept them; the institutions which have outlived the vicissitudes of the ages are presented as developed from a rich and vital past.

3. Of the lighter reading of the summer a deep impression has been made upon my mind by Marion Crawford's Greifenstein, which I regard as one of the strongest and most wholesome of modern works of fiction. It is realism worthy of the name, most accurate and instructive in portrayal of certain phases of German life, in which framework is presented a noble and beautiful ideal—a glorious womanhood, strong enough and loving enough to rescue the lives of men nearest to her from a dark and apparently resistless destiny.

Beloit, Wis. EDWARD D. EATON.

A STRONG INFUSION OF POLITICS.

First of all, my summer reading is of the same character as that of any other season, only I do less of it. Of course the daily paper, six religious papers, four reviews and five magazines are regular diet. This year I have read Cardinal Manning's life for biography, run rapidly through ex-President White's volumes on The Warfare of Science with Theology, Joseph Zalmonah for fiction, and Roosevelt's Winning of the West, for all three, history, biography and fiction, have caused the hours to fly.

The reading which has taxed my strength, but which I dare not let slip, is that upon the question of the hour, i.e., finance. The book which has been of the most use to me on this subject is Horace White's Money and Banking; that is, it has been the most simple, and therefore the most helpful, in making plain an intricate subject. For fundamental facts and arguments the histories of the nations and the facts stated in Mr. John Fiske's books, The Critical Period in American History and The Beginnings of New England, are the sheet anchors that hold a man steady in such a storm as we are now having.

I think one of the most stimulating books I have read this summer is Joseph Zalmonah. The most unsatisfactory is The Life of Cardinal Manning. For a man to be constantly straining to hold his hero upright while all the time hitting him first on the head and then over his heart, as Mr. Purcell does, is worse than learning to ride a bicycle between the tracks of a Boston suburban railroad. In the reading of Mr. Roosevelt's Winning of the West I have had all the rich experiences that come from choice biography, history and fiction combined. I could not but think if our people would read such books as this, and Parkman's and Fiske's, the present political muddle would never have happened.

S. Framingham, Mass. W. G. PUDDEFOOT.

LITERARY BROWSINGS.

Bacon acknowledged the luxury as well as the labor of reading, when he declared, "Some books are to be tasted, others swallowed, and some few chewed and digested." "Tasting books" is a legitimate and most delightful vacation recreation, and, properly indulged, contributes generously to the dual mission of all reading, enabling one to know some things, and, what is equally important, to know where some things are. When one can roam at will over his literary preserves, seeking, if he desire, green fields and pastures new, or revisiting old haunts fragrant with the sweet spices of remembered inspirations; when the "imperious hauteur" of next Sunday's sermon ceases for a little its otherwise "ceaseless watching night and day," and one can enter a literary mine, untrammeled by the urgent necessity of working its homiletic veins; when one can, with his books, be righteous, and at the same time dilettante or diligent, then, indeed, does he enjoy royal vacation, and, as he tastes his tid-bits, feels something of the gratitude and luxury of the Psalmist, as, in the security of unswerving trust, he sat at the table prepared for him in presence of the enemy.

The money question attracts our attention, and four small books promise a working knowledge of it: Money and the Mechanism of Exchange by Jevons, Bimetallism by Walker, An Honest Dollar by Andrews, and Banks and Banking by White. We taste them all, and after our feast arrive at two conclusions: first, that the money question is a world, and not simply a national, question; and, secondly, that impetuous and precipitate solutions of it are so certain to embarrass, rather than to enable, that, pending international action, it were better for us by far "to bear the ills we have, than fly to others that we know not of."

The biography of Dr. A. J. Gordon, by his son, is indeed a sweet morsel, read in connection with another biography which has made for itself a place in our heart. Like the life of Charles Kingsley by his wife, it is specially inspiring. Browning's poetry grows upon the patient student. Paracelsus and The Ring and the Book, especially if one is somewhat familiar with him, have a delicious flavor when tasted in the solitude of the mountain or by the rock-ribbed shore of the ever restless sea. Other books, not new, have relish. Allen's Continuity of Christian Thought always holds its own against new comers. Longfellow's Outre-Mer is dainty as ever this summer, while Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome have in these stirring campaign days a table sauce quality which if "shaken before taken" adds to the savor of the meal.

Ian Maclaren's Mind of the Master opens one's eyes wide. Barry's Teacher's Prayer-Book explains how much of the service of the Church of England belongs to all Christians, since it is so largely based upon and copied from the old Latin service books, while for any ministers who feel the need of direction or suggestion in personal private worship The Priest's Prayer-Book will prove a judicious assistance. The best manual of sociology is by Professor Giddings, which really vouchsafes definite information concerning what has hitherto been rather a nebulous, if not occult, subject. If confession is good for the soul let it be remarked that among the summer stores were placed five volumes of Alexandre Dumas's novels, that with a keen appetite The Three Guardsmen was attacked, but that the palate declined gratification and actually revolted at page 102. The volumes are for sale cheap. The literary indisposition was cured by dear old Victor Hugo's Ninety-three, By Order of the King, and The Hunchback of Notre Dame.

We entered upon our vacation weary and craving rest; we emerge from it invigorated and renewed, ladened with the spoils of our literary conquests and quoting approvingly the new beatitude: "Blessed is the man who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness." N. BOYNTON.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION BY THE SEA.

During the vacating part of our vacation—that part when we "cleared out" ourselves from the ruts, routine and daily grind of the yearly work and place of work—we went to Monhegan Island, fourteen miles off the coast of Maine. This is a portion of rocks surrounded by water one and five-eighths miles in one direction and eleven-sixteenths in the other. On this rugged portion of God's earth are to be found a little soil, a few small trees, a few sheep and cows, no horse or wagon, not a worked road, no steam or electricity, about thirty fishermen's houses and dwellings and thirty-five voters, and, lastly, about seventy-five "recreators," as we are called.

There under the balsam or spruce trees, or lying on the trailing fern, or perched in the angle of the rocky cliffs, where Portugal is the first land to reach, is a place to read if one wants to. We thought a heap of magazines, from Munsey up, with a few novels and Whence and Whither of Man, by Prof. J. M. Tyler, and Drummond's Natural Law, etc., would be all that the upper and lower parts of our brains needed. And if anybody is afraid that he or she is going to believe in evolution or Darwinism they had better not open either of these books, much less read them. But if they want old-fashioned mother and father at the family altar Puritan religion let them read Professor Tyler's chapters on Man and The Teachings of the Bible.

This is their safe keynote. "Religion is the interpenetration and permeation of my personality by that of God, and prayer is the communion by which this permeation becomes possible. And faith is the vision of these possibilities, the being persuaded by them, and the resolute purpose to attain them. And faith in Christ is confiding communion with him and obedience to his commands, that his divine life may flow over into me and dominate mine. And common sense, and the more refined common sense which we call science, can show me no other means to the attainment of that godliness which is the only true conformity to environment."

Monhegan. E. HITCHCOCK.

FINANCIAL HISTORY AND IAN MACLAREN.

The ideal of summer reading, I suppose, is the latest novel, and not even a clergyman is expected to trouble his brain with anything very profound or serious at such a time. One's mind, like the soil, is doubtless all the better for lying fallow now and then, and my habit, for the most part, has been, while rusticating, to find my sermons in stones and my books in the running brooks. This summer, however, has been an exception.

I have read the brooks as usual, and taken in many a speckled beauty whose play with the hook was more exciting to me than any story-teller's plot. But I have found great pleasure and profit also in a number of books, not all of them exactly "recent," as the publishers count time, though they were fresh to me, and possibly a brief note of them may be of interest to others.

The point of departure with me was primarily the money problem, now so vital and pressing. It seemed to me a good time to look back into our financial history, and to find, if possible, a solid basis for my political convictions. I began, therefore, with the lives of Hamilton and Gallatin in the American Statesmen series, reading also in connection with these Professor Hadley's recent book on Economics, Goldwin Smith's Political History of the United States and Professor Hart's excellent book on The Formation of the Union. These books have not only given me a much clearer view of our early political history than I ever had, they have helped me to connect the present with the past, and to look upon the silver question as only one phase of a problem with which the Government has been grappling from its foundation. The more familiar we are with the early history the more successfully we shall meet the present crisis. Goldwin Smith gives us an Englishman's view of men and measures, at once fresh and stimulating. It is a book that ranks with Bryce's American Commonwealth and one that every American ought to read.

My lighter reading has included The Cavaliers and The Days of Auld Lang-Syne, and for sermons I have had The Mind of the Master together with that other little volume, The Upper Room, which seems to me to be about as delicate and happy a piece of work as Ian Maclaren has done. I have read, and would advise every one else to read, Mr. Greene's book on The Rule of the Turk. It is such stories as this that will finally move Christian Europe and America to drive the assassin from his throne.

For a few days during my vacation I found myself in a farmhouse with only a farmer's library at my disposal. But he was a good Congregational deacon, and among his books I found volumes on Africa that opened up to me the whole missionary history of the Dark Continent from the days of Livingstone until now. Nothing in all my summer reading has touched me more or done more to stir my soul than reading once more the story of Livingstone's career from the time he first entered Africa till he was found dead upon his knees. It is by such heroic souls that not only Africa, but America and Asia and the world will be redeemed for Christ. REV. F. W. BALDWIN.

South Orange, N. J.

STUDIES IN LOCAL HISTORY.

Summer reading, like summer rest, must follow the whim of the hour to accomplish its purpose. To one tied up to method, system, regularity of hours and work, where reading is professional and compulsory in order to keep the freshest fund of information on tap, summer reading must be whimsical in order to be useful. Local history has been one whim of the summer for me.

Three Connecticut towns have especially interested me during my vacation. Fairfield, Ct., is fortunate in having for its historian Rev. Frank S. Child, the Congregational pastor of the village. The story of Danbury is told by James Montgomery Bailey, the well-known editor of the Danbury News. Interesting bits of history concerning Lakeville have been gathered by an under-graduate of Hotchkiss School. What more interesting than old Fairfield with its savor of colonial times and conditions! Puritans and Pilgrims join in its early settlement and bring the exact and rigorous positiveness of the one and the large and generous charity of the other into the life and blood of the community. Romance mingles with the history of this beautiful town, for the hid treasure of Captain Kidd was supposed to be buried in the sands of the sound or in this neighborhood. As time went on, the large place that Fairfield held in the development of patriotism and in every response to the cause of the patriots stirs the blood of every true American. Entertained, as I was, in the "old Colonial House on Mill Plain," which dates back beyond the Revolution, the very surroundings and atmosphere of the place impressed the lessons of this thrilling history.

At Lakeville also one may gather most interesting colonial and revolutionary facts and legends. The Dutch were the first settlers, coming in 1720, and have given character and flavor to the community. Ethan Allen was born near here. The famous Montgomery House, owned by Robert Livingstone, the "last lord of the manor," and occupied by his sister, the wife of General Montgomery, is an interesting ruin on a neighboring hillside. The ruined castles of Europe greatly impress the facts of history upon the favored few who visit them. The decaying farmhouses and manorhouses and the interesting points in New England are equally valuable in the stirring history of local communities.

In the history of Danbury one has an excellent opportunity to study practical sociology. The great lockout in the hat factories, continuing from October, 1893, well into February, 1894, presents many interesting phases to every student of the labor question. Four thousand hatters were discharged and twenty factories closed. It was the struggle of organized capital against organized labor, and was a great battle. To study the various phases of the problem on the ground is of especial interest. Organized capital suffered severely in custom and prestige. Many years will pass before the Danbury hat interest is restored to its former prosperity and magnitude. Organized labor suffered the greatest defeat, however, and hatters' unions were almost annihilated.

Summer reading of local history has been interesting and profitable. I heartily recommend it to others. The work of the student at Hotchkiss School suggests a line of work for the students in all our schools and colleges. Many points of interest gather about each locality where colleges are planted.

New York. C. J. RYDER.

POLITICS, PATRIOTISM, PREACHING AND PORTRAITURE.

"What did I read in vacation?" Politics, patriotism, preaching and portraiture. In other words, about 500 pages of newspapers that were all politics, reading with fullness and care the platforms of all the parties, plank by plank, and the speeches and papers of Messrs. McKinley, Bryan, Cochran, Williams, Reed, Harrison and others whose position or force gave weight to their words, that I might become thoroughly conversant with the issues of the presidential campaign during the vacation, and be relieved of the necessity of such study during the busier days of the fall.

Not for a long time having taken a deep, and never before a systematic, plunge into the writings of Henry Ward Beecher, I read 2,500 of his pages on three subjects. First, Patriotic Addresses, 1850–1885, and found it a most useful accompaniment to the course on current politics, as it rehearses our history, expounds our principles, states our issues and forecasts our future. Especially powerful, courageous and patriotic were the series of speeches in England during our Civil War, including the farewell breakfast addresses, and they anticipate the things that are now being said on both sides of the Atlantic concerning Anglo-American arbitration and alliance.

Next came the Yale Lectures on Preaching. No greater preacher ever stood in an American pulpit than he and no other man has been better able than he to tell other men how to preach. A minister's vacation should be used to readjust his perspective and to lighten his ideals, and one method of doing this is to sit down with a master preacher and let him talk his own experiences and views. These lectures are great on the manward side of their sympathies, precisely that side which a man of books needs to incessantly cultivate. The divine should be a man, human, not angelic. This was followed by The Life of Jesus the Christ, which has value as a portraiture drawn with vivid imagination and feeling. This portraiture was studied just before return to the pulpit whose mission it is to make Christ vivid and effective as to the past man, the present man and the coming man of all time. This reading was all done in the open air amidst flowers, trees, rocks, under the infinite Father's bending sky and by the side of his sounding sea. Having inadvertently begun these lines with an alliteration, I will end them with another of set purpose and say that this course has been for me provender, profit, preparation and power.

Newburyport, Mass. C. P. MILLS.

SOCIAL READING.

What have I been reading this summer? First, a little volume entitled The Truth about Money—an admirable and condensed statement or set of statements that has been at once stimulating, helpful and profitable. Before reading this the great question of the hour seemed to me as much a mystery as marriage to the apostle Paul. The little book changed all that and has been for a time a very constant companion. I am glad, as I know others are, to acknowledge my indebtedness to it, nor will its value cease when this campaign is over.

With current literature I fear I am not very familiar. Long ago my husband and I decided that in our hours of recreation we would renew our acquaintance with the older and best-known authors. We began with Scott's Antiquary. Since then we have made our bow once more to Thackeray, George Eliot, Jane Austin, Charlotte Bronté, Mrs. Gaskill and many others. Last week we reread Tom Brown's School Days, and I need not say it yielded its perennial charm.

We are fond of biography and history, and within a few days we have read for the first time Froude's Life of Disraeli, and for the second time Dean Stanley's Life of Dr. Arnold, also a volume of Dean Stanley's Letters. This volume contains his exquisite poem, written on the third anniversary of Lady Stanley's death, which alone would be enough to make the book worth owning. Of the poets, I may say here, we have them ever with us, and we make it a rule to read, at least, one good poem every day. Occasionally, too, we gather a few friends about us and have what we are pleased to call a poets' morning. On the centenary of Burns we read and talked of this beloved singer; not long before we had a Wordsworth morning. It happened that we had with us that good friend of children, who prepared some years ago Wordsworth for the Young, and her enthusiasm for her favorite poet was easily caught as we read the immortal ode, the lines near Tintern Abbey, a number of the sonnets and a few of the shorter poems.

Amid some lovely scenes of nature on a summer day surely this experience may be repeated with ever increasing pleasure and profit. All seasons do not bring so much in a single book as last summer brought to us all in The Bonnie Brier Bush. We still keep this delicious exponent of a communal life among the Scottish heather beside us and read from it to a group of eager listeners whenever opportunity offers. Last Monday morning such a group, numbering over a hundred, gathered about a well-known literary woman, whose versatile genius adds unspeakable charm even to Mr. Maclaren's wit and humor, and she held us for two hours enchanted. After the reading we found our library and reading-room (which is one of the chief attractions of our summering place) enriched by a very considerable sum. Sometimes we take our books with us on our sailing parties, our walks in the woods or on the mountains; this frequently ends in some interesting discussion. Such was ours a few days ago when the suggestion of Rochester's interview with Jane Eyre, after the scene in the church, led us to speak of how different authors have handled that great theme—the struggle between inclination and duty—George Eliot's treatment, for instance, in The Mill on the Floss and elsewhere. An illustration may be found, too, in a recent novel by Gilbert Parker, entitled How Valmond Came to Pontiac, a story which one can most heartily commend. Of authors who have debased their art by a realism we do not find real we sometimes speak. That very afternoon to which I allude we talked of that one particularly who, in a midsummer magazine, gives us such a picture of a much-loved poet that we long to ask him to continue in this charming, idylic and uplifting strain and return no more to the flesh and the devil, with whom, after all, he is not so well acquainted as he seems to suppose. When one considers the power there is in a great novel, or even in a well-written short story, one may be indulged in believing that the author who masters both and who does it to the uplifting and not to the debasing of his fellowmen deserves, even as he is sure to receive, the love, the homage and the gratitude of his day and generation.

North East Harbor, Me. MARY M. ADAMS.

ONE STUDY, MANY EXPERIMENTS.

For the man whose winter work is to read, teach or make books summer reading should be light—novels or travel, which will give his mind as much of change from his usual routine as possible. Indeed Dr. Newman Smyth, that diligent worker, says it is a crime for a teacher or student to take a book on his vacation.

But for a woman who has home, children, society and charity to occupy her winter months, with little time for reading, why should not the leisure of the summer be partly given to reading the best that has been written? Accordingly each summer, besides a few lighter books, the writer takes one author to be carefully studied, absorbed and wrought into her life by intimate acquaintance as no fragmentary winter reading can do. Last summer it was Tennyson's poems, studied with Dr. Van Dyke's smaller book and Stopford Brooke's rich and exhaustive treatise. This summer the stimulus was given by a busy lawyer friend. This man for two years or more has spent most of his spare moments, his leisure odds and ends, in reading Shakespeare, carrying always one of the small volume plays in his pocket. He reads them one after the other, a favorite three or four times perhaps before proceeding to the next. "I really enjoy him far more than any other writer now," he said to the writer.

So she, too, took Shakespeare away in her summer trunk and great has been her enjoyment. In spite of the advice given her just before starting by a well known Yale professor of English literature, "Don't read so many people about Shakespeare, read him himself," she brought also that delightful book of Prof. Richard G. Moulton's of Chicago University, Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist. In the third edition of this book nine plays are carefully studied as to dramatic plot and character and these have been the principal plays taken up by the writer this summer. To read the source of the play as given in Rolfe's edition, then the play itself, then the study in Moulton, to mark passages for committing to memory, to make character studies of her own, this is the writer's favorite method of reading. It is indeed a pleasure to feel that some one definite acquisition to one's literary life has been carried away from the summer's leisure time.

Besides Shakespeare a few other books have been read. Dr. Horton's charming The Art of Living Together, Singrovitch's Fire and Sword, a novel so highly and extravagantly praised as to induce the writer to read it, Sainte-Beuve's essays, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps's A Singular Life, and at sunset time Wordsworth, Matthew Arnold or Keats. In A Singular Life have all The Congregationalist's readers noticed the closely worked out parallel to the life of Christ? The hero's name is Emmanuel. He is the son of a carpenter, his mother's name is Mary and he was born in Bethlehem. The time of his preparation is spent in Galilee (Hall), his life work lasts only three years among the poor and outcast. He is rejected by the orthodox, is a friend of fishermen, redeems a Magdalene (Lena), saves the Peter of the story, the swearing captain whose back-sliding is checked by a look. He is finally martyrized as Christ was, to be appreciated and reverenced by the orthodox when all too late. DELIA LYMAN PORTER.

East Gloucester, Mass.

MAKING ACQUAINTANCE WITH RECENT FICTION.

During the present summer I have done little solid reading. Having little opportunity during the year to read fiction I have tried to become familiar with the works of a few great authors whom I have hitherto known almost solely by name. I have enjoyed the breezy dialogue of one or two of Anthony Hope's books, have dipped a little into Stanley J. Weyman and have tasted Stephen Crane. I have read Kipling's The Light That Failed, and enjoyed the power of the story while feeling distinctly repelled by its brutality. Grant Allen's In All Shades I read, not as a novel, but as a study of the race problem and of the author's not overaccurate estimate of the civilizing power of religion. Robert Louis Stevenson I enjoyed immensely, roaming over Treasure Island and listening to the grewsome song,

> Fifteen men on the dead man's chest,
> Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum, as I lay in the shade of the pines and rejoiced that paper-covered books are lighter to hold than bound volumes of theology. Jonathan Edwards seems unwontedly heavy to me since my return.

But I have read one or two new books worth naming. John Skinner's new work on Ezekiel in the Expositor's Bible Series is one of them. Professor Dennison's Christ's Idea of the Supernatural is another, but it is needlessly hard reading. The author's thought would be more easily mastered if his sentences were less involved. Yet I am confident that his thought is a good one, that the line we draw between the natural and the supernatural does not rest on an eternal principle. I have also read, for enjoyment, not for correction, the proofs of Dr. Ezra Hoyt Byington's forthcoming book on The Puritan in England and New England. It is a carefully written book, the fruit of much study, and suited to the needs of the student who wishes a concise history of the rise and growth of the Puritan movement written in a sympathetic and truthful spirit.

I have read one or two controversial works on theological subjects, good examples of special pleading, put forth by good men who have not yet learned that it is no virtue to speak wickedly for God and talk deceitfully for him. I do not name them because, though they are new books, they will never be widely read, and it would be unkind to dispel in any degree the oblivion to which a merciful Providence will consign them. Such books are an anachronism. There was a time when they would have become noted. It is of the Lord's mercy that they were not published fifty years ago.

I have read a bit of poetry now and then; Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome seem new to me now. I had several other things laid aside to read, but vacations seem shorter than they used to be and I did not succeed.

Shawmut Church, Boston. W. E. BARTON.

CURRENT THOUGHT.

AT HOME.

The editor of The Open Court, who is a monist, says: "It is fashionable at the present day to rail at theology to the detriment of religion, and to scoff at the pretensions of orthodoxy in favor of universal tolerance. But what is theology but religion in a scientific conception; and what is orthodoxy but the confidence of being in possession of the truth? The abolition of theology would degrade religion to mere sentimentality, and a contempt of the ideal of orthodoxy presupposes that truth and error are of equal value." Exactly, and when a non-Christian monist is so sensible as to see it, let Christian theists be equally wise.

Newspaperdom does not believe that Sunday editions of daily newspapers pay. "While an extra amount of advertising is usually obtained for it, this advantage is lost by the extra expense of its features and the heavy outlay for manufacture. . . . Editors who now find their work a 'daily' grind would be able to do better work and more work if they could have one day in seven for rest. Dropping all moral considerations, we firmly believe that business considerations alone would justify the abandoning of this 'American idea.' It is overdone. It is not profitable."

ABROAD.

Possibly criticism like the following from the Japan Weekly Mail may influence the trustees of the Doshisha. After carefully calculating the amount invested by the American Board and its friends in the Doshisha, and frankly conceding that the creation and maintenance of the Doshisha has been providential, it proceeds to point out that "few outsiders have any conception of the dimensions of the difficulty that the educational problem presented to Japanese statesmen at the opening of the Meija era. . . . Into this breach the missionaries stepped, founding institutions like the Doshisha and offering to the youth of Japan a new canon of ethics. . . . It is scarcely possible to overestimate the timeliness and value of the assistance thus rendered. . . . It seems inexpressibly sad that a splendid work such as the American Board mission has done for Japan should end, not in a chorus of lasting gratitude, but in misunderstandings and recriminations."

The Christian Patriot, Madras, in an elaborate editorial discussing the approaching course of lectures to be given in that city by Rev. Dr. John H. Barrows of Chicago, assures him of a hearty welcome from all, and expresses the opinion and hope that "he will combine study of the points of contact between Christianity and the systems of India—similarities and differences equally—with the zeal of a true evangelist." It hopes that he will arrive in India long enough before the date set for his lectures to devote a month or two to the study of Hinduism as it is, as the Patriot is confident that one who depends only on study of books always on landing in India finds Hinduism very different from what he anticipated.

The Home

THE LAND OF HAVILAH.

BY AMY S. BRIDGMAN.

Afar, far off when the world was young,
And the sun like a bridegroom stood,
There was gold in the land of Havilah,
And the gold of that land was good.*

There was bdellium, too, and onyx stone,
And I doubt not jewels rare,
But no man knows who the people were,
Or who was monarch there.

They are vanished long, and yet today,
As I walk through field and wood,
I say to myself, "It is Havilah,
The land where the gold is good!"

Gold over my head and under my feet,
As the bright leaves thickly fall,
And gold flung down in lavish store
Where the ivy climbs the wall.

Etruscan fronds of the dying fern
Still glow in the tarnished sedge,
And the pale witch-bloom of the hazel bush
Gleams from the frosted hedge.

From the whitened husk the ripe corn shows
Like rows of red-gold beads,
And the burnished spheres of the pumpkin vine
Shine bravely through the weeds.

And far, far off against the sky,
Like a great blue tent above,
I see the monarch of the land
And his courtiers slowly move.

Against the blue horizon wall
They make a regal show;
October and his pageantry—
A long and brilliant row

Of oaks, in royal purple dressed,
And maples, all in red,
And yellow birch and beech and elm;
With mist wreaths on his head

He marches, and they follow on
Through country, field and lane,
And all the little sighing winds,
They follow in the train.

They will vanish soon but yet today,
As I walk through field and wood
I say, "It is surely Havilah,
The land where the gold is good!"

*Gen. 2: 11, 12.

Let no one fail to read the remarkable account in another column of the unique experiment by Mr. George in training boys and girls for citizenship. What is there to hinder the organization of similar republics elsewhere? There are scores of boys in every community, even from respectable families, who the coming winter will surely drift into vicious habits unless some healthful outlet is provided for their restless spirits. A republic of the character herein described is in successful operation in Chicago, and its main features seem peculiarly adapted to foster a spirit of patriotism and national pride in young people. We shall publish soon a sketch of the Children of the Revolution, by Margaret Sidney, another organization having a similar purpose.

We hear laments, every now and then, that our modern life is becoming too complex, that too many interests claim the attention of men in general and women in particular, and sighs fill the air for "the good old quiet days of our grandmothers." Is this regret justifiable? Is not life richer and more satisfying when we touch the outside world at a multitude of points? Who that has felt the pleasurable excitement of philanthropic and missionary effort, which brings one into communication with all lands and peoples, would willingly narrow her work and thought to a single community or a single line of activity? The more doors we open into the treasure house of knowledge and the more we seek to share what we find therein with others, the happier we shall be. We admit, however, the danger of making our lives complex in ways that yield no joy. Here is the difficulty, to know how to simplify in certain directions in order to gain time to expand in others. What can we give up in dress or entertainment this winter for the sake of intellectual stimulus at the club, or the gain of new ideas at the mothers' meeting, or the transcendent privilege of active service for Christ in church, Sunday school or missionary organization? We shall be glad to print replies to any of these questions.

In our zeal to provide suitable amusements for young people let us not overlook those who have reached the opposite extreme of life and, by reason of failing powers, are in positive, though it be only occasional, need of real recreation. Until one has lived in a household with elderly persons one has no conception of how many lonely hours they spend, usually in most uncomplaining fashion. Impaired eyesight limits the amount of reading they might otherwise enjoy, and rheumatic limbs or similar infirmities hinder active exercise. Those living in cities or large towns may suffer but slightly from this sense of isolation and monotony, but it is sometimes an actual burden to those who are remote from centers of interest and in households where there are no young people. A genuine service might be rendered to such by the boys and girls, not by making a perfunctory call now and then, but by a group of them going together to spend an evening with the old folks, and taking some music or simple games for the entertainment of all. The long evenings are approaching and here is a beautiful field of service for King's Daughters and Christian Endeavorers. One such visit would enliven the entire winter and give the aged ones something pleasant to talk about and think over for weeks afterward. They always enjoy, with extremely few exceptions, the sight of young faces.

THE DECLINE OF SENTIMENT.

BY MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

It must be admitted that sentiment is on the decline. In looking over some old books the other day I came upon one of those albums which once formed part of the outfit of every young lady, a sacredly personal belonging, in which her friends wrote verses tenderly affectionate or playfully facetious, signing their names not, as now, in stately and decorous fullness, "Elizabeth," "Katharine," or "Lenora," but in the familiar undress of the home and pet name, "Maggie," "Nellie," "Kate," "Minnie" and such pretty diminutives being thick strewn on the pages. The book carried me back to my youth and brought vividly to my memory the girls whom I knew in the days when sentiment was still somewhat in fashion.

I say somewhat, for in the fifties it was already going out. Girls did not then faint at a spider or a mouse, or turn pale on slight occasion, or dissolve in tears without some excellent reason. They were a sensible, practical set and with the coming of the war there arrived abundant need and opportunities on every hand for the exercise of their quickness and the play of their finest powers. The girls of my day were the young women in wartime, and they kept up the courage of their brothers, husbands and friends, and worked nobly at home and in the Sanitary and Christian Commissions while the men were at the front; nor, in all fairness must it be said, were the women of the South a whit behind them in the way of nobly bearing hardship and heroically making sacrifices.

The war undoubtedly gave a rough and severe experience to our people, which had much to do with lifting us into a region too ethereal and too pure for that lower emotion which expresses itself superficially in sentimental phrase and verse. After this, when the long era of peace came with blessing and prosperity, we had enough to do and to think of, and enough to hope and to achieve, to keep us from again growing effusive or week and gushing.

The discipline of the more strenuous and thorough education for girls, made practicable by the excellence of colleges for women, has so strengthened our girls intellectually and so widened their outlook that there is almost the hint of danger in another direction. We find it in our hearts sometimes, looking at the bright, energetic, self-reliant, resourceful young women who surround us, to wish that they were just a trifle more impressionable, a trifle less rectangular, than they are. The college girl of this special era, plus a very little of the sentimental element, would be a fascinating and delightful creature. As it is, she sometimes seems to have attained maturity too soon. We could wish her more youth and more spontaneity and impulsiveness than she possesses. But we cannot have the graces and dignities of every age compressed into one, and our own century has no need to be ashamed of its girls.

I am always glad when out of a friend's letter falls a little slip cut from a newspaper on which are verses which have touched or pleased her, or when I find in a book the faded petals of a rose or a withered leaf of geranium, or when a dear traveler in other lands sends me a sprig of ivy from some old cathedral or a pressed flower from some historic grave. These graceful acts of sentiment are, as it were, perfumed and beautiful, and bring to one's feeling "the light that never was on land nor sea."

Our greater interest in athletics and our love of outdoor life and sport, making women wholesome and hearty and fitting them for comradeship with men in their recreations, have contributed not a little to the decline of sentiment. Golf and wheeling, and tennis and riding and rowing are favorable to healthful growth and conduce to the elasticity of spirits which a sound mind in a sound body insures. Do not let us fear, however, that true and sincere and honest feeling is going to be endangered by the prevalent enjoyment of outdoor life. Feeling is one thing, sentiment another and, in its accepted and understood meaning, not a synonym for the first. To feel strongly and keenly, to love without stint, to die if need be for one's friend, and still better to live up to high ideals and to serve one's own to the uttermost is as much the province of noble souls now as at any former time. The larger scope for the trained faculty, the broader spheres of thought and of action, the wider range for wholesome outdoor exercise, have done no harm to the best and tenderest feeling of the best and dearest women. That they have put out of vogue the sentiment which is feeling's affectation is a matter for congratulation.

A BOYS AND GIRLS' REPUBLIC.

A SOLUTION OF THE SLUM PROBLEM.

BY E. LAWRENCE HUNT.

The George Junior Republic is a government of the children, by the children, for the children. Some have asked whether in the name there is any reference to George Washington. The question suggests this answer—that if "George Washington made a republic out of chaos," Mr. W. R. George has made a republic out of the chaotic mass of the incorrigible waifs of the city slums. This new sensible institution is the result of seven or eight years of earnest work and careful study to help the helpless without harming them. He began by taking a dozen with him from New York city to his father's farm for a two weeks' vacation. Next year he took 100 for the two months of July and August on a rented farm. Thus the work grew. Meantime he saw, from careful study of the results, that while this work, like all other "fresh air" and other charitable work, does much good it also does much harm. It makes these "dependent" ones still more dependent on society. It destroys the divinely implanted impulse to self respect and self-support.

He tried several plans to minimize the evil effects. One day there came like a flash from heaven the thought, why not have a republic? All these years I have been a czar. I have made the laws and hence had great difficulty in enforcing them. I have not yet fully grasped what it means to be an American citizen. I will intrust them with the government and thus teach them good citizenship.

Last year the experiment was tried. The little republic is situated on a farm of forty-eight acres at Freeville, N. Y., near Ithaca. It is on a hill commanding a wide view of a beautiful, rolling, fertile country. About 160 boys and forty girls, from twelve to seventeen years of age, were the citizens this year. The majority of them were among the worst boys from New York city, children from the pauper and criminal class. A number had been with Mr. George several years; a dozen were there through the winter and their lives have been remarkably changed. These soon became leaders, conducted the Junior Christian Endeavor, and acted as leaven generally in this miniature United States.

It is possible to give here merely a passing reference to its more prominent features. The first thing a citizen must do is to earn his living. So they have classes for the boys in farming, gardening and carpentry; for the girls in cooking, sewing and millinery. The hours of work are from 8.30 till 12. They all begin at fifty cents a day. By a good record one may soon be a skilled laborer and earn ninety cents a day. Each citizen of the free country is at liberty to work or not. He must pay for his meals and lodging at forty cents a day. Thus a common laborer lives from hand to mouth; a skilled workman can put by a good sum in the bank. If one plays or loafs all day he has nothing, and instead of sitting at the flower-decked table with a good supply of food he must stand at the pauper table and get only bread and soup. This meal is paid for out of the public taxes—three cents. At first there were many paupers, but the derision, "Youse paupers," soon sent them out to work, though there were a few chronic paupers who cared not for the jeers of their fellow-citizens.

Contracts for the hotels and restaurants were sold at auction once in two weeks. The proprietors of the Waldorf, the Elmira, etc., collected the price of meals and lodging. All this teaches business methods. Naturally many humorous incidents occur. The proprietor of the girls' hotel, a little Irish lass of thirteen years, was piqued because she was not invited to a party given by a dozen of the best girls to a few of the best boys. She startled the ice cream eaters by rushing in, only for a moment, to say in tones the reader must imagine: "Youse 'll pay fifteen cents fer yer beds tonight." However, the laws of the republic decided against such abuse of power.

They have a house of representatives and a senate. Elections to the former occur once a week. A senator must be at least fifteen years old and holds office for two weeks. Campaign speeches and polling booths for secret ballots are conducted by themselves. The Constitution of the United States is the basis of their law. They pass such bills as the needs of their country call for. An instructor is with them to prompt. At one session she said: "The proper form is to say, 'The question is now open for discussion.'" Whereupon Mr. Speaker promptly and earnestly said: "The question is now open for discussion. Does any o' you'se want ter discuss?" No laughter but earnest speeches at once followed. Yet unconsciously they deal in their own way with questions that are being discussed in the greater republic. For example, the tariff question came up. It arose in this way. Fruit and candies that were sent in for the children were never given to them for nothing. They were put up at public auction and an enterprising lad would buy these and retail them. In some cases a number joined together in business firms. Now a few wealthy citizens who purchased the privilege, according to a special bill, of going outside the farm had similar things given to them by the farmers, and these set up rival stores and undersold those who bought from the government. There was a hue and cry that this was ruinous to the citizens, and it was discussed for some days by congress. One advocated a duty of thirty per cent. Another interesting question that called forth fiery speeches was woman's suffrage. They went into all these things in dead earnest. It was no play work.

One day a boy arose in the house and, to the surprise of the instructors, said: "Mr. Speaker, I introduce a bill to abolish pauperism. If a feller is able to work and won't, we'se not goin' ter work an' pay taxes to support him. He kin starve." The bill passed both houses, was signed by the president and posted as a law of the republic. The next meal the chronic paupers presented themselves as usual at the dining tent, but the little uniformed police man said, "Move on." The last two weeks there were no paupers.

They have their own police. Every boy had an ambition to be a "cop." But before he can hold any public office he must pass a civil service examination. The boys who attended school in the city could easily pass. Many of the oldest boys failed, and were blaming their parents for allowing them to "play hookey." One case will illustrate the permanent good effects. A boys' club sent seventeen last year. Eleven, who the previous winter had been at the gamerooms every night, were missed last winter. A careful investigation revealed the fact that these eleven boys were working during the day, earning three to five dollars a week, and attending night schools. One of the oldest of them said he was going to be a "cop" next year at the republic. He had run away last summer, and his explanation was that he "liked Mr. George and everything, but couldn't stand it to be arrested by kid cops." No more striking illustration of their respect for law could be imagined than to see a lad of fourteen leading a strong fellow of seventeen to the police court under arrest.

The police magistrate is a boy fifteen years of age, who has been with Mr. George several years. His parents are drunkards. The efficiency and modesty with which he deals with the varied cases that come before him is amazing. One day he referred a hard question in law to a Cornell professor who was present. As there was some hesitancy in the opinion the judge promptly said, turning to the court, "I'll reserve decision until tomorrow." All criminal offenses are tried by a jury. In every case their verdicts are remarkably just. The prison has proved most salutary. For slight offenses there is imprisonment in the iron barred jail for an hour or two, with the option of a fine. One guilty of "criminal" offenses must wear a striped suit, be known by a number and do the hardest cleaning up work. It is better to give them a day or two of this than to have them spend years in the State prison.

At the close of the season those who have put much in the bank are able to purchase valuable things to take home. One boy told a group about him this summer, with great pride, that he bought a barrel of potatoes, a bag of apples, three coats and many other things. Those who had been either idle or improvident returned to the city as ragged and empty handed as they came. Why should we American citizens be surprised at the success of a work so well fitted into our system of government? This republic changes paupers and criminals into saviours of others, into self-supporting citizen kings, who learn the sacredness of the ballot and will not sell their vote. The "college yell" worked out by the boys shows the spirit of the nation:

Down with the boss and down with the tramp,
Down with the pauper and down with the scamp;
Up with the thrifty and up with the wise,
Up with our country and on to the prize.
Who are we? Why we are Citizens, citizens of the G. J. R.

THE IDEAL MARRIAGE.

What marriage may be in the case of two persons of cultivated faculties, identical in opinions and purposes, between whom exists that best kind of equality, similarity of powers and capacities with reciprocal superiority in them, so that each can enjoy the pleasure of looking up to the other, and can have alternately the pleasure of leading and being led in the path of development, I will not attempt to describe—to those who can conceive it there is no need, to those who cannot it would appear the dream of an enthusiast. But I maintain with the profoundist conviction that this, and this only, is the ideal marriage, and that all opinions, customs and institutions which favor any other notion of it, or turn the conceptions or aspirations connected with it into any other direction, by whatever pretenses they may be colored, are relics of primitive barbarism.—John Stuart Mill.

Closet and Altar

When prayer brings no solace to your weary heart try praise.

I know not which is the greater wonder, either that prayer, which is a duty so easy and facile, so ready and adapted to the powers and skill and opportunities of every man, should have so great effects and be productive of such mighty blessings, or that we should be so unwilling to use so easy an instrument of procuring so much good.—Jeremy Taylor.

Thought and prayer both come from a hidden source; they go forth to fight with foes and gain victory in the external world, they return to rest in him who inspired them. O how fresh and original will each of our lives become, what flatness will pass from society, what barrenness from conversation, what excitement and restlessness from our religious acts, when we understand these secrets; when the morning prayer is really a prayer for grace to One whose service is perfect freedom, in knowledge of whom is eternal life; when at evening we really ask One from whom all good thoughts and holy desires and just works proceed for the peace which the world cannot give.—F. D. Maurice.

Since thou hast added now, O God,
Unto my life another day,
And giv'st me leave to walk abroad,
And labor in my lawful way,
My walks and works with me begin,
Conduct me forth, and bring me in.

. . . . . .

So, till the evening of this morn,
My times shall then be so well spent,
That when the twilight shall return,
I may enjoy it with content,
And to thy praise and honor say,
That this has proved a happy day.

—George Wither.

If we would grow like Christ we must keep him steadily before us. Did you ever watch a child taking a lesson in model drawing?—never two strokes of the pencil without a glance at the model. And the first law and the last law of the imitation of Christ is just this—"looking unto Jesus." We must fix our eyes upon him; we must hold him steadily in our hearts and in our minds, until just as the sunlight prints the object on the sensitized plate of the camera so we "beholding are transformed into the same image from glory to glory." Supernatural? Yes, and yet very natural too. We grow like those we live with, those we love; every day beholding we are transformed, and the same law holds here. If we are so little like Christ, is it not because we are so little with Christ?—Rev. George Jackson.

Most merciful Father, we bless thee for thy goodness. We remember thy lovingkindness and are glad. We see thy mighty hand in our daily life and therefore have no fear. We know thee through thy Son. He called thee Father. He taught us to call thee our Father. Thou dost spare us as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Remembering with what price we have been redeemed, we would meet all the duties of life with Christian courage. Thou hast redeemed the souls of thy servants; wilt thou not also deliver our feet from falling that we may walk before God in the light of the living? Amen.

Mothers in Council.

CHILDISH FRIGHT.

We could none of us understand what was the matter with Mabel. A brighter, dearer, more obedient little lass was never seen. So when it happened that one day on being told she was to have her picture taken, she positively refused to have it done, we were amazed at her willfulness. In vain we coaxed, argued and held out alluring prospects of sugar plums and rides—but no! Mabel insisted that she did not want her picture taken, and no inducements could influence her.

Her mother was young, and Mabel was her first baby. She turned to me at length and said, "Helen, is this all temper? Must I begin now to see which has the stronger will and compel her to yield, as the books advise? I don't know what to do."

"She may not be feeling well today," I suggested, "let's wait until tomorrow. Perhaps she will want to go then." But the next day found matters no better, for when Mabel was told after luncheon that she was to have her picture that afternoon she broke into a tempest of frightened sobs. We could not find out why she was so unwilling to go. Over and over we explained how easy it would be for her, and how pleased she would be to send one of her own pictures to grandma. But she only cried the more.

"Mabel," her mother said at last, "you are displeasing mamma very much. If you are not willing to have your picture taken when you know she wants you to so much you must not go down town with her. Mamma will put her little girl to bed, where you can think how badly you are making us all feel." So she led her to her room and put her to bed. Mabel did not protest.

"Won't you kiss me, mamma?" she pleaded, as her mother turned to leave the room, dressed to go down town.

"No, Mabel, mamma can't kiss you while you are so naughty," her mother replied and left the room.

When we returned it was nearly six. I went upstairs ahead of my sister and peeped into the room where Mabel lay. She was asleep; her little arms outside the counterpane were tightly clasped around her doll, as if for sympathy; her eyes were swollen, her cheeks flushed, her hair clustered in damp curls on her forehead; and every now and then she caught her breath with a half sob.

Presently we sent her up some dinner and then her mother went up to see her. When her mother came down she told me that Mabel had given up and had promised she would have her picture taken. She had asked, and received permission, to wait until after her birthday, which came the next week. The child had been promised a party and a doll carriage on her birthday and for weeks had been counting the days. Why she should want to wait until after her party we could not tell. Nor did we understand until two days later, when, going past the nursery, I saw little Mabel sitting on the floor talking to Dinah, her beloved doll, so solemnly that I stopped to listen.

"Dinah," she said, "Dinah, I am going to have my picture taken next week, and then I shall die and go to heaven. Cousin Allie did and everybody does that way. I heard mamma and auntie talking about it. I'm going to have the party first, though, and the carriage. Mamma said I could." She stopped a minute to kiss Dinah and then went on in a grave, childish way. "I didn't want to die now at all, and I was naughty and cried. But mamma wants the picture so. And so she put me to bed that day—you remember, Dinah, you went too. Then I was sorry I was naughty and I told her I would go. You didn't know what the matter was, for I didn't tell you. Why, Dinah, are you sorry I must die? Never mind, Dinah, perhaps you can come too. But I must"—

I couldn't stand it any longer, and I ran down stairs to my sister to tell her what Mabel had been saying. We remembered then that the morning before we proposed having Mabel's picture taken we had come across a photograph of her cousin Alice, who had been killed in an accident the year before. It had so happened that she had had her picture taken just before her death. We had spoken of the coincidence. Mabel had been on the floor with her blocks, and had gotten the idea into her head that having the picture taken made one die. That explained her fright and reluctance.

"And I wouldn't kiss her good-by that afternoon when her little heart was breaking—O, my baby!" And my sister ran upstairs as fast as ever she could; catching up the child in her arms she covered her face with kisses.

"Don't cry so mamma, why do you cry?" Mabel said. And then, half laughing and half crying, the mother explained that it was all a mistake to think she would die when her picture was taken. So simply and clearly she explained it that the little mind could fully grasp it, and a look of relief and delight passed over her face. A little later, radiant with pleasure, she was talking to her doll again.

"O, Dinah, it was a mistake. They don't die for having their pictures taken; and I shall stay with mamma and papa and you after all." And she hugged Dinah rapturously to her breast.

I stole away with a bit of a heartache, and a prayer that we might have wisdom in our speech, so that careless words might never again make the dear little girl suffer as she had suffered those past few days. L. H. C.

MOTHER'S LOW VOICE.

All of us who have had much to do with children have been impressed by their extreme sensitiveness. Even if to all appearance they have exhibited only an indifferent exterior, if we followed them into some impressionable hour we might come to a revealing process that would show us our hasty judgment. Many a child has gone to bed and, alone, with the clothes pulled over the sad little face, has "had it out" with his or her sorrowful soul, all the piled up misery which the occupied daylight had no time to dispose of. O, yes, our children are sensitive, and they have long memories, and one of the sweetest memories for later years will be mother's low voice.

One of the finest accomplishments for a woman to master is the acquisition of a low, well-modulated voice. It must be clear and distinct; it should have individuality. It should not distract the attention and worry the nerves. Children would often obey quicker if they were not rasped and irritated by the harsh, excited command that gives hint of great lack of self-control in the one issuing the order.

The finer quality we would have in our children we must acquire ourselves. Nothing so irritates us as the loud tone and querulous demand upon our time and attention of their incessant needs. If they would only come to us and say quietly and distinctly what they want, and wait for us to consider and reply properly, what a comfort a houseful of boys and girls might be, we think. Is there such a lesson set before them every day that they listen gladly for mother's low voice? It induces quiet at once into a babel of sounds to realize that some one is waiting to speak who will not shriek with the rest, striving to be heard, but who will calmly utter every word, which she confidently expects will be listened to. Try it, O weary mother.

The best thing about a low voice is that it enables the one using it to be firmer in issuing a command. Not only does she reserve her strength in employing her natural tones, but she gets a grasp on her self-control by thus doing, so that when it becomes a habit it is marvelous in its effect on her little family. She does, it is true, work off nervous force many times by screaming at a high key and ordering to right and to left the children who are willful and unmanageable. And sometimes she can see, she fancies, the good of this course, and she says: "O, I can do nothing with them by gentleness. They've got to be made to stand round!"

And so she "makes them stand round." But I notice she has to scream louder each time, and I have known of her stamping her foot, and the moment they are away from her they think nothing so terrible as to hear mother's harsh, shrill voice. Then they scream back, and the nervous force that the mother worked off on them comes back to her with fourfold power.

The influence over the whole household of the even-tempered, low voice is not only refining, it is inspiring. It presupposes a formulating of one's ideas before speaking; it gathers more force to itself from this fact. No one likes to utter mere platitudes when it is realized that everybody is paying attention. If women did but know it, the cultivation of the low, well-modulated voice is one of the most important equipments for social success. It is as important for educational work among the young people; it is absolutely imperative for the mother at home with her children.

It is said that American women, living, as they do, at high pressure, cannot avoid the nervousness of the tone that expresses the nervousness of the life. A great deal of this is true, but I have yet to learn that anything which an American woman really determines to learn is impossible. Women as a rule are anxious to do the best they can for their homes and for their children. They only desire to have attention called to certain defects and their remedies to instantly respond with all the soul to the work. And this present suggestion, which involves the happiness and well-being of the mother and the household, is, use the voice God has given you in low, well-modulated accents, in your intercourse with your family. MARGARET SIDNEY.

THE OLD OR NEW VERSION.

Several mothers have replied to a question recently asked in this department concerning which edition of the Scriptures they are accustomed to use both for themselves and their children. Opinions are about evenly divided and we print herewith two answers representing opposite views, as these seem to cover the ground of all the other letters. The one who advocates using the King James version says:

"Which do I use" for myself and my children? The Authorized Version, invariably. While fully sensible of the value and helpfulness of the new, I accept and use it as I would a commentary. But I love the dignity and in many places the rugged grandeur of the old style, which I think is often lost in the matter-of-fact explicitness of the new. Some of the changes I think are extremely beautiful. My greatest regret is that the children and young people of these days do not memorize the Bible in either form, as they did even a few years ago. As some one says, "They know more about the Bible, instead of knowing the Bible itself." M. A.

The other writer is equally pronounced in favor of the Revision, saying:

I cannot understand why we should cling to an old edition of the Bible any more than to an old edition of Shakespeare when scholarship has given us something better. In our family we are deriving much benefit from the study of the Bible simply as literature, and naturally we have frequent occasion to compare the two translations. We take one book at a time on Sunday afternoons, and have found Prof. R. G. Moulton's Literary Study of the Bible a useful guide. Of course we do not exhaust one book on a given Sunday. Sometimes we are five or six weeks studying a book, as we make it a point to get all the light possible on the text from other sources. Perhaps I ought to explain that we are a household of adults, with a boy and girl of college age in the family but no young children. Once a month we memorize certain passages, each making his own selection.

E. L. D.

COMPENSATION.

Could I stand once more as I did that day,
Years long since, at the forks of the road,
Where youth stood beside me, with pleasure gay,
And, plucking a daisy, I tried to show,
One by one, from its petals, which way to go;

Could I know that the road I refused to take
Would have led me o'er hights most sweet and fair,
With none of the sorrow and pain and care
That have crushed me low to earth ofttime,
And have marked each step of the way that's been mine;

Could I see onward only to know
The one way I have gone, with its cloud and unrest,
I would wait not to question, but gladly go
Over the self-same tear-marked way,
With unfaltering heart and come back to today.

For have I not proved, as one only may
Who has walked through the furnace of grief and pain,
How soul touches soul as we meet by the way
In this journey of life? how love is the same
Priceless jewel for heart's ease, be it sunshine or rain?

And faith has not faltered to breast the stream,
And hope beckons ever with joyous eyes
To the life beyond, where the dreams come true,
Where love never ending and joy will greet
Me at heaven's threshold, earth's story complete.

—Margaret Grant, in Harper's Bazar.

THE HYGIENIC VALUE OF COLOR.

That color exerts an influence upon the mind and body is not unknown to scientists, although it is not generally known to the public. There are many instances recorded where patients suffering from brain disorders have been greatly helped by what may properly be called the color treatment. A more recent example is found in the case of a melancholic patient who persisted in abstaining from all food, and who was in consequence fast wasting away. He was placed in a room that had been painted and furnished in vivid crimson. At night the room was brilliantly illuminated, and by daylight it was also bright and glaring. During the three hours that this treatment was followed "the spirits of the patient rose until he grew almost hilarious, and, in addition, he partook of food with relish."

Many ailments are largely under the control of the mind, and mind is, of course, superior to the most highly organized matter. This being so, and color undoubtedly influencing the mind, color can thus, either directly or by reflex action, be made to act upon and eliminate diseases. Most of us have experienced the depressing effects of a dull day, full of somber shadows and gloom, or of a badly-lighted and worse colored room. A recent writer has called attention to the impropriety of employing large masses of "depressing and cold French gray on the walls of schoolrooms and other public buildings," declaring that this color exerts a baleful influence on the mind. A knowledge of the hygienic value of color upon the part of those who have such work in hand would result in an avoidance of this needless mistake.

French gray is made from white and Prussian blue, a cold combination, and far from being a cheerful one. Blue possesses in the greatest degree the quality technically known as coldness, and it communicates this quality variously to all colors with which it is compounded. It is cool, quiet, sedative. The complementary of cold blue is hot orange. It represents the maximum of heat attained by the gradually ascending series of warm colors. It is ardent, cheering, enlivening. A room done in a yellow key will impart these lively sensations to the mind. No person ever committed suicide amid such coloring. A room done in a blue key will impart "the blues" to its inmate. My old pastor was a pessimist and his sermons were bord red in black. I only discovered why when I saw his study, a room whose walls were done in cold blooded Prussian blue, and whose woodwork, including the floor, was stained to imitate black walnut.—Popular Science News.

A number of children from Philadelphia's slums were taken to the country the other day. One of the gentlemen in charge, noticing that a little fellow seemed very unhappy, asked him why he wasn't having a good time. In reply he said that he missed the city, and added: "You oughter live down in our alley. Why, the patrol wagon sometimes comes five times a day."—New Hampshire Journal.

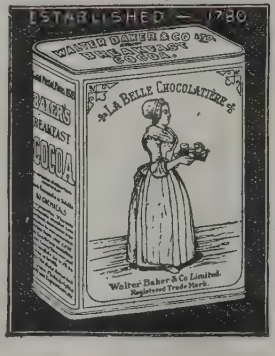
Make Two Cakes

One with Cleveland's baking powder, the second with any other.

Note the difference. The Cleveland cake is fine grained, keeps its natural moisture and flavor; "the other" is coarse grained, as if the sugar were too coarse, soon dries out and becomes husky.

Cleveland's leavens best because its strength is produced by cream of tartar and soda only, not by ammonia or alum.

Absolutely Pure-Delicious-Nutritious



The Breakfast Cocoa
MADE BY
WALTER BAKER & CO. LIMITED
DORCHESTER, MASS.

COSTS LESS THAN ONE CENT A CUP.
NO CHEMICALS.

ALWAYS ASK YOUR GROCER FOR WALTER BAKER & CO'S. BREAKFAST COCOA MADE AT DORCHESTER, MASS. IT BEARS THEIR TRADE MARK LA BELLE CHOCOLATIÈRE ON EVERY CAN.

AVOID IMITATIONS

The Conversation Corner.

MY DEAR CORNERERS: I might as well introduce you at once to the boys in the picture. Unless D. F. should "go" and put the title under it—as he did with the wreck on the beach—you would not guess of what nationality they were. This letter from Professor Foster of Howard University tells the whole story:

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Dear Mr. Martin: As the Japanese and Chinese have recently had their "innings" in the Corner, you may be willing to give a little space to some native Koreans who are attending school here. These seven young men were sent by the Korean king to Japan to be educated, along with about two hundred others, selected from the best families in the "Hermit Kingdom." They all became more or less discontented but these seven decided to get Western civilization at first hand, and so ran off, working their way to Washington, where they landed last April, with no equipment except an ambition to know the secrets of civilization.

The late Korean minister, Pom K. Soh, was interested in them and through him they entered Howard University. The University furnishes them a home and instruction, and some benevolent ladies have provided the means to pay so far their board. They knew no English when they began school in May, but are progressing so rapidly under the volunteer tuition of two ladies [one of whom is seen in the picture] that they will enter the regular classes at the fall session. They attend the Sunday school of the First Congregational Church, and are imbibing Christianity with their English.

They are all of good families. Kwe P. Im, the middle boy in the front row, is son of a teacher of mathematics in a Korean school. Bum Soo Ye, on Mr. Im's left, and He Chull Ye, on the extreme left of the back row, are relatives of the king of Korea. General Eaton, ex-commissioner of education, attended a recitation of this class recently and told them the story of Neesima, who ran away from Japan to learn about Christianity and became such a blessing to his country. The same thing may happen with one or more of these young men if they can be instructed in some Christian college for a few years.

A GROUP OF KOREAN BOYS AT SCHOOL IN WASHINGTON.

As specimens of their early practice in English a "friendly letter" and an "essay" are sent. The first was written by Jung Ahn on the extreme right of the back row, the other by Biung H. Yur, the boy on He Chull Ye's left.

My Dear Mr. Foster: Do you has very best. [i. e., do you have very good health?] I hope you so I am not sickliness this is a goed thing. I cannot speak my would with pen. I will mail letter to you again. Your friend

JUNG S. AHN.

I write a question and a answer on a bird.
I see a bird sat on a green tree in the garden.
Yes, I have seen it too.
What is name of that bird?
Well it is looks like parrot.
Why is it swing the two wings, very much?
Oh yes, it will fly to away!
Do you like the bird singing a song?
Yes, I like it very much.
The bird cannot plant rise and cannot gather the harvest, and neither any barn; it is only flies to come soon go soon; but it can live on this Earth. The God made this earth, to let the all thing which live in this world.

If our readers think they detect a few slight grammatical errors in the above productions, let them begin to learn Korean and after a little study try their hands at writing a "friendly letter" or a "bird essay" in that language! General Eaton referred to the story of Neesima who in similar way came to this country in search of education and of light. I have looked up an old pocket memorandum book in which, soon after his landing, I copied a prayer he had written. It was this:

O god! If thou have got eyes,
please! look upon me,
O god! If thou have got ears,
please hear for me.
I wish heartily to read Bible.
and I wish to be civilized with Bible.

JOSEPH NEE-SIMA.

The Japanese runaway boy found far more than he sought or thought of light and help and power in the Bible and went back to carry light and help and power to his countrymen. Who knows but these fine-looking youth from the "Hermit Kingdom" may yet be "Christian heralds" to their countrymen in similar way? Perhaps some one of ample means who sees their picture may be moved to aid in their education.

Now will you excuse me for mentioning a curious little coincidence which has just occurred? After copying Neesima's words from the old memorandum book, I turned over the pages and read various entries of twenty-five years ago. One of them was the mention, by a teacher from Constantinople, of a young Armenian in this country who needed encouragement. While I was recalling the teacher and the young man the door bell rang, and who should appear but the self same teacher, fresh from Turkey, with tidings of good about schools and scholars and the cause of the suffering Armenians in that troubled land! Let us cultivate a hearty interest in all those—especially youth—whom Jesus Christ sends out as his messengers and helpers in the desolate places of the earth. It will link you with the progress of Christian light and might and right throughout the wide world, although you may remain here at home.

After this long ramble to the ends of the earth, I hope there is room for one child's letter; supposing, D. F., you put in that one which you have left over from the end of the column so many times; by this time the boy may have moved to some other town, so I will let the date be simply

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS.

Dear Mr. Martin: I am writing my first letter to the Corner on papa's typewriter. I am six years old. I have three cats. Papa brought home Waif in his pocket when she was a kitten. Her oldest boy is Toodles. He wears a white vest and slippers. Dandelion is the baby and has four double paws. Papa and mamma and I like to read the Corner very much.

HOWARD S.

Mr. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

Election of President. As I run over the current magazines of the month, I often hope that our Corner and Corner Scrap-book readers will see certain articles on subjects connected with their studies. The Atlantic Monthly for September has one such upon The Election of the President, showing the origin and object of the "electoral college," so called, and arguing that the people should vote directly for president instead of voting for electors. You will find also, in the September Review of Reviews, a valuable article on the election of the vice-president.

Li Hung Chang. Another article which ought to be read by our intelligent boys and girls is about this distinguished Chinaman, the most important visitor to our shores for many a day. It is by Hon. J. W. Foster, in the Century Magazine for August. Take note of General Grant's remarkable assertion that the three great men whom he met on his famous tour around the world were Gladstone, Bismarck and Li Hung Chang. The latter showed himself a very remarkable man in his wide scope of knowledge and in his insatiable desire for more knowledge. Every conversation seemed to be a "Conversation Corner" to him, and he would fire off more interrogation points to the half-hour than a dozen of our most inquisitive members! It was a memorable scene when this Oriental viceroy visited General Grant's tomb, carrying a magnificent wreath. He stood there silently for a time and coming out reverently repeated several words in Chinese. He said that it was one of his principal reasons for visiting America that he might thus do honor to the memory of his great friend.

Gladstone. In the McClure's Magazine and in the Review of Reviews for August you will find capital articles about the English member of Grant's trio. Three things specially interested me—the writer's thought of old men as ruling the world (quite in contrast to the popular notion that men have outlived their usefulness at seventy, if not younger, and should be replaced by the wisdom of youthful inexperience); how Gladstone lives to be so old; and his answer to the old riddle, "What is all the world doing at once?" Instead of the old answer, "Growing older," he says, "Building; all men are building themselves." That is a good suggestion to those of us who are beginning school life again. We are building mind and character.

Be Careful What You Sow, Boys. In an English magazine I find these verses, which have been ringing in my ears ever since I read them, and which I copy here, so that they may be sure of preservation in your Scrap-book. They are anonymous. (But the proof-reader says she used to sing them from a school song-book; so their authorship may be American after all—I would like to know.)

Be careful what you sow, boys!
For seed will surely grow, boys!
The dew will fall, the rain will splash,
The clouds grow dark, the sunshine flash:
And he who sows good seed today
Shall reap the crop tomorrow.

Be careful what you sow, boys!
For every seed will grow, boys;
Where it may fall you cannot know;
In sun and shade 'twill surely grow:
And he who sows good seed today
Shall reap good seed tomorrow.

Be careful what you sow, boys!
The weed you plant will grow, boys:
The scattered seed from thoughtful hand
Must gathered be by God's command:
And he who sows wild oats today
Must reap wild oats tomorrow.

Then let us sow good seed, boys!
And not the briers and weed, boys;
The harvest time its joys shall bring,
And when we reap our hearts will sing:
For he who sows good seed today
Shall reap the crop tomorrow.

L. H. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR OCT. 11. 1 Kings 3: 5–15

SOLOMON'S WISE CHOICE.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

The entire third chapter of First Kings, selected to be read, may properly be taken as the lesson. While questions of Biblical criticism are not usually discussed with profit in the Sunday school class, here is an opportunity to illustrate some of the reasons which have convinced many Biblical students that the laws of the Old Testament were not fully promulgated through Moses, but came to be adopted as we now find them through the experience of the nation of Israel. For example, the law of God as Ezra interpreted it, made it a crime which God was sure to punish for any Israelite to marry an Egyptian [Ezra 9: 1, 12–14]. Yet Solomon married an Egyptian princess and brought her to Jerusalem. The law forbade any Israelite to offer sacrifices at any other place than at the temple [Deut. 12: 12–14], and ordered that any one who should offer an animal for sacrifice at any other place than at the door of the tabernacle should be "cut off from among his people" [Lev. 17: 3, 4]. Yet Solomon "sacrificed and burnt incense in high places." After recording these two facts the writer of the book of Kings immediately goes on to describe in our lesson how fully God approved of Solomon at that time, offering, after his great festival and sacrifice at the high place of Gibeon, to give him whatever he should ask. Biblical students have therefore the alternative of accepting the conclusion of the higher criticism that the law on these points as given in Deuteronomy and proclaimed by Ezra was of later date than the time of Solomon, or of explaining why God approved of and honored him after he had deliberately broken the law.

If we accept the former alternative we certainly do not thereby weaken the importance of this lesson to young people on the threshold of independent life. It is the critical point in biography. The young man for the first time standing at the head of a business or just entering on a profession, the young bride leaving her home to assume new responsibilities, are objects of peculiar interest because of the decisions they must make for themselves. Each period of life begun is a new test, and at each the questions are asked which discover one's purposes and sense of his needs. In such an attitude was Solomon at Gibeon. The responsibilities of the kingdom had been thrust on him. His father had died. Perplexing questions of great importance already demanded of him prompt answers. With the leaders of the nation he had held a solemn festival. Now, lonely in the midst of friends, feeling his need of help, he slept; and God appeared to him in his dream. He prayed, as every honorable young man or woman should pray, "Make me fit for my place." His experience illustrates:

I. Traits of character which guarantee the promise of God. He received a special invitation to ask gifts. To others, as to Solomon, there come hours when the avenues by which earthly thoughts enter are closed, and the ear is open only toward God. Happy are they who make wise use of such hours. That Solomon was equal to his opportunity is evident, because:

1. He honored God. He had seen the divine hand in the career of his father. "Thou hast showed unto thy servant David, my father, great kindness," he said. He saw the same hand lifting himself to the throne. "O Lord my God, thou has made thy servant king instead of David my father." The young man who has seen God's providence shaping his life will have eyes to see God's face when he appears offering him qualifications and opportunities for success.

2. He honored his father. He might have criticised David's faults, but he chose to recall only his virtues. "He walked before thee in truth and righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee," Solomon said. Honor to one's parents helps one to pray and strengthens him to discharge trusts.

3. He honored his position. He was called to rule the people chosen by God to bring great blessings to all nations. He was without experience, and he had sense enough to know it. "I am but a little child," he said; "I know not how to go out or to come in." He had to choose counselors from among many whose views of government differed. "Give thy servant, therefore, an understanding heart to judge thy people," he said. Those who know their inexperience, put firm confidence in God and bravely undertake to fulfill their trusts, conquer for themselves success. Absalom had never asked for ability to rule. He sought only the opportunity. Ambition for place to please self opens a path to final failure, though the way may be circuitous, with transient hights of splendor. Ambition for wisdom to serve others will cleave through the greatest obstacles a road to success. There is a law in society that insures it. Lord John Russell once said: "It is of the nature of party in England to ask the assistance of men of genius but to follow the guidance of men of character." That is not less true of our country.

II. The promises fulfilled to Solomon. God gave him:

1. Wisdom [vs. 1–12]. His fame as a judge extended through the world. He had the sagacity to see and the tact to do the right thing at the right time. He gained also a reputation for knowledge surpassing that of all other men of his time. He was the most famous writer of his age [1 Kings 4: 31–34]. But God gave him wisdom as he gives men gold and silver. God's treasure house is not the mint, but the mine. When precious metals are found, they must still be dug out of the earth, separated from the ore, cast in the die and stamped, before they become current coin. "Wisdom is better than rubies" But men must search for it as for hid treasures in order to possess it after God has given it to them.

2. Riches and honor. God gave Solomon what he asked and added wealth beyond his dreams. This is his way of treating men. "Seek ye first his kingdom and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." It is the rule in society that those who obey God receive a hundred-fold more in this life for all that they surrender for Christ's sake. It is true that men often amass wealth without godliness, but it is also true, though often overlooked, that wealth without wisdom is worse than useless. So the writer of Ecclesiastes testified of Solomon, after he had gained the one and lost the other.

3. Long life. This was a conditional promise. It seems to imply length of days greater than David's, if Solomon should obey God. He forfeited this promise and died when less than sixty years old.

III. The promises appreciated. When Solomon awoke he knew that his dream had been real. Much nonsense in dreams has been regarded as revelation; but the test of a revelation is its accord with the character of God, with his law and providence. Like the appearances of God to Abraham and to Moses, it was of the nature of a covenant. Solomon regarded the divine promise as a renewal of the covenant made with his fathers, and ratified it with sacrifices before the ark of the covenant. Here, if anywhere, appears the confession of sin without which the prayer would have been defective. Whoever would take gifts from God must first consecrate to God himself and all that he has. Then he may confidently expect to receive all that he has the capacity to use for the glory of God.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, Oct. 4–10. Christ for the World. Ps. 2: 1–8; Eph. 1: 9–23.

How has he prepared the nations for his coming? What are our opportunities and duties in presenting him to the world? Prayer for our missionaries.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

It must be so,
If everybody says so.
Sunlight Soap
Whitens linens easily;
Washes laces perfectly;
Doesn't shrink flannels;
Doesn't hurt the hands;
Saves all drudgery;
Saves hard work.
Brightens Homes Everywhere.
Lever Bros., Ltd.,
Hudson & Harrison Sts., N. Y.

The Dyspeptic and convalescent find in SOMATOSE a tasty, easily digested and nourishing food. It never palls on the appetite, and rapidly increases weight.
Somatose
A Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative.
It is a powder made from the most nourishing elements of meat, prepared for the nutriment and stimulus of weak systems. May be taken dry, or in milk, water, etc.
At druggists, in 2-oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.
Also the following combinations, Somatose-Biscuit, Somatose-Cocoa, Somatose-Chocolate – each containing 10 per cent. Somatose. Very convenient and palatable preparations.
Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

Quick as Thought
No time lost with WHITMAN'S INSTANTANEOUS CHOCOLATE.
Taste, flavor and quality the best. Put up in pound and half-pound tins.
Stephen F. Whitman & Son,
Sole Mfrs. Philadelphia.

ESTABLISHED 1836.
ISAAC RILEY,
Successor to Baird & Riley,
PLUMBER AND SANITARY ENGINEER,
85 Joy St., Near Cambridge St., Boston.
Telephone, Haymarket 294.

A New Idea
A Cracker Plate

Fine China, beautifully decorated and gilded.
To Introduce OUR Art Catalogue We will send this beautiful plate together with a book of over 300 illustrations for 75 cents free of express charges. This elegant Art Catalogue will be of great assistance in selecting China, Pottery and Glass that may not otherwise be obtainable. Catalogue only, for the asking.
ABRAM FRENCH CO.,
223 Devonshire St., cor. Franklin, Boston.
75 Years A China Store. Our White China Book for Decorators, 341 different articles sent on application.

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

THE PRESENT SITUATION IN KOREA.

(Parallel with The Congregationalist's November Topic for Missionary Meetings.)

Korea's intolerance to foreigners won it the name of the "Hermit Nation"; but when its ports were opened to commerce in 1882 that conservative country forfeited its right to be so called. In view of the violence, confusion and strife which have characterized the past two years, its Oriental title, "The Land of the Morning Calm," also seems decidedly incongruous. Indeed, so kaleidoscopic has been the course of events in Korea the past year that it is difficult to keep pace with the changes in affairs, and impossible to predict with confidence the movements of the future.

Even before the Chino-Japanese War was ended the Japanese sent one of their most able statesmen, Count Inouyé, to Seoul, and there was a bright prospect of a transformation in social, political and religious conditions. It was ordered that honest accounts of public revenue and expenditure should be made and published, that the horde of palace attendants and hangers-on in government offices should be reduced, that slavery should cease; students were to be sent abroad to learn modern life. Business revived, railroads were surveyed, schools increased and audience-rooms were filled to overflowing. Reforms were instituted in dress as well as in the coinage, and articles headed Reformed Korea or The Passing of the Old Régime appeared in newspapers and periodicals. But surprise followed surprise when the old conservative Min faction gained the supremacy and lost it again last October at the time the Min queen was murdered; when the Japanese power, thus shamefully established, was once more overthrown by a counter revolution last winter, accompanied by the murder of the prime minister and the flight of the king to the Russian legation. The intervention of Russia was a new factor in the complicated situation, though how long she had been plotting and waiting for just this opportunity is not known. Russia has many reasons for casting a covetous eye upon this peninsula in the Pacific. She knows that the southern provinces of Korea are warm and fertile. She wants a railway terminal at a port free from ice, and to run her great railroad through Manchuria and down through Korea to Fusan would suit her purpose well. Altogether, in the light of these facts and in view of the trend of events during the past few months, it is not surprising to learn by the latest dispatches that Russia and Japan have agreed to what is nominally a joint protectorate in Korea, but in reality is a great diplomatic victory for Russia and virtually gives her the position China held there before the war. This bare outline of political movements during the past year is necessary to an intelligent understanding of the present conditions of missionary enterprise in Korea.

Just a year ago this month occurred the three days' celebration of the founding of Protestant Christian missions. French Catholic priests entered the forbidden land in disguise as far back as the early part of this century, and gathered tens of thousands of converts in spite of murderous persecutions; but only a little more than a decade ago Dr. H. N. Allen was sent to Korea from China by the American Presbyterian Board, ostensibly to practice his profession as a physician. The romantic incident will be remembered of the way in which the life of the Prince Min Yong Ik was saved by the doctor's skill. The royal favor and confidence was thus gained and medical work proved to be the key that opened the Hermit Nation to the entrance of the gospel. Naturally this phase of missionary enterprise has always been most prominent, especially in the American Presbyterian mission. The medical work chiefly centers at Seoul, where several physicians are stationed, and here is located the government hospital in charge of Dr. O. R. Avison. Evangelistic effort has been freely carried on in the waiting-rooms without interference from the Government, and the in-patients receive instruction as often as practicable.

There are also missions supported by the Canadian Presbyterian, Australian Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal and the Anglican High Church. There are also a few independent missionaries. Already forty-two congregations meet each Sunday and in nineteen of these stated preaching is observed. Four are churches organized under the conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, while eight are recognized branches of the one Presbyterian church in Seoul. These churches have 528 baptized members as well as 567 persons ready for church membership, the great majority being men. There are nine Sunday schools, having enrolled 445 persons, and the native contributions are generous in proportion to means.

A valuable Christian literature is another product of this decade. Several books of the Bible, tracts, text-books, hymn-books, grammars and dictionaries have been placed in the hands of the natives. The Korean Repository is an interesting monthly magazine published in Seoul under the auspices of the missionaries. This is a noble record for the first ten years of missionary enterprise in such a country as Korea, but the force of workers is pitiably small when we consider the vastness of the need and the opportunity. What are seventy or eighty Protestant missionaries among a population estimated at 12,000,000 souls?

While it is deemed best for their families to continue to reside for the present in the capital, Seoul, the missionaries of various denominations are at work in most of the nine provinces of the kingdom. By means of bicycles, which are specially suited to Korean roads, it is possible within two or three days to reach the capital from the most remote point yet occupied. A unique feature of every mission station is a "sarang" or guestroom, an apartment in some central locality where the evangelist meets the natives for religious conference, thus coming into close touch with persons who would not be reached by a formal service. Educational work is not neglected. The Methodist Episcopal mission, which was one of the earliest and which is achieving marked success, has recently made a contract with the Korean Government for the education of 200 boys in its important school in Seoul, and the Presbyterian church has boarding schools for both sexes in the same city.

But how have the events of the past months affected missionary enterprise? In the summer and fall of 1895 the missionary press reported the most encouraging interest in Christianity, unprecendented opportunities for entering the interior where previously there had been great danger of persecution and eviction. So far as we know there has been no check upon this enthusiasm, but missionary information travels much more slowly than current news. A letter from a Presbyterian missionary recently published, reviewing the events of the past year, says: "In all the disturbances and excitement of the fall and winter the people have seemed to turn to us for comfort and help. Numbers more than ever have flocked to the church and to the weekly meetings and sought membership among us. Several small churches have been built or bought by the natives themselves. Dr. Avison and Mr. Underwood took an extended trip through the country, finding the people everywhere in a pitiful condition of unrest and terror, not knowing whom to trust or where to turn for protection and help, verily as sheep without a shepherd, but everywhere welcoming Americans and English and especially missionaries as their friends."

How Russian control will effect Christianity in Korea cannot be predicted. Many regard it with serious foreboding, declaring that Russia's only foreign policy is one of selfish aggrandizement, which would bode no good to Korea, and fearing such intolerant treatment of Christians as the Stundists and Jews have received. In our uncertainty it is comforting to turn to the brave words of one of Korea's noble missionaries: "We know not what is to be the future political, social or industrial situation, but we do know that everything leads us to believe that now is the time when the Lord purposes calling out his own that he may have here a church to witness of him, whether the nation becomes a Japanese or Russian dependency or whether it remains independent."

Sources of Information.

The Church at Home and Abroad for August, 1895 and 1896.
Chosŏn, the Land of Morning Calm, by Percival Lowell.
Korea, the Hermit Nation, and Korea Without and Within, by Rev. W. E. Griffis, D.D.
American Interests in the Far East, in the New England Magazine for November, 1894.
The Peoples and Politics of the Far East, by Henry Norman.
Korea from Its Capital, by Rev. G. W. Gilmore.
The Sunday School Times for April 20, 1895, on The New Korea.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. H. A. BRIDGMAN.

Topic, Oct. 11–17. God or Mammon? Matt. 6: 19–24.

We instinctively answer, "God." Mammon has a very disreputable sound, and stands in our thought for all selfish and sordid passions. God, on the other hand, represents all that is worthy and divine. Theoretically, no soul with a particle of aspiration heavenward would admit that mammon, instead of God, was the object of his devotion; but when, turning from theory to practice, we remember the multitude of daily cares and distractions, and feel the pressure of the struggle for daily bread, we find many interests and relations in our lives in which personal advancement and success, not the glory of God, seem to be the chief objects in view. So we stand again face to face with the ever recurring problem of our religious life—how to translate our ideals into action, how to bring from the sphere of faith motives which shall propel the machinery of everyday conduct.

Jesus knew that the great majority of his followers would always have to take thought for the things of this life. What he warned us against is not thought but anxious thought —unnecessary cares which destroy our peace of mind and interfere with the exercise of our spiritual powers. He knew that all men would either be in bondage to earthly or heavenly interests, and that it would be impossible to own allegiance to both at the same time. Indeed, they are most to be pitied who try to belong to both kingdoms, who try to see how it is possible for the Christ life to be lived in one place, and within certain conditions, and then laid aside when passing to other spheres of life.

The ideal of Paul was to manifest the life of Jesus in this mortal body. We can do it, God helping us. It all depends upon the great central purpose of our lives. If that be Christ-like it will draw to itself all the lesser purposes and activities and make them a part of the daily, constant service which we are rendering our Master.

Parallel verses: 1 Tim. 6: 6–19; Luke 19: 1–27.

It would be difficult to find a better use for good religious books than to place them in the hands of native preachers, who read English, on foreign mission fields. There are many such books lying idle on ministers' bookshelves. Of course we do not mean ancient volumes which have outlived their usefulness anywhere. Send the superfluous books of your modern stock, express prepaid, to the American Board rooms, Congregational House, Boston, and they will soon be put to work in Turkey, India and other lands.

Literature

BOOK REVIEWS.

BIBLICAL STUDY.

The editor of the Sunday School Times, Dr. H. Clay Trumbull, has done a very valuable service to Biblical scholarship by republishing in popular form the results of some of the most important recent researches in Palestine, Babylon, Egypt and Arabia. These articles have been carefully edited by Prof. H. V. Hilprecht and are issued in an attractive and finely illustrated volume, entitled Recent Research in Bible Lands. Dr. Hilprecht was at the head of the exploring expedition sent out to Babylon in 1888 by the University of Pennsylvania, and is one of the most eminent of living Assyriologists. The most extensive work has been done and the most surprising results obtained in these lands during the last decade, and this book enables the ordinary reader to inform himself concerning many important discoveries which had previously been known only to students. Nearly all the writers of these articles have themselves labored with the enthusiasm of archæological scholars in the fields they describe, and Dr. Trumbull has shown the talent of an experienced editor in securing from these very busy men accounts of their work. Of its importance we speak editorially on another page. This is a book which will command the eager attention of all students of the Bible. It is as fascinating as a romance, and not the least satisfaction in reading it comes from its promise of richer discoveries still to follow. [John D. Wattles & Co. $1.50]

From the volume above described one is fortunate in being able to turn to a scholarly and reverent effort to use the results of archæological researches in the interpretation of the Old Testament. Such a work is Prof. J. F. McCurdy's History, Prophecy and the Monuments, the second volume of which is just issued. Vol. I. was reviewed in The Congregationalist for Dec. 13, 1894. In its six books the author set forth the history of the Hebrew people in the light of the history of surrounding nations down to the fall of Samaria. He showed with remarkable clearness how the Hebrews held to their faith in Jehovah while all the other nations accepted the religions of their conquerors, and how the Hebrews alone of all Semitic peoples realized the true idea of a nation. This volume continues the history of Israel to the fall of Nineveh. The plan of the first volume is still followed, making the history of the leading nations of the ancient Oriental world illustrate the career and the downfall of Israel. Professor McCurdy has not found it feasible to keep his work within the limits first proposed, for his treatment of the inner development of Israel, its governmental, social and moral progress, which he intended to include in a single chapter, is expanded into a book of six and in a measure reviews the periods discussed in the first volume. In the latter part of this second volume—a book of ten chapters—he considers the relations of the Hebrews with the Egyptians and Assyrians. He promises to complete the entire work in a third volume, which is to be devoted to the development of the ancient Hebrew literature. Such a work as this was not possible till recent discoveries placed a great amount of hitherto unknown information at the disposal of scholars. Professor McCurdy has sedulously cultivated the rare talent of placing himself back in imagination in the times when the nation through which we have received the Christian religion was making its history. He shows the genius of the true interpreter of the past in the light of the present, and wonderfully freshens our interest in the Bible by surrounding its thoughts and words with the environment in which they first found utterance. The reading of these volumes moves us to adopt as our own the author's statement that "it is a matter for devout thankfulness that modern scholarship is wont to call upon all the historical sciences to supply the missing lines and shading of the picture left us by the literary artists of the Old Testament." [Macmillan & Co. $3 00]

In the Modern Reader's Bible, edited by Professor Moulton of Chicago, we have Genesis, which is interesting not merely for the features of good editing common to the series, but also for an instructive and careful introduction referring to the historical books which are to follow in their order. [Macmillan & Co. 50 cents.]

AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

Story of the Hutchinsons (Tribe of Jesse), by John Wallace Hutchinson, compiled and edited by Charles E. Mann, with an introduction by Frederick Douglass. This is the story of the famous Hutchinson family, whose concerts did so much to popularize the anti-slavery meetings and who were known from one end of the country to the other a generation ago. Most of the two volumes is taken up with the autobiography of John, who was the central figure of the musical history of the family. The picture of the childhood of the brothers and sisters in New Hampshire is an interesting and delightful one. Their mother, married at the age of fifteen, had sixteen children, of whom thirteen grew up to manhood and womanhood. They were all musical, inheriting the gift from both father and mother, and transmitting it in turn to their own children. The book is too long, but the enthusiasm of the speaker (for most of the material was taken down from the lips of Mr. Hutchinson) atones for his prolixity. It will recall a significant chapter of the national life and has a distinct historical importance. [Lee & Shepard. 2 vols. $5.00.]

Sunset Memories, by Rev. Nicholas Vansant. The author of this book has told the story of his long life in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church in New Jersey very pleasantly, and there is much material which will be of special interest to the historians of the denomination. The book is occasionally oddly naïve in its estimate of moral values, as in stating of his own father that in 1814 "he went out to serve in the war with Great Britain, . . . but, after remaining a few months he was allowed to hire a substitute with the understanding that his own name should be continued on the roll and his substitute answer to it, . . . When Congress enacted a law providing for the payment of pensions to the few remaining soldiers of the War of 1812, father's name became entered upon the pension roll, and thenceforth to the close of his life he was a grateful recipient of the annual allowance thus provided for"! There is a good portrait. [Eaton & Mains. $1.00.]

POETRY.

Mrs. Todd has edited a third selection from the Poems by Emily Dickinson. It would be easy by selection of single lines and couplets—as in the other volumes—to show that Miss Dickinson was utterly devoid of the poetic faculty, or that she had remarkable gifts of insight and expression. Some of these orphic sayings are as tantalizing and provoking as the music of a deaf man, who plays a few strong chords and then lets his hand crash carelessly down upon the keys. There is a keen sense of satirical humor, and occasionally the unconventional use of words hits the center like a ball from a rifle. Read this on Disenchantment, and see how little like the ordinary mood was that of this girl:

> It dropped so low in my regard
> I heard it hit the ground,
> And go to pieces on the stones
> At bottom of my mind;
>
> Yet blamed the fate that fractured less
> Than I reviled myself,
> For entertaining plated wares
> Upon my silver shelf.

And, for imagination, read this:

> To make a prairie it takes a clover and one bee—
> One clover, and a bee,
> And revery.
> The revery alone will do
> If bees are few.

Allowing, as we must, that form is a large part of poetry, we cannot agree that most of this is poetry at all, but it is highly poetical here and there. We wish the editor had suppressed a large share of it, which will add nothing to the author's reputation. Nothing more inappropriate as a symbol of Miss Dickinson's original and self-reliant thought could have been selected than the leafless parasitic flower on the cover. [Roberts Bros. $1 25]

The New Woman and Other Poems, by John B. Robinson, D. D. Perhaps the author of these verses will be satisfied if, instead of expressing our opinion of his work, we allow him to express his opinion of us, which is, in part, as follows:

> TO THE YANKEE.
>
> When men
> The woolly West disdain
> And deify the Yankee;
> They cut
> The Nation's fated throat,
> While Britain curtsies, thankee.
>
> The East,
> Part of the nation least,
> Where sun, sky, soil are minim;
> Their brains
> Transferred to Western plains
> Make heaven out of Hinnom.
>
> But mind
> In Yankee-Land confined
> Is puckered in a focus.
> O'er wise,
> All teachers they despise,
> And worship hocus-pocus.

Nevertheless, we have read the book as carefully as our limitations would allow. [Chicago: C. M. Barnes Co. 75 cents.]

TRAVEL.

Camping in the Canadian Rockies, by Walter Dwight Wilcox, with twenty-five full-page photogravures and many other illustrations. This sumptuous volume is more than the account of the author's adventures and explorations in a comparatively unknown region of North America. It is an indication of the wide field which still remains for mountain climbers and the beauties which are in reserve for the traveler. Mr. Wilcox has added a sketch of the early explorations of the region and of its control under the Northwest and Hudson Bay Companies. The larger photogravures give an impression of a more sharply broken range than that of our own part of the Rocky Mountain chain, with a much more Arctic temperature and much snow. The book is well written and beautifully made, and the author's enthusiasm is infectious. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $4 00.]

In the series of illustrated and descriptive olumes devoted to American Summer Reorts, several volumes of which we have aleady noticed, Lenox is very pleasantly escribed and characterized by George A. Iibbard. [Charles Scribner's Sons. 75 ents.]

Through Egypt to Palestine, by Lee S. mith. These newspaper letters written in xperiences of the regular Palestine trip nd illustrated from photographs taken by he author make an agreeable but in no ense original or noteworthy book. To hose who have been over the ground they ill recall some pleasant impressions, and hose who would like to go will find in them nany suggestions of what is to be done and een. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.25.]

STORIES.

A Story of the Heavenly Camp-fires, by ne With a New Name. The life beyond is vidently very real and very full of promise o the writer of this book. All pictures of he imagination fail, as our Lord foretold hat they must fail, in the attempt to set in rder its possible details, and in this reect the book before us is no exception. t is too vague and broken to be properly alled a story. It takes no firm and steady rasp of the imagination, and does not suceed in maintaining a high level even of eeling, but there is much that will be sugestive to devout and thoughtful readers cattered through its pages. [Harper & ros. $1.25.]

The underlying thought in From Hollow o Hilltop, by Mary Lowe Dickinson, is that hose persons who, in God's providence, ave been brought within the sphere of our nfluence in a way to shape their characters ave a perpetual claim upon us which the utside world has not. Enough of incident s introduced to form the basis of a simple tory, and the spirit of the narrative is weet and reverent. [American Baptist ub. Soc. 50 cents.]

Episcopo & Company, by Gabriele D'Anunzio, translated by Myrta Leonora Jones. f the author of this book is "the writer f greatest prominence in Italy," as the ranslator declares, and this is the least imoral of his works, we are sorry for conemporaneous Italy; and can well believe hat (in the translator's words again) the ovels upon which his reputation rests are all three accessible in French, but are ardly translatable into English." It is no here Puritan squeamishness which calls his a vile book. The whole atmosphere is hat of beastly sensuality. All the strong eople are devilish, and even the virtue that urvives in such surroundings appeals to us or pity merely by its utter helplessness. That the story has a certain amount of ramatic power does not make it good art, which cannot so overturn the ordinary and ivinely ordered self-respect of goodness nd essential impotence of evil. It is a urely pathological book, and, in our opinon, of not the slightest artistic or literary alue. [Herbert S. Stone & Co. $1.25.]

Those who wish to become acquainted vith modern slang should read Checkers, y Henry M. Blossom, Jr. It is the story f a race-track "tout" who had even more han the usual allowance of sudden changes f fortune, and whose love-making ended ragically. Such a character, however aithfully portrayed, will hardly prove atractive to many readers, and the book is of he style called "summer fiction." [Herert S. Stone & Co. $1.25.]

In the new edition of Mrs. Burnett's novels, several numbers of which we have noticed, we have That Lass o' Lowrie's.

A new and cheap edition of J. G. Holland's stories, tastefully bound and well printed, begins with Sevenoaks and Arthur Bonnicastle. [Charles Scribner's Sons. 75 cents each.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Oxford S. S. Teacher's Edition of The Holy Bible. The Oxford University Press, which has just established an agency in New York for the sale of its famous line of Bibles and Prayer-Books, sends us this edition with its recently added illustrations and helps. The plates are facsimiles of famous manuscripts, reliefs from monuments and wall paintings and other well-chosen illustrations bearing on Scripture history. Everything which vigilant and unceasing care could do in editing, in selecting and manufacturing, in print, type, paper and binding has been lavished on the effort to make this a perfect edition of the great Book of the world. [Oxford University Press, New York: Henry Frowde. $10.00.]

How Marcus Whitman Saved Oregon, by Oliver W. Nixon, M. D., LL. D., with introduction by Dr. Gunsaulus, has appeared in its fifth edition. It is a graphic and stirring account of a great historic event and personality and ought to have the widest possible circulation. [Chicago: Star Publishing Co. $1.75.]

Vol. VIII. in numbering, second in publication of the works of Friedrich Nietzsche is Thus Saith Zarathustra. It is perhaps the most complete expression of the writer's mystical, extremely individualistic and pessimistic philosophy. [Macmillan & Co. $2.50.]

NOTES.

—— It is announced that a new magazine, to be edited by George W. Cable and called the Symposium, is to be started soon. It will be published in Northampton, Mass., and the cover will be designed by Will. H. Bradley.

—— Among the American contributors to the new Bible Dictionary, the first volume of which Messrs. T. & T. Clark hope to issue next year, are Professors Thayer of Harvard, Porter, Stevens and Curtis of Yale, Warfield and Purves of Princeton, Beecher of Auburn and President Harper of Chicago.

—— The Young Men's Era, the organ of the Y. M. C. A.'s in the United States, which temporarily suspended publication in the spring, begins with the number of Sept. 17 a new career under the new name of Men. Fred. W. Ober is the managing editor, and will be supported by a strong body of assistants.

—— Mr. Gladstone is said to have reduced the number of letters which he is to leave for his biographer to about 60,000. That the valuable residuum should be so large is a sure indication of a long and busy life. To get the cream of all into even a two-volume biography will be a task which might well make even the most industrious of literary workers tremble.

—— The October number of The New England Magazine contains a comprehensive and admirably illustrated article on Fifty Years of the American Missionary Association, by Sec. Charles J. Ryder. The story of the half-century of work with its providential orderings and heroic self-devotion is told in a way to hold the attention from beginning to end, and it will do an admirable public service in preparing the minds of many readers for the jubilee meetings in Boston this month.

—— The Orthodox Russian Church in this country is to have a newspaper organ, the translated title of which is the Russian Orthodox American Messenger. It will be printed in Russian and English from Russian type especially imported for the purpose. The printing office in the New York church building was consecrated and the type blessed as a preliminary to the opening of business. We hope it may prove a means of introduction and fraternity between our Russo-American citizens and the rest of the Christians of the land. Father Alexander Hotovitsky is the editor-in-chief, and the official translator is Madame Zenäide A. Ragozin.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

TALKS ON WRITING ENGLISH. By Arlo Bates. pp. 322. $1.50.
AN ARCTIC BOAT JOURNEY. By Isaac I. Hayes, M. D. pp. 387. $1.50.
THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE. By George Zabriskie Gray. pp. 242 $1.50.
GEORGE FOX. By Thomas Hodgkin, D. C. L. pp. 284. $1.00.

Silver, Burdett & Co. Boston.

A HANDBOOK OF VOCAL MUSIC. By John W. Tufts. pp. 308. $1.50.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

PRACTICAL ARITHMETIC. By G. A. Wentworth. pp. 383. 75 cents.

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

ON THE IRRAWADDY. By G. A. Henty. pp. 305. $1 50.
WITH COCHRANE THE DAUNTLESS. By G. A. Henty. pp. 388. $1 50.
AT AGINCOURT. By G. A. Henty. pp. 356. $1.50.
THROUGH SWAMP AND GLADE. By Kirk Munroe. pp. 353. $1.25.
LOVE IN OLD CLOATHES AND OTHER STORIES. By H. C. Bunner. pp. 217. $1 50.
TRAVELS AMONGST THE GREAT ANDES OF THE EQUATOR. By Edward Whymper. pp. 456. $2.50.
TWO YEARS IN THE JUNGLE. By William T. Hornaday. pp. 512. $2.50.
AMONG CANNIBALS. By Carl Lumholtz. Translated by R. B. Anderson. pp. 395. $2.50.
ON THE BORDER WITH CROOK. By John G. Bourke. pp. 491. $2 50.
SONGS AND OTHER VERSE. By Eugene Field. pp. 217. $1.25.
THE HOLY CROSS AND OTHER TALES. By Eugene Field. pp. 292. $1.25.
SECOND BOOK OF TALES. By Eugene Field. pp. 314. $1 25.
THE LOG OF A PRIVATEERSMAN. By Harry Collingwood. pp. 376. $1.50.
A TRAGIC IDYL. By Paul Bourget. pp. 452. $1.50.
ONE OF THE VISCONTI. By E. W. Brodhead. pp. 194. 75 cents.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

THE LAW OF CIVILIZATION AND DECAY. By Brooks Adams. pp. 393. $2.00.
THE MODERN READER'S BIBLE: The Exodus. Edited by Richard G. Moulton, M. A., Ph. D. pp. 311. 50 cents.
THE TEMPLE SHAKESPEARE. Tragedy of Pericles. pp. 108. Tragedy of Cymbeline. pp. 185. 45 cents.
AT THE GATE OF THE FOLD. By J. S. Fletcher. pp. 284. $1.25.
THE NURSERY BOOK. By L. H. Bailey. pp. 365. $1.00.
THE PALADINS OF EDWIN THE GREAT. By Sir Clements R. Markham, K. C. B. pp. 383. $1.50
POEMS OF WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. Vol. VI. Edited by W. Knight. pp. 396. $1.50.

American Book Co. New York.

SECOND YEAR IN FRENCH. By L. C. Syms. pp. 287. $1.00.
AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN. pp. 206. 35 cents.
HOMER'S ILIAD. BOOKS I., VI., XXII., XXIV. Translated by Alexander Pope. pp. 120. 20 cents
THE PRINCESS. By Alfred, Lord Tennyson. pp 140. 20 cents.

Eaton & Mains. New York.

THE HISTORIC EPISCOPATE. By R. J. Cook, D. D pp. 224. $1.00.
THE CREED AND THE PRAYER. By J. Wesley Johnston, D. D. pp. 284. $1.20.

D. Appleton & Co. New York.

WHAT IS ELECTRICITY? By John Trowbridge, S. D. pp. 315. $1.50.

Frederick A. Stokes Co. New York.

THE HERB-MOON. By John Oliver Hobbes. pp. 288. $1.25.
ONE DAY'S COURTSHIP AND THE HERALDS OF FAME. By Robert Barr. pp. 207. 75 cents.
THE WHITE SHIELD. By Bertram Mitford. pp. 301. $1.00.

Thomas Nelson & Sons. New York.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. Illustrated. pp. 290. $1 00.

C. W. Bardeen. Syracuse.

ESSAYS ON EDUCATIONAL REFORMERS. By Robert H. Quick. pp. 420. $1.00.

A. C. McClurg & Co. Chicago.

OUT OF THE WOODS. By George P. Fisher, Jr. pp. 270. $1.00.
QUAINT CRIPPEN. By Alwyn M. Thurber. pp. 253. $1.00.

American Baptist Pub. Society Philadelphia.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF DOCTRINE IN THE EPISTLES. By C. R. Henderson, D. D. pp. 121. 50 cents.

PAPER COVERS.

Ohio Church History Society. Oberlin.

CENTENNIAL OF OHIO CONGREGATIONALISM. Vol. VII. of the papers of the Ohio Church History Society. pp. 212. $1.00.

MAGAZINES.

September. SCHOOL REVIEW.—PULPIT.—BIBLICAL WORLD.—NINETEENTH CENTURY.—UNIVERSITY.
October. WHAT TO EAT.—FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY.—PENNY.—PALL MALL.—ATLANTIC.—CASSELL'S.

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, Oct. 5, 10 A. M. Speaker, Hon. Linwood S. Pratt of Boston. Subject, The Present National Crisis.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING, under the auspices of the Woman's Board of Missions, in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 o'clock A. M.

WORCESTER SOUTH CONFERENCE, Sutton, Oct. 28.

YOUNG WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Regular meeting, Monday, Oct. 5, at 11 A. M., in Berkeley Street Building, Boston.

SUFFOLK WEST CONFERENCE, Newtonville, Oct. 14.

A. B. C. F. M.'S EIGHTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING will be held in Toledo, O., in the First Congregational Church, beginning Tuesday, Oct. 6, at 3 P. M., and closing Friday noon, Oct. 9. Free entertainment will be given to officers of the Board and their wives, missionaries of the Board, corporate members and their wives, officers of the Women's Boards, Professors and students of our theological seminaries, and officers of the Congregational benevolent societies.

The Eastern, Central and Western Traffic Associations have granted a rate of one and a third fare to those attending the meeting. To secure this rate the purchaser will pay full fare going to Toledo, and must ask for and secure a certificate from the agent that full fare was paid to that point. This certificate will be vised by a special agent of the associations at the place of meeting, and will then entitle the holder to purchase a return ticket at one-third the usual rate.

FALL STATE MEETINGS.

Idaho,	Boise,	Oct.
New Mexico,	Albuquerque,	Oct.
Utah,		Oct.
California,	Sacramento,	Tuesday, Oct. 6.
Colorado,	Denver,	Tuesday, Oct. 20.
California, South'rn,	Claremont,	Tuesday, Oct. 13.
Nebraska,	Harvard,	Monday, Oct. 19.
Alabama,	Shelby,	Wednesday, Nov. 11.
Connecticut Conf.,	Winsted,	Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Benevolent Societies.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY is represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No. 9 Congregational House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin B. Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room No. 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. Annual membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Contributions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS, Congregational House, No. 1 Somerset Street, Boston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles E. Swett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in New York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Congregational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; Miss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible House, New York. Missions in the United States, evangelistic and educational, at the South and in the West among the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Congregational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street.; Cleveland office, Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may be sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY —Church and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D. D., Secretary; H. O. Pinneo, Treasurer, 59 Bible House, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Including work of former New West Commission.) Aids four hundred students for the ministry, eight home missionary colleges, twenty academies in the West and South, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New Mexico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congregational House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

CONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.—Contributions used only for missionary work. Rev. George M. Boynton, D. D., Secretary; W. A. Duncan, Ph. D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treasurer, Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.—Treasurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, Boston Address applications to Rev A. H. Quint, D. D., Congregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little timely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign missionaries and ministers and their families, the committee of the National Council asks from each church one splendid offering for its permanent invested fund. It also invites generous individual gifts. For fuller information see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year-Book, 1893, page 62. Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, New Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B. Forbes, Hartford, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trustees of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States" (a body corporate chartered under the laws of the State of Connecticut) [here insert the bequest], to be used for the purpose of Ministerial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States at its session held in Chicago in October, 1886.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, established by the Massachusetts General Association, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies. Careful attention is given to applications from without the State. Room 22A, Congregational House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

THE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized 1827. Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. Open day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. Daily prayer meeting, 11 A. M., Bible study, 3 P. M. Sunday services, usual hours. Meetings every evening except Saturday. Branch mission, Vineyard Haven. Is a Congregational society and appeals to all Congregational churches for support. Send donations of money to B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Congregational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort bags, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, 287 Hanover St. Bequests should read: "I give and bequeath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum of $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and purposes of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT ON THIS WEEK'S NEWS.

The new society in New York city is fairly on its feet.

An Ohio Christian Endeavor Society has shown its willingness to live up to its pledge by an act of self sacrifice.

The pastor at Sherburne, Minn., is certainly consistent in his efforts to bring his people to self-support. He "leads the way."

The young people of the church in Iowa City are wise in their generation. Nor are they necessarily less dovelike because their methods of reaching the university students are indirect as well as far-reaching.

The characteristics of some of our brethren of foreign descent come out distinctly at times in their gatherings. For example, the liking of the Pennsylvania Welsh for sermons could hardly be better suggested than in the report of two of their recent meetings

The close relation of our Western State bodies of churches with their neighboring educational centers is illustrated in the programs of their meetings and suggests why the denominational atmosphere often seems so much more in evidence around our Western institutions than around those in the East.

Though the West suffers keenly from financial depression we are glad to note that this does not cause paralysis of religious activity. In Kansas City, for example, a strong new church has just been recognized, and during the summer another church has organized two branches and provided them with chapels. Workers whose first care is to extend Christ's kingdom deserve abundant prosperity.

A minister of the old New England school has suggested that nowadays at installations the terms of settlement should read like house leases, by the month. "A pastorate of ten years is rare and rarer, yet at the end of that period the people love their pastor more and more." An instance in point is found under Michigan items this week. The large "field" work which the members have accomplished is, without question, a partial explanation of the strong bond between themselves and their pastor. In these trying times, when it seems easier to let loose rather than restrain the spirit of convention, such examples of fraternal love are refreshing.

A HISTORIC PULPIT FILLED.

The recent ordination and installation of Rev. C. S. Rich, Sept. 24, as pastor in Stockbridge, Mass., calls up a long record of historic interest closely connected with the town itself. In proximity to the statue of Jonathan Edwards and the old Indian graveyard, the present ancient meeting house serves the next to the oldest parish in the county. Started as a mission, under the guidance of John Sargent, who preached through an interpreter, the work was afterwards led by Jonathan Edwards, Rev. Stephen West, Rev. David D. Field and others.

Among those who took part in the exercises last week were Rev. P. T. Farwell, who preceded Mr. Rich as pastor, Dr. H. M. Field, Dr. E. C. Smyth, the preacher on this occasion, and Dr. L. S. Rowland. Mr. Rich was born in Portland, Me., in 1870, and graduated from Bowdoin and Andover. Then he taught a year in Bowdoin, after which he accepted the call to Stockbridge.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF MAINE.

For the first time in its history the General Conference was entertained, Sept. 22–24, by the enthusiastic and large-hearted brethren of the "Garden of Maine," Aroostook County. The church at Fort Fairfield, on the northeastern border, was the host, and 250 pastors, delegates and visitors were the guests. The most sanguine were surprised at the audiences which taxed to the utmost the beautiful house of worship, while expressions of astonishment were heard from many lips as the vast territory and resources of this region unfolded to the pilgrims from remote sections.

From the commencement to the close the sessions fully sustained the enviable reputation for excellence which our gatherings have earned. The program was rich and varied, bringing up some of the live issues which confront us today. Rev. L. D. Evans, the preacher, at the opening session sounded the note which gave an earnest tone to the meeting. His theme was The Possibilities of Man and the Power of Christ as His Saviour. By an illustrative and strikingly simple treatment he revealed the secret of his success among his people at Camden, where for seven years he has been greatly beloved.

If one word more than any other was emphasized throughout the time it was Congregationalism. Too often in our denominational gatherings there is little to suggest that the meeting is under the auspices of any particular denomination, so fearful have we been that the charge of sectarianism might be laid at our door. But the Maine churches have begun to realize that they have a contribution of aggressive Christian effort to make along lines that are distinct, yet which can in no way interfere with the good work of other religious bodies.

Towering above other words upon this subject the address of Dr. J. L. Jenkins of State Street Church, Portland, stood out. His paper, A Modern Congregationalist in the Modern World, was a masterly, brilliant and powerful appeal to the churches to avail themselves of the possibilities and the wide field which are before them. With the wit and wisdom which characterize his words he illustrated how many and mighty are the resources within our reach. With the liberty of the individual church to select from all that is best in the heritage of the centuries our advantages are unlimited.

The Interdenominational Comity Commission, a modest institution with but a brief history, was heartily indorsed in its principles. The charge has been made, with a show of justice, that our denomination has not looked with favor upon the efforts of this organization towards the amicable settlement of local denominational troubles, while the principles laid down are in full accord with our polity. All doubt, however, as to the future attitude of our pastors towards it has been removed by the heartiness with which the platform of the commission was indorsed at this time.

Christianity at the Close of the Present Century was ably discussed by speakers representing business, professional and educational life, while the special phase of Christian Endeavor during these years was brilliantly pictured by the talented young lady, Miss C. T. Sibley of Belfast, who has won a reputation by her addresses before many gatherings of young people.

Two pastors in the State, Rev. R. T. Hack of Portland and Rev. William Forsyth of Bucksport, who have become quite extensively known as advocates of social and civic reform, presented papers on these subjects of such value that their publication and general distribution were voted. In the same connection Prof. C. A. Beckwith of the seminary read a strong and exceedingly able paper on The Christ of the Gospels, the Christ of Today.

The annual meeting of the Maine Missionary Society, the center about which the conference moves—both the date and place of this meeting determining those of the conference—was of unusual interest. Questions of administration which last year caused much discussion and comment were no longer before the meeting, and all proceeded harmoniously. This society, so vital and dear to the hearts of the churches, has finished its eighty-ninth year with a debt of $2,500. Notwithstanding, a spirit of unusual earnestness pervaded the meeting. New fields of great promise are pressing upon the society for its assistance, and the work was never more hopeful. The interest of the session culminated in three addresses by missionaries from the field, who won the hearts of their hearers by their description of means and methods and rich results.

The particular need of the young church at Ashland, with its house of worship begun but halting for want of funds, touched a responsive chord to the amount of $750 subscribed in a few minutes, and the faithful pastor of the church was sent on his way rejoicing.

The usual number of our benevolent societies were represented by their secretaries, who at different points during the meetings presented their special work in their telling fashion. Last on the program, though not least in importance or in interest, came the women's meetings, where the work in its different phases at home and abroad was discussed and illustrated with able addresses from those whose life is given to this service of their fellowmen. D. P. H.

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S ANNUAL CONVOCATION.

Not every State ecclesiastical body is fortunate enough to be able to hold its annual session in the glorious White Mountain region in peerless autumn weather. Such, however, was the privilege of the delegates who convened at Littleton last week. What wonder that with the snow-sprinkled summits of Washington and Lafayette standing out distinctly against a veritable Italian sky some of the brethren and most of the sisters were more than once tempted to snatch an hour or two from the meetings and drive, wheel or foot it in the direction of those splendid monarchs of New England?

But Congregational esprit du corps triumphed over nature's seductive influences. Vainly did valley road and mountain hight woo the confirmed devotee of the New Hampshire Cent Institution and Missionary Union. As breathlessly as ever did the delegates listen to the report of the Ministers' and Widows' Charitable Fund, while the routine business was transacted and the literary exercises proceeded with as steadfastly as if the association were meeting on an Arizona desert instead of in the midst of one of the most beautiful sections of God's beautiful world, which, of course, is as it should be.

In the twenty years since an annual meeting was held in Littleton the town has undergone a marked transformation, and, instead of being infested with a score of saloons, as was the case up to within half a dozen years ago, it is now known far and wide as the driest town in the State. This phrase means that prohibition actually prohibits, and that the State law is now potent largely because one man, D. C. Remick, when he became a member of the local Congregational church, resolved to make his Christian life tell upon the public morals of the community. Instead of having a disastrous effect upon business, as was predicted, the stamping out policy has been accompanied by a steady growth in the valuation of taxable property, in the volume of local business and in the attractiveness of the place as a summer resort. Certainly there are few towns in the country so neat and few that have so excellent sanitary arrangements and so many common privileges which are usually available only to large municipalities. The main street is concreted, and an impression of comfort and contentment radiates from the pretty homes, so many of which opened their hospitable doors to the delegates. The local church, whose pastor is Rev. John H. Hoffman, is a strong force in the community, and its committee of arrangements did its work admirably well.

The convention organized with Hon. Edward R. Kent as moderator and Rev. O. D. Sewall and Deacon John C. Thorne as scribes. The opening sermon was by Rev. G. H. Tilton.

Of the matters of exceptional interest one related to the abolition of Fast Day, and was brought to the front by a memorial from the Hollis Association expressing its belief that the time has come to do away with this ancient but now discredited institution. This memorial was referred to a committee, and later the association approved the recommendation that Fast Day as a legal holiday should be abolished, to the end that further observance of such day may be determined by the Christian Church. A committee was appointed to memorialize the legislature in relation thereto. Another overture from a local association besought the agitation of the question whether an interdenominational commission on comity after the pattern of the one in Maine would not be helpful in preventing unwise and un-Christian rivalry in the home missionary fields of the State.

The chief papers and addresses of the session were by Rev. W. H. Gane, LL. D., on The Relation of Professional Training and Spiritual Endowment to the Christian Ministry; by Rev. Archibald McCord on Conditions of Success in Church Work; by Prof. David C. Wells on The Relation of Intelligence to Character; by Rev. F. G. Clark on the Home Department; and by Rev. R. A. Beard, D. D., on The Church and Temperance. The speakers handled their subjects broadly and thoroughly. Dr. Beard's speech on temperance was received with special interest, because the association was meeting in a model temperance town, and because also of the determined efforts the liquor men all over the State are just now making to obtain control of the next legislature. Dr. Beard does not believe in a third party, but urged attendance and labor at caucuses to secure the election of the best men.

A yearly feature of marked value is the Narrative of the State of Religion, by Sec. C. F. Roper, who has the art of constructing a newsy and suggestive document out of carefully gathered and digested facts. This year more of the churches have responded to his questions than ever before. While striking spiritual phenomena have not abounded, growth has been constant and healthy, and the normal working of the ordinary forms of activity has produced wholesome and gratifying results. Here a town reports much done toward the suppression of drunkenness, there a class of forty in good citizenship, elsewhere special Lenten services and a successful mothers' club. As a rule the most hopeful tidings concern the work of the Sunday school. Largely because of the extension of the home department, the net membership of the schools of the State has grown appreciably.

More definite data regarding the life and influence of the churches were brought out by the veteran statistical secretary, Rev. S. L. Gerould. The number of churches remains precisely what it was a year ago, none having been organized and none abandoned. Only twenty-four, and they mainly the feeble ones, are now without a permanent supply. The net gain in membership was 268, the additions on confession being 815. Benevolent contributions have advanced nearly $3,000. Home missionary work marches on throughout the Granite State, as the report of the trustees of the H. M. S., prepared by Sec. A. T. Hillman, gave ample evidence. The receipts last year, $32,709, exceeded those of any previous twelve months, the gifts from the living showing a gain of $3,263 over 1894. The division of receipts between the State and national societies was more favorable to the home work than was the case last year. Yet the national treasury was not neglected, as is proved by the fact that fifty shares in the General Howard Roll of Honor have been taken by individuals and churches within the State. Through these resources provision has been made for maintaining seventy-one churches and stations, the average grant being $145. The aided churches report 187 hopeful conversions, and gave to benevolent objects $2,766. The extreme northern part of the State, including scattered communities and lumber camps, has been cultivated for the first time this year, the Maine Missionary Society aiding in the venture.

The great work still confronting the society is made evident when it is remembered that New Hampshire is still a State of small communities, 213 out of 234 having less than 2,000 inhabitants each. The absence of Secretary Hillman from the meeting on account of nervous prostration was regretted. Mrs. Caswell addressed the good women who make up the constituency of the Cent Institution and Home Missionary Union, and their part of the feast was as rich and enjoyable as any of the portion designed more particularly for the brethren.

Resolutions were passed commending the Ministers and Widows' Charitable Fund and asking that hereafter more time be given to its claims; urging that the six Congregational benevolent causes have precedence in our benevolence; calling for better citizenship; and commending the Law and Order League for its work in enforcing of laws in our statute-books. A strong closing sermon was preached by Rev. W. B. Allis on The Relation of the Impotent Man to the Church—text, John 5: 8.

H. A. B.

THE NORTH DAKOTA STATE MEETING.

The fifteenth annual meeting was held with the Plymouth Church, Fargo, Sept. 15. Sunday school work occupied a prominent place in the first day's program. Ten minute addresses on different aspects of the teacher's work under the management of the school were given by several members. The report of the State superintendent, Rev. E. H. Stickney, showed 121 schools and 5,324 members, $378 contributions from Children's Day, and excellent work through the home department in reaching out-lying districts where Sunday schools have not been organized.

Rev. L. J. Pedersen, pastor of the Scandinavian Church, Fargo, recounted the work done among his people in the State. The splendid opportunity was made clear and the necessity of enlargement to meet the present demands. Rev. George Curtiss of Mayville reviewed Dr. Gordon's Christ of Today. His able paper was appreciative of the thought of the book, but took issue with its position on fundamental questions of theology.

The churches are always glad to welcome Dr. L. H. Cobb of New York. He showed what the Church Building Society had done in North Dakota and in the country at large in such a way as to impress the importance of greatly enlarging its income.

Wednesday morning there was a symposium on The Preacher and Preaching. Eight pastors gave ten-minute addresses. They were well prepared and furnished one of the most interesting two hours of the session. The Home Missionary Society was represented by Supt. H. C. Simmons. He prepared this report with the expectation of giving up his office, in order to give his full time to his work as president of Fargo College, and he dealt somewhat in retrospect of the more than fourteen years of his work. He reviewed the growth from the four home missionary churches, through the increase in numbers and breadth, the organization and development of Fargo College by the churches, the first outgrowth of some of the work and some of the results. The woman's missionary meeting, always interesting, was this year excellent in its spirit and the quality of the papers. Serving the Present Age, by Mrs. R. F. King, the report of the secretary, Mrs. M. Daggett, and the beautiful address upon Our Work Among the Indians, by Miss A. P. Brickett, were the special features. In the evening Dr. J. E. Roy of Chicago gave an interesting address on the American Missionary Association work. He was followed by Rev. W. M. McMillen, who presented the work of the Sunday School Society.

On the last day a paper which thoroughly discussed Easy Divorce: Its Cause, Influence and Cure was given by Rev. O. P. Champlin. The discussion took note of local conditions and was followed by a strong resolution against the prevailing looseness of this matter. The churches of the State have always taken a strong stand on moral questions and do not propose to lower the standard. Rev. W. H. Gimblett, State evangelist, showed a hopeful state and excellent work done. The impression prevailed that this work ought to be continued. Rev. J. F. Dudley, D. D., gave a timely address on The Place of the Evangelist, taking the ground that the work of the State evangelist is especially desirable.

Fargo College and its special needs at this time were thoroughly discussed. After the résumé of the work by the president and an address by Dr. Deering, on Some Things that the Churches Can Do for the College, the State home missionary committee reported a proposition in conjunction with the trustees for the continuance of the joint work of superintendent of home missions and president of the college as now conducted until next April, a course against the wishes of the superintendent but necessary on account of the special present stress upon the college. The Chicago Seminary report, by Rev. I. B. Tracy, was comprehensive and made clear the relation of the seminary to the churches.

In the evening a reception was given by the trustees and faculty of Fargo College at its building, with short addresses by G. S. Barnes, Esq., of the college board, Rev. George Curtiss of Mayville and Rev. Hugh Pedley of Winnipeg, Man.

The sessions as a whole were strong and the spirit was excellent. The weather was not quite up to the standard of North Dakota but finished with a clear day. The burden that lies upon the work on account of the financial conditions was uppermost in the minds of the members and calls for sacrifice on the part of all concerned. H. C. S.

THE MONTANA CONFERENCE.

The State conference was in session Sept. 11–14 at Billings, in the basin of the Yellowstone. Twelve churches were represented. State superintendents Rev. W. S. Bell of Montana and Rev. H. Bross of Nebraska were present. Rev. W. F. McMillen of Chicago, district secretary for the C. S. S. and P. S., was a frequent speaker. Rev. J. G. Burgess represented the mission to the Crow Indians, and the Western secretary for the A. M. A., Rev. Joseph Roy, D. D., came with a glowing account of the association's work.

Superintendent Bell's report showed an increasing permanence in the pastorates, one more self-supporting church and no retrenchment, in spite of the cut-down of $1,100 in the financial resources of home missions in the State. Reports from the churches were uniformly encouraging.

One of the impressive events of the convention was the ordination of Mrs. A. S. N. Barnes, who for the last eight years has been the unpaid preacher at Castle. It has been frequently said that, in all this great State, there has been no more efficient Christian worker than this devoted woman. Mrs. Barnes traveled sixty miles in a stagecoach to receive ordination. Another woman brought into prominence in the convention was "Auntie" Gardner of Red Lodge, who has a free reading-room for the boys of the mining camp. Mrs. Gardner told the story of her work among miners, cowboys and sheep-herders, and also among the Indians, who call her Baw-wah-watche-merah-cottah (Heap know-book-white-woman).

In many respects the most interesting figure in the association was Rev. J. G. Burgess, who has received a finished education in England, France and Germany, and who is now a missionary to the savage Indians at the Crow Agency. His recital of his experience among the Crows won him hearty sympathy.

Among the papers presented were: Vital Christianity, or The Work of the Holy Spirit, by Rev. W. H. Watson of Red Lodge; The Emancipation of Labor, by Rev. W. J. Hannah of Big Timber; and Problems of Montana Congregationalists, by Rev. W. A. Walker of Livingston. A paper on The Significance of the Christian Endeavor Movement, by Rev. O. C. Clark of Missoula, was shut out by lack of time, though Mr. Clark was called upon later for a speech on the same subject at the farewell repast.

Sunday was a full day. In the morning there was an interesting address on Work in Nebraska by Rev. H. Bross, and in the afternoon a Sunday school conference with addresses by Rev. Joseph Pope of Columbus, moderator of the association; Rev. P. B. Jackson, the successful pastor in the peculiarly difficult field of Billings; and Superintendent Bell. In the evening the church was crowded with an audience so enthusiastic that they could not restrain applause. Dr. Roy's stirring account of the A. M. A. and its work opened the program, and the rest of the evening was devoted to an open parliament, the subject being The Pulpit and the Pew and the participants being Hon. J. T. Smith of Livingston who, though absent, was distinctly heard by letter, Rev. R. L. Hartt of Helena, Rev. P. B. Jackson and District Secretary McMillen.

This meeting was one of peculiar interest to all the delegates. Eleven Congregational preachers, scattered through a State as big as all New England with the addition of New York and New Jersey, find it a privilege to come face to face with one another annually. At the conclusion of the last session all joined hands and sang God be with You till We Meet Again.

A new comer among these brave toilers for Christ could not fail to be impressed with the difficulties under which they are working—the great distances, the separation from one another, the lack of adequate funds and the apathy of the people; and yet, while these difficulties were frankly talked over, there was never the slightest grumbling. These missionaries, many of them men of refinement, expect difficulties—in fact, came here just because they knew the work was not easy. R. L. H

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Bangor.

A class has been formed for the study of advanced German under the instruction of Professor Ropes. ——Last Friday evening an enjoyable reception was given the entering class by the upper classes. Music and words of kindly greeting and counsel were offered, Professor Paine representing the faculty.

Andover.

President Harris addressed the student body after prayers Sept. 24 in regard to honorary scholarships and other matters of general interest.——Professor Churchill has begun his course of lectures to the Seniors on homiletics.——The class prayer meetings and the first prayer meeting of the seminary church were started last week.——Professor Moore is seminary preacher for the ensuing month. His first sermon was directed more especially to the students of Phillips Academy.

Yale.

The opening address of the seminary year, by Prof. L. O. Brastow, was on The Religious Life of the Theological Student.——The students number about as last year, 101 in all, with prospects of several more. The new class includes 29 students, of whom nine are from Amherst and the rest from six other colleges. The Graduate Class numbers 11.

Oberlin.

The year opens with 35 students in the classical course, a gain of three over last year, 17 in the English course and 11 in the Slavic department, a gain of two in the latter. President Fairchild's address was on The Religious Life, Its Nature and Claims. It was clear, simple and inspiring. An informal reception was held Friday evening. Earnest addresses were given.

Pacific.

The seminary opens with a comparatively large entering class, nine in number, most of whom enter the new preparatory year.——A lay training department has been added to the seminary, and a class of 10 members begins. Rev. W. W. Scudder is lecturing to it on The Life of Christ.——Professor Nash returns from his year's absence in good health and courage for the year.——Elocution will be continued by Rev. G. B. Hatch as formerly.——Professor Lloyd has enriched the library with a number of valuable purchases made in England during the summer.——Systematic theology is now placed in the Senior year that the results of all other departments of study may be inductively employed in the formation of the system, and has just begun for the first time under this arrangement. ——The students' prayer meeting has begun its sessions.——There are two Japanese here preparing for work in their native land.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

MASS.—The Brookfield Conference held a meeting Sept 22 at Sturbridge. On account of rain the attendance was small, but the interest well sustained. The general topic was Things Necessary for the Continued Life and Highest Efficiency of Our Churches, under the sub-divisions, The Struggle for Existence, The Phases Now Confronting Our Churches, Church Services or Christian Service—Which? The Changed Conditions of Modern Life and Our Responsibility for the Adherents of Unevangelical Religions among Us.

VT.—Windsor Conference was held in Rochester, Sept. 15, 16. Fine weather prevailed and the delegates were entertained with abundant hospitality. The earnest words made the occasion one of spiritual power and growth. Among the subjects were: How Can the People Encourage a Pastor and Make His Ministry More Fruitful? How Can a Pastor Secure Their Aid? How Can We Fulfill the Church Covenant to Watch Over Each Other? What Can Be Done to Provide More Thorough Bible Study? How to Teach the Bible to a Sunday School Class and Deepening the Spiritual Life. The sermon was preached by Rev. Peter McMillan. Rev. J. H. Roberts of the A. B. C. F. M. gave a descriptive account of his work in China. The reports showed that the churches have been blessed during the year.

IO.—The semi-annual meeting of Council Bluffs Association, held at Glenwood, Sept. 22–24, opened with a miniature Sunday school convention, Supt. C. A. Towle making the leading address. Sec. T. O. Douglass and the missionary women presented various missionary causes. The sermon was by Rev. G. C. Jewell of Lewis. Topics discussed were: The Relation of Sociology to Pulpit Teaching and State Work, The Duty of the Church in Political Agitation, Ruling Ideas of the Present Age, A New Evangelist Needed, What the Church Lacks from an Outside Standpoint.

NEB.—Blue Valley Association met at Hastings Sept. 22, 23. The sermon was by the retiring moderator, Rev. Edmund Cressman. Time was given to the discussion of the themes: Pastoral Visitation, Should a Minister Preach Partisan Sermons? The Work of the Holy Spirit, Congregationalism as Related to the Progress of the Times, Revival Methods, The Successful Pastor, How to Interest Young Men. The woman's hour was of special interest. Foreign and home missions, Sunday school work and Doane College were ably represented. Resolutions were passed in memory of Rev. E. L. Sherman of Fairfield, who has died since the last meeting; also commending the effort of Doane College to raise an endowment fund in connection with its quarter-centennial.

CLUBS.

MASS.—The Boston Club, in its fine new quarters in Tremont Temple, was addressed last Monday evening by a number of prominent laymen, and their themes were all related to the work of Y. M. C. A. Mr. O. H. Durrell of Boston spoke on the Work in General; ex-Mayor Fosdick of Fitchburg on the Local Association; Mr. James H. Eaton of Lawrence on the International Work; Mr. Russell Sturgis of Manchester on the Foreign Work; President Gates of Amherst on the Educational Work; and Mr. H. M. Moore of Somerville on the Work in Massachusetts. The attendance was quite large and the interest was well sustained.

The Connecticut Valley Club met in Springfield, Sept. 22. Prof. E. C. Morse of Salem gave a lecture on The Ministry of Art among the People, and others followed with brief remarks.

PA.—The club of Pittsburg and vicinity held its first meeting of the season with Mr. J. H. Harlow, Edgewood, Sept. 21. The topic was The Institutional Church, opened by Rev. A. H. Claflin of Allegheny. A spirited general discussion followed in which many participated. An enjoyable evening was spent.

NEW ENGLAND.

Massachusetts.

CHELSEA.—Central. Services are resumed again as usual, the pastor, Rev. C. E. Jefferson, occupying the pulpit. The congregations are taking on their usual size and the activity of the fall work is apparent in all departments.——Third. The pulpit has been occupied by different preachers through the summer, some of them being candidates for an ngagement. The church has called one of these, Mr. S. M. Cathcart, who expects to take up his duties about Nov. 1.

MILTON.—First has a new bell of excellent tone, the generous gift of friends within and without the congregation.

ATTLEBORO FALLS.—A meeting of the church was held Sept. 15 to take action on the findings of the council held June 23, and also on the resignation of the pastor, Rev. J. H. McLaren. Papers were presented signed by all the members of the council. While a few contented themselves with stating that they did not find him guilty of the charges preferred against him, the large majority declared that they meant positively to affirm him innocent. Other letters from men prominent in the denomination were read expressing hearty confidence in the pastor and sympathy with him. There was a large majority against accepting his resignation, but after his earnest insistence that his pastoral relations should end the matter was left without further vote, the contract between the pastor and church being from year to year. Resolutions expressing appreciation of his scholarly and spiritual sermons, the deepest sympathy with him in recent trying experiences and "sincere confidence in him as a minister and a man" were passed unanimously.

TAUNTON.—Union. The pastor, Rev. E. H. Chandler, recently fell and sprained his arm severely, but preaches with his hand in a sling. The Curtis Club, an organization of men meeting fortnightly for general culture, has arranged its program to include talks on the Financial Question by Robert Treat Paine, Electricity by an expert, The Business Depression, Its Cause and Cure, by a local business man of wide experience, Geology and Genesis, with illustrations, by Rev. E. F. Clark, The Educational Work of Taunton Public Library by the librarian, and The Art of Engraving by a practical master of the art.

NEWBURYPORT.—North. Last week Wednesday marked the 16th anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. C. P. Mills and was fittingly celebrated in the weekly prayer meeting. A large number of the church people gathered and heard speeches from deacons, Sunday school superintendent and others concerning the successful and happy years of this pastorate. Mr. Mills is the longest settled active pastor in the city.

HAVERHILL.—The standing committees of the churches of this city and Bradford have resumed their union meetings. The subjects discussed during the past year are: The Place of the Evangelist in the Work of Our Churches, How Can We Best Use the Week of Prayer, The Duty of the Church Toward Absent Members, The Relation of the Church to the C. E. Society, How Best Shall We Preach and Teach the Bible.

WORCESTER.—Union has engaged Dr. E. B. Webb of Wellesley for a stated supply until a regular pastor is secured.——People's. Rev. J. C. Villiers of West Boylston has accepted the call to become the pastor. He hopes to retain the charge of both churches as long as the West Boylston church continues to exist, but will move with his family to Worcester.

AUBURN.—The corner stone of the new building to replace the one destroyed by fire last May was laid Sept. 24, with appropriate ceremonies. The new house will be of wood, 46 by 78 feet, Romanesque in style. The auditorium will seat 300 and the lecture-room and ladies' parlor will open into it. There will also be pastor's and choir rooms. The basement will have the adjuncts for social work. The whole is to cost $9,000, and is expected to be completed by January.

NORTH BROOKFIELD.—The new pastor, Rev. J. L. Sewall, began his labors Sept. 18 At the preparatory service that evening he listened to an earnest address of welcome in behalf of the church from its senior deacon. The newly elected officers of the C. E. Society were installed at a special service Sept. 27, with a charge to each officer and chairman by the pastor, the right hand of fellowship from a representative of the church committee to the new president and words of welcome from the Sunday school superintendent.

MONSON.—Rev. James Tufts, on his return from a week's absence from town last Saturday evening, was brutally assaulted when within a short distance of his home by a highwayman, who wounded him severely by repeated blows upon his head. The assailant demanded Mr. Tufts's money and departed with his pocket change. Mr. Tufts is about 84 years of age and is highly esteemed in this community as former principal of Monson Academy and well known in the State as an educator. It is believed that he will recover from his injuries.

SPRINGFIELD.—First. A visitors' and new members' rally day now succeeds the regular school rally. This new observance was carried out last week Sunday, when special effort and attention were given to bringing in strangers. Thus it is hoped to increase the membership.——Hope. Miss Lucy Stock, a member of this church, who graduated this year from the School for Christian workers, has been engaged as Sunday school worker and pastor's assistant. The Boys' Brigade has begun its fall work in earnest under the leadership of Prof. E. F. Talmadge of the French-American College.

Maine.

SOUTH PORTLAND.—The funds for building the new house are sufficient only to put up and board the frame. It is necessary that the vestry be prepared for occupancy before winter, as the hall where meetings are now held and which is well filled may not be obtained longer.

SHERMAN MILLS.—Preaching services and Sunday school are held at two out-stations. At Braggville there is much interest and some conversions are reported. The C. E. Society holds a temperance and missionary meeting each month.

TREMONT.—At the bedside of a sick parishioner dear to the community there has been a glad ingathering of five persons, among them a husband, wife and daughter, who with the others took the covenant vows.

BATH.—Winter Street. The women of this and other churches are forming a benevolent union to examine the needs of the poor and furnish aid; also a free kindergarten for poor children.

FREEPORT.—The late Capt. Robert Soule left $200 to this church. The debt on the new edifice is gradually being paid. The weekly offering system has been adopted.

GARLAND —T. W. Harwood of Bangor Seminary, who preached here during vacation, will supply half the time this fall and another student the remainder.

WINDHAM.—The parsonage has been newly painted outside and in and freshly papered. Good interest exists at the chapel in North Gorham.

DENMARK.—A parsonage has been bought and will be put in readiness for the pastor, who has just returned from his vacation.

New Hampshire

DUNBARTON.—During the present pastorate of four years the weekly offering has taken the place of the former quarterly collections for missions, much to their enlargement The C. E. Society has yielded the last half-hour of the evening service to the pastor instead of taking the entire charge. The chapel has also been greatly improved and made more attractive.

GREENFIELD.—The people are happy to worship again in the church after the late repairs, making it so much more beautiful and enjoyable. A birthday party recently given by the ladies' circle was socially and financially a success.

The late Mrs. C. A. Smith of Winchester has left the church of that place $1,000.

Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE.—Plymouth. A Young Men's Covenant Band has been started with 20 names, between the ages of 14 and 23, for developing the highest type of Christian manhood. The only officer is a secretary-treasurer, and one dime a month make up the dues. The pastor and secretary arrange programs and appoint leaders and speakers. Literary meetings are held on alternate Tuesdays and religious meetings on alternate Sundays

KINGSTON.—This church, 200 years old, has been overhauling the interior of its building this summer and has furnished it with new carpets. Some features peculiar to the architecture of the edifice built 75 years ago have been revived.

Connecticut.

HAMPTON.—The meeting house has recently undergone repairs costing $500. The interior has been newly decorated, the walls and ceiling tinted and frescoed, the woodwork painted, the pews varnished and a new pulpit purchased. The organ has also been repaired and a new roof put on the building. Rev. Charles Morgan is pastor.

STANWICH.—Rev. Frank Potter, who spent last winter in California in the interests of his health, was compelled to resign his pastorate last spring on his return, not having received the benefit which he had anticipated. At a special meeting of the church recently strong resolutions of regret and of affection were passed.

NEW BRITAIN.—Dr. G. H. Sandwell was given a hearty welcome last week at the prayer meeting, which was the first service that he attended since arriving home from extensive travels in Europe. On Sunday he was greeted by large congregations. He is much improved in health.

NEW HAVEN.—United. Dr. T. T. Munger has returned from abroad and occupied his pulpit last Sunday. The assistant pastor, Rev. Frederick Lynch, has supplied during his absence. The Sunday school teachers will unite with those of Center Church in a normal class, with Prof. F. K. Sanders of Yale as leader.

TRUMBULL.—The annual reports show an expenditure of nearly $2,000 in repairing and refurnishing the house, nearly half of which has been paid from the surplus from invested funds and weekly offerings above all running expenses for the past two years.

WOODSTOCK.—The members of the church have passed resolutions of appreciation and recommendation for their former pastor, Rev. W. N. T. Dean, whose resignation took effect Sept. 1.

Repairs are being made on the edifice in Southington.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

NEW YORK.—The first service of the new church on the Western Boulevard was held last Sunday morning. The enterprise is fortunate in securing a hall well adapted for Sunday services, and a smaller hall and additional rooms will give ideal accommodations for the Sunday school and prayer meetings. The congregation was large and composed of substantial people, many of them well known in the religious, business and social circles of the city. Dr. H. A. Stimson gave words of greeting, alluding to many expressions of interest in the new movement and earnest hopes for its success. A letter from friends in Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, conveyed warm sympathy to the new church. Notices of the first prayer meeting, session of the Sunday school and C. E. Society, Junior and Senior, were given. Congregational singing, led by a volunteer choir, is the present plan. Sunday afternoon services will be held immediately after the school session. Dr. Stimson stated that the provisional committee desired the first offering to be for the needs of others, and a generous collection was taken accordingly for home missions.

ITHACA.—Dr. Charles Eastman, a full-blooded Sioux Indian, formerly a member of Shawmut Church, Boston, and now engaged in successful Y. M. C. A. work among the Indians, visited this city Sept. 16, 17 as the guest of Dr. W. E. Griffis, and to an audience which crowded the lecture-rooms gave addresses describing his education, life and present work.

SYRACUSE.—Good Will. The 10th anniversary of the dedication of the chapel was held Sept. 20. The circumstances connected with the erection of the building and the conditions of the religious work today were reviewed with interest. Rev. H. N. Kinney, the pastor of the church, gave an address on The Church Building Spirit of the Middle Ages.

Pennsylvania.

DUNDAFF.—Installation services were held Aug. 26, 27 at this place, when Rev. Noah Bevan, a native of Wales, was ordained pastor. The services were in English and Welsh and included four sermons and the usual addresses. On the evening of the second day a service was held in memory of the late pastor, who for 43 years occupied this pulpit. A memorial tablet with suitable inscription was placed behind the pulpit.

PLAINS.—The annual association of the Welsh churches was held with this church, Aug. 29-31, with a large attendance of pastors and delegates. During the sessions 16 sermons were preached by the visiting brethren. Resolutions touching Sabbath desecration were presented, freely discussed and unanimously passed.

MOUNT CARMEL.—The church is much encouraged that Rev. R. N. Harris has accepted its call. He began work Sept. 6 with large congregations and a live interest.

Puritan Church, Wilkes Barre, has been thoroughly renovated and painted. Sept. 6 was reopening day.

THE SOUTH.

Tennessee.

LANTANA.—After a few months of earnest labor here Rev. H. E. Partridge was rewarded by the conversion of a number of persons and the organization of a church with 11 members. Lantana was a neglected field about 12 miles from Pleasant Hill Academy. There is need of a house of worship, as a small log schoolhouse, poorly lighted and not large enough for the congregation, is now used.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

ROCKPORT.—This church is so situated as to be a center for a large district. Two suburban electric lines are making it a part of Greater Cleveland. The work among the young people is especially encouraging. The evening service is given up to the Endeavor Society, though the pastor is always present and has a part in the meeting. When the time for the usual pastor's vacation came it did not seem best for him to be away, neither was the way open to procure a supply. The C. E. Society came forward and volunteered to provide for three morning services, thus relieving the pastor. Three important subjects were chosen for consideration: Sabbath Observance, Foreign Missions and Systematic Giving.

PAINESVILLE.—First. After nine years, the longest pastorate in the 86 years of the church, Rev. P. W. Sinks resigned Sept. 20, to take effect Dec. 31. In this time there have been nearly 350 additions, only three communion services passing without additions.

CONNEAUT.—After an impressive and instructive presentation of the cause of Whitman College of late by Miss Virginia Dox, a substantial collection was given in return.

Indiana.

WEST INDIANAPOLIS.—Pilgrim gave a reception Sept 23 to Rev. A. F. Ayres and his family in the church social rooms, prettily decorated. The attendance was large and fraternal greetings were extended. Mr. Ayres enters upon the pastorate with many signs of promise.

Michigan.

STANTON.—On receiving the pastor's resignation last week Sunday, that he might accept a call from Wyandotte, the church unanimously refused to accept it. The pastorate has been remarkably successful. In face of an adverse environment and old prejudices the membership of the church has been doubled. The benevolences have been increased, three missions started and maintained, four new churches and 10 C. E. Societies organized in the county. Every township in the county has been visited and brought into touch with the interdenominational Sunday school work. All this is done by a church of small financial resources, but by one having an aggressive, progressive membership. Rev. W. C. Burns was called here nine years ago.

Wisconsin.

KEWAUNEE.—This church, reduced to a membership of two, has long been inoperative. This summer it was revived under the ministry of Mr. W. E. Rigby of Chicago Seminary, who was ordained in this place Sept. 24. Kewaunee is a town of 2,000 inhabitants, and there is no other Protestant English preaching within a radius of 12 miles. The "call" to the council was issued by the congregation and re-enforced by the two remaining church members.

BEAR VALLEY AND LONE ROCK.—These two churches are happily united under the pastorate of Rev. Harriet E. Williams, who was ordained at the former place Sept. 23. Wisconsin now has two ordained women serving acceptably as Congregational pastors. Mrs. Williams has been preaching for over 16 years in this State, and her ministry has been abundantly attested by its rich fruitage.

BARABOO.—A Men's Sunday Evening Club is a prominent feature of the work. The entire field is divided into visitorial districts, an executive committee prosecuting a systematic work of visitation with excellent results. A weekly church paper, The Parish Visitor, is issued. The church is flourishing under the vigorous ministry of Rev. O. L. Robinson.

THE WEST.

Missouri.

KANSAS CITY.—Beacon Hill. This enterprise on the South Side, an outgrowth of Fourth Church and Plymouth Sunday school, was organized last June with 60 members. It was recognized by a large representative council Sept. 22, and takes its place at once among the more important churches of the city and region. Its field is in the residential section and it is well equipped for service, occupying the hall built for Forest Avenue Sunday school, which has done excellent work in the neighborhood for five years. It receives also the membership and property of Fourth Church, which has been pastorless for four years. The roll numbers 77 charter members, gathered from 40 families, of whom the larger part were connected heretofore with First Church. Earnest and vigorous leadership is secured in the choice of Rev. J. H. Crum, D.D., of Terre Haute, Ind., who was inducted into his pastorate by the council which recognized the church. ——Tabernacle. A chapel for Genessee Tabernacle was dedicated Sept. 24, in a destitute part of the city. This is the second branch organized and housed by this enterprising church this summer. Evangelistic services, conducted by the pastor, are in progress. Well attended Sunday schools and prayer meetings are regularly held in both chapels.

ST. LOUIS.—Compton Hill. During the absence of Dr. G. C. Adams in San Francisco the pulpit is to be supplied by Rev. R. C. Denison of Little Rock, Ark.

Iowa.

PERCIVAL.—The church is being supplied by Mr. F. W. Long, a graduate of Tabor and a licentiate of the Council Bluffs Association. Mr. Long is now attending the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Omaha, but continues to preach here. The church has nearly completed a house of worship, to cost about $2,000.

IOWA CITY.—The C. E. Society succeeds in reaching the students of the State University by sending cards to each Congregational pastor in the State asking for the names of students coming from his community and for his influence in inducing them to associate themselves with this church.

GOMER.—Rev. R. E. Roberts ministers to this flourishing Welsh church of about 80 members, all farmers. English services are now being introduced, two Sunday evenings in the month being given up to them. On these occasions the congregations tax the capacity of the house.

ALTON.—The pastor, Rev. H. G. Cooley, assisted by Rev. R. W. Jamison of Sioux City, is holding a series of meetings at Granville, where a church will be organized at an early date.

TABOR.—This college church of 450 members has secured a first-class pipe organ. A few evenings since it was dedicated at an organ recital and concert.

Evangelist Williams is to begin at Red Oak, Oct. 4, a series of revival meetings in a large tent.

Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS.—First. The Young Ladies' Union recently gave a reception to the students and professors of the State University, which served to make them feel at home in the church.——First Scandinavian. A new pastor has been secured and prospects of growth seem to be better than ever.——Swedish Mission Temple. This church, under the pastoral care of Prof. J. G. Princell, has erected a fine building, but is embarrassed by debt. The society has gone beyond its means in building and is crippled by the hard times. The H. M. S. assists on the salary. Recently the pastor has resigned, though his resignation has not been acted upon. This is an interesting field and a number of affiliated churches in the State naturally look to this one for leadership.

KRAGNESS.—As a result of the labors of Mr. D. G. Colp, a Fargo graduate, who goes to Yale Seminary, a little church has been organized with prospect of a building next year for which plans have already been made. An encouraging feature is that four Norwegians have become members.

PARK RAPIDS.—Financial stringency has so affected this community that the church feared it would be obliged to sell the parsonage. Plans formed to save it have some prospect of success. Mrs. Esther Smith of Wadena supplies here and interest is increasing.

FOSSTON.—Rev. C. F. Blomquist has built a residence and is developing the work, in which much interest is manifested. Services will be resumed at McIntosh, where they have been interrupted. The church is planning to pay the indebtedness on its parsonage.

BERTHA.—A recent visit of general missionary J. F. Okerstein to this nearly extinct church has resulted in an effort to reorganize. Enough money and labor have been pledged to justify church building.

LITTLE FALLS.—Mr. Malcolm Dana has closed his summer work here. Arrangements are nearly perfected to pay a part of the large indebtedness and to secure the rest as a loan from the C. C. B. S.

WADENA.—Extensive repairs with enlargement and remodeling make a beautiful church building. The seating capacity will be doubled. Appropriate services of rededication will be held in October.

EXCELSIOR.—Since the coming of Rev. C. L. Mears the congregations have increased and interest developed in all branches of work. The pastor preaches at an out-station in the afternoon.

CANNON CITY.—Much interest has been awakened in this little country church, which has been supplied for a year by Rev. G. S. Ricker of Faribault, in connection with his other duties.

SHERBURNE.—This church which with Lake Belt came to self-support a year ago has secured a 1,200 pound bell, new hymn-books, a furnace, and has remodeled its building.

DEXTER.—Rev. C. W. Duncan by teaching school aids the church in self-support. He preaches at two out-stations where there is a prospect of organization.

The Springfield church, discouraged by debt and the loss of its pastor, is to be yoked with Selma.—— Evangelist Fellows will close work at Walker in November, when a permanent pastor is to be secured.

Kansas.

PARSONS.—Though the church has been weakened by removals it has received 25 new members within six months and is spiritually active and prosperous. The senior C. E. Society is making large gains in missionary contributions by a plan of paying two cents per week.

Nebraska.

CURTIS.—On the return of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Curtis from a two months' sojourn among the mountains of Colorado they found that their people had taken possession of the parsonage and stocked the pantry shelves with provisions. They had also visited the stable and replenished hay loft and oat bin.

South Dakota.

SPRINGFIELD.—The longest Dakota pastorate is that of Rev. Charles Seccombe, who has ministered here for over 15 years, ever since his church and parsonage at Green Island, Neb., were swept away by the great flood in the Missouri. Father Seccombe has seen nearly 50 years of home missionary service, the first 16 of which were with First Church, Minneapolis.

Rev. C. T. Halbert has charge of the church at Meckling, in connection with his study at Yankton College.

Oklahoma.

OKLAHOMA CITY.—Pilgrim has just received a new impulse from the reception of 22 members, mostly on confession. This is in part the result of faithful work done by Evangelist L. J. Parker in a three weeks' tent meeting.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

ARNOLD, Arthur E., Avon, Ill., to Illini Ch., Warrensburg. Accepts, and has begun work.
ATKINSON, Wm. H., Lake Park, Wn., to Blaine. Accepts.
BIDWELL, C. A., Brookline, Mass., to S. Main St. Ch., Manchester, N. H.
BUGE, Chas. B., Second Scandinavian Ch., Chicago, Ill., to First Scandinavian Ch., Minneapolis, Minn. Accepts.
BROWN, Wm. M., New Britain, Ct., formerly of Austin, Tex., to Bloomfield, Ct.; also to become dean of Atlanta University. Accepts the former.
BURNS, Wm. C., Stanton, Mich., to Wyandotte. Accepts.
CATHCART, Sam'l M., Yale Sem., to Third Ch., Chelsea, Mass. Accepts, to begin Nov. 1.
CHENEY, B. Royal, Oberlin Sem., to Berlin Heights, O., for a year. Accepts.
COMPTON, Herbert E., accepts call to remain another year at Fessenden, Sykeston and Cathay, N. D.
CRAWFORD, C. H., New Orleans, La., to Second Ch., Baltimore, Md. Accepts, and has begun work.
DAY, Wm. H., Chicago, Ill., to First Ch., Aurora.
EGGLESTON, F. O., to Aurora, O., for a year. Accepts, and has begun work.
FORBUSH, Wm. B., Yarmouth, N. S., to First Ch., Warren, Mass.
HELMUTH, Jos. W., Genoa Junction, Wis., and Richmond, Ill., to Oconomowoc, Wis. Accepts, to begin at once.
HILLIARD, D. Lee, Decorah, Io., to Earlville and Almoral. Accepts.
JANES, Henry, formerly of Andrews, Ind., to Angola. Accepts, to begin Oct. 1.
LEWIS, W. W., to Atlantic Ch., St. Paul, Minn.
MARSH, Wilson J., to remain another year at Alcester, S. D.
MERRITT, Chas. W., Raymond, Wis., to Mizpah Branch of Covenant Ch., Chicago, Ill. Accepts.
OVERTON, Dan'l H., Greene Ave. Pres. Ch., Brooklyn, N. Y., to Patchogue. Declines.
PLUMB, Jos. C., Springfield, Mo., to Joplin. Accepts.
SCHOLANDER, Fred., Kane, Pa., to Swedish Ch., Thomaston, Ct. Accepts.
SNOW, Beecher O., Irvington, Neb., to Fairfield.
TINGLE, Geo. W., reconsiders and accepts call to remain another year at Rodney, Smithland and Otto, Io.
TRUMAN, Dan'l, White Cloud, Mich., to Frankfort. Accepts.
WILLIAMS, Mark W., not called to Birnamwood, Wis.
WOODCOCK, Thos. J., Lakeview, Io., to Biencoe.

Ordinations and Installations.

BARNES, Mrs. Alice S., o. Castle, Mont., Sept. 12.
BEVAN, Noah, i. Dundaff, Pa., Aug. 26, 27.
CAMPBELL, Andrew, o. Wood Memorial Ch., Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 24. Sermon, Rev. I. W. Sneath; other parts, Rev. Messrs. C. M. Carpenter, C. E. Jefferson, Drs. R. C. Houghton and Alex. McKenzie.
CRUM, John H., rec. p. Beacon Hill Ch., Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 22. Sermon, Richard Cordley, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. F. V. Stevens, C. L. Kloss, A. K. Wray, W. L. Sutherland, and Drs. Albert Bushnell, J. G. Dougherty, Henry Hopkins.
LEWIS, Henry, o. and i. First Ch., Schroon Lake, N. Y., Sept. 22. Sermon, Rev. S H. Virgin, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. E. J. Abbott, Lemuel Jones, James Dean.
RICH, Chas. S., o. and i. Stockbridge, Mass., Sept. 24. Sermon, Dr. E. C. Smyth; other parts, Rev. Messrs. P. T. Farwell, W. W. Curtis, Edward Day, L. S. Rowland, D. D.
RIGBY, Wm. E., Chicago Sem., o. Kewaunee, Wis., Sept. 24. Sermon, Rev. J. L. Hewitt; other parts, Rev. Messrs. F. N. Dexter, H. G. Margetts.
WILLIAMS, Harriet E., o. Bear Valley, Wis., Sept. 23. Sermon, Rev. W. W. Sleeper; other parts, Rev. Messrs. J. H. D. Stevenson, O. L. Robinson, William Stoddart, H. W. Carter, H. A. Miner and R. L. Cheney.

Resignations.

ALDEN, Chas. A., Schenectady, N. Y., to take effect Jan. 1.
ALLEN, Fred. L., Henniker, N. H., after a twelve years' pastorate.
DENISON, Robt. C., Pilgrim Ch., Little Rock, Ark.
GEIGER, John W., Marion, Io., to take effect Dec. 31.
HARRIS, Rupert W., Bear Grove, Io.
JONES, J. Twyson, First Ch., Pittsburg, Pa.

LITTS, Palmer, Niles, Orchard and Stillwater, Io., to take effect Dec. 1.
LOVE, Archibald L., Supt. City Missions, St. Louis, Mo., to take effect Nov. 1.
PINKERTON, Wm. A., Danby, Vt.
POWER, John G., Kearney, Neb. He is principal of the high school in that city.
RIGGS, Herman C., South Ch., Rochester, N. Y.
SINKS, Perry W., First Ch., Painesville, O., to take effect Dec. 31.
SMALL, Henry E., Riverside, R. I.
THAYER, O. Franklin, Cheney, Wn. He will return to the East
WASHBURN, Geo. Y., Waterville, Me., to take effect Jan. 1.

Churches Organized.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Beacon Hill, rec. 22 Sept., 77 members.
ST. HELENS, Columbia Co., Ore., Sept. 16.

Miscellaneous.

BEARD, Wm. H., of South Killingly, Ct., has been seriously ill for some time and his condition is reported as less hopeful.
CLARK, Orville C., has returned to Missoula, Mont., from the Sanitarium at Walters Park, Pa., with health greatly improved. The services held by Mrs. Clark at distant mining camps during his absence were much appreciated.
COLP, Donald G., has closed his work at Kragness, Minn., and Harwood, N. D.
CRESSMAN, Abraham A., is to be State secretary of Doane College, Crete, Neb., not field secretary, as previously stated.
CRESSMAN, Edmund, has removed to Hastings, Neb., and will continue to supply at W. Hamilton.
DANA, Malcolm, has closed his work at Little Falls, Minn.
LEWIS, Edwin J., and wife, of Mansfield, Ct., were recently tendered a reception in the college chapel by members of their congregation.
MILLAR, Wm., Galesburg, Mich., on his recent birthday was the recipient of a study chair and many congratulations.
MOORE, Philip H., of Saco, Me., narrowly escaped serious injury from a bicycle fall. He was unconscious for a time, and unable to preach the next Sunday.
STEARNS, Wm. F., formerly of Marlboro, Mass., finds his health materially improved after a year's rest. He will spend the winter in study at Andover, and will preach as he has opportunity.
STEVENS, Henry A., and wife, were given a reception last week by their many friends in Bristol, R. I.
QUEEN, Chas. N., recently of Guthrie, Okl., has begun work as supply at Rootstown, O.
WICKETT, Richard K., of Howard, R. I., is a guest of the captain of a four-master on a coasting cruise of several weeks.

ACCESSIONS TO THE CHURCHES.

	Conf.	Tot.
CALIFORNIA.
Chula Vista,	1	7
Haywards,	—	7
Los Angeles, Third,	1	5
Oakland, Market St.,	—	9
Pico Heights,	6	10
Richmond,	1	4
S. Riverside,	—	4
CONNECTICUT.
Hartford, Zion,	—	5
New Haven, Dwight Place,	—	5
GEORGIA.
Antioch,	7	8
Shady Grove,	15	15
Waycross,	50	50
ILLINOIS.
Chicago, Pilgrim,	—	7
Puritan,	9	11
South,	10	26
Union Park,	3	3
Harvey,	—	8
Oak Park,	5	8
IOWA.
Des Moines, Pilgrim,	3	15
Gospel Ridge,	1	3
Hiteman,	3	3
Sioux City, Pilgrim,	18	18
Swanton,	—	18
MAINE.
Brooks and Jackson,	4	5
Kennebunk,	5	5
Newcastle,	4	5
MASSACHUSETTS.
Chelsea, Central,	—	6
Milton,	5	7
MICHIGAN.
Lowell,	3	6
Rockford,	2	3
Saginaw,	—	3
Ypsilanti,	—	13
MINNESOTA.
Kragness,	—	18
Minneapolis, Park Ave.,	1	3
MISSOURI.
Kansas City, Beacon Hill,	—	16
Sedalia, Second,	—	7
NEBRASKA.
Omaha, Saratoga,	—	10
St. Mary's Ave.,	1	6
NEW HAMPSHIRE.
Claremont,	3	3
Manchester, First,	—	7
Meredith,	6	6
Nashua, First,	1	3
N. Weare,	5	7
OHIO.
Belden,	1	7
Grafton,	10	11
OKLAHOMA.
Oklahoma City,	13	23
S. Enid,	6	6
OREGON.
Pendleton,	—	4
Willamina,	8	8
VERMONT.
Enosburg,	2	3
Versbire,	—	6
Weathersfield,	7	11
OTHER CHURCHES.
Asheboro, N. C.,	5	14
Blue Rapids, Kan.,	5	13
Central, Ind.,	—	3
Green River, Wyo.,	6	8
Lantana, Tenn.,	—	11
Le Raysville, Pa.,	14	15
Oshkosh, Wis., Plymouth,	—	5
Providence, R. I., Academy Ave.,	1	6
Scotland, Can.,	9	9
Syracuse, N. Y., Good Will,	4	4
Wardner, Wn.,	—	4
Churches with less than three,	32	48

Conf., 286; Tot., 611.

Total since Jan. 1. Conf., 12,359; Tot., 21,586

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

At the international convention there were reported as already organized 3,261 home departments, with upwards of 130,000 members enrolled. While many of these departments have a superintendent and a corps of visitors, others are the result of the labor of one person, who systematically visits through the church and congregation, beginning in a small way.

Eastern Hampden district, comprising 16 towns, the largest number of any district in the State, held its semi-annual meeting at Three Rivers (Palmer) on Sept. 16. Rev. F. E. Jenkins presided and a full program of interesting topics, enthusiastic speakers and practical discussions made a day of much value. Mr. George W. Pease spoke of The Normal Department as a Present Day Necessity and Rev. H. T. McEwen on Children Becoming Leaders in Righteousness.

Central Berkshire district held a largely attended convention, Sept. 14, at Dalton. Rev. G. W. Andrews presided. The delegates came in good numbers from 11 out of the 14 towns in the district. The Ideal Sunday School was described by five ten-minute addresses from clergymen in the district. In the afternoon Rev. J. W. Thompson, D. D., spoke of the Sunday school as the most important department of the churches' work, and an open parliament filled the second session with helpful suggestions. The children's hour brought a large company and conferences conducted by the State secretaries closed the afternoon. Rev. G. W. Winch of Holyoke spoke to a full house in the evening on Taking Aim.

In the New Jersey Sunday School Messenger for the present month will be found a classified list of primary studies as adopted at the school of primary methods held at Asbury Park last summer. The kindergarten grade for ages from three to five, and the primary grade for six to eight, and the intermediate grade for ages nine to eleven are each provided with a course adapted to their respective ages. At twelve years of age a child pursuing these courses will have learned Bible stories, including the life of Christ, select memory verses, teaching and training on giving, temperance and missions, the Ten Commandments, the names of the apostles, the Lord's Prayer, the Twenty-third Psalm, the books of the Bible, the Apostles' Creed, the Beatitudes, church hymns and Bible geography.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

A monthly meeting is held by the Junior superintendents of the South Branch of the Philadelphia Union. They consider the topics for prayer meetings the next month and ways of presenting them in the societies.

The rent, fuel and light at a Chinese mission in Vancouver, B. C., are provided for by four of the societies in the city. The members also give help in the meetings and Sunday school, while each society furnishes the teachers for one evening a week.

Dr. Clark's schedule of appointments, after a few days of rest in Switzerland and a three days' convention in Stockholm, includes besides Rotterdam, London and Glasgow, the following: Irish National Convention at Belfast, Ireland, Sept. 30-Oct. 2; Paris, Oct. 6; different parts of France, Oct. 7-14; Geneva, Oct. 14; Lausanne, Oct. 15; Winterthur, Oct. 22; Berlin, Oct. 27.

"Saved to Serve" was a motto kept before the South Dakota convention, and the evangelistic services were very impressive. At the consecration meeting about 25 declared their purpose to lead a Christian life. Good work was done with the associate members, since, according to a request, the societies sent some of these also as delegates. The missionary session gained special interest from a consideration of the Armenian troubles and from the fact that South Dakota has sent two Christian Endeavorers as foreign missionaries the last year.

Among those present at the Maine convention were representatives of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Florida, Indiana, Minnesota and China. A greeting was sent to the Washington society that entertained the Maine delegates to the July Convention. An hour at one of the sessions was given up to memorial addresses on Mr. V. Richard Foss, formerly State president. An excursion was made to Good Will Farm, in which the societies have taken a great interest, and exercises were held there. Among the officers chosen for the coming year were superintendents of Junior, missionary, evangelistic, Christian citizenship and floating society work, and there is also to be a superintendent of Sunday school work.

Iowa has shown a special interest in the flower mission and in the work among prisoners, having made these different departments with a superintendent in charge of each. During the State convention at Council Bluffs noon meetings were held in the hospital and the jail. Flowers were sent to each prisoner, Testaments were distributed and there were several requests for prayers. In connection with the work for Christian citizenship the next year, particular attention will be paid to carrying out the law forbidding the sale of cigarettes. At the missionary session reports of what had been done by the societies were received from nearly 25 denominations. At the closing meeting in the tent the delegates formed a double line around the tent and along the aisles and with joined hands repeated their pledge for the coming year.

Those who have fresh visions of God will never lose their grasp over young minds, or their power to deal with new problems.—W. Robertson Nicoll.

SAN FRANCISCO INTERESTS.

Our Monday Club

Has not for many years been more interesting and profitable. For some reason the outlook a few months since was anything but bright. So dying was the rate that a committee was appointed on resuscitation. Fortunately, Rev. Lyman Hood of Berkeley was made chairman and, after some changes were effected, renewed life was manifest, and now the large parlor at the Grand Hotel must be abandoned for more commodious quarters. The papers have been excellent. Forgetting for the time the economic, the social and the semi-political, writers have in accordance with a prepared program carried us into the realm of the purely spiritual, and for weeks the Monday hour has found us climbing the mountain peaks. As a climax a recent day was given to a "retreat." Gathering at the seminary, forty or more were led in the morning to the consideration of Loving Service, and in the afternoon Being Filled with All the Fullness of God. Twenty-five spoke or led in prayer. It was good to come apart and rest a while.

The First Church

Gives reason for rejoicing. Opening the doors of the edifice, the trustees offered their resignations to the large assembly, asking that the burden be laid upon other shoulders. But the appreciative members, unwilling to hearken to it, voted unanimously a committee to request a reconsideration on the part of these faithful officers. The next week prayer meeting was resumed. At its close an invitation was ordered sent to Rev. G. C. Adams, D. D., of St Louis, to visit the church. With his coming, reasons for which exist, old sores, it is hoped, will be healed, the past be forgotten, wandering members reclaimed, and this mother church resume the leadership heretofore so cheerfully accorded her. Such is the prayer, not alone of those most closely identified, but of the whole fellowship of churches—yea, more, of all who love the kingdom of our Lord.

Education.

Two-thirds of our 60,000 school children are in the public schools, and 900 teachers are employed at salaries ranging from $50 to more than $200 per month, the whole expense of education being over $1,000,000. The other children find their opportunities in the numerous private institutions, not a few doubtless being sufficiently advanced to enter one or the other of the large universities. The latter were never more popular. Students are flocking from all parts of the slope, some, indeed, from the far-away East. At Berkeley over 500 students are reported seeking admission, while Stanford claims an equal, if not larger, number. Whatever fears may have been entertained as to the latter militating against the former, they have long since been allayed, the fact being that each is a stimulant to the other.

At the State University, though in no way organically connected, there has just been established a Bible School, under the direction of the Christian denomination. Over $50,000 have been raised on the coast for its endowment. Dr. Jefferson of New Jersey has assumed the presidency. Several students have matriculated, the outlook being exceedingly promising for a growing number, all of whom are to be allowed especial privileges by the university. Our own theological seminary had an auspicious opening early in September. The address was delivered by Dr. L. H. Hallock, formerly of Tacoma, his theme being Theology, the Queen of the Sciences. Twenty students are in attendance, ten having entered this year. Hopes are entertained that ten more may yet come. Three courses are open—classical, special, training course for lay workers. Women are received, especially in the last. In addition to the faculty several of the resident ministers are to lecture on missions and other subjects.

Gold and Silver.

Politics wax warmer and warmer. In the office, along the street, on the cars and on the hustings the absorbing theme is money. This year the parties are two only—"Goldbugs" and "Silverites." Metropolitan papers mostly favor the former, while for the latter the interior weeklies give no uncertain sound. The Republicans seem better organized and doing more aggressive work. Prophecies there are, but wise men do not care to forecast the future. Outward appearances favor McKinley. On the ferry-boat more of his buttons are to be seen; in conversation one finds more of his supporters. Ministers as a class favor him. So do the bankers, the merchants and many of the agriculturists. But there is a silent element. Little is said; much is thought. When results are announced many expect the mountains and the valleys to give a large vote in the interests of the white metal. OCCIDENT.

THE SECULAR AND THE RELIGIOUS PRESS.

The Standard of Chicago says:

While the daily newspapers, as a class, have been surrendering their office as leaders of public opinion in exchange for the dollars of advertisers, the religious journals have been undergoing a very different change. They have to a certain extent accepted the trust which the dailies have refused, and are entering more and more into the general field of public affairs. It is not so very long ago since denominational weeklies confined themselves strictly to printing church news, religious articles, and discussions, more or less heated, upon polemical questions. The better class of such papers have almost abandoned the last named sort of articles, and the church news is no longer published at such length and in such detail as it once was. On the other hand, matters once excluded from the religious paper as "secular" are now regularly discussed in its columns without apology. This is especially noticeable in foreign affairs. It was the outspoken protest of the religious press that started the reaction among the dailies last winter in the Venezuela affair; not that the influence was direct, but the common sense of the people of the country found expression first in the religious weeklies, and the dailies took their cue. We believe that this function of the larger denominational weeklies is likely to increase; that it is a legitimate function; and that good citizenship as well as religion will thereby be promoted.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

DR. ALBERT C. PERKINS.

Dr. Perkins, who died in Brooklyn, Sept. 22, in the sixty-fourth year of his age, was born in Topsfield, Mass., graduated at Phillips Andover and Dartmouth. He rose from rank to rank in the teaching profession and in time became principal of Phillips Exeter, where he remained until 1883. He then went to the Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, and was its principal until 1892. He was a deacon and member of the prudential committee of Central Congregational Church, one of the organizers of the Brooklyn Congregational Club and president of the local church extension society.

Marriages.

The charge for marriage notices is twenty-five cents.

BROWN—TUFTS—In Charlestown, Sept. 23, by Rev. A. S. Twombly, D. D., Rev. C. R. Brown and Miss Alice Tufts of Charlestown. Mr. Brown has for several years been pastor of the Winthrop Church, in which the marriage ceremony was performed.

Deaths.

The charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each additional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The money should be sent with the notice.

HENDERSON—In Elk River, Minn., Sept. 22, Rev. David Henderson, pastor of the Congregational church in Elk River. Mr. Henderson was a Scotchman and had been in Minnesota about twenty years, having preached at Princeton, Sauk Rapids, Worthington, Cannon Falls and Elk River. He was about 70 years of age.

HENRY—In Jamestown, N. Y., Sept. 9, Rev. William D. Henry, aged 89 yrs., 4 mos., 16 dys. He entered the ministry in 1851, after about nine years became missionary for the Western New York Association, and later engaged in evangelistic work.

HIDDEN—In Andover, Sept. 28, David I. C. Hidden, aged 73. A life-long farmer, of simple ways, but faithful, honest Christian life. It was in his home that Joseph Neesima was an inmate during the years of his attendance at Phillips Academy, an important factor in his early Christian experience and preparation for his great work in the Japanese empire.

HILL—In Yokohama, Japan, Aug. 26, Col. Joseph Coffin Hill, son of the late Henry Hill of Groton, aged 56 yrs, of heart failure resulting from the grip.

NOYES—In Newburyport, Mass., Sept. 25, Joseph Hale Noyes, aged 71 yrs., 4 mos., 13 dys.

MRS. AMELIA DAVIE BICKNELL.

Mrs. Bicknell, wife of Hon. Thomas W. Bicknell of Providence, R. I., formerly of Dorchester, passed to the heavenly world on the morning of the 13th of August, from her summer home at Boothbay, Me.

Amelia Davie (Blanding) Bicknell was born in Reboboth, Mass., of Pilgrim ancestry, the Blandings and Carpenters from whom she sprang coming to America about 1640. She received an excellent education in the public schools and at Wheaton Female Seminary in Norton, Mass., after which she taught in the public schools of her native State until her marriage in 1860.

Mrs. Bicknell united with the Congregational church in 1853. She was not only an exemplary member of Christ's Church, but a diligent, earnest and joyful worker in promoting all the great ends for which the church stands. In Harvard Church, Dorchester, she was profoundly interested, and gave, together with Mr. Bicknell, time, work and means abundantly to its founding and strengthening. She was a constant and effective helper in every good word and work in the church and out of it up to the measure of her strength, and sometimes beyond it. She was for several years president of the auxiliary of the Woman's Board of the Second Church, Dorchester, and organized and conducted a young ladies' mission circle in that church until the founding of Harvard Church in 1887, to which she transferred her active service.

Her interest in missions was perennial. She was diligent and resourceful in plans for aiding this cause so near to her heart. Many a box filled with good things for the workers in foreign and home fields went out under her initiative and superintendence. Her enthusiasm was contagious and she soon gathered about her a company of kindred spirits.

Mrs. Bicknell was fortunate in being "well born." She was refined by inheritance, education and the Spirit of God. She was very even in her disposition, sunny and hopeful in temperament. She loved righteousness. She was charitable towards all. She knew how to make allowance for the circumstances of good and ill which surround human lives, but she could be royally indignant over flagrant wrong. She did not believe the golden era of the world was in the past. She was convinced that there were to be great manifestations of the kingdom of God during the years at hand. She was hospitable to the modern prophets of the Spirit while greatly reverencing the ancient seers. She was large-minded and generous, and her life as a whole was strongly characterized by the spirit of service to the world of mankind.

Mrs. Bicknell's disease was of a gastric nature, and for something over two years, in spite of all the highest medical skill could do to avert the result, it had been wearing her life away. Her spirit was gently taken out of its earthly embodiment just as the light was opening the day of Aug. 13: "Rest and heaven" were the last distinguishable words she breathed forth, and it seemed like a repetition of the words of the heavenly wrestler with Jacob to the patriarch, "Let me go, for the day breaketh."

DEACON WILLIAM METCALF.

The subject of the following lines was an old resident of Keene, N. H., a man well known and much esteemed for his uniform consistent character and greatly loved for his amiability and sweet Christian spirit. Nothing ever seemed to ruffle his temper or hinder the helpful influences which unceasingly flowed from his personality. It is seldom we meet one who never shows the motions of indwelling sin, but the writer, who has known him intimately for fifty years, never saw any exhibition of temper or heard him speak an un-Christian word. He loved the church and sought in all possible ways its upbuilding. Among his last words was one very like the message of the beloved apostle, to "love one another," and stand by the pastor. He joined the First Congregational Church, Keene, N. H., sixty-five years ago, and from the first was a warm-hearted, spiritually-minded Christian. He was for many years a deacon and resigned only when the increasing infirmities of age made it necessary, at which time he was made deacon emeritus.

When it was no longer prudent for him to manage his farm he removed to Chelsea, Mass., to rest from his labors and spend the remainder of his life with a much loved and loving daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Newell, and it was their hope to be a mutual joy and comfort in his declining years, but it was not so to be. He was not, for God took him. He had walked with God and it was no break to go. Only for a few weeks was he spared to hallow his new home. After pneumonia had had its run and for a few days longer he held his own remarkably for one so advanced in years and we were hopeful that he would recover, but he did not have sufficient vitality to rally. He was conscious to the last and fell on sleep Wednesday, Sept. 23, aged 89 yrs., 9 mos., 12 dys.

He leaves a wife, daughter and four grandchildren and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss, but this is not without hope, for we do know that this our loss is his infinite gain. He has entered into his rest and leaves many precious memories as a legacy to those who knew him. The funeral services were held in Chelsea at his late residence, conducted by Rev. W. F. Bacon of Boston and Dr. C. E. Harrington, a former pastor, and also at the First Church in Keene, N. H., on the following day, conducted by the pastor, Rev. William G. Poor, and Silas P. Cook.

For a Nerve Tonic
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. H. M. HARLOW, Augusta, Me., says: "I regard it as one of the best remedies in all cases in which the system requires an acid and a nerve tonic. I have used it freely with most excellent results."

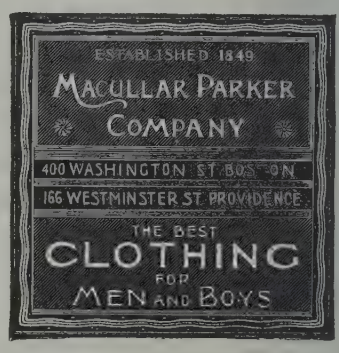
Look

Sharply to the condition of your blood. At this season peculiar perils assail the system. There are sudden changes in temperature—fogs and dampness, chilly nights, lowering clouds, drenching rains. These sudden changes bring on colds, fevers, pneumonia, bronchitis and other ailments. Keep the blood pure, rich and full of vitality and you will be well.

HOOD'S
Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills are the best after-dinner pills, aid digestion. 25c.



DUTCH SETTLE.

Here is an exact reproduction of one of the old Dutch Settles of the fifteenth century. On such a seat as this the burghers of the Hague were wont to stretch themselves, the tankard in one hand and a churchwarden pipe in the other.

It is built of Flemish Oak, and so skillfully have the stains of age been applied to the wood that only an expert could possibly detect the reproduction from the original. The carving and tooling are executed in the bold style of that period.

Above the arms on either side is a full-length Dutchman nearly a foot in height. Roughly-carved panels with vines and foliage cover the back. There are three pegs for hats upon the top frame.

The seat is wide and there is a large storage chest for robes beneath the lid. Old-fashioned carved panels and Dutch feet.

New General Catalogue for 1896-97. Square octavo, 256 pp., 300 illustrations. Sent to any address on receipt of five 2-cent stamps for postage.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,
48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

Guaranty Trust Co.

of New York.

Formerly New York Guaranty and Indemnity Co.
Mutua: Life Building,
65 CEDAR STREET, N. Y.

CAPITAL, - - - - - $2,000,000
SURPLUS, - - - - - - $2,000,000

ACTS AS TRUSTEE FOR CORPORATIONS, FIRMS AND INDIVIDUALS, AS GUARDIAN, EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR. TAKES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATES.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS subject to check or on certificate.

WALTER G. OAKMAN, President.
ADRIAN ISELIN, Jr., Vice-President.
GEORGE R. TURNBULL, 2d Vice-President.
HENRY A. MURRAY, Treas. and Sec.
J. NELSON BORLAND, Assist. Treas. and Sec.

DIRECTORS.

Samuel D. Babcock,	Adrian Iselin, Jr.,
George F. Baker,	Augustus D. Juilliard,
George S. Bowdoin,	James N. Jarvie,
Frederic Cromwell,	Richard A. McCurdy,
Walter R. Gillette,	Walter G. Oakman,
Robert Goelet,	Alexander E. Orr,
G. G. Haven,	Henry H. Rogers,
Oliver Harriman,	Henry W. Smith,
R. Somers Hayes,	H. McK. Twombly,
Charles R. Henderson,	Frederick W. Vanderbilt,
William C. Whitney.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. CATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

£ SO NEGOTIABLE—
Cheque Bank Cheques.

Good as Gold—more portable than Gold. In smaller amounts than Bank of England Notes. Paid everywhere. For travelers and remitters.

Agency of
UNITED STATES CHEQUE BANK, L'd.
FREDERICK W. PERRY, Manager,
40 and 42 Wall St., N. Y.

Throw out the Seeds of your raisins and grapes and prevent appendicitis. You can seed them yourself, without loss of time or tax of patience, with the Enterprise Raisin and Grape Seeder

Removes seeds without waste. Always ready for use, never gets out of order. No. 36, seeds a pound in 5 minutes, $1.00. No. 38, seeds a pound in a minute, $2.50. At hardware dealers.

THE ENTERPRISE M'F'G CO. OF PA.
Philadelphia, Pa.

Makers of the Enterprise Meat Choppers. Send two 2c stamps for the "Enterprising Housekeeper" — 200 recipes.

Tinned

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

The feeling of confidence continues to grow. The volume of business in staple lines has increased, although as previously stated purchases are largely made on the basis of replenishing supplies for immediate consumption. Money rates have still further declined, so that merchants are less hampered in this direction than they were.

Gold imports have again been a feature of the financial situation and the outlook is for a continuance of the influx. At the beginning of the week, the treasury gold reserve had risen to about $125,000,000 and confidence was accordingly stimulated thereby. There is no question but that these gold imports have exerted a powerful influence in relieving the financial tension, which was severe when they began.

In the stock market prices have been uniformly strong. Wool is in better demand and prices show an advancing tendency. Cotton goods are also stronger in price and in more active demand. The improved feeling in the iron and steel industry is one of the conspicuous features of the situation. Many iron furnaces have been put in blast, but it would appear that production is being resumed rather as a result of increased confidence than any notable accession to the consumptive demand. Several cotton and woolen mills have started up their machinery, but here the increase in the demand seems to justify the action. Collections continue unsatisfactory. The bank clearings for last week show a decrease as compared with the previous week of more than five per cent. and of fourteen per cent. as compared with the corresponding week of 1895.

BOSTON MINISTERS AND THE PILGRIMS.

A large audience at Pilgrim Hall last Monday heard a racy informal talk by Hon. Jonathan A. Lane, describing the experiences of The Congregationalist's pilgrims to England last summer. Remarks were made also by Messrs. Dunning and Whittemore. Special emphasis was laid on establishing closer relations between the Congregationalists of the two countries, not only to strengthen the denomination, but to forward by united action the larger interests of Christianity throughout the world. The generous hospitality of the English brethren was illustrated by pleasant incidents as well as the obligations resting on us, because of the friendship for American Christians which was so heartily shown to their representatives, to give to English friends most cordial welcome when they come to this country. It is still a long look ahead to the International Council of 1899 in Boston, but this meeting was a step in preparation for it and will help to strengthen the invitations to be sent across the Atlantic.

NOTEWORTHY FORTHCOMING MEETINGS.

Massachusetts Sunday School Association, Northampton, Oct. 6, 7.
American Board, Toledo, O., Oct. 6–9.
Indian Conference, Lake Mohonk, N. Y., Oct. 14–16.
American Missionary Association, Boston, Mass., Oct. 20–22.
Convention of the Open and Institutional Church League, Hartford, Ct., Oct. 20, 21.
Woman's Home Missionary Association, Annual Meeting, Boston, Oct. 28.
International Convention of Christian Workers, Louisville, Ky., Nov. 5–11.
National W. C. T. U. Convention, St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 13–18.

SICKNESS among children is prevalent at all seasons of the year, but can be avoided largely when they are properly cared for. Infant Health is the title of a valuable pamphlet accessible to all who will send address to the N. Y. Condensed Milk Co., N. Y. City.

GOSPEL OF HEALTH.

Glad Tidings Proclaimed by Thankful Ministers.

Hope for Weak and Debilitated People. How Health and Strength May Be Readily Obtained.

Can any words be stronger than those spoken by the conscientious minister? One knows and feels, instinctively, that such words come from the heart, and are uttered only with the earnest purpose of doing good to humanity. These preachers thus proclaim a new Gospel of Health to the sick and discouraged, which means renewed health, hope, happiness.

Rev. F. H. Buffum, of Winchester, N. H., who is Grand Army Chaplain for the State of New Hampshire, says:

"The remedial effect of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy on the weaknesses and nervous prostration of my wife was so positive and speedy that we can heartily testify to its undoubted merits."

Rev. G. L. Wells, of Hardwick, Vt., writes:

"I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy with most excellent results. It did great good for my wife. We think highly of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and cordially recommend it."

REV. G. L. WELLS.

Rev. C. D. R. Meacham, pastor Baptist Church, Townshend, Vt., states: "I am very glad to say in regard to Dr. Greene's great remedy that, when my blood was badly impoverished and my nervous system greatly impaired, Dr. Greene's medicine gave me wonderful relief."

Rev. Henry Langford, of Weston, W. Va., says: "I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and am wonderfully improved in health and strength. I can heartily and truthfully recommend it to the sick."

Clergymen strongly recommend the people to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, because they know it cures, and because it is a physician's prescription, the discovery of the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST. BOSTON.

THE BUSY WORLD.

The steady rise in the price of wheat and cotton will modify and affect the political situation in the Interior and South.

France has refused to extradite Mr. Tynan at the request of Great Britain, and our Department of State has also announced that his rights as an American citizen must be protected.

William E. Curtis, sent out to Mexico by the Chicago Record, after studying the life there, writes: "The condition of farm labor in Mexico is so degraded that even Chinese immigrants will not compete with it. . . . If you will take the verdict of all the men of experience I have seen, $5 in gold in the States is a good deal better than $10 in silver in Mexico."

Disaster follows disaster in Japan. Wind, rain, fire and earthquake have inflicted a series of calamities since Aug. 26 unprecedented in the history of the country. The great manufacturing city of Kobe has been ravaged by a fire which consumed more than a thousand blocks of residences, much municipal property, four temples and one theater, the total damage being estimated at 1,000,000 yen.

Sir Charles Tupper, the recently defeated Conservative leader in Canada, has not bettered his own reputation or the future of his party by his passionate denunciations of Lord Aberdeen in parliamentary debates during the past week. The votes of confidence given to the Liberal ministry on several important questions indicate that Premier Laurier can count not only upon the loyalty of the Liberals but upon the large number of Independents in Parliament.

Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the World's Christian Temperance Union, calls tenderly but earnestly upon the members of that worthy organization to organize meetings for the purpose of inducing the United States Government to co-operate with England in putting a stop to the massacres of Armenians; and to contribute funds for the relief of the women who are "dying two deaths in the bloody East." "May God deal with us at last as we deal with our Armenian sisters and brothers and their little ones in this hour of their overwhelming calamity."

We expected it. It was foreordained. Rev. D. N. Beach of Plymouth Church, Minneapolis, has thrown himself heartily into the campaign for municipal reform there, and in a recent Minneapolis Journal he published a letter revealing his detailed knowledge of local conditions and his intention to keep before his fellow-citizens the idea "that the business of a city must be carried on like the business of an individual, honestly and prudently, and that no combine which for the time may flourish is to be permitted permanently to rule this city and squander its resources."

EDUCATION.

—— Prof. Benjamin Ide Wheeler of Cornell University declines the offer of the presidency of Rochester University, N. Y.

—— Lasell Seminary, Auburndale, opened Sept. 17, with every accommodation taken. The building shows signs of renovation and various changes have been made.

—— Amherst College will have perpetual reason for grateful remembrance of the Pratt family of Brooklyn. Charles M., class of '79, gave most of the cost of the gymnasium. Frederick B., '87, gave the athletic field ($20,000), and now George D., '93, pays the expense of the infirmary, probably about $17,000, the building to be completed next spring. Reckoning in what Brooklyn is profiting and is perennially to profit by the Pratt Institute, her citizens and all lovers of good deeds may well pray, May that tribe increase!

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS. CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

IT IS JUST AS EASY, and a heap more sensible, to use a little care in the selection of materials when having painting done and secure the best result as it is to take chances and use mixtures of which you know nothing. To be sure of getting examine the brand (see list genuine brands). Any shade or color desired can be easily obtained by using NATIONAL LEAD CO.'s brands of Pure White Lead and Tinting Colors.

Pure White Lead

Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

NATIONAL LEAD CO.,
1 Broadway, New York.

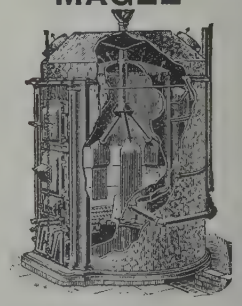
MAGEE RANGES & HEATERS ARE THE BEST
ALWAYS RECIEVE HIGHEST AWARD

MAGEE

GRAND RANGE.

THE MOST ECONOMICAL and EFFECTIVE HEATING & COOKING APPARATUS in the WORLD.

MAGEE



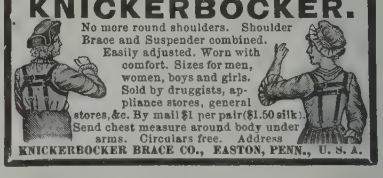
BOSTON HEATER.

YOU SHOULD SEE the "MAGEE" Ranges and Heaters, embodying the latest developments in the manufacture of heating and cooking apparatus. Famous on account of their patented features, and appreciated and praised by users everywhere. Sold by leading dealers. Correspondence solicited.

MAGEE FURNACE CO., 32-38 UNION ST., BOSTON.
AGENCIES: 86 LAKE ST., CHICAGO. 27 NEW MONTGOMERY ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

BRECK'S POULTRY AND SWINE MEAL "Makes hens make money." Used by the most successful Judges and Poultrymen in the United States. Enough for 30 hens one month delivered anywhere for $1. "Points for Poultry Raisers," 4th edition, 64 pages mailed free. Please mention this publication.
Everything for Farm, Garden, Lawn Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston, Mass. Manufacturers of Poultry Supplies.

The Best is the Cheapest.
JAEGER
PURE WOOL UNDERWEAR, SOCKS, STOCKINGS, ABDOMINAL BANDS, BLANKETS, RUGS, SHAWLS, CORSETS, CYCLING OUTFITS, BOOTS AND SHOES, etc., etc.
Illustrated Catalogue Free by Mail.
IN NEW YORK CITY:
MAIN RETAIL, 176 Fifth Ave., below 23d St.,
UPTOWN BRANCH, 1189 Broadway, near 28th St.,
DOWNTOWN DEPOT, 133 Broadway, bet. Cortlandt St.,
HARLEM BRANCH, 348 West 125th Street.
Not Genuine without this Trade Mark
NORMAL
Our Goods are tested for purity and durability.
PURE WARRANTED WOOL

KNICKERBOCKER.


No more round shoulders. Shoulder Brace and Suspender combined. Easily adjusted. Worn with comfort. Sizes for men, women, boys and girls. Sold by druggists, appliance stores, general stores, &c. By mail $1 per pair ($1.50 silk). Send chest measure around body under arms. Circulars free. Address
KNICKERBOCKER BRACE CO., EASTON, PENN., U. S. A.

The NEW Form of Admission

The committee appointed by the National Council to prepare a new Form of Admission have reported, and their Form of Admission is now printed in convenient form as an 8 pp. leaflet, No. 7 of the Congregationalist Leaflet series.
Sent, postpaid, for 3 cts.; 10 copies, 25 cts.; 100 copies, $2.00.

IT WILL SERVE THE INTERESTS OF ALL CONCERNED IF, IN CORRESPONDENCE SUGGESTED BY ANNOUNCEMENTS IN OUR ADVERTISING COLUMNS, MENTION IS MADE OF THE FACT THAT THE ADVERTISEMENT WAS SEEN IN THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

JUBILEE YEAR FUND TO RAISE $100,000 IN SHARES OF $50 EACH.

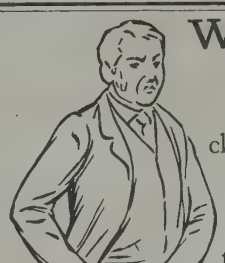
James L. Estey, Worcester, Mass.
J. E. Northrop, Ivoryton, Ct., two shares.
Mrs. J. E. Northrop, Ivoryton, Ct., two shares.
Congregational Church, Mt. Carmel, Ct.
Congregational Church and Rev. J. C. Holbrook, D. D., Stockton, Cal.
Women's Missionary Society, Akron, O., two shares.
R. E. Hungerford, Badlyme, Ct.
Sarah L. Bishop, North Woodstock, Ct.
Esther E. Bishop, North Woodstock, Ct.
A. P. Smith, Stowe, Vt.
Congregational Church, Marion, Ala.
F. G. Platt, New Britain, Ct.
Ladies' Missionary Auxiliary, Plymouth Church, Worcester, Mass.
Women's Auxiliary, Cheyenne, Wyo.
Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Aldrich, Roxbury, Mass.
Ladies' Home Missionary Society, of Union Church, Boston, Mass., two shares.
South Church, Andover, Mass., two shares.
S. S. Class of Deacon E. C. Hungerford, Chester, Ct.
A Friend, Tamworth, N. H.
Miss Anna C. Park, Bennington, Vt.
Lucy J. Pease, New Britain, Ct.
Bethany Association, North Church, Haverhill, Mass.
Daniel Smith, Parsonsfield, Me.
Mrs. Henry Farnham, New Haven, Ct.
Mrs. S. r. Newell, Bristol, Ct.
Burrell School, Selma, Ala.
Union Church, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., two shares.
Mary W. Thompson, Pembroke, N. H.
Women's Home Missionary Society, First Congregational Church, Montclair, N. J.
Vine Women's Home Missionary Society, Cincinnati, O.
A Friend, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Charles A. Beach, Syracuse, N. Y.
Mrs. Helen P. Camp, Waterbury, Ct.
John H. Denison, Williamstown, Mass.
Woman's Benevolent society, Waterbury, Ct.
Y. P. S. C. E., Walnut Avenue Church, Roxbury, Mass.
Congregational Church, Hartford, Vt.
Village Congregational Church, Medway, Mass.
Mrs. Abby B. Smith, Worcester, Mass.
Congregational Church, Claridon, O.
Rev. E. F. Baird, Mallet Creek, O.
Mrs. M. A. Keep, Oberlin, O.
Union Meeting at Second Congregational Church, Waterbury, Ct.
C. B. Bouton, Chicago, Ill.
Mrs. G. L. Gillett's Bible Class, Grand Ave. Church, Milwaukee, Wis.
E. M. Carey, Red Oak, Io.
Congregational Church, Moline, Ill.
Congregational Church, Geneseo, Ill.
Congregational Church, Evanston, Ill., two shares.
J. B. Shaw, Paxton, Ill.
A Friend, Paxton, Ill.
Women's Home Missionary Society, Oak Park, Ill.
H. W. Chandler, Madison, Wis.
Rev. H. J. Ferris, Columbus, Wis.
Mrs. Catharine E. Chadbourne, Columbus, Wis.
First Congregational Church, Beloit, Wis.
Rev. Geo. R. Leavitt, D. D., Beloit, Wis.
Congregational Church, Oak Park, Ill., three shares.
First Congregational Church, Chicago, Ill., two shares.
Thomas D. Catlin, Ottawa, Ill.
Mrs. J. B. Bittinger and Miss Lucy Bittinger, Sewickley, Pa.
E. W. Peirce and H. F. Goffe, in memory of E. W. Goffe, Millbury, Mass.
East Congregational Church, Ware, Mass.
From a Friend, Santa Barbara, Cal.
Miss Mary P. Lord, Wellesley, Mass.
A Friend, New Haven, Vt.
Merrill E. Gates, LL. D., Amherst, Mass.
Mrs. Mary C. Gates, Amherst, Mass.
Congregational Church, Auburndale, Mass., ad'l.
Ladies of First Church, Woburn, Mass., two shares.
Misses M. E. and F. G. Thayer, Boston, Mass., two shares.
Woman's Home Missionary Society, Barre, Mass.
Second Congregational Church, Dorchester, Mass.
Faculty and Students of Mt. Holyoke College, So. Hadley, Mass.
W. H. Richardson, W. Springfield, Mass.
Two S. S. Classes and Mr. C. S. Tolman, of Rollstone Congregational Church, Fitchburg, Mass.
Church Member, Plainville, Ct.
Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Skinner, in memory of Rev. Austin Willey, Northfield, Minn.
Mrs. Dwight R. Tyler, of First Congregational Church, Griswold, Ct.
First Congregational Church, Middletown, Ct.
First Congregational Church, Janesville, Wis.
Congregational Church, Bozrah, Ct.
First Church Woman's Home Missionary Union, Akron, O.
Mrs. Huldah I. Gage, Providence, R. I.
J. L. A., Crow Agency, Mont.
A Friend, Newton Highlands, Mass.
Old South Congregational Church, Hallowell, Me.
Mrs. P. A. Case, Kenduskeag, Me.
In Memoriam of Z. W., St. Johnsbury, Vt.
The Ladies' Beneficent Society and the Y. L. Auxiliary of Central Church, Fall River, Mass.
Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Lenox, Mass.
Mrs. Geo. Westinghouse, Lenox, Mass.
Geo. Higginson, Lenox, Mass.
Wm. H. Strong, Detroit, Mich.
Barak Maxwell, Wells, Me.
Union Service, New Britain, Ct.
First Congregational S. S., Germantown, Pa.
Class of Young Girls, S. S., Franklin Street Congregational Church, Manchester, N. H.
B. B. Brown, Prospect, Ct.
Congregational Church, South Norwalk, Ct., three shares.
Rev. W. H. Thrall, in memory of Mrs. W. H. Thrall, Huron, S. D.
Miss M. H. Hilliard, Manchester, Ct.
Mrs. Ann V. Bailey, Beverly, Mass.
First Congregational Church, Beloit, Wis., ad'l.
Mrs. M. C. Town, Elgin, Ill.
Miss Clara I. Sage, Guilford, Ct., two shares.
First Congregational Church, Colorado Springs, Col.
Abbott Academy, Andover, Mass.
Mrs. E. B. Ripley, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.
Cent. Union of First Church, Concord, N. H.
Friend in First Church, Concord, N. H.
Mrs. Mary K. Gannett, Tamworth, N. H., two shares.
Women's Congregational Home Missionary Union Auxiliary, Kensington, Ct.
Emeline J. Kellogg, Manchester, Vt.
Andrus March, Charlton City, Mass.
Caroline Crowell, Haverhill, Mass.
Christian Union Congregational Church, Upper Montclair, N. J.
Mrs. S. M. Cowles, Kensington, Ct.
Mrs. M. A. Bachelor, Whitinsville, Mass.
Mrs. C. A. Ransom, Wellesley, Mass.
Central Union South Church, Concord, N. H.
Two Friends, Wellesley, Mass., two shares.
Woman's Missionary Society, River Falls, Wis.
First Congregational Church, Great Barrington, Mass.
Rev. James W. Bixler, Trustee, New London, Ct.
Frank L. Andrews, Fall River, Mass.
Mrs. R. S. Curtis, Hampden, Me.
Second Congregational Church, Manchester, Ct.
Plymouth Congregational Sunday School, Worcester, Mass.
Tabitha L. Cushman, East Los Angeles, Cal.
Congregational Sunday School, Greenville, N. H.
"Debtor to the A. M. A.," Auburndale, Mass.
Mrs. Ellen M. Wellman, Malden, Mass.
W. H. M. A., Auxiliary of Church of the Pilgrimage, Plymouth, Mass.
Congregational Church, Yankton, S. D.
Walnut Hills Woman's Home Missionary Society, Cincinnati, O.
John M. Williams, Evanston, Ill.
Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord Thomson, Medina, O.
Congregational Church, Granby, Mass.
Mrs. Lota B. White Wales, in memory of Rev. O. H. White, D. D., Dorchester, Mass.
A Friend, New Britain, Ct.
Friends, Milford, N. H., two shares.
Ladies in Second Congregational Church, West Winsted, Ct.
Miss Anna E. Farrington, through Woman's Home Missionary Union of North Carolina, Oaks, N. C.
Woman's Missionary Society, Hancock, Mich.
A Friend, Concord, N. H., two shares.
Mrs. S. A. Pratt, Worcester, Mass.
Evangelical Congregational Church, Westboro, Mass.
Congregational Church, Oakham, Mass.
Two Friends, Park Street Congregational Church, Boston, Mass.
Individuals in Congregational Church, Cumberland Center, Me.
Belle Olinger, Williamsburg, Ky.
Mrs. W. H. Catlin, Meriden, Ct.
Woman's Association, First Ch., Detroit, Mich.
Residents, Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

Previously reported.	109
Subscriptions reported above,	175
Total number of shares reported	284

YOU need Hood's Sarsaparilla to enrich and purify your blood, create an appetite and give sweet, refreshing sleep.

"Every drop worth a dollar," is what a gentleman said of Pond's Extract. That is rather extravagant, but still, when you think of the inestimable value of a bottle of Pond's Extract in the house, he was not so far out of the way.

THE REASON FOR THE CROWD.—There has been an immense crowd of people at the warerooms of the Paine Furniture Co. in the last two weeks. They have been drawn there by the interesting exhibition of reproductions of famous antique pieces of furniture, which this house has recently announced. One of these interesting pieces, an old Dutch settle, is pictured and described in another column of this paper. Our readers may be interested to read about it.



Who pays for all the clothes, etc., that are worn out and torn to pieces in the wash? Whoever it is, he or she ought to insist that the washing shall be done with Pearline, and with Pearline only. Then that ruinous, expensive rub, rub, rub, over the washboard, which makes all the trouble, will be done away with. It isn't a little matter, either, this needless wear and tear. It's big enough to pay any man to look after it, and stop it. Pearline saves not only hard work, but hard-earned money. 493

Millions NOW USE Pearline

DEAF-NESS & head noises relieved by Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums—helps where medicine fails; stops the progress of deafness; concentrates sound waves to one point upon Natural Drum, also takes the place of Natural Drums when wholly or partially destroyed; invisible, comfortable, safe—no wire or strings to irritate. For full information write or call for 144-page book on Deafness and Testimonials, FREE. WILSON EAR DRUM CO., Offices { 335 Trust Bdg., Louisville, Ky. 1122 Broadway, (Room 351), New York.

A Positive cure for Coughs, Bronchitis and all affections of the Throat, Lungs and Chest.

Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam

It loosens the cough, clears the lungs, allays irritation and leaves the organs sound and well.

Prices, 35 and 75 cents a bottle.
Sold by all Druggists.

CATARRH

COLD IN HEAD

NASAL CATARRH is a LOCAL DISEASE and is the result of colds and sudden climatic changes.

This remedy does not contain mercury or any other injurious drug.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Opens and cleans the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals and Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Is quickly absorbed. Gives relief at once. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; samples 10c. by mail.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Grand National Prize of 16,600 francs at Paris

Quina-Laroche

Possesses in the highest degree the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark. Endorsed by the medical faculty as the best remedy for Fever and Ague, Malaria, Poorness of the Blood, General Debility and Wasting Diseases; Increases the Appetite, Strengthens the Nerves and builds up the entire system.

Paris: 22 Rue Drouot
New York: E. FOUGERA & CO.
26-30 N. William St.

Does Your Hair Fall Out?

Is it getting thin—lessening in volume? If so, I can help you. If totally bald do not write. Select family patronage for ten years. Send self-addressed stamped envelope to Miss RACHEL T. WYATT, Centerville, Mass.

DROPSY TREATED FREE Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 Days Treatment Free by mail.
Drs. Green & Sons, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

The "Harris" Method of Giving

This little tract has been of immense service to the churches in suggesting systematic methods of giving. It was first published as an article in the Congregationalist, and attracted wide notice. Many large editions of the "True Method of Giving" in its present form have been sold. Price, 100 copies, $2.50; 35 copies, $1.00.
For sale at the office of The Congregationalist, Boston.

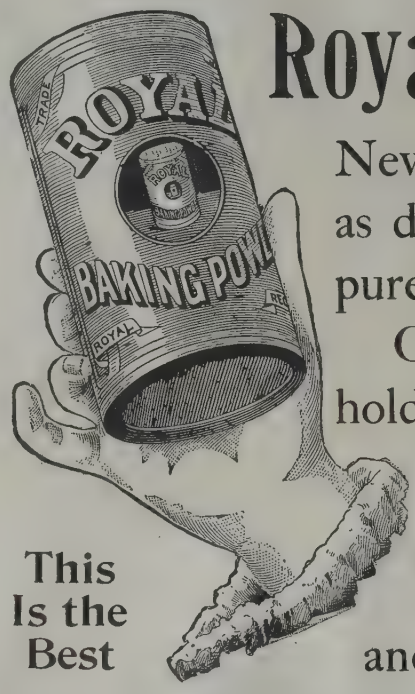
"He that Works Easily Works Successfully." 'Tis very easy to clean house with . . . . .

SAPOLIO



Royal Baking Powder

Never cakes or spoils, and if used as directed always makes delicious, pure, wholesome, perfect food.

Other baking powders will not hold their leavening strength until required for use. They may work one day but fail the next. Such powders are a vexation, and waste good flour, eggs and butter. ROYAL works uniformly. The last spoonful in the can is as good as the first.

This Is the Best

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

INFANTS', CHILDREN'S, MISSES' AND LADIES'

Autumn Garments.

Newest styles now on exhibition and arriving daily, which we take pleasure in showing even if you have no intention of buying.

SPECIAL FOR THIS WEEK:

Ladies' Beaver Cloth Capes, very full and shapely, edged with imitation seal fur trimming, is noteworthy at

$3.98

Ladies' Jackets—sixty of them—being manufacturers' models—no two alike—absolutely new styles—tans, browns, blue and black, worth $15, $18 and $20, your choice for $10

Infants' Long and Short Coats, Dresses and Caps, etc., at exceptionally low prices.

DRESS GOODS.

The appreciation you have shown us during this opening week of our NEW DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT is very gratifying to us. Our effort is to have the best, up-to-date, serviceable goods at lowest living prices.

GILCHRIST & Co.,

WINTER STREET, BOSTON.

INFANCY

What does it mean to the mother who cannot nurse her own babe? Without NESTLÉS FOOD it means anxiety, worry, the health, perhaps the life, of her baby. Those mothers who use NESTLÉ'S FOOD tell of healthy, strong, vigorous children—ask some of them—their experience is worth more to you than our tale of facts.

Nestlé's Food is prepared with water only. Scarlet Fever, Tuberculosis, Typhoid Fever and other deadly disease germs are conveyed in cow's milk. Our "Book for Mothers," full of valuable hints to mothers, and a sample can of Nestlé's Food, free.

THOS. LEEMING & CO., 73 Warren St., New York,

SOLE AGENTS FOR

NESTLÉ'S FOOD.

Volume LXXXI Number 41

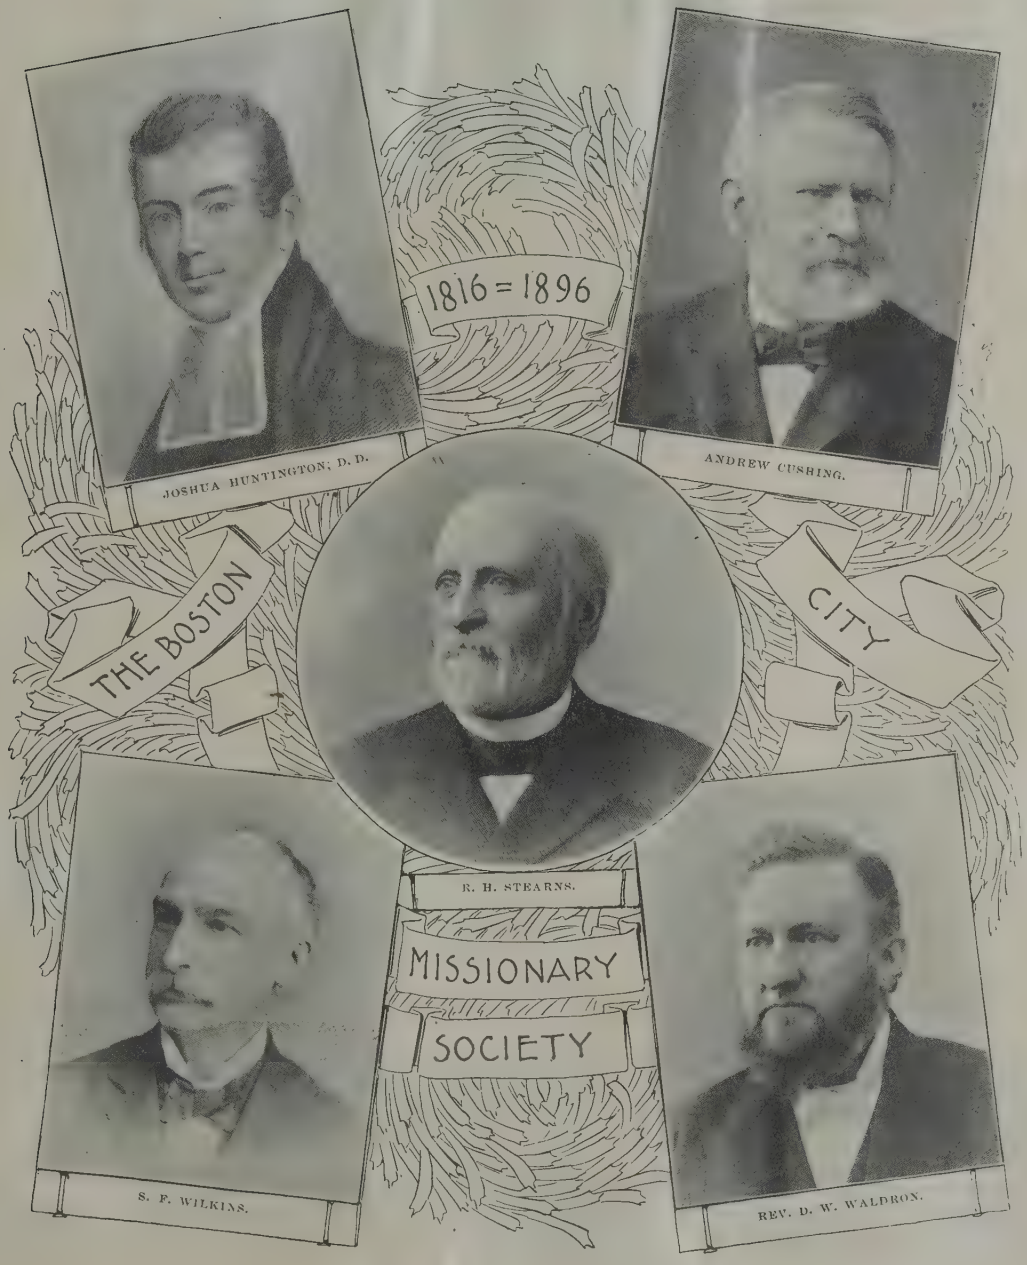
THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 8 October 1896



HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.'S

NEW BOOKS.

Christianity and Social Problems.

By LYMAN ABBOTT, D. D., author of "The Evolution of Christianity," etc. 16mo, $1 25.

Dr. Abbott here gathers the fruit of years of thought and observation on the social order and disorders of the age, and endeavors to apply Christ's teaching on social questions to present conditions.

A Year in the Fields.

Eight of JOHN BURROUGHS's delightful outdoor papers, with 20 charming pictures from photographs and an Introduction, by CLIFTON JOHNSON. 12mo, gilt top, $1.50.

Judith and Holofernes.

A Poem. By THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH. Crown 8vo, gilt top, $1.25.

The old Maccabean story, with its Oriental scenes and characters, is told with all the imaginative charm and the literary felicity which belong to Mr. Aldrich.

The Story of Aaron, so-called, the Son of Ben Ali.

A Sequel to "Little Mr. Thimblefinger and His Queer Country," and "Mr. Rabbit at Home." By JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS. With 25 Illustrations by OLIVER HERFORD Square 8vo, illuminated cover, $2 00.

Aaron can talk with animals; he tells the secret to the "Thimblefinger" children, and here are the stories they heard.

A Little Girl of Long Ago.

By ELIZA ORNE WHITE, author of "Winterborough," "The Coming of Theodora," etc A charming companion volume to Miss White's "When Molly was Six." With cover design and two other illustrations. Square 16mo, $1 00.

The Republic of Childhood.

By Mrs. WIGGIN and NORA A. SMITH.

I. FRŒBEL'S GIFTS
II. FRŒBEL'S OCCUPATIONS.
III KINDERGARTEN PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE.

Three very interesting books of great value to Kindergartners and Mothers of young children. Price, $1.00 each.

Sold by Booksellers. Sent, postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston.

The Council MANUAL for a Congregational Church.

Prepared by the Committee of seven appointed by the National Council of Congregational Churches for that purpose.

The Manual is printed in two parts, separable if desired. Part I. is the Church Manual, which contains:—1. A code of By-Laws; 2. Statements of doctrine as set forth in the Burial Hill Declaration of faith, adopted in 1865, and the one prepared by the National Commission of 1883; 3. A form for the reception of members.

Part II. contains information and suggestion essential to those not familiar with Congregational history, principles, and usages, and of value to all. It contains:—1. A brief sketch of Congregational history; 2 The principles and working of our polity; 3. The method of organizing a Congregational church; 4. A few forms of letters missive; 5. Forms relating to the dismission of church members.

Price 10 cents; twenty-five copies, 7 cts. each; 100 copies, 5 cts. each. Postage additional. In leatherette covers, 20 cts.

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,
Boston and Chicago.

GREAT SPECIAL SALE

POSITIVELY LIMITED TO NOVEMBER 30.

That the American people are quick to recognize genuine merit and to manifest their appreciation by hearty response is amply shown by the present flood of orders for the splendid new and richly illustrated edition of our great Standard Dictionary and Encyclopædia of all the World's Knowledge. From all parts of the country come urgent requests to extend the limit of our Great Special Offer, and, in order that none may be disappointed, we have decided to make an extension to November 30. This extremely liberal offer is made for the sole purpose of advertising our superb work of general reference. We cannot hope to make money by it, for the low prices, on such very easy terms, barely pay for paper, printing and binding, saying nothing of the original outlay of over $750,000.00 for the work of editors, artists and engravers; but the immense amount of talk created will help to make known and popularize that greatest of all modern and entirely up-to-the-times household reference libraries, the ENCYCLOPEDIC DICTIONARY.

UNTIL NOVEMBER 30 this truly marvelous work will be furnished any reader of this announcement on receipt of only $1.00 in cash and the remainder in small monthly payments, amounting to about five cents a day. After November 30 prices will be immediately restored to regular rates—$42.00 to $70 00 a set, according to binding.

WE CHALLENGE COMPARISON WITH ALL THE WORLD!

JUST AS THEY LOOK

Four massive volumes, each 9 in. wide, 11½ in. long, 3 in. thick, containing 5,359 pages. 16,000 columns of clear type matter. 3,000 illustrations; 250,000 words defined, 50,000 encyclopædic topics. Weight, about 40 lbs.

THIS HANDSOME BOOKCASE FREE OF CHARGE.

This Superb New Edition

Revised to June 1, 1896, contains thousands of the newer words not found in any other reference book on earth, including the very latest coinages of 1896, such as "Roentgen rays," "aseptoin," "vitascope," "sklagraph," "fluroscope," etc. It is the only up-to-date dictionary, the most practical encyclopædia, and also a Genuine Triumph of Art!

with its magnificent array of chromatic plates in 17 COLORS, dozens of single and double-page engravings in delicate monotone, and 3,000 artistic text illustrations.

100 EDITORS

and thousands of special contributors from all over the globe have devoted their best talents to the preparation of this marvelous condensation of all the world's knowledge. Look at the list! The great Prof. Huxley on zoology and physiology; Prof. Richard A. Proctor, astronomy; Sir John Stainer, music; Hunter, Morris, Estoclet, Herrtage, Williams—the most brilliant educators of the nineteenth century.

REMEMBER! This great work is not for sale in any bookstore, and can be obtained only from us or our authorized representatives, who will show their credentials.

More than $750,000 Required to Produce this Work.

IT IS THE LATEST AND BEST DICTIONARY of our language. Each legitimate English word is exhaustively treated as to its origin, history, development, spelling, pronunciation, and various meanings.

IT IS A CONCISE ENCYCLOPÆDIA of anatomy, botany, chemistry, zoölogy, geology, art, music, physics, philosophy, mathematics, mechanics, theology, Biblical research, etc. 50,000 separate encyclopædic subjects tersely treated by the master minds of our generation.

IT IS A SUPERB LIBRARY BOOK, printed on high grade white paper from plates never before on press, durably bound, and containing the most superb illustrations, in 17 colors and in monotone, ever made for any reference work.

IT IS BETTER THAN ALL OTHER DICTIONARIES because it is the latest and most complete, containing nearly twice as many words as are in the largest "unabridged," and treating 20,000 more encyclopædic subjects than are covered by other cyclopædias costing from $50 to $200. There is no other publication in its class.

TWO EXPERT OPINIONS—THOUSANDS SIMILAR.

Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst.—"The Encyclopædic Dictionary is a library condensed into four volumes; a ton of diffusiveness reduced to forty pounds of quintessence, and, withal, as delicate in detail as it is comprehensive in contents."

"Scientific American" New York.—"It forms in itself a library for the busy man of affairs, the mechanic ambitious to advance himself in his line, or the student or apprentice just making a beginning."

Adopted as the Standard in Public Schools Throughout the Country.

SEND US YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS with 10 cents to pay postage, for our handsome book of specimen pages, samples of colored plates and other illustrations.

HOW TO SECURE THIS GREAT BARGAIN.—Send $1.00 and the entire four handsome volumes, bound in cloth, will be forwarded. Every month thereafter send $1.50 for twelve months, making a total payment of $19 00 (regular price of this style $42.00). If half russia style is desired, the monthly payments are $2 00 until $25 00 is paid (regular price of this style $52.50). If full sheep style is wanted, monthly payments are $2.50 until $31.00 is paid (regular price of this style $60 00). The first payment in any case is only One Dollar. To anyone wishing to pay all cash we allow a discount of ten per cent., and furnish the bookcase free of charge; otherwise, the bookcase is $1.50, which must be paid in advance. This allowance is practically cost of keeping the account if purchased on monthly payment plan. We always recommend the half russia binding as the most serviceable. (When ordering be sure to mention style of binding wanted.) Understand, the complete set of four volumes is sent after the first payment of $1.00, which gives you the use of them for a year while paying the remainder at the rate of only a few cents a day. All freight or express charges must be paid by the purchaser That you will be entirely satisfied is shown by our willingness to send you a valuable set of books upon payment of only $1.00. We refer to any Bank, any Newspaper, or any Commercial Agency in Philadelphia. Agents Wanted. Mention this paper.

Books Guaranteed as Represented or Money Refunded if Returned within 10 Days.

SYNDICATE PUBLISHING CO., 234 S. Eighth St., Philadelphia.

BAILEY'S compound, light-spreading, Silver-plated Corrugated Glass reflectors. The most perfect light ever made for CHURCHES, Halls, etc.

REFLECTORS Handsome designs for electric light, gas and oil. Catalogue and price list free.
BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

OLD BOOKS BOUGHT.
LIBRARIES AND SMALL PARCELS OF BOOKS PURCHASED.
Save the expense and delay of Auction Sales.
N. J. BARTLETT & CO., 28 Cornhill, Boston

HIGHEST PRAISE. FOR SABBATH SCHOOLS. $30 per 100.
Christian Endeavor Hymns. $30 per 100.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' NEW BOOKS.

SENTIMENTAL TOMMY. (Ready Oct. 17th.)

The Story of his Boyhood. By James M. Barrie. Illustrated by William Hatherell. 12mo, $1.50.

"Sentimental Tommy" has been the success of the year during its serial publication It has been the one serial talked of, and, as more than one critic has said, to be "eagerly waited for." The conception of the story is entirely unique—that of making the loves and tragedies of his elders tell themselves through Tommy's mind and Tommy's experiences; and when doing this Mr. Barrie has made Tommy one of the most delightful characters in fiction, he has made a book which, not to speak of its genius, is one of the most entertaining of the time.

New Books by R. L. Stevenson.

In the South Seas. With map. 12mo, $1 50.

Made up from the interesting sketches contributed to periodicals by Mr. Stevenson, narrating his experiences and observations during cruises in the Marquesas, Paumotus and the Gilbert Islands.

Fables. 16mo, $1 00.

Mr. Stevenson's delightful fables are here collected and issued for the first time in book form, uniform with the "Vailima Letters."

New Books by Eugene Field.

Songs and Other Verse. 12mo, $1.25.

Second Book of Tales. 12mo, $1 25.

These two new volumes are made up of a selection of the best of Mr. Field's verses and tales remaining unpublished in book form at the time of his death, and contain some of his most charming work. A new edition of "The Holy Cross, and Other Tales" is also now issued, containing five additional tales.

Love in Old Cloathes,

And Other Stories. By H. C. BUNNER. With 12 full-page illustrations by A Castaigne, W. T. Smedley and Orson Lowell. 12mo, $1.50.

This volume of stories by Mr. Bunner, collected under the title of one which his readers will remember affectionately, is marked throughout by the qualities which have endeared this master of the short story to so large a circle. The volume brings into permanent form some of the best things he ever wrote.

MRS. CLIFF'S YACHT.

By Frank R. Stockton. Illustrated by A. Forestier. 12mo, $1.50.

The many readers of Mr. Stockton's popular story, "The Adventures of Captain Horn," need no introduction to Mrs. Cliff. The further experiences of that interesting lady are here told with all of Mr. Stockton's breeziness of style and whimsical humor All who read "The Adventures of Captain Horn" will be eager to take up this sequel and renew their acquaintance with Mrs. Cliff, while new readers will find in her one of Mr. Stockton's most original and entertaining characters.

The Sprightly Romance of Marsac.

By MOLLY ELLIOT SEAWELL. Illustrated by Gustave Verbeck. 12mo, $1.25.

Marsac is a real discovery of Miss Seawell's. His character is best described as "sprightly," and the way in which the wit and good nature of this Bohemian of the Latin Quarter triumph over adverse circumstances and land him and his friend in affluence and bliss is told in a brisk narrative that recalls Mürger. The illustrations are numerous, and as original as the text.

A Tragic Idyl.

By PAUL BOURGET. 12mo, $1.50.

The theme of M. Bourget's new novel is the warfare between love and friendship. It is an elaborate social study as well as a novel of absorbing interest, distinguished by the author's well-known analytic power and individual style. The opening scene is in the famous gambling Casino of Monte Carlo, and the reader is introduced at once to the cosmopolitan society which M. Bourget knows so well how to depict.

The Rogue's March.

A Romance. By E. W. HORNUNG. 12mo, $1.50.

Thrilling incidents and daring adventures abound in Mr. Hornung's romance. No one who has read the author's "Irralie's Bushranger" and other Australian stories needs any assurance of the fascinating interest of that part of his new novel dealing with Australian scenes and types; and it is only necessary to say that the English as well as the Australian experiences of the much-wronged hero are told with characteristic dash and spirit.

THE LAST QUARTER CENTURY IN THE UNITED STATES.

By E. Benjamin Andrews, President of Brown University. With 350 Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo, $6.00.

President Andrews's work is absolutely unique. Never before have the many history-making events of this period been gathered together in a historical narrative by a competent hand. The illustrations, prepared at a great expense, are remarkable for their combination of artistic charm with absolute historical accuracy. Since its publication in SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE the History has been thoroughly revised and increased in size almost one-half, thus making it possible to include many topics omitted before on account of lack of space.

The Edge of the Orient.

By ROBERT HOWARD RUSSELL. With 130 Illustrations. 12mo, $2 00.

An account of an interesting trip along the picturesque coast of Dalmatia and Montenegro, and continuing through Constantinople and the Eastern coast of Asia Minor to Cairo and the Nile. He brings to the portrayal of these Eastern localities a fresh eye and a graphic and picturesque style.

In Ole Virginia.

By THOMAS NELSON PAGE. With 24 full-page Illustrations by A. B. Frost, Howard Pyle, W. T. Smedley, C. S. Reinhart, A. Castaigne and B. W. Clinedinst 12mo, $2.50.

This handsome volume contains Mr. Page's famous stories of Southern life—"Marse Chan," "Meh Lady," "Polly," "Unc' Edinburg," "Ole Stracted" and "No Haid Pawn"—with many beautiful illustrations.

Colonial Days in Old New York.

By ALICE MORSE EARLE. 12mo, $1.25.

Mrs. Earle here describes the daily life, the habits, the dress, occupations, furniture, domestic economy, the characteristic customs of Dutch times in Old New York. She treats the subject as graphically and humorously as she treated New England in her former well-known books, "Sabbath in Puritan New England" and "Customs and Fashions of Old New England."

HISTORY OF CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE.

By Professor George P. Fisher, Yale University. (International Theological Library.) Crown 8vo, $2.50 net.

"I know of no work that, in point of accuracy, comprehensiveness and intelligibility, can be compared with this."—Prof. ALBERT NEWMAN, Toronto, Can.

"It is to me quite a marvel how a book of this kind can be written so accurately to scale. It could only be done by one who had a very complete command of all the periods."—Prof. WILLIAM SANDAY, Oxford.

Problems of Modern Democracy.

By E. L. GODKIN. 8vo, $2.00.

A new volume of essays by an eminent journalist, dealing with the various questions of public, vital and timely interest arising out of the great political force of the modern world—Democracy.

The Sense of Beauty.

By GEORGE SANTAYANA, Lecturer at Harvard University. 12mo, $1.50

The author's theory of æsthetics is original and interesting, and is elaborated in a style distinguished for its subtlety, clearness and grace.

With Open Face;

Or, Jesus Mirrored in Matthew, Mark and Luke. By A. B. BRUCE, D. D. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

This volume presents popular sketches of the spirit and teachings of our Lord as exhibited in selected scenes from the Evangelic Records.

THE NATIONAL COOK BOOK.

By Marion Harland and Christine Terhune Herrick. 12mo, $1 50.

This work is not a revision of old material, but is entirely new in every respect, and has been in preparation during a period of seven years. It contains 1,000 recipes carefully prepared in the light of the latest methods of cooking and serving. In addition to the value and interest the volume possesses as the joint work of two recognized authorities on domestic economy, the book is unique in that it includes dishes of various nations, adapted to the use of American housewives. An additional feature of value is a department devoted to the diet of children.

THE IVORY SERIES. New Volumes.

One of the Visconti.

By EVA WILDER (MCGLASSON) BRODHEAD. 16mo, 75 cents.

A charming love story, the scene of which is laid in Naples, the hero being a young Kentuckian, and the heroine of the old and famous Visconti family

A Book of Martyrs.

By CORNELIA ATWOOD PRATT. 16mo, 75 cents.

Short stories of the everyday tragedies, mostly domestic, of life in the Central West, revealing an extraordinary knowledge of human nature and a masterly art in narration.

Previous Volumes: Amos Judd. By J. A. MITCHELL, Editor of Life Seventh Edition—Ia. A Love Story. By "Q" (ARTHUR T. QUILLER-COUCH).—Irralie's Bushranger. By E. W. HORNUNG.—A Master Spirit. By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.—The Suicide Club. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.—Madame Delphine. By GEORGE W. CABLE. Each, 16mo, 75 cents.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, 153-157 Fifth Avenue, New York.

THE

MACMILLAN COMPANY'S

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Gospel for an Age of Doubt:

BEING THE YALE LECTURES ON PREACHING FOR 1896.

By HENRY VAN DYKE, D. D., author of "The Reality of Religion," "Story of the Psalms," "Little Rivers," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1 75.

"Dr. Van Dyke is devout and loyal to his faith, but he recognizes in a marked degree the sincerity and even value of honest doubt. It is needless to say—for the lectures themselves say it—that Dr. Van Dyke believes firmly in the supernatural revelation of religious truth. It is this faith coupled with his understanding of and sympathy with the inquiring spirit of the age which has filled his lecture-room at New Haven to overflowing, and which will command for his lectures when they appear in book form a wide circle of readers."

NEW VOLUME.

History, Prophecy and the Monuments;

Or, Israel and the Nations.

By JAMES FREDERICK MCCURDY, Ph. D., LL. D. Vol. II. To the Fall of Nineveh. 8vo, cloth, $3.00, net.

ALREADY PUBLISHED.

Vol. I. To the Downfall of Samaria. 8vo, $3 00, net.

The third volume will appear early in 1897.

"It is a notable contribution to historical knowledge, and is in the highest degree scholarly."—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

"The author of this work has given us a scholarly carefully prepared and valuable study of the written and monumental records containing the history of Israel."—Herald and Presbyter.

"A work which American scholarship has just reason to feel proud of. It is a notable contribution to an important subject. . . . It is to be heartily recommended to the general public as a very useful compendium. For Bible readers and Bible students alike it is an invaluable guide."—New World.

NEW VOLUME.

The Modern Reader's Bible.

A Series of Books from the Sacred Scriptures, presented in Modern Literary Form. Each number of the Series edited with an Introduction by RICHARD G. MOULTON, M. A. (Camb.), Ph. D. (Penn.), Professor of Literature in English in the University of Chicago. 18mo, cloth, each 50 cents; or, in paste grain morocco, gilt top, 60 cents.

THE EXODUS. Bible History, Part II.; Migration of the Chosen Nation of the Land of Promise. Book of Exodus with Leviticus and Numbers.

ALREADY PUBLISHED.

THE PROVERBS. ECCLESIASTICUS.
ECCLESIASTES—WISDOM OF SOLOMON.
THE BOOK OF JOB DEUTERONOMY.
BIBLICAL IDYLS.
GENESIS. BIBLE HISTORY, Part. I.

"The usefulness and value of this series is well shown in the skilful editing and helpful presentation of this particular book of the Bible."—The Congregationalist, Boston.

"We welcome the new series most heartily since, notwithstanding it 'does not touch matters of devotion and theology,' it strips the Books of Wisdom of their 'mediæval and anti-literary form by which our current Bible allows them to be obscured,' and thus makes their wonderful ethical insight all the more appreciable."—Biblical World.

The Prophets of the Christian Faith.

A SERIES OF ESSAYS.

By the Rev. Lyman Abbott—Rev. Francis Brown—Rev. George Matheson—Rev. Marcus Dodds—Rev. A. C. McGiffert—The Very Rev. W. H. Freemantle—Professor Adolph Harnack—Rev. A. M. Fairbairn—Rev. T. T. Munger—Rev. A. V. G. Allen—and the Very Rev. F. W. Farrar. 12mo, cloth.

The Macmillan Company,

66 Fifth Avenue, New York.

A Problem Solved.

Pastors, leaders of young people's societies, and active workers generally, in the churches, are perplexed to know where to find a book of hymns and tunes which combines seriousness and popularity in the best sense—one composed of hymns without doggerel and music bright and melodic without jingle.

LAUDES DOMINI FOR THE PRAYER MEETING

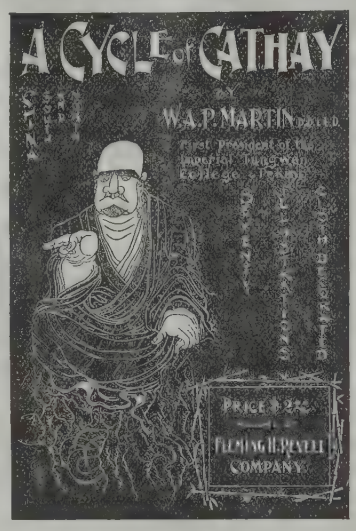
is the book.

Cheap only in price, and now used in many of the largest and most successful church prayer-meetings.

It contains 579 hymns and 350 tunes, bound in full cloth, and costs only 50 cents by the hundred.

Send 50 cents for a sample copy—money refunded if the book is returned.

THE CENTURY CO., Union Square, New York.



Dr. Martin was the first President of the Tungwen Kwan (College of Foreign Knowledge), founded by the Chinese Government for the education of Chinese youth. He continued in that position for twenty-six years. Previously he was first a missionary and then an attaché of the U. S. Legation.

"I shall be very glad to see Dr. Martin's book. He has forgotten more about China than most men ever knew"—ARTHUR H. SMITH, author of "Chinese Characteristics."

"Trustworthy and valuable. An interesting book."—New York Sun.

"No student of Eastern affairs can afford to neglect this work, which will take its place with Dr. Williams's 'Middle Kingdom,' as an authoritative work on China."—The Outlook.

"It is profusely illustrated with engravings taken from the productions of Chinese artists, which adds a flavor of quaintness to a most interesting and instructive volume."—The Interior.

Fleming H. Revell Company

New York: 112 Fifth Ave.
Chicago: 63 Washington St.
Toronto: 140-142 Yonge St.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc., published under this heading at ten cents a line.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

JAMES W. ELWELL, President.
REV. W. C. STITT, Secretary.
W. C. STURGES, Treasurer.

440 CHANCES TO MAKE MONEY

Open to every man and woman, every girl and boy. No one need hesitate. The most remarkable opportunity ever offered. Simple and dignified. Address

The Ladies' Home Journal
Philadelphia

A NEW BOOK
BY MRS. SANGSTER.

With My Neighbors.

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER. 16mo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1 25.

"Must do much good, and is the more valuable because it is absolutely free from pretentiousness or assumption of superiority."—Outlook, N. Y.

"Mrs. Sangster is a gentle mentor, and while she preaches with great earnestness it is the sweet womanliness that shines through all she says that attracts and holds the reader. . . . 'With my Neighbors' is wholesome and sweet. . . . A little book that fulfills an admirable mission."—Chicago Evening Post.

"We heartily commend the little book for its cheerful, practical philosophy, its graceful thought and its sweet sympathy. It should be in the hands of every woman who thinks for herself."—Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

"Written in a charmingly casual, informal and—yes, neighborly style, that catches the reader in the first unformidable paragraph and holds the confidential attention to the end. . . . The sourest cynic must find in Mrs. Sangster's message an uncommonly wise and wholesome note."—Brooklyn Times.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

On the Road Home. Poems. Illustrated. 16mo, Cloth, $1.25.

Little Knights and Ladies. Poems. Illustrated. 16mo, Cloth, $1.25.

Home Fairies and Heart Flowers. Verses by Mrs. SANGSTER, Engravings by FRANK FRENCH. Illustrated. 4to, Cloth, $6.00.

HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers,
NEW YORK.

OUR $7.50 GUITARS.

A man gave up drinking coffee, saying he had sufficient grounds for so doing. The grounds on which we base our confidence in recommending the "Bay State" instruments are substantial. Expert judges pronounce them to be the finest instruments manufactured. They are handsome in appearance. They are sound in workmanship. Above all, they are honest in price. We have in stock cheaper Guitars, and others costing ten times as much, but for a substantial, serviceable instrument, at a low price, no other instrument manufactured can compare with it.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

JOHN C. HAYNES & CO.,
453-463 Washington Street - Boston.

IT WILL SERVE THE INTERESTS of all concerned if, in correspondence suggested by announcements in our ADVERTISING COLUMNS, mention is made of the fact that the advertisement was seen in The Congregationalist.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 8 October 1896 Number 41

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Paragraphs 505
- Prison Sunday 506
- English Memorials of the Pilgrims 506
- The Duty of Ministers in the National Crisis 507
- Right and Wrong Use of the Tongue 507
- Current History 507
- In Brief 508

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
- New York 509
- The Interior 509
- Canada 510
- Scotland 510

CONTRIBUTIONS:
- The Boston City Missionary Society's Eighty Years of Successful Work. I. O. R. 511
- The Policeman at the Crossing. Rev. A. H. Quint, D. D. 513
- Charity Chance. Chap. XIII. Walter Raymond 514
- Where the Fight Is Hottest. Aspects of the Campaign in the West. H. A. B. 516
- Mt. Holyoke's Needs. Rev. Cyrus Pickett 516

THE HOME:
- A Judgment—a selected poem 517
- Paragraph 517
- Butterflies and Heaven. Mary Gordon 517
- The Age of Conflict. Anna Robertson Brown Lindsay, Ph. D. 517
- The Birches—a selected poem 518
- Closet and Altar 518
- Amy's First Party. Helen M. Stafford 519
- Tangles 520
- Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 521
- Corner Scrap-Book 521

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for Oct. 18 525

Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for Oct. 18-24 526

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 526

LITERATURE 524

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
- With the Wisconsin Brethren 530
- Weekly Register 537

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Ian Maclaren on the Art of Preaching 522
- The Crises in Turkey and Japan 529
- Notices 530
- Business Outlook 533
- The Silver Democracy 533
- Boston Superintendents' Union 533
- Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 535
- Boston City Missionary Society 538
- Marriages and Deaths 538

CHURCH CLUB AGENTS
SHOULD BEGIN WORK
NOW.
Send for Terms and Sample Copies.

✠ TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS. ✠
6 Months for $1.00
3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

THE difficulties and encouragements of Christian work in cities find a good illustration in the historical sketch of the Boston City Missionary Society which we print in connection with its eightieth anniversary. The society was in most respects a pioneer, and many of its original experiments have been expanded and improved into the successful methods of work today. The conditions of city life have greatly changed. What was a nearly homogeneous population eighty years ago has become one of the most heterogeneous in the world today. Yet the lesson of this long experience is simple after all. The churches can do little by wholesale. Talk about "the masses" is, for the most part, idle talk. What is needed is the wise, persistent, sympathetic effort of individuals to reach and influence the family and the individual, and to bring them into vital relations with the churches. For this purpose the agents of the work must be free to give their whole time to it. They must have the co operation of the churches in personal assistance wherever that is possible, and in sympathy and financial support always. This is good economy as well as good sense, and has been amply justified by results. The recent growth of contributions in all departments shows that the society enjoys the confidence of the Christian public, and the work accomplished shows that it deserves that confidence.

The publication of the Council Manual for a Congregational Church is an important event in the history of Congregationalism. It is only within recent years that our denomination has occupied nearly all our States and territories and that its churches have been organized extensively in foreign lands. New conditions have demanded new forms and methods of administration, which have called for much patient study. Four years ago the National Council appointed a committee of seven to prepare a manual suited to the present needs of our churches. Last year at Syracuse the committee reported to the council, its work was approved and it was continued with the request that it should publish its manual, after consultation with others and such revision as should be found to be advisable. The result is now made public in this little book, which is further described in our literary columns. Drs. Quint, Boynton and their associates have done their work with care and they have done it well. They have consulted prominent Congregationalists familiar with all sections of the country whose advice has been extensively sought by the churches for the administration of their affairs. The names of the committee with those of this advisory committee whom they have selected, as printed in the manual, are a sufficient guarantee of its trustworthiness and value. The council at Syracuse expressed the hope that the manual "will carry such weight as may be found in the characters, learning and practical wisdom of the brethren whose names shall thus be appended." Though it has no other official authority, we have no doubt that its forms will be adopted generally by the churches, and that it will be accepted as representing our principles, polity and methods of organization, government and fellowship. Its preparation and publication are a service of great value to Congregationalism.

Rarely has so rich an intellectual treat been offered to Boston people than that presented by the program of the American Missionary Association at its jubilee meeting, Oct. 20–22. Not to mention the governor of the commonwealth, the mayor of the city, local celebrities and officers of the society, we are promised a sermon by Dr. Lyman Abbott, besides addresses by Dr. R. S. Storrs, Senator George F. Hoar, Justice David Brewer, Dr. Washington Gladden, Mr. Blue Cloud, Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer and other men and women of national renown in numbers rarely secured for any single meeting. Boston herself offers great attractions to such visitors as will gather at this assembly, for she has many places made sacred by struggles for civil and religious liberty, while Faneuil Hall, Park Street Church and Tremont Temple, the places engaged for the meetings, have each associations of great interest. If the program is carried out as proposed, there will be no need to urge people to attend. May this fiftieth year be rounded out by an enthusiasm which will extend the influence of the association farther than it has yet reached!

The Anglicans who have been disappointed because the pope refuses to recognize their ordination as valid get no sympathy from Bishop Potter. He said last week to the annual convention of his diocese that all Christendom, and especially the Episcopal Church, has reason to be profoundly thankful for the pope's decision, and that he hopes "its effect upon those whose fatuous and unmanly procedure have invited and provoked it may be deep and lasting." Bishop Potter suggests that it may be well to suspend efforts for Christian unity till a day of better promise shall dawn; but he is positive that:

> When that day dawns, it will not be in answer to any beckoning from an Italian prelate, or not, at any rate, until he or those who may come after him have unlearned pretensions so un-Scriptural as to be grotesque, and surrendered claims which the growing enlightenment of mankind make daily more and more pathetic and ridiculous. The Christian world has learned to read and to think. It is a jury before which the claims of ecclesiastical systems must needs be arraigned, whether they will or no. It has not lost—this clear-seeing modern age, as some doleful pelicans upon our ecclesiastical housetop would fain have us believe—the instinct of faith or the ready mind and will to obey the Eternal Voice. But it must be clear that you and I, and all others who claim to be the organs of that Voice—the representatives of a divine authority—have some other justification for such a claim than the colossal audacity with which we make it.

We wish we could believe that these straightforward and sensible statements expressed the convictions of the Episcopal Church, at least in this country if not in England.

If the questions at issue in this political campaign had been more generally understood before the contest began there would now be much less uncertainty about the future of the country. In important respects there seems to be less general intelligence of political affairs than there was a generation ago. Labor organizations are studying economic questions, but not always under wise teachers. Municipal administration and the suppression of intemperance and of gambling engage the attention of the churches and citizens' leagues more than formerly. But the question how to initiate young men and women generally in knowledge of government is important and pressing. Forty years ago multitudes of towns and villages had their debating societies, where the larger problems pertaining to citizenship were discussed and adjudicated. Such societies we believe are now very rare. They might wisely be revived. Great practical problems face the rising generation, involving not only the prosperity but the existence of our republic. Why should not Christian Endeavor societies make it a part of their work to promote intelligent discussion of great questions of government?

PRISON SUNDAY.

Some years ago President Hayes said that the greatest obstacle to prison reform was the despair of prison reform. It seemed such an utterly hopeless task to do anything for criminals or for the prevention of crime that few could be persuaded to undertake it. But all this has changed. Inquiry in regard to crime and criminals is widespread with the purpose to improve the methods of dealing with the offender, before, during and after his imprisonment. State after state has followed New York in the Elmira experiment of trying to reform the younger criminals. In Massachusetts the reformatory for women at Sherborn and that for men at Concord have greatly interested the people and the results have done much to convert those who had disbelieved in the reformation of criminals, and to give new courage to those who have had faith that scientific methods would justify themselves here as well as in the physical world.

The outlook for prison reform is brighter than ever before. Legislatures respond more readily to suggestions for changes in criminal laws, based upon the proposition that law-breakers can be transformed into good citizens, and that the State ought to try to reform them. There is a more intelligent discrimination between criminals of various classes, a more general willingness to give a chance to the man who wants to change his course and a much larger interest in work to prevent the young from becoming criminals.

The great need of the day is to spread information. People want to know about the newer methods in crime treatment; they want to understand the theories which underlie these methods. They are asking about the number of criminals, the cost and causes of crime and the best way to prevent it. The ordinary inquirer cannot easily find answers to these questions. The literature of the subject is comparatively small and not readily available, except to the few.

Twelve years ago, when this movement was in an entirely different condition, a large number of influential New York clergymen designated the fourth Sabbath in October as "Prison Sunday," asking the churches to use the day in the interest of prison reform. Many have responded from year to year. Clergymen who have used the day almost invariably report a hearty appreciation of the service and a quickening of the interest of the people as the fruit of a broader knowledge.

We believe that the day should be observed more generally by sermons upon the subject. Clergymen can easily obtain information which will enable them to answer many of the questions which are asked. Not only will sermons be profitable, but prayer meetings devoted to the consideration of the duties of the church toward the delinquent classes will tend to develop Christian sympathy, promote spirituality and send men and women upon the Master's errand of seeking and saving the lost.

ENGLISH MEMORIALS OF THE PILGRIMS.

The fame of the men who founded New England grows brighter every year in the land which once banished them. New monuments are raised in their honor and new tributes given to their self-sacrifice, ability and foresight. These things mean that in England a growing respect and regard are felt toward our country. They mean that the principles for which our fathers gave their lives are now the pride of both nations. Englishmen have come to realize more fully than ever before what they owe to these principles, which Americans prize more highly than ever as essential to their liberty and their union. None of us would withhold hearty response to the feeling of fellowship which finds expression in these memorials. What American can look on the Pilgrim window in the Guild Hall at Old Plymouth, or stand in the Cotton chapel of St. Botolph's in Old Boston, or worship in the John Robinson Memorial Church now building at Gainsborough, without a deeper sense of our common heritage and a thrill of gratitude because the influence of our forefathers is growing stronger in the home land from which they were driven as well as in the home land which they founded? May these memorials multiply in England. They are signs of the approach of a union in sentiment and purpose between the two nations which is to become so strong that their united action cannot be restrained in efforts which must be potent to defeat tyranny and promote freedom and righteousness throughout the whole world. The gifts of our countrymen to raise memorials which remind English cousins of our common heritage are likely to have a significance beyond anything which was in the thoughts of the givers.

Having said this, we may be allowed, we trust, to protest against such use of contributions from America as perverts our history and does injustice to our ancestors. An instance in point is the so-called American window in the church where Shakespeare was buried at Stratford. The window was unveiled the 26th of last April. It bears this inscription: "The gift of America to Shakespeare's Church." The guide-book presented to visitors describes the window as follows:

Looking south you will notice the American window, unveiled on Shakespeare's birthday, 1896. It represents the infant Christ in his mother's arms, and on either side English and American worthies in attitudes of adoration. On the one side are S. Egwin, Bishop of Worcester, King Charles the Martyr, and Archbishop Laud, who first proposed sending a bishop to America. On the other side are Amerigo Vespucci, Christopher Columbus and William Penn; and below, the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers on Plymouth Rock. When sufficient funds have been obtained, it is proposed to complete the window by adding the figure of S. Eric, first bishop of Greenland, and Samuel Seabury, first bishop of Connecticut.

Shades of the Pilgrims! What would they have said if they could have imagined their descendants mixing them up in Old England in such a muddle of historic improprieties? Think of the Pilgrims regarding Charles I. as a martyr and joining in worship with their chief persecutor, Archbishop Laud, who tried to compel them to worship in the ways he prescribed! It is needless to point out the other incongruities. Can it be possible that this window was designed by Punch? It is pretty certain that no American humorous artist would thus permit his sense of the ridiculous to run riot with his sense of propriety.

In this connection we may mention a complaint voiced by the Earl of Crewe, who recently presided at a bazar in Austerfield held to raise money to restore St. Helen's Church in that place. An elaborate appeal had been published and circulated among Americans asking for contributions, but the earl said that very little had been received. They had hoped that their friends across the sea would take some interest in restoring the church in which William Bradford was baptized and where he worshiped. Their hopes had been disappointed. He thought the people might be so busy discussing gold and silver that they were forgetting to send their gold and silver across the Atlantic. But he neglected to mention the fact that the proposed restoration would obliterate pretty much every trace of the church as it was when William Bradford lived in Austerfield. That may be the real reason why money is not moving over the ocean.

Americans are not unmindful of the historic associations of the mother country nor unwilling to give to perpetuate their influence. The gift just made by Harvard University to place a memorial window in St. Saviour's Church in London where John Harvard was baptized is one evidence of this interest in the past binding the two nations more closely together. We should welcome a rapid growth in this country of pride in the places where its founders were born and baptized. And we should not object if our English friends, in recognition of the great deeds of some of their countrymen when they grew up, should erect monuments in Plymouth to William Bradford and in Boston to John Winthrop or John Cotton, and in Hartford to Thomas Hooker and in New Haven to John Davenport. These were some of the most eminent of the many men of whom England can justly boast. The only condition we would make, by way of international agreement, would be that in all cases historic proprieties should be observed and historic incongruities avoided.

Italy heads the list of nations sending emigrants to the United States this year. Since we let them in, let us understand them and teach them how to be good American citizens.

As yet nearly half of them cannot read or write their own language.

THE DUTY OF MINISTERS IN THE NATIONAL CRISIS.

If ever those who are looked to as leaders of the people may be expected to know where they stand on great national issues, and to state clearly their ground for their position, that time is now. For this reason, and especially with the purpose to help our brethren in the ministry, we did what we could to secure Mr. S. B. Capen to address the Boston ministers on the National Crisis of 1896, and we published his address as soon as it was delivered. His thorough acquaintance with public affairs, his acknowledged great service to our city and to the cause of public education at large, and the unquestioned confidence in his integrity and patriotism were a guarantee that his utterance on the present crisis would not be made without careful and prayerful consideration, and would attract wide attention. This we expected. But we did not anticipate so extensive an interest as is shown by the many letters of approval daily coming to us from near and distant sections of the country. So many of these letters have been accompanied with urgent requests for copies of his address that the Non-Partisan Sound Money League has undertaken its publication, and has already issued an edition of 20,000 in pamphlet form.

While many of these letters are from laymen in various callings, we are especially gratified because so many of them come from ministers. A New York secretary of one of our great missionary societies writes: "Its absolute fairness and candor will open the way to very many minds who would shut themselves up against arguments, however strong, which were hostile and inconsiderate in tone." A New Jersey Episcopal rector characterizes the address as "the most lucid and on the whole the most able statement of the questions before the country which I have seen." An Illinois religious editor writes: "A great many ministers in the West are thankful to you for what you have done, and some of them through me express their thanks to you." From Minnesota comes this message: "Such work would make the wavering West absolutely sure for sound money and good government." A Nebraska college president, after expressing his satisfaction with the attitude of The Congregationalist on present political issues, added: "I feel that the editors of a great religious newspaper ought to have profound convictions on these subjects, and to express them. Are they not in the very best situation to sense the truth? And why should they keep it back?" A Dakota pastor says: "I am in your debt for that excellent address. Could I afford to purchase them I would scatter copies through this region." A Chicago pastor adds to his expression of appreciation that "in these times no man, minister, newspaper or organization should be indifferent as to where he stands on the moral and national questions involved."

The letters of which these are specimen extracts give us great encouragement. We acknowledge that we have been depressed when ministers, educators and some religious newspapers have excused themselves for not taking a positive stand on political issues with the pitiful plea that these are too complicated for them to understand or that they are occupied with higher and spiritual matters. We must admit that some who have shown dogmatic confidence in discussing the topics which have led to the present crisis now shrink from expressing any opinion till the opportunity to help to decide the future policy of the nation shall have passed. But we rejoice in the evidence received that these men are exceptions and we believe that their confession of incompetence as guides, though late, is genuine. The large majority of those who occupy the places of Christian leaders realize that if they acknowledge themselves unable to treat those questions which the people are now compelled to decide their leadership is void. They are not partisans. The rare exceptions where preachers become campaign orators in their pulpits will not deter them, through fear of being misunderstood, from declaring and defending the principles of government which they believe to be true. They will not be drawn into efforts merely to elect men to office nor to bring a political party into power. But they do not fail in diligence to inform themselves of the duty of citizens nor in courage to declare it. They see that the salvation of souls and the building up of Christian character can be secured only when those who seek these ends strive to maintain honor in business and righteousness in government.

We respect all men, whatever position they take, who give their best thought to the questions they are challenged to answer as citizens and who answer them according to their best light. But when those who have accepted positions as Christian leaders of men confess themselves blind guides, whether on the plea of ignorance or of standing apart from present affairs or of fear of consequences, they inspire small hope for the nation and still less for the church.

RIGHT AND WRONG USE OF THE TONGUE.

The sins of the tongue all point to the necessity and profit of self-mastery. So evident and so important did this appear to James that it occurs again and again in his epistle. "In many things we all stumble," he writes. "If any stumble not in word, the same is a perfect man, able to bridle the whole body, also." If this confession of failure and magnifying of the office of the tongue seem exaggerated, let any one sit down quietly and think of the sins and cruelties of human speech. The careless words which no repentance can call back again, the rash promises which it has cost us so much to fulfill, the expression of the lower nature which has shamed the higher, the confessions of evil and yieldings to falsehood, the hot and angry words which sober thought condemned—these are some of the perils of the tongue.

On the other hand, like most of the uses of the world which turn so easily to evil, the tongue may be the instrument of great and lasting good. "Therewith bless we the Lord and Father." If we can, by God's grace, hold it to blessing, there is no better testimony to the indwelling of God's spirit in a human soul than righteous, considerate, modest, truthful speech. The faithful Christian's manner of words as well as of life already has the mark of heaven's purity and truth upon it. Speaking the truth in love, men trust him. Seeking not his own, men come to speak unselfishly in his presence. Considering others, they in turn become considerate. Cherishing no resentments, he awakens no angry feelings. Such a Christian self-control is not easily attained, but it is worth striving for, and by God's help it is not out of reach.

CURRENT HISTORY.

Domestic Politics.

The fact that Mr. Bryan in addressing the citizens of New York city, as he passed from New England on to West Virginia and the Interior States, did so under the auspices of Tammany Hall, the only faction now supporting him with any degree of loyalty, cannot strengthen his position with those who remember what Tammany has stood for during most of its history, nor will his toleration of the singing on that occasion of a most inflammatory song, The American Marseillaise, fail to add to the impression that he is placing more emphasis now on the planks of the Chicago platform which attack Federal authority than he is on the scheme of substituting silver for gold as our national standard. He continues to speak to enormous crowds, and already his record as a campaigner surpasses that of all those who in former days have asked for the votes of their fellow-citizens. He has accepted the nomination, tendered to him by the Populist national convention in such an abnegating way, but has done it in a way which will encourage the "middle of the road" Populists to continue their opposition to all schemes of fusion which ask the Populist fly to walk into the parlor of its ancient enemy the Democratic spider. Vice-President Stevenson has at last taken his place with the faction of the party which Mr. Bryan heads, thus calling attention to the fact that if Mr. Cleveland should die between this and next March much might be done to renew political and commercial uncertainty.

Senator Hoar of Massachusetts has returned from Europe convinced that the movement there for a restoration of bimetallism is constantly gaining in strength, and that nothing but Great Britain's selfishness prevents an immediate solution of the problem. But he also reports that few, if any, of the European bi-metallists dispute the claim that nothing could do more to postpone such a step indefinitely than such action by the United States as Mr. Bryan is trying to bring to pass. Prince Bismarck's recent letter to Governor Culberson of Texas, which has been mistranslated and perverted so as to make it seem even more of a support to the cause of international bimetallism than it really is, has called forth an open letter from Hon. Andrew D. White, ex-president of Cornell, to Governor Culberson, in which he pays his respects to Prince Bismarck in a way that carries weight, for Mr. White was formerly United States minister in Germany and is honored with Prince Bismarck's friendship. He intimates that Bismarck's motives in giving support to a scheme which would enable Germany to unload vast supplies of silver at much profit to herself are creditable to his patriotism, but do not indicate unalloyed kindness for the United States, whose institutions he despises, and whose Government he has never lost opportunity to harass and treat with contempt when he has been in power.

The Great Storm.

The hurricane accompanied by heavy rain that started from the West Indies last week and devastated the Georgia and Florida shores of the gulf and then swept northward, doing vast damage inland and along the coast, especially in Virginia, in the District of Columbia and central Pennsylvania and New York, was one of those events which it is impossible to picture in detail or to fully comprehend in all its sad results. Florida alone is supposed to have lost not less than $1,000,000 in property and at least 100 of its people, most of them fishermen, who were engulfed by the tidal wave that followed the hurricane as it swept over the waters near Cedar Keys. Savannah, Ga., and Beaufort, S. C., suffered grievously, while the misery and ruin wrought along the coast away from centers of population no man can begin to understand. Florida, especially, will feel the blow and merit such aid as can be given.

The New Apostolic Delegate.

Monsignor Martinelli, Archbishop of Ephesus and successor to Cardinal Satolli as apostolic delegate to the United States, arrived in New York last week and went immediately to Washington. This special representative of the pope in the United States, whose word here henceforth is to be law, is an Italian in the prime of life and a Black Friar, who learned to speak English fluently when a teacher in the Irish College at Rome. His duties as prior general of the Augustinian order, to which place of responsibility he was elected some years ago, gave him the opportunity to visit all the houses of the order on this continent, hence he comes to us with a far better understanding of our institutions and language than his predecessor possessed. His appointment caused surprise in this country and in Rome, and the Pilot's Roman correspondent is authority for the statement that Pope Leo XIII. in naming him consulted no other will than his own. Cardinal Satolli will return to Rome, leaving behind him a record of satisfactory service in a trying position, for it is no secret that the higher ecclesiastics of the church here did not welcome him cordially. On the other hand, the laity have found that a tribunal has been established which can be reached with infinitely less trouble and expense than that at Rome, and they see in the delegate one who can, if he is so disposed, defend them from the oppression of their superiors. The laymen of the church in Canada are endeavoring to have the area of Mgr. Martinelli's authority extended so that he can do for them what has been done for the laity in this country. It is well worth noting that Cardinal Satolli, in his letter to Cardinal Rampolla relinquishing his post, says that he has found the most striking and noblest characteristic of this country to be "the universal love of justice, charity and peace."

Bishop Keane's Discipline.

The correspondence between Pope Leo XIII. and Bishop John J. Keane, rector of the Catholic University of America in Washington, just published, will surprise and startle most of those who read of it. Bishop Keane's reply to the pope's letter asking for his resignation of the important post which he has filled with so much ability is as submissive and loyal in its tenor as could be desired—by the pope. But the public will learn with surprise tempered by incredulity that "rotation in office" is an established principle of the Roman scheme of education, and they must be pardoned if they wonder whether, if Bishop Keane had been less liberal, less charitable, less fraternal in his dealings with Protestant Christians, he would not have been permitted to remain at the head of the institution to which he has given so much of his energy and devotion. To the offer of the pope to either make Bishop Keane an archbishop in this country or give him a place at Rome as one of the consulters of the Congregation of Studies and the Congregation of the Propaganda, Bishop Keane replies in a dignified, courteous way that he "chooses to remain in his own country, and, moreover, without any official position whatsoever, in tranquillity and peace." He will go to the Pacific coast for a long coveted period of travel and rest, and will leave plans for the future to a later date. Fathers McGlynn and Burtsell, Archbishop Ireland and now Bishop Keane have all had to submit to the inevitable. Will Cardinal Gibbons, the leader of the liberal wing, be the next one to be humiliated and chastised?

William Morris's Death.

William Morris, poet, artist, manufacturer and socialist, died last Saturday in London. The eldest of a family of nine children he was educated at Marlborough and Oxford and became associated with the Pre-Raphaelite Brothers, the greatest of whom, Burne-Jones, the painter, was his college chum. He was concerned in starting the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, in which the dreams and purposes of the brotherhood found literary expression, studied architecture, painting and decoration, and published his first volume of poems in 1858. The list of his books is a long one, including as its best known numbers The Defence of Guinevere, The Earthly Paradise, The Life and Death of Jason, The Story of Sigurd the Volsung and translations of The Odyssey and Beowulf. Mr. Morris became the head of a decorative art concern, whose products are famous, and gave much of the strength of his later years to the socialist propaganda. By the test of solidity and volume of poetic work his was undoubtedly the most worthy of all the names mentioned for the laureateship after the death of Tennyson. Miss Frances Willard's conversion to socialism is credited to Mr. Morris.

"The Sick Man" Still Lives.

Reports from London, Vienna, Berlin and Constantinople seem to indicate that the Powers are coming to some understanding respecting the future of Turkey. The tone of the Russian press toward Great Britain has changed within a week, and, on the other hand, in Great Britain the chorus swells louder and louder from those who favor an alliance between Great Britain and Russia. Whether this must be credited to conference between the Czar of Russia and Queen Victoria and the czar and Lord Salisbury no one can state positively. The czar has journeyed from Balmoral, Scotland, to France guarded all the time as no European monarch ever was. The French, of course, will give him and his wife a reception lavish and characteristically ebullient. There is no doubt that there have been massacres in Armenia during the last few weeks, and, while nominally Constantinople has quieted down, there is, nevertheless, an atmosphere of unrest and discontent there which at any moment may flame into a mutiny of the troops, an uprising of the Young Turkey party, or another sensational outbreak of the Armenian revolutionists. The most practical problem which we in this country have to face is the disposition of those Armenian refugees who found their way to Marseilles, France, and whom Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Willard are sending to this country, assuming that homes and employment will be found for them.

IN BRIEF.

Our New York letter refers to Hawthorne's daughter's work of love among the poor of New York city.

Prof. R. T. Ely, the economist, in his book on The Social Law of Service, written for the Epworth League reading circles, emphasizes the social significance of the sacrament of baptism and its influence in impressing the truth of "solidarity in Christ" which Paul sets forth in Gal. 3: 26, 29.

Cotton, wool or silk pieces cut ready for piecing into quilts will be of great service to those engaged in carrying on the Indian mission work at the Santee Agency, Neb. Packages sent by freight or express must be prepaid and labeled Springfield, S. D., care of C. M. & S. T. P. R. R. Packages by mail and letters may be sent to Santee Agency, Neb.

On what we supposed was good authority we lately stated that Kentucky filled her quota of soldiers in the Civil War without a draft. We are informed by Mr. J. H. Blodgett of Washington that inquiry at the War Department shows that a draft was made in all the States not in rebellion except in Nevada, California and Oregon, to which no quotas were assigned.

The polyglot quality of Chicago's daily speech may be inferred from the fact that the City Tract Society reports that its colporteurs are distributing tracts written in German, French, Dutch, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, Finnish, Russian, Polish, Bohemian, Bulgarian, Lithuanian, Italian, Spanish, Welsh, Greek, Hebrew, Chinese and Arabic, and finding eager readers for them.

The Herald and Presbyter thinks that religious papers are pledged to give their constituents "reading calculated to turn their thoughts from the worry and excitement of politics, as well as of business, to build up the spiritual nature and to make them meet for citizenship in heaven." Yes, but what claim will they have who do not earnestly do their part as citizens of their present country to citizenship in heaven?

We are not able to read even the letters of the alphabet of the Manual of Congregationalism which has just come to hand from the Nirnaya-Sagar Press of Bombay. But it is a satisfaction to note that Congregational churches in India are so numerous as to call for such a book, which has the appearance of being a suitable instructor and guide as to administration of church government "of the people, by the people and for the people."

One of the most interesting of approaching meetings is that which is to be held in Hartford, Oct. 20, 21, when The Open and Institutional Church League will consider some of the more practical problems of modern church life, especially in cities. Prof. William O. Atwater of Wesleyan University is to tell of Some Things the Church May Do Toward Improving the Food and Nutrition of the Poor—a truly gospel theme, and to be expounded by an expert authority on foods.

In the lumber camps of Northern Wisconsin are hundreds of men living away from churches, homes, or healthful social influences. Good magazines and papers, especially the illustrated ones, are highly prized by these sturdy sons of the forest, who are furnishing our lumber and clearing the way for peaceful farms and prosperous communities. Send them, always prepaying transportation charges, to Rev. John Gibson, Washburn, Wis., and they will be wisely distributed.

The Outlook, supporting our suggestion that English and American Congregationalists should come into closer union, says the subject has already had the attention of some in this country and is in the mind of many in England. It further suggests that if the preacher at the May meetings in England were chosen from American Congregationalists and the preacher before the National Council were chosen from the English, a long step would be taken toward practical union. There can be no doubt that greater influence is possible as a result of closer affiliation between the two bodies, and we believe it is coming.

The dean of the Boston University School of Theology knows of fifty young men in that institution, many of them with "slenderest financial resources," who "will not hesitate to wash windows, run errands, take care of sidewalks and furnaces, post bills, distribute circulars or wait on table. Their intelligence, business experience and guaranteed honesty commend them to minor positions of trust as night clerks, collectors of bills and of rents." Fancy the sensation which such a proclamation by the head of an English educational institution would cause. May they find work and be held in honor for their willingness to earn an education.

It is a satisfaction to note that a Congregational council called in Boston last week to ordain a candidate for the ministry, having found him without requisite qualifications, declined to proceed with the service. What Bishop Potter has just said to the clergy of the diocese of New York is quite as applicable to our denomination:

The church is not suffering today for lack of clergy—such a cry, by whomsoever raised, is either ignorant or interested; but it is suffering for want of what alone it ought to be willing to accept—the best. If its ordinations were always so guarded as to demand and accept none other, it would, I am persuaded, incalculably increase both its intellectual and its spiritual power.

Prison Sunday is drawing nigh and elsewhere we suggest the reason why it should be observed. The annual meeting of the National Prison Association has just been held in Milwaukee, at which Dr. F. H. Wines, famous the world over as a penologist, secured the appointment of a committee to gather the facts concerning the increase of crime in the United States. He does not believe there is any increase. Mr. H. H. Hart of Minneapolis gave facts and figures to show that our foreign born citizens do not commit a disproportional share of the crimes of the country. Rev. S. G. Smith of St. Paul, in speaking on the subject of crime in relation to economics, said that socialism is the greatest of all crimes and the millennium of the lazy man.

There is no apology to offer for giving much space this week to references to Ian Maclaren's personality and words. He comes at an opportune time to see us engaged in one of our most characteristic pursuits, the settlement by manhood suffrage of problems that in Europe are thought to be the especial province of the learned few. He will be in Oberlin, O., the day the ballots are cast, and if Dr. Brand does not rise to the occasion and make his guest realize that he stands on historic ground on an historic day he will deserve to be—, but he will. Dr. Watson gave his first lecture, combined with readings, in Springfield last week, and, judging from our report of it, it was as successful in its way as his lectures at Yale have been in theirs. Mr. Dawson's interview with Dr. Watson, which we published Sept. 24, is conceded by competent critics to be unsurpassed as a contribution to the public's information concerning this fascinating man.

Scribner's Magazine in its October issue discusses editorially the relations of America and England. It gives the first place in the recent drawing together of cordiality and good feeling to the effects of the Pilgrimage organized by The Congregationalist. "Several events of purely social significance, as one would think," it says, "have made the past summer notable in the evolution of Anglo-American feeling. The Congregational Pilgrims and their much-fêted tour of England struck the first note of that sympathetic chord which has now pretty well drowned out the unpleasant remembrance of the Venezuela feelings, the Dunraven incident and the Cornell boat race—incidents which have no mean effect on the international sentiments of the masses." It is significant and interesting that all three of these helpful social visits and meetings mentioned by Scribner's, the Pilgrimage, the Yale visit to Henley and the tour of the Boston Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, were planned and organized in New England.

Dr. D. K. Pearsons is still delighting in good deeds. Not content with what he has proposed to do for Mt. Holyoke Seminary, in view of the loss occasioned by the burning of its main building, he has written the following letter:

Some six months ago the Mt. Holyoke Association of New York and Brooklyn wrote me that they had in bank $16,000, and that they would raise $4,000 more. I wrote them that I would give the last $10,000 for the building. Now in addition to the $10,000 I will give $40,000 for the trustees to use in the building fund as they deem best.

It will be seen that no conditions are made. Nor are the trustees hampered in the use to be made of the money. They are only required to use it in such a way as shall be of most service. Dr. Pearsons seems to live to do good, and makes money only that it may be used for the advantage of his fellowmen. We heartily second the appeal for Mt. Holyoke College on page 516. Its history, its usefulness and its need unite in a strong claim on New England for help at this time.

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM NEW YORK.

The Elements of Worship.

Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall added to his well-earned reputation as a charmingly graceful writer and discriminating thinker by his opening lecture in the Union Seminary course on the Principles of Christian Worship, noticed in The Congregationalist's "briefs" last week. A fair specimen of his just and fine analysis may be seen in these seven essential parts of Christian worship as drawn by him from the writings of Paul: The hymn, the Scripture, the belief, the prayer, the oblation, the teaching and the sacraments.

Hawthorne's Daughter in the Slums.

Mrs. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne, has taken and had cleansed humble rooms in a poor old East-side tenement house, where she will make her home with the purpose of devoting the rest of her life to the sympathetic care and nursing of poor women and girls afflicted with cancer and unable to get admission to hospitals or discharged therefrom after the experimental six months' treatment shall have shown them to be incurable. She did hope to make a home for these poor sufferers with herself and a friend—a trained nurse from Boston—but this being impracticable at present, she proposes that the two shall minister to them in their own lowly tenements, where, she says, they shall have loving and not mere perfunctory, heartless treatment in their hopeless sufferings.

"Congregational Work."

This is the apt motto heading circulars now going from the Congregational Work's office in the Bible House to pastors of all churches of the denomination concerning the proposed new paper, Congregational Work. They explain its purpose, general character and claims on the support of all who value and believe in spreading the Pilgrim faith and order. They call upon the makers of the 73,000 pledges already sent in to remit the amounts respectively subscribed, and invite all who have not responded to move in the matter promptly, that the first number may reach the churches on or before Jan. 1, 1897. There are reported to be 415,000 families, with 600,000 members, in our churches. Each of these can see for himself what an impulse would be given to all departments of our Christian activities at home and abroad if a copy of Congregational Work should be received "into every family" and faithfully read by its members, whether adults or children. HUNTINGTON.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Chicago Preachers and Politics.

Sunday evening, Sept. 27, Rev. Mr. Rubinkam gave up his pulpit that Mr. E. B. Smith and Mr. W. H. Banning, two members of his church, might speak on the claims of sound money as a question of morals. It is on this ground, and this ground alone, that so many pulpits are favoring the election of Major McKinley. Rabbi Hirsch, in reply to the charge that Jews are "hook-nosed Shylocks, agents of Rothschild," says that he does not believe the American people will tolerate such partisan misrepresentation, for if Jews believe in a gold standard it is because they think it a sacred duty to uphold the honor of the nation. Sunday afternoon Rev. F. J. Brobst, known somewhat in Boston, spoke in Battery D to about 2,000 people on the claims of silver. He made his service a semi-religious one, and advertised it as an answer to those ministers who are in favor of a gold standard. In his prayer he spoke of the oppressed and debased classes, and asked the Lord speedily to overthrow the power of their oppressors. He affirmed that were Bryan to be elected silver would be worth as much as gold. Dr. N. J. Hillis at Central Music Hall took for his subject the new cry in politics, and deplored the efforts, which he characterized as vicious, to excite the feelings of the poor against the rich. He made it very clear that classes as such do not and should not exist among us, and that while the benefits of inventions and the increase of wealth have favored the poor more than the rich, the road to wealth is open to every one.

A straw vote, taken at the Ministers' Meeting Monday, as a substitute for resolutions condemnatory of the Chicago platform, which many would have been glad to pass, showed that of the sixty or thereabouts present forty-four were for McKinley, six for Bryan, four for Levering. Six declined to vote, on the ground that political questions, even if some do look upon them as questions of morals, should not be considered in a Ministers' Meeting.

Dr. Noble's Return and Welcome.

No man could wish for a warmer welcome from a four months' absence than was accorded Dr. Noble as he entered, wholly unexpectedly, the Monday evening meeting of his Christian Endeavor Society. The two hundred or so present could not be kept from cheering. Although it was late, for the meeting had been necessarily somewhat protracted, the young people would not leave the room till their pastor had addressed them, nor, after the benediction, till they had all taken his hand. The joy of seeing each other was mutual. Between the doctor and his young people there exists the closest of bonds. Wednesday evening the renovated lecture room was filled with members of the church, eager to express their congratulations on their pastor's safe return from abroad and to hear his report of some of the things he had seen. The hour was occupied chiefly by an account of the religious condition of the Scandinavian countries and of England, and was full of encouragement. The address, wholly informal, was eloquent, discriminating and worthy of being repeated again and again.

Convocation at the University.

The address by President Augustus H. Strong of Rochester University, N. Y., on Recent Tendencies in Theological Thought was listened to with great interest. Dr. Strong, as is well known, is extremely conservative, but at the same time eminently fair in his treatment of opponents. Taking up the modern cry, "Back to Christ," he said he would join in it, but only on the condition that we go back to the real Christ, the Christ of the gospels and of Paul, the Christ whom the learning and the experience of centuries had made dear to us. He would go back from the deism which is unconsciously presented in many of our pulpits and in much of our religious literature today to Christ in nature; from the atomism which treats men as individuals and overlooks their race relations, or their solidarity, and which finds its best illustration in the New England theology, to Christ in humanity; from the externalism of church forms and dogmas to Christ in the church, i. e., to Christ as prior to and superior to Scripture, the church, creeds and forms, to Christ the life out of which all else springs. The new theological review to be issued under the auspices of the divinity school will be open to writers of all denominations, and will appear about Jan. 1.

FRANKLIN.

FROM CANADA.

Trades and Labor Congress.

A good deal of attention was directed last week to the annual meeting of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress at Quebec. After a very spirited debate it was resolved by a large majority to exclude Socialists from membership, but the battle is likely to be fought again next year at Hamilton, when Socialism will be able to present a strong front from its much larger numbers in Ontario. The tax on Chinese laborers formed the subject of another interesting discussion, which resulted in a recommendation to Parliament that it be increased from $50 to $500. It is doubtful if any heed will be given to the recommendation, since Sir Henri Joly, minister of inland revenue, pledged Li Hung Chang to deal leniently with Chinamen, of whom there are 11,000 in British Columbia alone. Among the other deliverances of the congress were those in favor of single tax, an eight-hour day for labor, grouping of constituencies for election purposes, entire secrecy of the ballot, no grants of land for monopoly or speculation, inducements to a better class of immigrants, and a fast line of steamships between Canada and Europe.

Further Temperance Progress.

In my last letter was a paragraph dealing with temperance legislation, and since then The Congregationalist made note of the result of the interview of the deputation with Premier Laurier and the abolition of the bar in the House of Commons. There is now to report the further prohibition of the sale of liquor within the House, so that the first prohibitory measure in Canada operates on the scene of the labors of the people's representatives. It was thought that the Senate would follow when a resolution was introduced for the abolition of its bar, but these irresponsible legislators saw fit to refer the matter to the restaurant committee, and the bar remains. So sanguine are the friends of prohibition of the speedy triumph of their cause that the question of raising the seven million dollar revenue accruing from license is under discussion, and no lack of methods is proposed. It will be some time yet, however, before the government is actually confronted with the question, but it is well to be ready.

J. P. G.

FROM SCOTLAND.

Professor Johnston's Case.

The Divinity Hall of Aberdeen University has acquired an unenviable notoriety of late in the person of Professor Johnston, the occupant of the chair of Biblical criticism. The students under him have become restive, and went the length of formally charging the professor with incompetence, want of method and general inability to command respect. These charges were recently investigated by a committee of the Aberdeen University Court, and the inquiry, which was conducted by the Marquis of Huntly, the lord rector of the university, Sir William Geddes, the principal, and others, has attracted public attention. The committee sustained the charges and recommends that Professor Johnston be asked to retire from his chair. It appeared from the evidence that while the students showed no interest and attention in his classroom, and resented his antagonism to the "higher criticism" and his habit of going off at a tangent, their behavior under the other professors was satisfactory and exemplary. It is clear that Professor Johnston's transference from a quiet parish in the Orkney Islands to the chair of Biblical criticism in Aberdeen has been a mistake. The professor is utterly unconventional in society, and he was courageous enough to conduct his own defense. There is general agreement that a lecturer so far out of touch with his students and even his subject should cease to hold a chair. The attempt to remove him raises some nice legal questions, and some think other professors may begin to tremble.

Church Establishments.

The political attack on the Scotch Established Church has somewhat fallen behind since the "unionist" government took office, but from time to time in other ways the Establishment is put on its trial. Lord Overtoun, who is a strong "voluntary" and enemy of Established Churches, took occasion lately, when speaking in the north of Scotland, to point out the bondage involved in alliance with and endowment by the state, and to say that a church dependent on the state for support gives up its liberty in the preaching of its doctrines. This line of remark was warmly resented by Dr. Norman Macleod of Inverness at the opening of a new church in the Highland capital. He objected to any one speaking of the Church of Scotland as ruled over by her majesty, Queen Victoria, and characterized Lord Overtoun's remarks as due to ignorance and blind sectarianism. But the fact remains that the Established Church in Scotland today owes far more of its success and present position to "voluntary" effort than to any supposed virtues of an Establishment. On the occasion referred to at Inverness another speaker, Dr. Scott of Edinburgh, the moderator of the Established Church, argued that the existing parochial endowments are quite insufficient to meet the religious needs of the country, and that, indeed, the endowment for church purposes in Scotland was too trifling a sum to be assailed! In Glasgow Presbytery the other day a warning note was uttered by Rev. James Paton, brother of the well-known missionary, in a speech calling attention to the miserable rate of giving to foreign missions by members of the Established Church in this city. These confessions are significant. Some critics complain that we have too many churches. Dr. Scott says we need them all, but they should be better and more wisely distributed. The real cure for unwise competition and for want of liberality is, first disestablish the church in Scotland, and then set about the work of reunion of the churches. This is the answer to Dr. Scott's question, Why were the churches in Scotland not united?

Memorial to Robert Louis Stevenson.

Lord Rosebery, who is fresh from his eloquent eulogy on Burns at the recent celebration in honor of the poet, has now started a proposal calling on his countrymen to perpetuate in some suitable form the memory of R. L. Stevenson. In this case Lord Rosebery's sympathies will be generally shared. Mr. Andrew Lang, the friend of Stevenson, has written in favor of the proposal and suggests that, if a good statue is not forthcoming to stand in Edinburgh as a witness of our national gratitude and recognition, some such memorial as a ward in a hospital should be attempted. The only discordant voice since this proposal has been mooted has been that of Dr. Robert Wallace, one of the Parliamentary representatives of Edinburgh, and now a barrister in London, but it is probable that in taking up this unsympathetic attitude he is representative of few others besides himself. No one expects that Stevenson will ever rival or come near Burns in the affections of Scotsmen, but like Burns he has readers and admirers everywhere, and this proposal to commemorate his influence and his literary power should take speedy and practical shape.

Glasgow. W M R.

The Boston City Missionary Society.

Eighty Years of Successful Effort.

The story of the beginnings of the Boston City Missionary Society has been often told, but it has an inherent interest which makes it still fresh and suggestive at the close of the society's eighty years of fruitful work. And if the interest is great at the beginning, the comparison between the early days of experiment and the present time of well studied and ever enlarging activity and opportunity is instructive and inviting.

The work of the organization began with a suggestion from without in the providential visit to Boston of Rev. Ward Stafford, who had much to tell in the congenial atmosphere of the Old South and Park Street Churches of the discoveries among the poor of New York—families destitute of Bibles, children growing up with the instruction of the streets, but without knowledge of Christ, a growing peril to society in a domestic heathenism. The suggestion fell into good ground and brought forth fruit through an investigation into the condition of the poor of Boston. It took the committee only ten days to discover that the heathen were at their doors also, and not heathen only, but poor brethren in sore need of help, and on Oct. 9, 1816, a meeting was held at the house of Charles Cleveland, resulting in the organization of a Society for the Moral and Religious Instruction of the Poor. In 1841 this name was changed for the broader and more comprehensive title of the City Missionary Society.

The story of the society's earlier and experimental stage curiously foreshadows many of the experiments and successes of the philanthropic activity of the present time. The story of its later progress and settled policy of work has been one of growing and expanding public confidence and helpfulness.

If we could have looked through the eyes of that committee whose members went out from the study of Rev. Joshua Huntington, D. D., the pastor of the Old South Church, to study the social and educational conditions of their own city, we should have seen a far different Boston from that of today. It was a town of less than 40,000 people, with ill paved and dimly lighted streets, still relying on volunteer assistance in case of fire, still dependent on the wind for sea voyages and the stage-coaches for land journeys, a town whose literary supremacy was all in the future, and whose commerce was just beginning to recover from the shock of the embargo and the second war with England. Its centers of commercial and social gravity were still far east of the State House, its wealthy churches were clustered in neighborhoods now wholly given up to business. The dangerous quarter of the town was "The Hill" at the northwest, where by the neglect of the churches and the failure of town authority a large and lawless element was herded together without church privileges or police restraint. Six years later a city charter was obtained, but it was not until the administration of Mayor Josiah Quincy that the agents of the society seem to have had the co-operation of the authorities in their efforts for the reform of the neighborhood. These people, who drank and danced, and swore that no meetings should be held in their neighborhood, were not foreigners but Americans. The managers of the society very early appealed for help and sympathy to the people of all eastern New England on the ground that it was the children of the country towns who recruited the forces of evil. The difficult conditions of modern city life arising from wide differences of wealth and opportunity had only begun to show themselves. Rev. Mr. Rossiter said at a later time, after long experience of devoted and heroic work, "I am more and more convinced that there are very few virtuous and suffering poor," a judgment which we fear would hardly stand in the experiences of today. The radical difficulty of the situation was in the decline of aggressive spiritual life among the churches. The ferment of Unitarianism was working, and of the eleven churches of the Congregational order in the city nine had already left the faith of the fathers. It was in this emergency that the leadership of Dr. Huntington was of such value to the society. The son of a distinguished Massachusetts father, he was graduated at Yale and began his study of theology under President Dwight. He was called to Boston as the colleague of Dr. Eckley and was looked to as the leader of a more conservative theology and a warmer type of piety than was then common in the Boston churches, and his short ministry abundantly justified the expectation. It was at his house that the preliminary meeting for consultation was held and he was the first president of the society, holding that office until his death in 1819. To his sympathy, counsel and active assistance the earlier years of the work owe much.

Another man who greatly helped in shaping the beginnings of the enterprise was Rev. William Jenks, D. D., a Harvard graduate, who went from a pastorate in Maine to Bowdoin College as professor, and thence came to Boston, where he opened a private school. He almost immediately became the secretary of the society, a position which he held until 1833. It was Mr. Jenks who held in the "Long Room" over the arch on Central Wharf the first service for sailors, a work which he continued and fostered until out of it grew the first Seaman's Friend Society, with its wide helpfulness and its imitators and emulators in other cities. Upon him the Old South congregation leaned after the death of Dr. Huntington. Later he became the pastor of the Green Street Church, a position which he held for a quarter of a century. His was a useful and honored life, and not the least part of it was his leadership in the City Missionary Society.

The problem which confronted the new society, though comparatively simple, was urgent enough. Here in the heart of Puritan Boston a brief and superficial inquiry showed that 140 families were without Bibles, and hundreds of children were growing up in ignorance of things human and divine. The society was for the moral and religious instruction of the poor, and to the task of instructing the children it at once addressed itself. The public schools were not efficient, and for the poor were too exacting at the very beginning, requiring some slight knowledge as a condition of entrance, and this slight knowledge of the rudiments was beyond the reach of the neglected children.

It was the age of Sunday school beginnings, and the society's first work was in establishing schools in the neglected quarters of the town. Two were at once begun in the town schoolhouses. The children were to be taught to read as well as to worship, and were "examined and classed when admitted." There was something amusingly timid and even prudish about the popular reception of the beginnings. It is carefully stated in the first report that the boys are "taught by male and the girls by female instructors." In the villages about Boston to which the schools soon spread this timidity was even more apparent. The state of tension in the theological world is indicated by the fact that in Marlborough, "Being unacquainted with the tendency and design of Sabbath schools, serious apprehensions were felt by many, lest it was a concerted plan secretly to propagate the opinions of a party," and this prejudice was only with difficulty overcome. In Hingham the school was "confined to females and has only female instructors."

The desire to stimulate industry found expression in one of the village schools in a system of compensation—"a school fund raised by subscription, from which the children receive compensation for whatever they learn. The class in Cummings (a catechism) are entitled to a cent for every twenty-five answers, and the other classes in proportion to their age and capacity. Tickets are delivered to them each Sabbath specifying the sum they have already earned, which are exchanged the next Sabbath. One-half of their little earnings in this way is to be appropriated for the education of a heathen child in Ceylon . . . and the other to be delivered to them in books." This somewhat tantalizing method seems to have suited the times, for the report adds, "This we find an effectual stimulus, and one which deeply interests their feelings"!

In the Sunday school work the great difficulty was in finding competent and devout teachers. Since there were doubts about the propriety of asking women to teach the boys, it was necessary to have a large proportion of men, and the volunteers for this service did not always show the perseverance of the saints. Indeed, it would have been strange if they had, for most of them did not even lay claim to church membership.

The first fruits of spiritual blessing in the schools were among the teachers, not the taught. In the fifth report it is stated, after lists of thousands and tens of thousands of verses of Scripture, hymns and answers to catechisms committed to memory, with the emphasis of italics: "Three of the teachers have made a public profession of religion during the past year." Five years later the same fact is summed up in regard to the same school in the words: "It is worthy of notice that nearly all the teachers who have continued in our school for any length of time have become hopefully pious." But even in that year the record of another school is that five teachers had made a public profession of religion, and only one scholar.

This practical difficulty must be kept in mind in estimating the Sunday school successes of the early time, not merely because it shows with what imperfect instruments the society was compelled to do its work, but because it is an indication of the condition of the religious atmosphere in which the work was accomplished. The workers were to be educated before the work could be thoroughly and easily done. Following close upon the growing piety of the teachers comes the record of spiritual power and conversion in the schools. The debt to God is paid and the blessing follows.

We have already alluded to the beginning of the work for seamen, which is the forerunner of a host of specialized religious activities in our modern Christian life. Out of that meeting over the arch of Central Wharf many opportunities and efforts grew. Mr. Jenks at once felt the necessity of a church life. "I can think of but one objection to the place [of meeting]," he writes, "and that respects the formation of a church among our seafaring friends. If a church be formed, it should grow out of the family relation, or consist with it, and must hence admit both males and females as they appear qualified. But the wharf is not a fit place for females, and on this account a house for public worship seems desirable." The work soon spread to other ports, to Salem and the towns along Cape Cod, by means of the Marine Bible Society, the Boston branch of which was founded in 1819. Thought began to be taken for seamen in foreign ports, and a Bethel flag was sent to the missionaries in Hawaii. A sailor's legacy made the nucleus of a building fund. In 1828 the Seamen's Friend Society was organized with the hearty sympathy of the directors of the society, a pastor was called for the Seamen's Church, and the direct responsibility of the society for the work among the sailors of the port ceased.

Specialized work was either proposed or undertaken in these early days with reference to the men employed in the rope walks, who seem to have been a numerous and isolated class, and to the garrison at the Castle, to whom Bibles, Testaments and tracts were supplied as the limited means at the disposal of the society would allow. The Africans in the city were visited and provision made for their spiritual needs. The discussion of the subject of prison reform and the classification of prisoners has a considerable place in the reports. At that time debtors and criminals were crowded together in the jails and there was special need of ministration. Provision was planned for helping discharged prisoners to employment.

One of the most interesting experiments of the time was the employment of Andover students in their vacation for house to house visitation and Christian work, an experiment carried on at intervals for many years and abundantly justified by results. In the list of these students is the honored name of Rufus Anderson. Many of the features of the modern college settlement were anticipated in the establishment of the first mission building in what was then called West Boston—that is, the tract between Beacon Hill and the Charles River. A house in the immediate neighborhood was hired and Rev. Mr. Gamble occupied it. "His residence in the neighborhood of the mission house," writes the secretary, "though at first it subjected him and his family to insult and danger from the unprincipled assaults of rude and shameless persons, is now quiet and comfortable, and promises considerable usefulness."

If the efforts of the society, indeed, had produced no other effect than that of the transformation of this one neighborhood, it would have been worth all it cost. "When this society was organized," writes Dr. Barbour, the second secretary of the society, in 1834, "the 'Hill,' so called, was one widespread scene of prostitution and crime. . . . A residence in that part of the city is now as quiet and safe as in any other. . . . The place, in fact, is no longer the great center of the city's pollutions, and if the friends of Christ, and of good morals, and the city government, do their duty, that delightful spot, instead of reverting again to its former uses, will soon become, what the hand of nature designed it to be, the most inviting section of the city." This transformation was wrought by the efforts of the society and by the awakened Christian conscience of the public, a conscience whose quickening was itself largely due to the society's efforts.

Another effect upon the public sentiment of the town is indicated in the report of the society for 1820. In the report of the first year a large number of children were pointed out who, "although allowed to look to the public system of education for the means of obtaining such a knowledge as would qualify them to be useful, were yet virtually excluded. Gentlemen connected with this society pushed the inquiry, and it seems not too much to say that the subsequent adoption by the town of a plan to instruct children under seven years of age in primary schools, now in successful operation and annexed to the general system of public instruction, owes itself to this establishment."

In this, and in calling attention to the utter license of wickedness in the West End, the society did notable service to the community at large, prefiguring the municipal reform and law and order societies of our own day. Secular education soon passed from its hands to the municipal government, but not before its protest and example had been potent for reform.

Two elements which have grown with the growth and strengthened with the strength of the society remain to be noticed in the work of this first period.

From the beginning house to house visiting and personal influence have been the means principally used in carrying on the work, and from the very first day of gathering a Sabbath school the necessity for occasional wise help of a material sort was felt. The personal hand to hand work has never failed, and has always borne abundant fruit. The material relief has grown in volume with the changed conditions of our city life. It has been fed by contributions kept apart from the ordinary receipts of the society, and has been administered with care and forethought on lines of helpfulness but never of pauperization.

About 1831 there came a check in the progress and prosperity of the society. Contributions fell off rapidly. The "promiscuous contributions and subscriptions" on which it had to depend failed to realize enough to keep even four missionaries continuously in the field. It became evident that its work must be reorganized and that it must depend for financial support upon the evangelical Congregational churches. This desirable end was not fully reached until 1841, when the society was reorganized under the present name. It was proposed at one time to make the society an instrument of church extension, becoming an auxiliary of the Home Missionary Society as the city missionary societies of St. Louis and Chicago now are. But the churches were by this time actively expanding in a different way and the experiment was not tried.

Much encouragement was derived just at this time from a sum of money left to the society by Mrs. Ann Lee, which paid the debt and left a small nucleus for a permanent fund. Tract distribution was made prominent, the city was carefully districted and in the work of visitation the churches were earnestly asked to co-operate. As many as 400 church members sometimes engaged in this service. The city had a little more than doubled in numbers and the influx of foreigners from this time on becomes the most serious problem with which the society has to deal.

In 1850 the society, under the joint superintendency of its president, Hon. Daniel Safford, and Andrew Cushing, whose name appears in the reports for fifty years as missionary or superintendent, took the step which seems to have brought prosperity. From the moment that women were appointed missionaries contributions flowed in. The tireless, faithful, sympathetic, sensible city missionary had been discovered. Within a year there were ten of them in the service and they have been the strength of the society ever since. Nearly two thirds of the honorable company of 141 who in eighty years have served Christ in the employ of the society have been women.

Other developments of the work in later times can only be briefly referred to. Homes have been provided for destitute children. The society's Chinese work was the pioneer work of its kind in the city. Service of visitation and of worship has been maintained in public institutions and private homes. Easter sees a round of visits from the superintendent and a company of friends for worship, and Thanksgiving help brings joy to many homes. Visits of exploration bring children into Sunday schools. As the result of 58,985 calls in 1895, 827 children were secured.

Several of the city churches grew directly or indirectly out of the work. Shawmut Church, for instance, began in a meeting for prayer held by a city missionary in the house of Deacon S. C. Wilkins. Other churches which owed much in their inception to the society's work were the Green Street Church, the Mariners' Church, Hanover Church, the Edwards Church, the Evangelical Church of East Boston, the Phillips Church in South Boston and the Central Church, Dorchester. Started by the City Missionary Society and sustained by the various churches are the Old Colony, Shawmut, Phillips, Hope and Bennington Street chapels, most of which are churches in all but name and ability for financial self-support. In a thousand ways the society has repaid the help of the churches with stimulus and aid. On the side of material help it has wisely and generously administered funds contributed for that special purpose, amounting in 1895 to over $6,000. The fresh air fund, which provides a brief holiday for children, mothers and tired workers, and a visit at Rosemary Cottage at Eliot, Me., where mothers and sick children find a haven of rest and refreshment, received last year over $13,000.

The general contributions advanced from $1,407.08 in 1816 to $52,217.60 in 1895, and the last twenty-five as compared with the preceding twenty-five years show that the receipts advanced from $261,712.64 to $850,445.76 for all departments of the work. The number of visits made advanced from 826,744 to 1,183,912; the number of meetings held from 38,101 to 47,710; the number of persons gathered into Sunday schools from 15,315 to 20,880; the number of persons who commenced a religious life from 1,234 to 2,011; and the persons furnished employment from 4,871 to 12,525.

The presidents of the society from the beginning have been Rev. Joshua Huntington, Josiah Salisbury, Samuel Hubbard, John Tappan, Pliny Cutler, John C. Proctor, Julius A. Palmer, Philip Greely, Jr., William T. Eustis, Ezra Farnsworth, Daniel Safford, Charles Scudder, Edward S. Tobey, Charles G. Nazro, Amos W. Stetson, James White, Arthur W. Tufts, Richard H. Stearns —a noble company of representative men whose services have been invaluable to the society and to the city. Mr. R. H. Stearns, head of the well-known house of R. H. Stearns & Co., served as a member of the board of managers and of the executive committee of the City Missionary Society since 1871, was elected president in 1891, and still holds the position, giving to the cause thought, time and generous financial aid. Mr. S. F. Wilkins, president of the Howard National Bank, has been treasurer for the past twenty years, rendering service with fidelity and receiving no compensation. Rev. D. W. Waldron, the present efficient superintendent, became connected with the society in 1873 as clerical missionary. In 1892 he was elected secretary and superintendent.

The last twenty-five years of the society have been years of the most generous financial support and largest effort along religious and benevolent lines. Started as a "ministry at large" to the poor, the society is better equipped than ever for its work. Some of the results of that work are evident, many more, the hidden fruit of self-denying effort for Christ, will only appear when all things are made manifest.

I. O. R.

THE POLICEMAN AT THE CROSSING.

BY REV. A. H. QUINT, D. D.

The crossing is a crowded one where two important streets cross each other. At the four corners are respectively a stone church, a great hotel, an immense business establishment which sells nearly everything and an eleven-story mammoth structure which deforms the land upon which it stands. Not far off are the State House, the Court House and the City Hall; and the elevator entrance to the Congregational Library is just one hundred steps from the crossing when properly walked. It is really a dangerous crossing. In the center of one street electric cars are continually passing in opposite directions on the two tracks. The long street is narrow, and it is used by pleasure carriages, heavy wagons laden with great burdens like brick or stone, lighter carts transporting goods, and, most troublesome of all, bicycles whose riders as usual create the most danger and are the most defiant as to any decent respect for the rights or safety of others. During the business hours of the city throngs pass to and fro at this point. The confusion is excessive. I have heard it stated that a hundred street cars pass in an hour.

To cross the tracks at this point, and evade at the same time the other sources of danger, would ordinarily require a sharp eye and a quick foot in resolute and able-bodied persons. For women and children and for any physically weak the danger is great. That is, it would be so if it were not that the policeman detailed for the purpose stands on the crossing between the two tracks and rules with magical power. He stands there with a calmness almost as quiet as that of Benjamin Franklin's statue near by, but with movements, when any are necessary, of easy grace and bearing. He brings order out of confusion. He makes a safe path through the midst of the apparently dangerous forces. He never gets angry, he is never impatient. He is an autocrat of benevolence.

There was a similar official in the fearful tumult near the Bank of England, but I adopted there an ingenious method of crossing. It was to take an omnibus which came close to the curbstone and, climbing to the top, ride half a mile or so to a place where there was little travel, leave that vehicle, cross the street, take another, and go back to the point on the same street which I wished to reach. But at our crossing we get over easily. Some people boldly dash across, but I humbly admit that I prefer waiting until a little group is collected, and the policeman with a gentle wave of the hand beckons us forward. With the same hand he waves back all vehicles upon his right, and with his left hand he as quietly magnetizes those coming in an opposite direction into motionless obedience. The horses draw back upon their haunches. The lightning of the street car finds its master. Even the bicycle is brought to decency. I have studied this so many times, and have found the potency of this trusty and unselfish policeman so valuable that it has made a profound impression upon me.

He is always handsomely dressed in his dark blue uniform, and wears spotless white gloves. I cannot say that I admire his helmet, but he says it is shaped so as to shed rain. He is a well-formed person, tall, of proper weight, muscular and erect without being stiff. He is courteous in his bearing, and particularly helpful to the lame or aged, whom he will often escort across. He is not talkative, but will answer questions if he can reasonably do so.

He is only a policeman. But a policeman may have a heart. I remember one at the corner of Boylston Street two or three years ago, who when the strings had come off from a bundle of pasteboard boxes which fell to the sidewalk, said to the boy who was carrying them and who was almost crying, "Pick up your boxes and hold them together, and I will tie them up for you." This was done. I said to the policeman, "Is it a part of your work to help boys with bundles?" "Ah, sir," said he, "we are all here to help each other." A policeman is a man. I felt very sorry when one of my old regiment who had for many a year patrolled the block in which the Congregational House stands was placed in another locality. It had been a great pleasure to me to shake hands with him many a day, and have his cheerful greeting, "Well, chaplain!" One day he showed me a letter, forgotten by myself, written after a great battle to a patron of his, in which I had said that K. had done his duty finely. He had recently obtained the letter, and said he was going to frame it for his children. Policemen have hearts.

Our policeman at the crossing is doubtless paid for his work. But pay in money is not the equivalent for his courtesy and faithfulness. It is a great thing for a man in any position of life to do his duty. Metaphysically speaking, I suppose one cannot properly say "do his duty well." With a high sense of duty he cannot do his duty unless he does it well. But, after all, there are men who do not quite get up to this high sense, and practically we make a distinction. Practically also we should acknowledge a higher standard whenever we find it. Certainly, when I am escorted across I am generally weak enough to say, "Thank you." A mere official service is one thing; a careful, watchful, generous service is something higher.

But how does this man have the power to motion back the horses and the motor-governed cars which could ride him down in a moment? Why does he stand there without the movement of a muscle directly in front of them? Of course, it is simply because the State of Massachusetts has placed him there and, though he be unarmed and only one man, he represents the power of the State. He is the embodiment of law. Take off his helmet and substitute a brown coat in place of his blue one and bone buttons in place of gilt, and any effort on his part to make a path would be laughed at. But in his official position this humble policeman is a lesson of law. He is also a lesson of the care of the Government for its citizens. A government is to protect much more than to punish. The police detective of crime is of course necessary, but I like better to think of the policeman who assists the needy. Are we quite sure that the divine government is not as well exemplified at our crossing as it is in the police court?

I have concluded that in the midst of any excitement of parties and passion I shall continue to rely upon our policeman at the crossing. The busy hum of traffic will go on in the streets. The motor cars will travel to and fro under the power of an unchangeable force. I shall need to cross the street, how many times I know not, and many another will also cross, and I have the firmest faith that our policeman will be there to help us when the new year shall have come in. Fortunately, he serves under the Civil Service rules, and the quarrels of parties will not warp him. And when public results become history, and some people are successful and some are disappointed, the warnings of woe and destruction will, as heretofore in similar cases, have come to naught. We shall find at the crossing our policeman, in his handsome coat and white gloves, waving back the dangers and making a clear path, as ever the symbol of law and the evidence that the State and nation remain in dignity and security.

We here, in America, are passing through a civic crisis which involves as its essential characteristic the single question whether, at this period of the world's history, any single people may hope successfully to divorce itself from all the past—from other and older civilizations—and be a law and a life to itself. That is at this hour the question which involves the very foundations of our social order, and to which all other issues are secondary and inferior.—Bishop H. C. Potter.

Charity Chance.*

A Serial Story by Walter Raymond.

Summary of the Previous Twelve Chapters.—Charity Chance becomes engaged to Graham Poltimore, nephew of her benefactor, Miss Graham. His friend, Alfred Prentice, a poet, so prevails upon her impressionable nature as to detach to some extent her affections from her fiancé. Mr. Poltimore-Briggs, a pompous and self-seeking politician, who has charge of Miss Graham's property, is running for Parliament. Charity attending a political rally meets the poet and goes to his room, where he renews his protestations of affection. Mrs. Mortimer, an intermeddling neighbor, having informed Miss Graham of the real state of affairs, the latter in her wrath informs Charity of her past history as an adopted and cared-for waif. Charity naturally prepares to leave the home of Miss Graham, but a chance meeting with Prentice reveals the shallowness of his love.

XIII. CHARITY GONE.

CHARITY was gone!

Broken-hearted and purposeless, she had crept home through the darkness to her little room over the porch and cried away the night. Her spirit was benumbed. But dawn came rising above the brim of the hill, daylight poured into the coombe, and meadows and lawn glistened cold with morning dew. Another day was come. She bestirred herself to think what she must do. She must write to Graham. She seated herself at the table before the window and wrote him a letter, imploring his pardon. She was unworthy of his love, had disgraced herself and him, had never deserved his confidence, and he must forget her. She had learned her own story, she told him, and should leave Babblemouth at once. Poor Graham! His goodness and fidelity touched her, as she thought of her own inconstancy. She felt a tenderness toward the playmate of her childhood as she penned this farewell.

But where was she to go? No matter where, so long as she could earn her living out of sight of all who knew her. She must take the first thing that offered, no matter what.

It was very early, and no one in the house had moved. In idleness she had often scanned the columns of advertisements in The Guardian, a paper held by Miss Graham in high estimation; and now she fetched the last issue from down stairs, and set herself to search in earnest. Of money she knew nothing. Her wants had ever been anticipated. Vulgar considerations of cash lay submerged and unsuspected in a sea of unlimited credit, for payment of accounts looks almost poetic upon checks of finest lithography and delicate tint. She quickly turned over the pages, but her eye first alighted upon the "situations wanted."

"Lady Crowborough warmly recommends her governess. Thorough English, fluent French, German (acquired abroad), Latin, Drawing, Music, Singing, Calisthenics.—Miss R., the Library, Oldhurst, Berks."

Who would recommend her? Or what could she say for herself? With a sigh she turned over the leaf, but found no comfort. Here every accomplishment under the sun was wanted—"Good temper, disciplinarian. Must be a lady. Care of clothes. Photo and particulars. Stratford Rectory, Hants."

She clenched her teeth in anger. What did they mean with their "must be a lady"? She could not answer that.

In the whole range was only one that did not exclude her in advance. Mrs. Cornelius Porter of Forest Hill required a nursery governess to take charge of five children. "Must be experienced in teaching. Music essential. £15 to £25, according to qualifications."

This at least displayed openness to argument, perhaps to conviction.

In her quick, impulsive way she seized her pen. It was the mere clutching at a straw in her last hopelessness, but she wrote. She shivered to see what she had written, it looked so fraudulent—and added she would gladly accept the lower sum, on account of her inexperience. Then she stole out in the cheerless morning and dropped both letters into the red post box in the garden wall. Having thus taken her fate into her hands, she became more composed. She threw herself upon the bed and slept.

"I SPOKE TO THE RECTOR AT ONCE."

When at last Charity went down stairs the house was as silent as a grave. Even the servants moved mysteriously, and cast inquisitive glances at her red eyes and pale face. They knew all about her, like the rest of the world. Yes, the sooner she was gone the better.

Thus the miserable day passed—until evening. Then came a quick step across the hall, and, unannounced, Graham rushed into the room. His face was burnt by the sun, he was white with the dust of the road, and in his hand was the letter she had written him.

"What is the meaning of it, Charity?" In his resentment he could not wait for a reply. "What have they been saying to you? Who has dared to comment upon you? But I know what they have said. They have even hinted it to me; and some fool sent me an anonymous letter. Do they think I care what they say? Charity, dear, if every tongue on earth were to tattle about you, I should only love you the more. I know their gossip about Prentice. Of course you have talked to Prentice. There are very few to interest you in this place. I'm not half good enough for you, Charity; I know that. But I'm not such a fool as to listen to anything they say. Why, you can't do anything wrong or mean. You have a mind that wont let you. Charity, I think you are the noblest"—

"O, stop! stop!" she cried, placing her fingers upon her ears. He had seated himself upon the sofa beside her, and now he laid his hand upon her shoulder. But she shrank away from his touch. She got up quickly and crossed the room. Her back toward him, she leaned against the mantelpiece and, burying her face upon her arms, she sobbed and sobbed.

Just as Miss Graham's delicate confidence, so her lover's absolute trust over whelmed her with shame. He followed and stood by her side.

"Charity," he stammered, in a voice so low that it was scarcely audible, "I—I don't know how you have learnt your—your story. You once asked me, and I told you I did not know. But I always knew all there was to know. I thought—I mean if you thought I did not know, and that could make any difference—Charity, marry me at once. I have always known and loved you for yourself. Marry me now—before I go back."

How manly and true he was! She had never glimpsed into the depth of his character through the light-hearted carelessness of his life. But he did not understand how his words wounded and hurt her.

She raised her head and looked him in the face, with frightened eyes beseeching pity.

"I shall never marry you, Graham," she cried, wildly, "nor any one. You will never see me again. I shall go away at once. I shall never come back. I shall hide my face forever. And you must forgive and forget me."

Neither argument nor entreaty could sustain her against this torrent of passionate shame. He knew that both were useless, and his love itself forbade him to persist.

Then his disappointment turned to self-reproach.

* Copyrighted, 1896, by Walter Raymond.

"I shall never forget you, and there is nothing to forgive. It is my own fault. I made you promise me. I cared about nothing so long as you said yes. I was vain enough to think it would all come right"—

Her face betrayed the depth of her distress. Conscious of the cruelty of his words he suddenly stopped. Then in a voice subdued and quiet he went on: "But you will stay with Aunt Helen. It shall not be difficult for you, Charity. I will go away—abroad."

There came a tap upon the door. Then it opened.

Miss Graham had heard him come into the house, and wished to see him at once.

"I will come back and speak to you, Charity," he whispered, as he went away.

On the second day came a letter in answer to her application, accepting Miss Charity Chance's services at £15 a year, and requesting that she would come at once. Again the message had been sent that Miss Graham would not rise today and did not wish to be disturbed. The girl did not know what to do. Her mind was made up. She had taken her life into her own hands, and tomorrow she would go. This determination, without delay, she placed beyond recall. She found her train and bade Jan Sprake dispatch a telegram from Babblemouth when he went to exercise his horses. Then she wrote a line telling Miss Graham what she had done, and asking if she might see her once more.

Late that night Miss Graham sent for her.

The room was almost dark. One candle, in a tall silver candlestick, stood upon a table in the corner farthest from the bed. The curtains had been drawn and the pillow, with Miss Graham's head upon it, was quite hidden from view.

Charity stood by the foot of the bed and waited.

"So you are going, Charity." The voice was slow and clear. Hundreds of times the girl had marked a like formal preciseness when some person not in favor unconsciously affronted the dignity of the little cripple. "And I may never see you again. I know that you must go. You could not stay, and I could not bear to have you here. But I wish to say that I am sorry—sorry for the words uttered in the moment of anger. Don't speak—don't dare to speak to me, child. This going for a governess is an absurdity. You are no more fit to be governess than I am. They will turn you out in three weeks. But you have done it and so you must go. However, remember this, wherever you are, I charge myself with your future and you need have no anxiety. Beside the candle is an envelope. You will have to start by half-past nine, but I will see to that. And when you leave this—this place I will think of something for you, if I ever can think. Take the envelope and leave me. Don't speak a word. I cannot talk any more. And go to bed at once and rest."

The girl was used to obey, and she stepped toward the table to do as she was bid. But in this thought for her future was no tenderness. Disappointment had dissipated the love and the delight, and only the sensitive pride and shrewdness remained. She glanced at the letter addressed to "Miss Charity Chance." From early childhood many a gift had come like this. Sometimes it lay upon her pillow when she woke. Or she found it on the table when she went to bed. It was easier thus, for the little cripple would hear no thanks. Had it ever before been anything but, "For my little one," "To my dear child," and of late always, "To dear Charity"? Doubtless it contained money. Well, come what might, she would keep herself or die. She withdrew her hand and left the letter there untouched. Then, without a word, she went away.

On the following morning at the appointed time Jan Sprake brought round the carriage to drive her to the station.

The fat horses crawled slowly up the hill. Charity glanced back at the little mansion, the lawn and the shrubberies. But all were blurred and out of shape with tears.

When Charity disappeared beyond the horizon a smarting pride aroused Miss Graham's spirit. Through the dull aching of her loss came a sharp pang as she thought of Mrs. Mortimer. That the event had justified the warning given by that excellent woman made no difference at all. Unconsciously that proud little heart harbored the more resentment. Since Irene's death she had suffered no blow like this, and she summoned all her fortitude to show a brave face to the world. Her sorrow was deep—so much the deeper must it be buried. She rang for her hot water, and dressed at once. And she wrapped Charity's departure in a tissue so fine that it cannot be deemed a fib.

"Put Miss Charity's room tidy," she said to the maid who was helping her downstairs. "Then lock the door and bring me the key. She may be away some time, and nothing shall be touched until she comes back."

"We must take great care of Miss Charity's myrtle, John, this winter," she told Jan Sprake when next he wheeled her chair round the garden. "I don't know what she will say if anything happens to it whilst she is away."

Such things repeated mystified the world. Outwardly she triumphed over herself, but in secret her courage failed. She knew that Charity would never come back. She was angry and regretful by turns, because the girl had not taken the envelope. The evenings began to get chilly. There was no music in the house, and she had not the heart to read. She was nervous, and wrote to Poltimore-Briggs to hurry on the settlement.

Within a week Mrs. Mortimer's curiosity got the better of her pique. There was absolutely no reliable information, for Graham told nothing, and she was not even certain that the engagement was broken off. After all one must not cherish anger, and the mortification of pride is a Christian virtue. So she magnanimously marched over to Babblecombe at the head of her daughters, and was quite cordially received.

"I could not help coming, dear Miss Graham," she acknowledged with perfect truth, "when I heard you were alone. So I came early, to have a long afternoon. And the girls wanted to ask, if it would not be too much trouble, if the tennis net might be put up. They can mark out the court themselves quite easily."

It would be no trouble whatever, Miss Graham assured them. So the maid ran, the young man who worked in the garden helped, Jan Sprake muttered and perspired, and the thing was done.

"So Charity has gone away, they tell me," said Mrs. Mortimer, settling down to be sympathetic.

"O, yes," chirped Miss Graham, and she did not wince.

"But not for long, I suppose?" The sweetness of Mrs. Mortimer became quite insinuating.

"It is not quite decided how long she will stay."

"You must miss her very much?"

"Yes."

The plucky little woman could not hide it all. In spite of herself, the sadness would betray itself in her voice.

"Has she gone a long distance?" continued Mrs. Mortimer, greatly encouraged.

Miss Graham thought a moment before replying. Then she looked Mrs. Mortimer quite frankly in the face.

"I am not quite sure whether—I mean, I have some little delicacy in talking about it—for the present, that is. It was her own private affair, and Charity decided for herself. There are occasions in life when one must decide for one's self. And this was quite sudden. She got a letter one day, and went the next. She followed the dictates of her conscience, and I dared not influence her in the matter. But I do not think I must talk about it—just for the present."

"I would not hear a word for the world—not for the whole world," cried the agonized Mrs. Mortimer, dramatically, putting her fingers to her ears to deliver Miss Graham from temptation. "What can have happened?" she was thinking to herself.

But now the disinterested character of Mrs. Mortimer's visit was to be revealed distinctly.

"However, it was not to ask questions that I came," she went on, hiding her disappointment in an artificial smile. "When I heard you were alone I spoke to the rector at once. I said, 'Perhaps dear Miss Graham would like Theodosia to be with her for a while, to be company for her and to read to her, and so on.' And if you would, dear Miss Graham, I would do my best to spare her, even if it were all the winter. I am sure she would be only too glad to do anything for your comfort."

A scarcely perceptible shudder shook that sensitive little creature. She did not accept the loan of Theodosia, but her thanks were profuse. She was not strong enough at present to entertain a visitor. It would be too dull for the poor girl—perhaps a little later—she excused herself.

The dear girls came in glowing like tulips. They were hot and filled the room. They were breathless and consumed all the air. Their superabundant health jarred upon Miss Graham's sensibilities. Yet they did nothing amiss, and said nothing whatever. She could not help comparing them with Charity. Charity was as strong as they, yet fifty Charities could not have been so obtrusive.

"Perhaps Miss Graham will allow you to come again," suggested their mother when they rose to depart.

They came again. In a little while they came daily and brought their friends. They went on playing right into the winter when the grass was wet and slippery, and they trampled down the Christmas roses searching for the balls. The lawn got bald in patches. "So bare as the back o' your han'," said Jan Sprake.

And the little cripple, with whom none before had ever dared to take a liberty, looked on in silence. She did not care about anything now Charity was gone.

(To be continued.)

Where the Fight Is Hottest.

Aspects of the Campaign in the West.

By H. A. B.

Exciting as is the current political contest throughout the country, it is only when one enters what is considered doubtful territory that he thoroughly realizes the gravity and intensity of the struggle. Massachusetts on the one hand and Georgia or Colorado on the other may easily arouse and express as much enthusiasm as can be generated by a foregone conclusion, but pass on to any of the great commonwealths which belong to the middle tier of States and you at once detect a difference in tension.

The air is not only charged with feeling but it is surcharged. Personalities on the platform and in the press are more marked and frequent. The man without a badge or button looks lonesome. Parades, mass meetings, joint debates at county fairs, test votes on railway trains, street corner discussions, the scattering broadcast in several different languages of catechisms, speeches and other documents, the hand-to-hand propaganda—these have become so common that it seems as if the real issues of this campaign must find their way to the remotest lumber camp, to the most isolated farm in this great Western country.

"Go in anywhere," said the commanding officer to the belated lieutenant, "there is splendid fighting all along the line." And the same thing can be said of the battle which will reach its culmination and settlement when the ballots fall like snowflakes on Nov. 3. To one who loves his country there is something inspiring in this mighty grapple of opposing forces, in the mental strain and moral earnestness, in the hammering out of individual opinion and in the unprecedented amount of effort looking to the persuasion of others, whether through quiet discussion by the wayside or great demonstrations in public places.

"And how is it coming out?" This question I have put to no less than forty men since I crossed the line into northern Michigan a week ago today. From there skirting the southern shore of Lake Superior on to Duluth, that superbly situated and ambitious city at its western extremity, thence to Minneapolis and thereafter straight through the timber region of northern Wisconsin to one or two of its representative centers, I have made it a point to feel the popular pulse as often and thoroughly as possible. I have interviewed all classes of citizens, from my sleeping car porter, who was putting in his best work for McKinley because "if Bryan is elected all the trains are going to be laid off for shuah, sir," to a national committee man, who was, of course, as certain of the outcome as political managers are bound to be. Ranging between these extremes were regular Republicans, Republicans now in the silver ranks, gold Democrats leaning toward McKinley rather than Palmer, Mugwumps since 1884 but now in the Republican columns, and men now as always identified with the regular Democracy. The mere enumeration of these various types shows the shifting in party affiliations that has taken place since the Chicago and St. Louis conventions.

In northern Minnesota both sides speak hopefully, but the Democrats with less confidence. Few of the latter will hazard a guess as to the size of what they trust will be a favorable majority. Almost any ardent gold man, on the other hand, is ready to put forth his prediction of thirty, forty or sixty thousand majority for the Republican ticket. The fact that Minnesota alone of States west of New England has never, either in a gubernatorial or presidential election, proved recreant to the Republican party is considered good guarantee of its loyalty now. That doubts are entertained at all indicates what an uncertain and anomalous political year this is.

Certainly if the election had been held two months ago Bryan's chances in Minnesota would have been better. The furore of the Chicago convention affected sentiment powerfully for a time, but the tide soon reached the flood and has been ebbing ever since. In Duluth silver sentiment is still noticeably strong. The free silver candidate for Congress, Charles A. Towne, lives there and has a strong personal following despite the fact he has deserted the party which two years ago sent him to the national House. The Republicans in his district are supporting a sound money Democrat, and this constitutes another of the singular combinations of this campaign. Minneapolis and St. Paul, however, have quieted down and today resemble Eastern cities in the adherence of the solid business and professional men to the gold cause.

From what sources are the free silver votes coming? An analysis of its component parts shows first a very respectable fraction of intelligent men whose thinking and reading for a number of years has led them to expouse this monetary doctrine. I could name among such a prominent citizen of Duluth whose library is one of the best in the State, and who ranks high in general cultivation. There are lawyers there and in Minneapolis of excellent standing who are perfectly sincere in their advocacy of the white metal. As respects those members of the business community who will vote for Bryan I do not think it uncharitable to say that the bulk of them have either failed in business or are heavily in debt or have some interest in silver mines.

Then comes the rural Populistic vote, which in some sections, particularly in the Red River Valley, is very strong. Low prices for their crops, high prices for labor have made them ardent Bryan men. I wish again to steer clear of uncharitableness, but I believe that this special category embraces more than the honest, industrious, hard-pressed workers on the soil, who have become enamored of a specious theory of finance. The shiftless, ne'er-do-well, spendthrift farmers, the farmers who are too lazy to take the trouble to enrich the lands that produce their crops, will vote, every man of them, for Bryan. To return now to the cities. There is not much doubt as to how what is called the slum vote and the crank vote and the anarchist vote will be cast. It is not Mr. Bryan's fault, to be sure. Were he a reformer of the ideal type, level-headed and statesmanlike, all this loose and irresponsible vote would still, no doubt, be handicapping him. I mention it now, not because I think he is courting it, but because it is one of the almost certain elements in a forecast which is so hazy in other respects.

How about the honest, self-respecting labor vote? Here, to my mind, lies the pith of the uncertainty that remains notwithstanding very favorable Republican prospects. Outwardly in this section of the Northwest wage-earners, as a rule, appear to be following the standard of McKinley. They took part in large numbers in the Minneapolis parade alluded to above. I take no stock in the cry of intimidation and compulsion on the part of capital. The Australian ballot system would make that or any attempt at corruption of little effect. Nor can I blame the employers who, reasoning, and reasoning truly, that a Democratic victory would be likely to injure first of all the wage-earners of the country, endeavor in wise ways to make their employés see how disastrous would be the effects of free coinage. But I suspect that there may be many in the employ of mills and railroads who, whatever profession they may make with a view to standing well with the boss, will when election day comes prove to be Bryan men. The blighting hard times which have prostrated the business and embarrassed the progress of this great Northwestern region as we in the East but faintly comprehend are a tremendous factor in this campaign. The Republican program must eventually cope with some very great currents and countercurrents set in motion by existing industrial and agrarian conditions. Judging by what I have seen and heard in this region Mr. McKinley will carry the doubtful States by comfortable majorities. But the ends which God has in view for this nation will still be far in the distance.

Antigo, Wis., Sept. 30.

MOUNT HOLYOKE'S NEEDS.

BY REV. CYRUS PICKETT.

Few know the struggles of Mary Lyon in overcoming opposition, awakening interest and in securing funds for this pioneer school for the higher and Christian education of women. Several persons with whom she labored long and earnestly gave her six or ten cents each for her object and it was years before she secured enough money to justify entering upon the work of building. At times she almost despaired of success. Once she wrote that she thought there were nine chances out of ten that she should not see the work accomplished. Would you know the travail of her soul at that period, read her words: "Could I but be permitted to labor in the portico and spend my days in clearing the ground for that which is to continue and to exert an extensive and salutary influence on female education and on religion from generation to generation, it would be the hight of my ambition." "Had I a thousand lives I could sacrifice them all in suffering and hardship for its sake."

This fire should call attention to the work of Mary Lyon, whom an eminent divine has pronounced the greatest heroine of the nineteenth century, and to the school which she founded, and an interest should be awakened that shall manifest itself, not in words only, but in princely gifts, so that the former somewhat contracted and inadequate quarters may give place to modern structures and more ample accommodations.

In place of the burned building it is proposed to erect eight cottages to cost about $30,000 each. In addition to these there is urgent need of a gymnasium to cost say $35,000 and a tasteful chapel. Whose names shall these buildings honor before the present and future generations? Where can good men make investments with such certainty that every talent will yield ten talents?

The flames which seemed so ruthless were ordained by One infinitely wise and good, and if men shall respond to the present urgent needs Mt. Holyoke may enter upon a broader and higher career than she has hitherto known. The institution is no longer a seminary, but a most thorough college. The authorities are unhampered and ready to raise it to the highest ideal, and the endowment now hoped for will enable them to make advances along all lines. None of the modern expensive structures were burned. The artesian well still pours forth its pure waters for all. The charming grounds invite you to place upon them the tasteful structures above named. Who responds? A distinguished writer asks, "Of what use is an opportunity if you do not improve it?" Remember the last message of Horace Mann to those under his care: "Let these words sink deep into your hearts: Be ashamed to die till you have won some victory for humanity." Seldom is such an opportunity presented as Mt. Holyoke now offers to those who would do a world-wide and lasting benefit to mankind.

The Home

A JUDGMENT.

Dear friend (that was), I write this farewell line,
Mourning the vanished trust that once was mine.
Musing your last unkind, unjust decree,
When to your presence you had summoned me
And said, "I can forgive, but not forget,
Yet think not that I hold one vain regret.
For too much dreaming on what's all ideal
Withholds the heart from God, the True and Real,
While idols we but too unconscious make,
Until they fall, when shuddering we awake:
I pardon, as I hope to be forgiven,
But may we meet no more—not even in heaven."

Suppose that Christ upon his judgment seat
Should turn his searching eyes, so grand yet sweet,
Until they met thine own; that he should say,
"Come hither, friend, this is the judgment day;
Thou that hast been so blessed, so well beloved,
My great forbearance hast so often proved,
I know thy sins, and I forgive thee all,
No malediction on thy head shall fall.
In peace depart—depart for aye from me.
I never wish again thy face to see,
For how can I forget? My love retain,
But let me never see thy face again!"

O, would this Christlike be? What thinkest thou?
O, noble soul, so stern in judgment now.
Dear friend, for thee this parting thought I've writ,
Wishing no answer—think, O, think of it!

—Mary West.

The simple article entitled Butterflies and Heaven, on which a contributor comments below, seems to have attracted unusual attention among our readers. Is it not significant that the least utterance, whether shallow or profound, on this old theme of immortality is certain to probe the heart and awaken questionings too deep for human wisdom to answer? A mother in one locality, in the endeavor to explain to her little child the mystery of life springing out of death, watches with her the slow change from grub and chrysalis into a beautiful winged creature. Another woman, living far distant from the first, watching the same process of evolution deduces a different, but an equally important, truth on which the adult mind may well ponder. There is a real danger, as she suggests, now that a "larger hope" has lighted the future for so many of us, lest our sense of personal responsibility become dull and we arrest our own development.

BUTTERFLIES AND HEAVEN.

BY MARY GORDON.

The beautiful object lesson given by Mrs. DeCoster in The Congregationalist of Sept. 17, and bearing the above title, had a special interest for one of the grown-up children, who, with similar thought, had been watching the same change from worm to wings as the miracle was wrought in a netting-covered box in her room. As the wonderful creature rent its parchment roll and from a pink begonia blossom took its flight in the new, free element of which it found itself master, the whole air seemed filled with the triumphant song, "O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory!"

But on the way to this resurrection morning we had been learning another object lesson. We had watched the worm in all his motions and processes, and it seemed as if he had but one purpose—to fulfill the conditions by which the perfect butterfly could be formed out of his worm state. The feeding and fasting from the white "everlasting flowers" which were his habitat and his food, the "going up," the suspension, the spinning and the three weeks of motionless waiting—all this was done in loyal co-operation with the laws of his higher life. We could plainly see that had they been ignored or neglected the winged creature which crept out of the gray roll would have been crippled and incapacitated for the life of liberty to which it had come. We could not see the invisible artist whose pencil found its way in delicate but unbroken lines around the edges of the closely packed wings, nor the palette from which came the colors to dot and dye the tight velvet folds, but had there been rebellion or resistance in the narrow studio the Psyche which came forth when the door was opened would surely have been maimed and unable to enter and use the joy and freedom of the new existence.

What the worm taught was only another way of putting what Christ taught so often and by so many different figures, that there is a profound, an inseparable, connection between what we are and do here with what we shall be and ever do hereafter. The beautiful possibilities of the butterfly lie within us all, but they need our loyal co-operation for their development. In the simple bursting of the chrysalis there is no magic to perfect them. The work of forming and growth must have been done before. We may not stunt our embryo wings and ask them afterwards to bear us sunward.

THE AGE OF CONFLICT.

BY ANNA ROBERTSON BROWN LINDSAY, PH. D.

There is a trying time which comes into the experience of many parents in connection with their children—the time when they have to reckon with a child's will as not only a positive, but as an independent and almost uncontrollable, factor in the family life. This period brings many perplexities and anxieties. What can be done?

Prepare for this age. Expect it. Get ready for it. The experience that is looked forward to and provided for is shorn of half its terrors. It is a marvelous thing that parents so carefully arrange for summer and winter, for breakfasts and dinners, for travel and schooling, and yet so often neglect the most important aspects of all—certain psychological and spiritual conditions of those children—the definite stages of development through which their souls must pass. Much is to be learned from history and life. The traits which David and Eli had to meet in their sons and daughters the parents of today have also to encounter. Such experience is a moral guide.

The child who is going to turn out a really strong and efficient man or woman usually manifests two marked traits in childhood—a strong will and a hot temper. Superior physical strength and sharp punishment may keep these traits in check for a few years, but the moment a child brought up by sheer force approaches manhood or womanhood that moment insubordination begins. The first thing to realize is the place and value of these traits. They are not a sign of weakness. A strong will, rightly directed, is what gives moral backbone. A hot temper implies a deep heart. These traits are a native endowment of energy and power. Let them not be beaten and broken, but let them be disciplined, controlled, guided and trained to moral service.

Study health conditions. Much total depravity is bad air in school, or lack of sleep. Watch the weather influences. We are creatures of a thousand moods, which depend greatly on environment. On bleak and stormy days it is much harder to be good. Teach a child this fact and help him to take pride in self-control, in rising above petty irritations. Comfortable, fresh, becoming clothes also play a greater part in good temper than we imagine.

Bring children up on great books. Heroic ideals serve to make heroic men and women. If a boy or girl has from childhood been reading the great literature of the world, when the trying period of possible conflict comes he will by that time have realized, however unconsciously, that the ideals of the world are on the side of order and obedience, that filial devotion is counted one of the noblest traits and that only the foolish and weak-witted refuse to take counsel of those who are older and wiser than themselves. Such young people, as Ian Maclaren truly says, "will have youth without its crudities."

Allow for the point of view. We cannot get life from another. Each of us must go through with it for himself. Parents see life through the medium of experience. Their vocabulary is that of facts. They do not realize that what they say, however true, conveys little meaning to the child. He hears words, but he has no standard by which to measure their import. Years afterwards he suddenly says: I see now what they meant! Too many parents expect a child to appreciate their own point of view. He cannot, unless he has a remarkable mind, or else has had a deep early experience of life. A common plaint of parents in regard to their boys and girls is, They are so ungrateful! They do not appreciate all we have done for them. Well, how can they? When those boys and girls are married and have children of their own for whom they toil and watch and sacrifice and pray—then, and not till then, will they really understand what their own parents did for them. Is it not unreasonable to require from them that which, in the nature of things, they cannot possess for years to come? Honor, love and prompt obedience are all that they are as yet able to give.

Allow for the individuality of the growing life. Parents sometimes harshly repress it. They are too apt to treat their children as if their lives ought to repeat their own. They will not. No son has ever repeated his father's life, and no daughter her mother's. Each of us is unique. The life of that son or daughter will be something absolutely new in time—a fresh experiment in the possibilities of humanity. The utmost care should be taken not to check latent powers and talents, not to antagonize noble impulses, and not to refuse the advantages necessary for development.

Allow for the irritation of transition. We are all cross when we are thoroughly upset. A son or daughter passing into maturity is usually an irritable being. This is not inherent badness nor lack of self-control. It is the young soul trying to adjust itself to life. Life has strange fears for us all, but never do those fears rise up so strong and high as they do in the period of transition from childhood to more mature life. We are unaccustomed to life. We are not acquainted with its time-honored duties and demands. We do not know how to deal with its problems nor what to make of the vigorous, powerful personality developing within us. We are constrained, embarrassed, shy, hampered, misunderstood, and this brings about the unbalanced temper, the petty friction, the dispondency, the unhappiness and the desperate loneliness. I think both boys and girls shed bitterer tears during this phase of their lives than they do over their deepest sorrows later on. It is a season of darkness and trial.

Allow for self conceit. By this I do not mean to accept conceit as a virtue; it is never that. It is not even a tolerable fault. But consider that the child feels within him the stirring of a life of independent power. He knows that he has a place in this universe which no other has ever had or ever will have. His heart is enlarged. The energies which are moving his soul and his aspirations, dreams and desires appear to him effective. He thinks he can do wonders. He sees the mistakes and failures of others without realizing the opposing forces in nature and fate which have brought them about. Having never matched himself against the calm universe, he imagines that he is stronger than he is. Instead of being held up to ridicule he needs forbearance, compassion, wise words and wise books.

Allow for the desire to rove. What makes a young man restless at home is not that he wishes to forsake his father and mother, but that he is trying to find out where in God's world he truly belongs. All unconciously he is looking for his work and his mate. The time is coming when that home will be his no more. He will have his own home, new interests and independent responsibilities. He cannot pass at a bound from one condition to another. There is a period between. Ah, how sadly this period is misunderstood! Too often the father becomes arrogant and domineering — threatens, commands and reviles his son. The mother weeps, upbraids, pleads, but the son goes his own defiant way. Much of the sadness and sorrow might be avoided if the parents would be a little less arbitrary in their demands, a little less stringent in their requirements, a little more merciful in their judgments of their son's motives. He is not recklessly regardless of their feelings and wishes. He does not want to run away from them. He loves them from the heart. The daily conflicts cost him tears and pain. He goes about feeling like a guilty and hunted wretch, upbraided and rebuked at every turn, and yet there are instincts within him which call him beyond those four walls. Life is awaiting him, he must get out. He would give anything on earth to be told how to be a good son and yet maintain his spiritual freedom, his right to a place in that beckoning beyond.

Allow for moods. Girls, particularly, are subject to great extremes of conduct and feeling. One day they are happy and light-hearted; the next they are down in the depths. These changes are trying to some parents, who look upon them as whims and freaks. But these moods are a part of a woman's natural development. Just because she is finely organized and sensitive life takes her at every point unawares. She is not prepared for its sudden disappointments and denials. The overthrow of hopes and plans chills and depresses her. She goes through shock after shock. Again she feels ashamed and disgraced over her outbursts of temper. In her heart there is the ideal of the lovely woman she wishes to be—the woman ten years older than herself, who has learned patience and calm—and the daily spiritual defeat fills her with passionate sorrow, which only the noble-minded can understand. Give her tenderness. Love her and let her grow.

Allow for violent friendships. All girls have them. These friendships often arouse fierce jealousy in the mother. She is angered to find her own love so meagerly repaid, while this sudden girl friend or teacher has lavished upon her the utmost devotion of her daughter's heart. Just as a boy goes through the age of defiance, a girl goes through that of sentiment. It is foolish, but it is real. Recognize the fact. In time these fancies fade away.

Allow for ignorance. The mother, who has had years of practical experience, sees at a glance what is to be done about a house. She thinks her daughter thoughtless and selfish because she lets many things pass by which she might do to relieve her mother of care. Interest that daughter in home duties by giving her a little definite responsibility at a time, and gradually increase it as time goes on. She will grow up loyal to the home, devoted to her mother, well-trained, prompt, thoughtful and efficient.

Allow for individual adjustment of time. Allow for individual ways of spending money. No two of us care for just the same things. Every child is unique. Every child is human. Each needs love, patience and wise care. But the reward is greater the greater the discipline of these trying years. Some day there will be the time of bloom and the time of power. The boys and girls will unconsciously pass into that strong, radiant, noble manhood and womanhood of which their dear parents have dreamed, and for which they have toiled and wept and prayed.

THE BIRCHES.

O, granite girded, pine-crowned hill—
So beautiful, so fair,
Beneath the over-arching skies,
So sweet with "wild-flower air!"

There, stirred by every straying breeze,
Lithe, graceful birches grow;
Their shining bark through wind-tost boughs
Stainless as drifted snow.

There happy wild birds sway and sing,
The free, wild birds of June;
Content in grateful sheltering
Through the long summer noon.

But lo! a touch of autumn's breath—
The miracle behold!
Each trembling, burnished emerald leaf
Is changed to rarest gold.

So, clad in heaven-sent robes, they stand
So still they bless and cheer,
Like lifted torches, to illume
The twilight of the year.

And when a million sun-born rays
Flash o'er the waking world—
When every quivering leaf gleams bright
With dew-drop gems impearled—

We wonder that such radiance
Can dwell 'neath earthly skies,
And almost fancy that they grew
In realms of Paradise.

—Josephine E. Cragin, in Fitchburg Sentinel.

KINDERGARTENS OF BOSTON.

The kindergartens of Boston are sixty-one in number. They have been gradually established in the several school districts, but there is not yet a sufficient number to accommodate all the children under five and over three and a half years of age; neither have we yet reached the time when we are practically ready to admit the necessity of this training for all children, by making it as obligatory as the learning of the three R's has long been. Until all children receive the preparatory training which the kindergarten offers, it will be impossible to tell how valuable it really is, for until then the primary school cannot be modified to meet the results of the kindergarten.—From director's report in Kindergarten Magazine.

Closet and Altar

When prayer brings no solace to your weary heart try praise.

Of what an easy, quick access,
My blessed Lord, art thou. How suddenly
May our requests thine ear invade
To show that state dislikes not easiness.
If I but lift mine eyes my suit is made;
Thou canst no more not hear than thou canst die!

—George Herbert.

The reason why our lives are so fragmentary and meaningless is that we live them as if they were our lives only and do not center them in God. We must unite ourselves to the Greatest if we would live in any great or glorious way. In union with the Strongest is our strength.—Lucy Larcom.

He knows your need. It seems to you that no one can know it, it is so vast. He knows it better than you do yourself. The multitude of your own aspirations are not present to you, are lost to you, but he has caught them all in his own vessel and will see to it that all are duly fulfilled. He knows your need—your bodily and your social need, your intellectual need, your spiritual need—your need today, your need yesterday and your need tomorrow. And he knows it that he may supply it.—George Bowen.

Becoming one with the eternal Goodness cannot come to pass but by an absolute renunciation of ourself and all that is ours, natural or spiritual; for in the same measure that a man comes out from himself, in that measure does God enter in with his divine grace, and he who loseth his life shall find it.—John Tauler.

Begin the day with God,
He is thy sun and day;
He is the radiance of thy dawn,
To him address thy lay.

Take thy first meal with God,
He is thy heavenly food;
Feed with and on him, he with thee
Will feast in brotherhood.

Thy first transaction be
With God himself above;
So shall thy business prosper well,
And all the day be love.

—Bonar.

O Lord God, strong and mighty, we would draw near to thee, confessing our weakness, beseeching thee to make us strong. We would be strong in body, that we may do our work in life well and cheerfully. We would, O Lord, be strong in heart, full of courage, fearless of danger, holding pain and danger cheap when they lie in the way of duty. We would be strong in love, make us warm-hearted, true friends, loving our neighbors as ourselves and loving thee with all our heart and soul and strength. We would be strong in faith, ever trusting in the victory of good over evil, strong in hope, undaunted by seeming defeat, ever looking beyond the mists and clouds of time into the clear shining of the eternal life, strong in patience, bearing our burdens, suffering our pains quietly and without reproach toward man or rebellion against thee. Hear our prayer, O Lord, who art our strength and our Redeemer, for Christ's sake. Amen.

AMY'S FIRST PARTY.

BY HELEN M. STAFFORD.

"O dear! I do want a party dress!" exclaimed Amy Reynolds, discontentedly.

Her mother sighed over the evening mending, and her father glanced up a moment from his newspaper, but neither spoke.

"The boarders have come already, and are going to begin their hops in a week or two. I might have gone last year if I had had anything to wear. Of course Hattie will invite me to everything at the hotel, and who knows what might happen?" she asked a little triumphantly as she glanced at the pretty, flushed reflection that looked back at her from the mirror.

"Don't fill your head with silly notions," said her father, more sharply than was his custom.

Her sister Grace looked up from the embroidery she had been bending over, but before she could speak Amy went on excitedly: "It wouldn't cost so very much either. I saw a lovely piece of satin that was only forty-eight cents a yard, a sample from Smith's sale, and Hattie is going to have a blue one. It wouldn't take more than twelve yards for me. I know I could get it out of that, and I can pay for it myself and cut and make it, too."

The subject introduced by Amy had an unpleasant effect upon the family circle. The clock ticked slowly, and the evening dragged away. Mrs. Reynolds patiently mended; Grace worked over her designs and embroidery; Mr. Reynolds finished reading; while Amy, with bright eyes and flushed cheeks, sat looking straight before her. She was either unconscious or indifferent to the pain she had given and the anxieties she had aroused. By and by she arose with a little yawn and carelessly said good night. Mr. Reynolds went into his library, and Mrs. Reynolds and Grace were left alone.

"You know what all this means, mother," said Grace, bitterly. "You see how little Amy realizes her position. She thinks because the ladies buy ribbons of her in the store, and because they treat her pleasantly and look at her as if they thought her pretty, that they would be the same if she were to meet them anywhere else. Our family is a good one, I know, and we have just as good a right to cultivated society as anybody. But"—she stopped a moment to choke back a sob—"there is another thing worse than all. Amy is losing her head over one of the young men, Philip Wells, while of course he is only amusing himself with her. Sometimes he walks home with her from the store after dark, and if Amy had any pride"—

"She is young, you know," gently explained Mrs. Reynolds, "and has never been away from home as you have, and her temperament is different. It is such a grief to your papa and me that we were not able to do for our daughters what we had expected. So I say little to Amy, and want her girlhood to be as happy as can be. She will learn the ways of the world soon enough. I hope she will not have to be in the store after this summer, though I do not feel as hopeful about the X. R. R. stock as your father. But go to bed, dear; do not worry; we shall live along happily if your father's health improves." And mother and daughter kissed each other good night.

Grace went slowly up stairs, and sighed as she thought how misfortune after misfortune had come to them. First, her father's book, that he had spent so many years of labor over, had not been so well received as it deserved. He had failed in getting a certain professorship, then a lung weakness developed, and they had all come back here to live at the old homestead. She loved the square house, with the broad, green grounds and stately elms, but even this was theirs no longer. Both her grandfather's and father's investments had proved almost valueless, and now it was only through the charity of a rich relative that they had a place which they could call home. Here they had lived since Grace was a girl of twelve years and Amy only seven. Now they were seventeen and twenty-two. Grace had inherited her father's scholarly tastes, and was his amanuensis and companion. She was also quite clever with her pencil and brushes, and had been successful in selling her designs and sketches to one of the great New York houses. Amy was different. She was a pretty, petted child, rather willful and independent of public opinion.

Nothing more was said about the new gown during the next few days. One night Amy came home in a highly triumphant state, bearing a package which she proceeded to open. "There," she exclaimed, "isn't it lovely?"

"Why, Amy!" said her mother. "Why did you get this? You are too young for satin. Muslin would have been far more suitable."

She spared Amy's feelings, now that the satin was really bought, by saying nothing about its poor quality and lack of luster.

"Yes," cried Amy, ironically, "country girls always wear white muslins and blue sashes. I prefer pink satin," and she held the folds up to her face and promenaded back and forth in front of the mirror.

"I have some lovely fashion plates, and I am going to cut this square in the neck and back, and have little short sleeves and get some long gloves."

Grace looked at her aghast.

"Amy Reynolds! A girl your age wearing a décolleté gown! It's bad enough to have it satin."

Amy's eyes sparkled and she looked angrily at Grace.

"I bought this and paid for it myself, and I shall cut it as I wish. Everybody thinks I am at least twenty," and she drew herself to her full hight.

Mrs. Reynolds sighed and Mr. Reynolds went on with his studies. Someway Amy had grown hopelessly out of their control, and now her mother felt that experience must be her best teacher. The dress was made and the eventful evening came. Amy walked back and forth in her room, admiring the effect of her white throat and shoulder and the sweep of her little train.

"No one would dream that this lovely dress cost me only six dollars and eighty-five cents. I suppose I ought to have kept the money for a cloak this winter, but I am going to have one good time in my life," she thought as she went swiftly on to the hotel where Hattie Woodford, the landlord's daughter, had invited her to share in the festivities.

"O, how lovely you look," said Amy, admiring the blue satin, the mate to her own pink one and from the same bargain counter.

"So do you," warmly responded Hattie, as she carefully surveyed her friend's gown and arranged a drapery here and some lace there.

"O come on! I can hardly wait," said Amy, taking Hattie's arm and half skipping through the halls. They entered the large dining room which had been cleared for dancing and sat down at one side where a few chairs had been left for the matrons of the dance. Amy held up her head and sat upright, having the feeling of being much better dressed than some of the young ladies who were boarding at the hotel, for they wore only simple white china silks or mull frocks, not half so elegant nor fashionable looking, to her eyes, as her pink satin.

The couples circled past her, beautiful women in dainty silks and laces and glistening jewels, looking just like the fashion plates she had been studying the week before when she was deciding how to cut her gown. The men seemed to her very distinguished in their evening suits. The music was intoxicating and Amy felt that it must be the most brilliant scene in the world.

She saw Philip Wells smiling and dancing with a young lady who impressed her as rather plain and certainly plainly dressed. As they waltzed towards her end of the hall Amy grew self-conscious. The color burned in her face, she sat up straighter, fanned herself violently and tried to catch Philip's eyes, for she thought as soon as he saw her he would come and ask her to dance. She had not told him that she was coming that night for she wished to surprise him in her fine clothes. She was a trifle lonely, for Hattie had left her in order to dance with the hotel clerk. When Philip and his partner were nearly opposite her, the young lady looked at Amy, said something to him and smiled. Philip glanced also at Amy, their eyes met, then he looked smilingly at his companion and they continued their promenade.

Amy blushed scarlet. Could it be that he did not know her, because she looked so fine? There had not been the slightest recognition in his glance. No one came to speak to her and she was ready to cry. Then Hattie brought a young clerk employed in the office, who invited Amy to dance, but she felt the smiles of others in the set when she made mistakes or took more steps than was their custom. Poor child! she had had only a country dancing master's training, and was now receiving a lesson she would never forget. She felt that everybody scorned her, and she herself felt countrified and dowdy. What had seemed simple and plain to her when she came into the room now appeared refined and well-bred. She hated her pink satin. Philip Wells still danced with those plain girls and he bent over them as he did when he used to walk home with her from the shop. Only he did not treat her so respectfully as he did them. He told her that she had pretty eyes, and she flushed in agony as she thought how she had let him kiss her once. She saw an elderly lady raise her lorgnette and look at her. Half blinded by tears she hurried through the halls to the piazza and threw herself down into one of the great rocking chairs which stood in the corner. She could hear the waltz music, but its seductive strains entranced her no longer. She seemed to hear above the music the echo of that expression, "only a shop girl."

Suddenly she heard footsteps. Some one was coming out of the heat of the room and the glare of the lights into the cooler night air. She recognized the voice. It was Philip Wells. She heard the soft laughter of his companion and then, as their words grew distinct, she became dumb with horror, for they were talking about her.

"Did you see her go across the hall alone?" the soft voice asked. "The idea of a child being dressed that way, in a low necked satin gown! I should think even country people would know better; and no one to chaperone her either."

Philip's reply was too low for Amy to hear.

"But you have talked with her," the voice went on, "I know you have by the way she looked at you."

Philip protested his innocence and they passed on and Amy was left alone. Her breath came quicker, the color burned in her cheeks. Then the sense of her humiliation came over her and she wept bitterly. By and by she grew quieter and sat a long time half-listening to the music, looking up at the stars and thinking a great many thoughts. While her indignation burned against the cruelty of these fashionable people, yet she remembered with shame that she had never been willing to listen to either her mother's or Grace's advice. She had scoffed in lofty independence at what they called "good form" and the demands of the best society. She had arrogantly thought that she knew everything about that which was all strange and foreign to her. She now resolved that she would never again be humiliated because of her own ignorance and willfulness. Her heart became lighter and she went home. It was almost midnight and, to her surprise, she saw a light in her father's study. During the past years he seldom sat up so late. As she went through the hall she heard him talking with a stranger. Then she went to bed and it was perhaps an hour later before she heard her father show his guest to the guestroom. The next morning she learned that the stranger was a famous professor who had long known her father through his writings, and had come to look up the man who had done so much for the world of science.

The following three years brought many changes to the Reynolds family. The world is slow to recognize and reward merit, but it waked up to the fact that Mr. Reynolds was indeed a great man, and his name became distinguished among college professors. Amy and Grace were able to study and travel a good deal abroad during these years, and after that Amy really "came out" in society, although she confessed to herself that she went to her first party when she was only seventeen and wore a décolleté pink satin gown.

She discouraged Philip Wells after the experience of that memorable night and came to understand that society demands and naturally expects certain formalities and conformity to established customs. Amy's lesson was a wholesome one by enabling her to distinguish all the better between gold and tinsel, between good and bad form. Often the world is accused of selfishness and coldness when, after all, the responsibility for the real or imagined slight is directly traceable to the lack of breeding of the individual, which might have been overcome with care and, as a consequence, the heart been spared the bitter lesson it learned through humiliation.

Tangles.

86. PRACTICAL PROBLEMS.

1. A painter desired to know the hight of a certain building. Standing 60 feet from the wall, he held his cane perpendicularly so that its lower end was 2 feet, 4 inches in a horizontal line from his eye, and found the range of the top of the wall to be 35 inches from the bottom of the cane. If his eye was 5 feet from the ground, and the latter a horizontal plane, what was the hight of the wall?

2. To his friend's query, "What is the time of day?" a smart young Sophomore replied: "Two-thirds of the time past noon is four-fifths of the time to midnight." Can any reader tell what was the time? S. P. L.

87. A TANGLE OF WINTER.

(Each emphasized word is made up of letters from the word forming the answer.)

BARE ARE now the orchard branches and the snow is on the ground,
And no berry and no leaflet on the bushes can BE found;
FAR away the summer song-birds find no winter in their YEAR,
But the little English sparrows neither cold nor hunger FEAR.
While the rabbit and the weasel change their FURRY coats to white,
Wrapped in FUR the BEAR lies hidden from each prying RAY of light;
And no BURR of busy insect or bee's hum meets the EAR.
Yet the chirp of English sparrows BY our doorstep we can hear.

O, cheery English sparrows, a lesson RARE YE teach,
YEA, a quiet little sermon, while I scatter crumbs, ye preach.
A tiny coin will BUY you, a small thing BAR your flight;
Within my hands' slight hollow I can BURY you from sight.
Yet not a sparrow falleth unless our Father sees;
"Fear not," ye seem to chirrup, "of more worth thou art than these."

88 ENIGMA OF POETS.

6 63-41-64-1-26-36 was the author of Cato.

2-35 7 40-47 48 61-54-51-10 was the author of The Excursion.

46 42-17-39-69 was the author of Night Thoughts.

48 22-64-9-25-64-11-18 was the author of Snow-Bound.

5-3 68-65-46-16-67 39 was the author of The Holy Grail.

12-29-38-3-41 was the author of many ingenious enigmas and charades.

32 8-15-24-21-64-14 was the author of The Minstrel.

13 62-2 19 34-45 was the author of The Vision of Sir Launfal.

66-12-31-65 20 58 59 was the author of The Faerie Queene.

27-23-43-37-57-52-36 was the author of Silex Scintillans.

60-28-54-44-33-59-56 was the author of The Church Porch.

18-55-37-49-7-30 was the author of Pleasures of Memory.

53-6 64 34 50-46 was the author of Festus.

Whole, of sixty-nine letters, is a quotation from Keats.

S. J. N.

89. DECAPITATION.

With lily pads our oars are ********,
Our eager hands the blossoms *******.
Each cries, "Away dull care * *****";
And eager Echo answers, "**."

MRS. G. E. AIKEN.

ANSWERS.

83. 1. Chess. 2. Croquet. 3. Baseball. 4. Foot ball. 5. Golf.

84. 1. Dukes. 2. Essex (SX). 3. New-port or New Haven. 4. Washing-ton. 5. Fairfield. 6. Hart-ford. 7. Carroll (carol). 8. Rocking-ham. 9. Merrimac (merry Mack). 10. Somerset. 11. Knox (knocks). 12. Orange.

85. Bright-some.

Among solvers of Sept. 10 and Aug. 27 were: Frank Wood, Whitinsville, Mass., 81, 82; L. M. P. Somerville, Mass., 77, 81, 82; Mrs. G. E. Aiken, Newton, Mass., 82; Horace E. Thomas, Forest Grove, Ore., 75; Miss C. M. Jordan, Santa Barbara, Cal., 74, 75, 76; Sarah Penley, Buffalo, N. Y., 74, 75; Mary P. Eddy, Marshfield, Vt., 75; Mrs. Lemuel Sisson, Little Compton, R. I., 75.

Young housewives may depend on Cleveland's baking powder. It does the work just right every time. "I have used Cleveland's baking powder over 25 years—it never disappoints."—Mrs. B. F.

New England cooking is celebrated, and it's going to be more so. Every housewife is going to discard poor flour and use

"Duluth Imperial"

and have "better bread and more of it."

20 loaves more to every barrel.

If your grocer doesn't keep it, and won't supply you, don't get another flour—get another grocer; or send us a postal and we'll tell you where to get it.

DULUTH IMPERIAL MILL CO., Duluth, Minn

The Conversation Corner.

A FEW belated vacation letters command our attention at the outset this week. They come from all along shore and away back in the country.

(MAINE.)

. . . I went fishing with a friend of mine from Somerville. My friend went on his wheel. I went with my pony and carried a little cousin. We brought home two dozen live trout in a pail of water. You must come down here some time and see the place.

ARTHUR H.

(NEW HAMPSHIRE.)

. . . Papa brought your letter after Harry and I were in bed. I am sorry you had such a hard time getting home from church that Sunday. Robert said he knew what comfortable places there were to take headers on the Hampton road, for he had been there himself. We all went down to Hampton Beach this summer to attend the meeting of the Sea-Side Union. But mamma let Harry and I play on the beach in the afternoon. We had a nice time looking at the wreck, wading, making wells and finding shells. Before we were through with our play the tide was high enough to start for home, and away we went paddling up the Hampton Falls River, with red noses and good appetites for supper.

Your loving friend, NED J.

(MASSACHUSETTS)

. . . Here I am up here in Shelburne once more. There are not many raspberries this year, but a good lot of blackberries. There are a great many apples, but not many pears. The old saw-mill is still alive, and is running when they have water. A good many people are building siloes for their corn this summer.

CARL P.

All day I have heard a little bit of an engine puffing away in front of a neighboring barn. I will go and see what it is doing. . . . Now I have been up to the barn, and found it (the machine, not the barn) was cutting up corn fodder into ensilage. It was very interesting to see it, corn ears and all, chopped up fine and run down into the silo. A boy gave me three long, fine ears. Guess how many kernels there are on each? I find that there are just twelve rows (as many as the months of a year) and fifty-two kernels (as many as the weeks of a year) in a row. A lady says that she believes there is always an even number of rows—can any farmer boy tell whether that is so? I find that there are fourteen rows on each of the other ears.

(NEAR BOSTON.)

. . . Are you in your office or home in vacation? [Yes.] If you are I will come and see you. [Come.] I am now reading Aunt Judy's annual volumes. [Who is "Aunt Judy"?] My doll has had her face broken, so she has to stay in bed all day. [If only her face is broken, I advise her sitting up for part of the day, even if she is unable to walk.] I like to read the little letters. [So do I.] Please tell me the price of the Corner Scrap-book. [$1.25; expressage extra—to you fifteen cents, to any part of the United States, twenty-five cents.] Good-By. [Good-By.] ALICE C.

The following bright and breezy letters take us "afield with young naturalists":

(UP IN THE COUNTRY.)

Mr Martin: In that pleasant editorial, Hawkbit and Pimpernel [Sept. 3, page 322], the writer says: "As for the pimpernel, it is the sea's companion. . . as if its weakness felt the need and security of the ocean's strength, and the breath of the salt mist were essential to its perfect life." But I have found the pimpernel growing in a Berkshire town, about as far from the ocean as it could stray and still keep within the Old Bay State, and as I remember the flowers I think they were as perfect as those I had seen on Martha's Vineyard, wet with ocean's spray.

There is a tiny lavender colored flower, growing close to the ground, which I had seen in Gloucester and fringing the wheel tracks in the streets of Marblehead—the spurrey sandwort. A few years ago I found it blossoming within two minutes' walk of my own door, a hundred miles from the sea, growing in shallow soil between the uncovered roots of an old oak. Such pictures of Gloucester harbor and the rocky shores of quaint old Marblehead as the little flower brought to me! It must have been homesick for the sea, for it has never grown in that place since. One would like to know the story of that seed which traveled from its seaside home to this distant valley!

M. A. B.

(NEW JERSEY.)

My Dear Mr. Martin: I was much interested in reading about the Birds' Bath [Corner, Sept. 10]. We have one too—a crock holding a quart standing near a juniper tree in sight from the window. Robins begin in the early spring, taking a most vigorous plunge and getting real wet before they fly away to make their toilets. The catbird spends a minute or two in jumping across the dish and coquetting with the water, but in the end gets as wet as his cousin robin. Once in a while a brown thrush comes shyly up and drinks and bathes. The little song sparrow, chippy and English sparrow all drink, but the foreigner likes a dust bath in the road best. But the most amusing "bird" that comes in is the toad! Two and three they get in and soak, with just the tip of their heads out of water. But it is a pleasure to minister to their comfort, not to mention the dogs and the hens which come and use our bath. I could not help adding this testimony to the pleasure the Birds' Bath brings, and sending it to our dear Corner—long may its right-angled walls serve to corner wisdom for all who never grow too old to learn!

M. F.

Mr. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

Presidential Candidates not Elected. We have now had two lists in our Scrap-book relative to the presidency—one (Aug. 13) of the successive incumbents of the office from the beginning, the other (Sept. 24) of the vice-presidents associated with them. So much interest has been shown in these historical facts, put in tabular form for convenient reference, that a list is given this week of the candidates in successive campaigns who were defeated. In some cases these were men of great ability and renown—more so, in fact, than their successful rivals, yet I doubt whether one out of a thousand of us could, without research, give their names. If you think you can, you might try it before reading the list below, letting some one read in order the candidates elected, whose names are in italics. The date is the year of the election, not of inauguration.

1789. Washington and Adams, Fed. No opposing candidate for president. Scattering electoral votes for vice-president.

1792. Washington and Adams, Fed. No other candidate for president. George Clinton, New York, Dem., for vice-president.

1796. Adams, Fed., and Jefferson, Dem. Adams and Thomas Pinckney, South Carolina, were the Fed. candidates; Jefferson and Aaron Burr, New York, Dem. In early years the candidate receiving the largest number of electoral votes was made president, the next in order vice-president. This explains the opposing politics of this administration.

1800. Jefferson and Burr, Dem. Adams and Charles C. Pinckney, South Carolina, Fed.

1804. Jefferson and Clinton, Dem. Charles C. Pinckney, South Carolina, and Rufus King, New York, Fed.

1808. Madison and Clinton, Dem. Pinckney and King, Fed.

1812. Madison and Gerry, Dem. De Witt Clinton, New York, Fed. (and Peace Dem.), and Jared Ingersoll, Pennsylvania, Fed.

1816. Monroe and Tompkins, Dem. Rufus King, New York, and John E. Howard, Maryland, Fed.

1820. Monroe and Tompkins, Dem. J. Q. Adams, Massachusetts (had one electoral vote), and Richard Stockton, New Jersey, Fed.

1824. Adams and Calhoun. Andrew Jackson, Tennessee, William H. Crawford, Georgia, and Henry Clay, Kentucky, were candidates for president, and John C. Calhoun, South Carolina, Nathan Sanford, New York, and Nathaniel Macon, Georgia, for vice-president: all were "Democratic Republicans."

1828. Jackson and Calhoun, Dem. Adams, Massachusetts, and Richard Rush, Pennsylvania, National Rep.

1832. Jackson and Van Buren, Dem. Henry Clay, Kentucky, and John Sargeant, Pennsylvania, National Rep.; William Wirt, Maryland, Anti-Mason.

1836. Van Buren and Johnson, Dem. William H. Harrison, Ohio, and Francis Granger, New York, Whig; Hugh L. White, Tennessee, and John Tyler, Virginia, and Daniel Webster, Massachusetts, and William Smith, Alabama, were also candidates.

1840. Harrison and Tyler, Whig. Van Buren, New York, and Johnson, Kentucky, Dem.; James G. Birney, New York, Liberty Party.

1844. Polk and Dallas, Dem. Henry Clay, Kentucky, and Theodore Frelinghuysen, New Jersey, Whig; James G. Birney, New York, and Thomas Morris, Ohio, Liberty.

1848. Taylor and Fillmore, Whig. Lewis Cass, Michigan, and William O. Butler, Kentucky, Dem.; Martin Van Buren, New York, and Charles Francis Adams, Massachusetts, Free Soil.

1852. Pierce and King, Dem. Winfield Scott, New Jersey, and William A. Graham, North Carolina, Whig; John P. Hale, New Hampshire, and George W. Julian, Indiana, Free Soil.

1856. Buchanan and Breckinridge, Dem. John C. Fremont, California, and William L. Dayton, New Jersey, Rep.; Millard Fillmore, New York, and Andrew Jackson Donelson, Tennessee, American.

1860. Lincoln and Hamlin, Rep John C. Breckinridge, Kentucky, and James Lane, Oregon, Dem.; Stephen A. Douglas, Illinois, and Herschel V. Johnson, Georgia, Dem.; John Bell, Tennessee, and Edward Everett, Massachusetts, Constitutional Union.

1864. Lincoln and Johnson, Rep. George B. McClellan, New Jersey, and George H. Pendleton, Ohio, Dem.

1868. Grant and Colfax, Rep. Horatio Seymour, New York, and Francis P. Blair, Missouri, Dem.

1872. Grant and Wilson, Rep. Horace Greeley, New York, and B. Gratz Brown, Missouri, Liberal Rep. and Dem.

1876. Hayes and Wheeler, Rep. Samuel J. Tilden, New York, and Thomas A. Hendricks, Indiana, Dem.; Peter Cooper, New York, and Samuel F. Cary, Ohio, Greenback.

1880. Garfield and Arthur, Rep. Winfield S. Hancock, Pennsylvania, and William H. English, Indiana, Dem.; James B. Weaver, Iowa, and B. J. Chambers, Texas, Greenback.

1884. Cleveland and Hendricks, Dem. James G. Blaine, Maine, and John A. Logan, Illinois, Rep; John P. St. John, Kansas, and William Daniel, Maryland, Prohib.; Benjamin F. Butler, Massachusetts, and A. M. West, Mississippi, Greenback.

1888. Harrison and Morton, Rep. Grover Cleveland, New York, and Allen G. Thurman, Ohio, Dem.; Clinton B. Fisk, New Jersey, and John A. Brooks, Missouri, Prohib.

1892. Cleveland and Stevenson, Dem. Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, and Whitelaw Reid, New York, Rep.; James B. Weaver, Iowa, and J. G. Field, Virginia, People's Party; John Bidwell, California, and James B. Cranfill, Texas, Prohib.

Remarks. Now that you have the full list, you might ask your fathers—and grandfathers—what campaigns they can remember and for whom they voted. You will find that there have been, although under different names, two great parties from the first. The Federalists, of whom Adams and Hamilton were leaders, and with whom Washington sympathized, afterwards were called National Republicans, then Whigs and in 1856 Republicans. The opposing party was at first called Anti-Federal, then Democratic-Republican, and in 1828 Democrat. The Liberty party of 1840 and 1844 became the Free Soil party in 1848 and in 1856 united with anti-slavery Whigs and Democrats in forming the Republican party. In 1844 the Liberty party turned the scale by giving the vote of New York to Polk, an upholder of slavery, and defeating Clay, a moderate opponent of slavery. The Greenback and People's parties have become the Free Silver Democratic party of 1896.

I know this is rather a deep, dry subject for our children's page, but there are several thousands of you in the Civil Government class, and this is just the time to study that branch—so as to tell your fathers and uncles how to vote!

L. H. M.

Ian Maclaren on the Art of Preaching.

The Lyman Beecher Lectures at Yale.

The Scottish Pulpit was the theme of Rev. Dr. William M. Taylor's Lyman Beecher lectures at Yale in 1886. Little did he foresee that within a decade two such great Scotch preachers as Dr. James Stalker and Dr. John Watson would follow him at Yale, testifying both by example and precept that the land of John Knox, Andrew Melville, Thomas Chalmers and Thomas Guthrie has not ceased to be the fruitful mother of preachers as well as the soil from whence great metaphysicians, theologians and writers of fiction perpetually spring up, blossom and bring forth fruit.

Most of those who saw and heard or conversed with Dr. Watson last week in New Haven, whether they heard his lectures or his sermon in Yale's chapel, or his informal talk to the Divinity School students, or enjoyed the felicity of more direct intercourse, greeted him as Ian Maclaren, the author of tales of Scotch life unrivaled for their humor, pathos and gentle satire. Few, if any, left his presence unaware that he was John Watson the man, virile and whole souled, John Watson, D. D., the thoughtful divine, Watson, the prince of raconteurs. Given a warm, loving and lovable personality, uttering wisdom, born of much experience and rarest and amplest knowledge of human nature, in a fresh, dramatic, artistic, faultless style and you have an irresistible oracle for voicing the ideals of the noblest of callings and explaining the technique of the highest of arts. No wonder the young divinity students were fired with enthusiasm. But so were blasé worldlings and veteran preachers and laymen.

Whether the lectures when published, as they soon will be, under the title The Cure of Souls, will have the force and freshness they had when delivered is problematical. But if, as we suspect, Dr. Watson gave them one form as talks and will give them quite another as his contribution to the literature on homiletics, then two distinct audiences will be blessed—those who read and those who heard. But as for those who not only may read but also may recall the tone of his voice, the twinkle or flash of that dominating feature of his face, his scrutinizing (yet genial withal) eye, the pucker of his mouth as he proceeded (by way of parenthesis) to tell with consummate art an illuminating story that he knew was good (and was good, too), the force of his gestures and the passion of his soul as he left the realm of narrative to enter the forensic arena and do battle with cant, sloth, bigotry and the other evils that the clerical mind is heir to, their fortune is blessed.

As one compares the man with his portraits few prove satisfactory. By far the most so is the one on the cover page of The Congregationalist of Sept. 24 and reproduced in part here. That shows not only the stalwart shoulders, well-shaped and compact head of the man and the strong features of his face, but it also gives that characteristic expression of the eye alluded to above, and it reveals somewhat of the mobility of the mouth, which tells of sympathy and refinement. The face is so individual that perhaps it cannot be described as typical, and yet doubtless it is. Certainly it is not the type of face that Drummond and George Adam Smith and Denney and other recent visitors from Scotland have shown us. It has a ruggedness combined with tenderness that is unusual.

FACSIMILE OF DR. WATSON'S NOTES.

The lectures were delivered in the auditorium of the old College Street Church, now owned by Yale. The platform was crowded at each session with clergymen of the city and vicinity. The seats reserved for the divinity students and the families of the professors never lacked for occupants, while every other available seat in the house and all the standing room were pre empted by those, some of whom at least, at first came from mere curiosity, but all of whom came day after day when once they had felt the spell of the man's power. Major J. B. Pond, who is the manager of Dr. Watson's course of readings, came over from New York to ascertain whether he had done well to speculate on Ian Maclaren's gift as a platform orator, and returned to the metropolis convinced that he had. Mr. R. W. Gilder of the Century and Mr. Charles Dudley Warner of Harper's Magazine honored their fellow-artist by their presence, and later made known to him their delight.

After the singing of a hymn the lecturer stepped forth with a sheet of note paper in his hand inscribed with a few notes,* and at once delivered his message. No abstract of his lectures such as follows this, no verbatim report even, can or could begin to indicate the impression produced upon those who heard the lectures. Strenuousness of purpose, wealth of information acquired by university training and long experience in a successful rural and urban ministry, broad vision, boundless sympathy, and a matchless, compelling art of presenting his message so that it appealed to every noble human instinct and satisfied every reasonable desire — these were the characteristics of the addresses. Flashes of pawky humor, trenchant wit, mordant satire and consuming scorn illumined the way and added piquancy to the interest of it all. Homely common sense fed those who came in search of the practical, while all were made aware that there stood before them a man who believes that not only he but every other clergyman should voice the message of God's love to men in as faultless a style and as persuasive a way as is possible, the power varying, of course, with the individuals attempting the noble task. Those who heard him deplore the crudity

MRS. WATSON.

* We print a facsimile of the two pages of notes used by Dr. Watson in giving his lecture on Theology—the Theory of Religion. "Love to know" is plain, but can you decipher much beside that beautiful phrase, which served as the keynote of the noble burst of feeling with which the lecture closed? The facsimile reproduction reduces the size of the characters of the handwriting just one-half.

and forbidding literary quality of most of the theological literature of the past and present will not soon forget his indignation, which was but the cry of one who truly mourns because so little of present day literature dealing with the spiritual and moral problems of the universe is at all worthy to be compared in its lucidity and winsomeness with the skill with which modern science has announced its message to men, especially in the writings of Tyndall and Huxley.

Perhaps one of Dr. Watson's most interesting revelations of himself was in his informal talk to the divinity school students at their annual reception Wednesday evening. He contrasted the spirit of comradeship and fraternity which he found there among men of all classes with the exclusive spirit of the divinity school where he was educated. He described in his graphic way the first meeting which he and his classmate, Henry Drummond, had with a Senior, they having just entered the school. He would not say that they boasted of the fact that a Senior had really spoken to them and asked them if they were not first year men, but he would say that during their conversation throughout the next week it gradually oozed out how unworthy they deemed themselves of such honor. He urged the students to talk their heresies out freely while in the seminary, and probe all questions to the bottom. He exhorted them to study everything in the curriculum, even if irksome and seemingly unimportant now, pledging them his word that it was far better to do it while in the seminary than afterward, as he had learned by sad experience; and he closed with a most tender tribute to the predominant influence in shaping his life and character, namely, the friendships he formed in the divinity school with such men as Prof. Henry Drummond, Dr. James Stalker, Prof. George Adam Smith and Rev. D. M. Ross, whose article on Dr. Watson in the October McClure's Magazine must be read by every one who would understand his character and place. These men have met at least once a year ever since they left the divinity school. They fish, walk, talk, emulate and freely criticise each other. They have believed in each other, trusted each other, fought for each other in public, and loved each other supremely.

The way in which Dr. Watson, in subsequent conversation with the students, gave himself to answering their questions—not all of them profound questions—revealed the generous heart of the man. He will have to be more sparing of himself than he has been in New Haven or he will not endure the ordeal of traveling, lecturing and accepting well meaning, but in a way selfish, hospitality which is before him. Mrs. Watson, who is with him, by her dignity and graciousness, wins the liking and confidence of all who meet her.

Following are reports of four of the lectures given last week and the impressions of one who heard him give his first readings from his books at Springfield. The other lectures will be reported in our next number.

G. P. M.

THE GENESIS OF A SERMON.

A sermon, said Dr. Watson, is the result of six processes. The first is Selection. By many people the minister is supposed to labor in desperation to get a text at all until Saturday night comes, when he finds a striking text which will give easily-made divisions. Then he goes ahead, and by sleight-of-mouth and verbal jugglery he produces a sermon. Others are supposed to leave the selection of the text to divine guidance, perhaps opening the Bible at random. Such can often be identified by the use of the pocket Bible. In theory this indicates dependence on the divine Spirit. In practice the thinness of the sermon is generally equaled only by the thinness of the congregation. Such men are often good men. In Scotland we call such a man "a good creature." Then there is the man of sturdier mind who preaches along a beaten track. He goes into the Bible as a man goes into a woodyard and selects a piece of wood he thinks will do. He then proceeds to make his sermon. But there is a difference between making a table and making a sermon. A sermon is a tree which grows and brings forth its fruit.

As a matter of fact the preacher does not select the text. The text selects the preacher. It makes friends with him gradually. How long does it take to make a sermon? You can write the manuscript in a day. To think out a sermon takes—well, say ten years. The point of the whole matter is not, How much gold have we minted? nor How much have we going through the mills? but How much ore have we in sight? A preacher ought to have more ore in the mine than he can use if he lives to be as old as Methuselah.

The second process is Separation. Now is the time to preach this sermon. Separate the one idea from its ninety-nine blood relatives. Get it away from its army of related ideas. Some preachers cannot preach on forgiveness without entering into an elaboration on sin and the atonement. A man can listen to a sermon on sin in general with great composure for an hour. Preach to him on his sin for forty or fifty minutes and you will do the work. Some men can preach for an hour without a single idea. Others can preach an hour with a coruscation of ideas. It is better for the average man, for you and me, to preach for forty minutes on one idea. The causes of this lack of definiteness are, first, slackness and, second, lack of courage. Often men dare not preach on one idea because they fear the congregation will think they haven't some other idea. They dare not preach, for instance, on Christ's humanity for fear the people will think they don't believe in his deity. They dare not preach on faith without preaching on works at the same time.

The third process is Illumination. You have a cold idea separated from its environment. Now put it back in the midst of all the life you know. Let all your past experience, all your knowledge, rise to help you.

The next step is Meditation. Put the plate in the dark room of the soul, into the secret place, and let it develop. The man and the idea, the truth, must become one. There must be a spiritual as well as an intellectual connection between the truth and the man. His preaching must be out of the depth of this spiritual experience.

The next process is Elaboration. Remember, not a word has been written yet. Now put down separately every suggestion, every argument, about this idea and see that they are all its legitimate children. Now the raw material is picked, dyed and ready to be woven into the sermon. No matter whom you preach to. All minds are the same in that they want things in their order. With most preachers something is put before the letter A. Get up steam before you invite your passengers to board the steamer. With most preachers also, something follows after the letter Z. Stop at Z, or if you strike fire stop before you get to Z. If your congregation hoists the white flag, stop firing.

The last process in the genesis of a sermon is Revision. No photograph ever left a studio just as it was taken. If it did it would come back the next day. In this last process you will make many discoveries. You will find many an epigram, a scientific term, a "hit" or an adjective to drop out. "You are never wrong in dropping out an adjective. It's always safe to do that."

THE TECHNIQUE OF A SERMON.

Regarding substance the speaker said the preacher is a prophet, speaking what is in his heart. As to form he is a barrister and ought to speak in a skillful and cunning manner.

His first effort should be towards Unity. His sermon should be the elaboration of one idea. But that idea must appear in all kinds of forms as a practical principle. "Learn artistic repetition. You ought to repeat the same thing thirty times and yet so that no witness could prove that you did. Do it so that thirty witnesses will declare you said thirty different things."

Suppose your text is, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Your first proposition is that reaping follows sowing. By this time your hearer just becomes aware that there is a man speaking. Your second division is "wheat and tares." Now you are localized, two people are face to face. Next, "Wheat is one kind and tares is another." Your people say, "This man has something to say, or thinks he has." Then, "Each seed will bring forth its own fruit." Your hearer is getting interested. Then you give a telling illustration. He begins to see. He doesn't admit the truth, but he takes it into consideration. Then you give your final stroke. Your hearer says, "That's true," and he mentions it at the breakfast table the next morning as something he heard ten years ago and had been thinking of ever since. Let your highest ambition be, not that men shall quote you, but that they shall quote what you say and valiantly defend it as something they have long cherished as their own.

The second element in the technique of a sermon is Lucidity. We would labor hard to be lucid and plain if we only knew how it is appreciated. When we hear the greatest preachers we are disappointed because it is all done so easily. There is a distinction between lucidity and simplicity. Lucidity is style; simplicity is thought. Many a sermon is simple enough in thought when it is absolutely unintelligible in expression. The truth of the matter is that a man is lucid just in proportion as he understands what he is talking about. He is profound in proportion as he does not understand it. The worst training for lucidity is overreading of poetry. The best is the study of mental philosophy. The people want to know what a man means. They want their water filtered through the gravel, but they don't want the gravel in the glass.

The next thing is Beauty. The most unlikely people long for beauty. Even if your audience is composed of professors they will hate scholastic language. People generally hate slang, vulgar language and unworthy talk. If quotations come naturally put them in.

The next element is Humanity. Some sermons would do just as well in Mars for any organic connection they have with human life and environment. They sound as if they might have been preached by some disembodied spirit to his brethren in the intermediate state. Every doctrine can be stated in terms of human life and verified in terms of human experience.

Charity must rule. There is a place for raillery and even bitter raillery, for denunciation and for unqualified denunciation, and he is a poor creature who cannot be angry. But anger is a risky business. Let the thunder storms be short. For most of us sarcasm is too dangerous. The people want love. They want to be comforted.

As to the Delivery of a sermon. Shall the preacher read his sermon? The people ought to have a voice here and the people are unanimous. "He'd better not." If a man reads he loses the immense advantage of environment. The sermon preached may be greater than the sermon prepared because of the environment.

The last and greatest element in the art of the sermon is Intensity. It is an element sadly wanting in our day. It needs no trick of oratory. The tears may not be in the eyes. Let them be in the heart. Speak with intensity of conviction of moral purpose from the very heart to the very heart of men.

THE PROBLEMS OF PREACHING.

This was the subject of Dr. Watson's third lecture. He began by illustrating the difference of environment and opportunity between the time of our fathers and our own time. The presentation of the same gospel changes with every new condition. It is, however, very useful that we have a shelf in the library for Christian biography. It will be well to look at it occasionally and bring the ancient and modern face to face. It may serve as a fly wheel in our present feverish religious life and save from both depression and foolish impulse.

There is a divine Spirit which is of God. There is a time spirit which is of man. Overcultivation of the latter makes the secularist. Overdevelopment of the former makes the ascetic. A man must have both to be a man of his generation. He is a mediator between God and man.

The preaching of our day is under the most critical conditions. In the past the great doctrines were accepted without question. The people knew what the minister would say. The minister said what the people knew he would say. Today preaching must be from living minds, because it is to living minds. Nothing is taken for granted except the great intuitions.

The first problem of preaching is that of Individuality. How far is the minister to forget his own individuality and subordinate himself to universal truth? "Preach what you feel." "Is the preacher to preach what he ought to or what he wants to?" "The latter, I say." The first duty of the minister in the pulpit is to be true to himself.

Another problem is Popularity.

There was a day when people were obliged to go to church. The preacher was a wielder of blind power and authority over his people. They literally "sat under him," to use that most pathetic of phrases. Long or short, prepared or unprepared, it did not matter. But today the pulpit cannot be coercive; it must be magnetic. Then the people went to please the minister; now the minister must please the people. Men of this day object to being bored, and the gospel has as much right to be well placed before the people as have politics.

There are many things in which we can easily bear some criticism. "Why, for instance, can we not give a title to a sermon instead of making the congregation wait ten minutes before they can find out what we are talking about, and then find out that there is no connection at all between the text and the sermon?" There should be no willful eccentricity here. A preacher should not go to the newspapers and pick out a sensational incident in order to draw a crowd and a collection.

The graver question of Secularity must be faced. Here is much difference of opinion. Ought the minister to confine himself to great spiritual themes, or to the affairs of the day as well? If we take the question of politics, a clergyman does not forfeit his citizenship. On the one hand he cannot exclude the themes of citizenship from his pulpit. On the other side, if he keeps entirely free from party politics he can then stand firm in a political crisis and inspire his hearers with a love for righteousness which is beyond all politics and with a love for the commonwealth which is over all parties.

The Solidarity of the race must be felt. The new outlook of the gospel has assured us that it is a gospel for the masses. Yesterday the problem of the Christian was the saving of his own soul. Today he can only save his own soul by striving to save his fellow's soul.

It were a terrible thing to ignore the soul. Suppose the church could bring it to pass that every man should have bread to eat and a coat on his back, we know it would only be at best a bread and butter paradise. But at the same time if it is ever necessary for a minister to stand between what is unhappily called "the classes" and "the masses," it is his duty to speak for the weakest and the most miserable.

The last problem, that of preaching or not preaching the results of Biblical Criticism. There are two sides to this question. One man says: "What I know ought to be given to my people, even if it astonishes and perplexes them. My young people will by and by bitterly complain if I do not do this." The second man says: "The results of criticism are unreliable. Then, too, the people are concerned about the spiritual truth and not about its outward form."

"Now," said Dr. Watson, "it should be said first that while many theories are to be discredited, criticism has made a large and solid contribution to religious thought. Second, the church ought to be thankful to those learned and pious men who at the cost of so much labor and time and even reputation have performed this great task. Third, for any teacher of religion to ignore and discredit it is to be remiss in duty. Fourth, he will give instruction in its bare details. Fifth, an occasional lecture on some misunderstood book, like Jonah, or the Song of Songs, will always command attention." Careful instruction is best given in classes where the Christian teacher may give the full and unreserved benefit of his knowledge. But, finally, it is to be said that the critical atmosphere is cold and often chills the gospel. In critical investigations of the 2d Isaiah, don't lose the tender piety of its fifty-third chapter.

THEOLOGY; THE THEORY OF RELIGION.

What is a man to do with his theology when he leaves the divinity school? Is theology a purely academic study only to be pursued as training or is it something that has a keen hold on the human mind and which can be openly offered in the market place?

There are two schools which have a grudge against theology, one smiting it on the right cheek and the other on the left. First is the rationalistic school. This school has a monopoly of knowledge. It treats theology with affable contempt. It does not class it as a mental science. It ignores all those great themes which have been the life and inspiration of the great Christian church for these nineteen centuries.

"I speak of the other school with reverence and tenderness—the so-called evangelistic school, not evangelical. Evangelical includes a whole country, evangelistic means a minute province." In this school the Bible is regarded by many as having dropped down, printed and bound, from heaven. Everything from Genesis to Revelation has the same spiritual value. Its amazing proposition involves the idea that the very words of the Master have no more value than those of Isaiah or Paul. This school sees no use for elaborating the great catholic doctrines. When in a rampant mood it expresses contempt for theological education. "The prophets never went to college," they say, in the same breath that they asseverate the reality of the theological education which Jonah received. They forget the seclusion of the apostles during those three years with the great Teacher.

Compare the attitude of the medical profession towards unlearned men in its practice with the attitude of the church toward teachers who have never learned. Theology is not a mere discipline of mind, not an accomplishment, but a necessity. The mind will arrange and have its systems. Doctrine is the tribute which reason pays to truth.

But it is said that people do not want theology. "The people are a poor dumb body and all sorts of opinions are foisted on them." Consider. Four of the most popular novels recently have been theological. Such books as John Inglesant, John Ward, Preacher, Robert Elsmere and The Story of a South African Farm are eagerly read by these same people, and their only merit and interest lies in their treatment of different schools of theology. And this is true not only in fiction but elsewhere. Books that are being widely read just now are Balfour's Foundations of Belief, Pearson's pessimistic work, National Life and Character, Kidd's Social Evolution and Drummond's Ascent of Man. The magazines are filled with the same material. The fact is, the people are determined to have theology.

Now as to the preacher and theology. First, the preacher must understand his subject. There are men in our congregations who are studying theology, and not only men but young women. If they go to the teacher of physics he can answer their questions to him. If they go to the teacher of mental science he will do the same. And they expect us as teachers to answer their questions in theology. If they discover that we can answer and won't they will hold us in contempt. None of us can be experts. The time was when theology used to be compassed by a single man from apologetics to eschatology. The day is over for those supernatural people. We are not to be experts. We are to be middlemen. Get the best and newest books, master them and then serve them out to your people.

Literature and theology should not be divorced. If words wait in nimble servitude on any subject it should be on him who tells his fellowmen of the love of God. Study South, Newman in his purity, the aptness of Bushnell, the brilliancy of Taylor and the fine Saxon of Bunyan. C. S. M.

HIS FIRST LECTURE AND READINGS AT SPRINGFIELD.

So rarely is a well-known writer successful on the platform that many came only to obtain a glimpse of Ian Maclaren, hardly hoping for an otherwise interesting evening. Seldom has an audience been more happily disappointed. The large company were unusually attentive, now applauding enthusiastically some happy expressions and now moved to silence by some of his many selections so full of pathos. On the platform he is always interesting and earnest, though at first he seems diffident almost to awkwardness, but when later he becomes lost in his subject he has a most commanding and inspiring presence. He speaks in conversational tones, sometimes tenderly, again forcibly, always impressively and with power. He has been drawn to America, he says, since when a boy he heard from his father the meaning of our Civil War. Referring to the characteristics of nations, he thought that they were to be discovered, not in the large cities, but in the country districts, away from railways and newspapers, where men have time to think for themselves. The success of his books he attributes to their return to the democratic and to their description of simple and the best but not unreal scenes of country life. After speaking of some criticisms of his books he read, with interspersed comments, several of the best-known selections. Most impressive of these, perhaps, were the meeting between Domsie and the "laird of pairts," with the beautiful prayer ending, "May the maister and his scholars meet some mornin' where the schule never skails, in the kingdom o' oor Father," the humorous examination of the beadle of Pitscourie at the ecclesiastical trial of a minister and the death of Doctor Maclure. At the close of this last, while the audience was hushed to a perfect stillness, Dr. Watson ended his lecture with the words, "So may we all live and die." For nearly a minute the audience remained quiet in their seats and then burst into enthusiastic applause, repeated several times. It was an impressive climax to a remarkable address.

M. A. D.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR OCT. 18. 1 Kings 4: 21-34.

SOLOMON'S WEALTH AND WISDOM.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

The topic of our first lesson was Solomon's inauguration; of the second, his plan and purpose for governing his kingdom; and of this lesson, his administration of his government. It gives us a brief picture of a brilliant reign. It may be wisely used to show how public service in any sphere of life may be crowned with success. It establishes the principle that it is right to seek prosperity for the public good, and points directly to the danger of perverting prosperity to selfish ends. It states:

I. Solomon's wealth, which included:

1. National prosperity. For that purpose the young king in his early years applied his inheritance from his father. David had gathered through his conquests great treasures. Solomon used them for the protection of the people. His chariots and horses made the surrounding nations afraid to attack Israel. Hadad, the Edomite, on the south and Rezon, the Syrian, on the north sought to recover the territory which the mighty David had wrested from them [1 Kings 11: 21-25]. But Solomon by his army maintained his kingdom against all his foes.

With power came peace. "Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig tree, from Dan even to Beersheba, all the days of Solomon." In peace and safety the nation realized happiness, which was largely the fruit of Solomon's wealth.

This was the righteous use of property. It is not a sin to seek riches nor to get them honestly—and often they are honestly gained. Money—large amounts of it—controlled by those who know how to put it to good uses, is necessary to the development of any country and to the maintenance of its independence. Rich men with intelligence and conscience are a source of prosperity to all the people. The equal distribution of wealth has never been accomplished in any large community, but so far as it has been approximated it has always tended toward a common level of poverty and weakness. The righteous rich are not only a blessing but a necessity to the poor. Wealth was given to Solomon in answer to his prayer, and the promise and bestowment of it was evidence that such prayer is acceptable to God. It is a right prayer now, and in response to it money is given to those who pray; and that which is asked for should be the best money, acknowledged as such by all nations. Great resources without honesty are of little value to a people, for they not only are not trusted by foreigners, they do not trust one another. National integrity is never the monopoly of any one class. If the rich are dishonest the poor will be also, and rich men will not remain honest when the poor are unworthy to be trusted. Solomon's wealth, as equipment for the defense of Israel, was the wealth of the whole people. If they had sought to destroy it they would have destroyed themselves. The temptation besets many in our land to destroy riches which they cannot control. It is a temptation to deal a fatal blow to our nation.

2. Personal aggrandizement. Gradually the possession of great wealth became to Solomon a temptation to use it for his own pleasure and glory. His tables and horses and chariots and buildings and pleasures became the chief object of his administration. Rich as he was, he needed more; and got more by levying taxes which foreshadowed the disruption of the nation. King and officers in their prosperity grew extravagant, and took the means to maintain their extravagance out of the poor. We shall see by and by how, after Solomon's death, the people, in throwing off the yoke he had placed on them which had grown so heavy, put their heads under the far heavier yokes of Egypt, Assyria and Babylon. A wiser policy would have been to unite for righteous rule and to have suffered in patience till they got it. There is no other, no easy way to prosperity. Neither a debased currency nor a protective tariff, nor any device to place others at disadvantage in business as compared to ourselves, will make our business good.

II. Solomon's wisdom. This was as remarkable as his wealth. It included:

1. Capacity for government. This he displayed in the broadest sense. He mastered enemies abroad, kept peace at home and developed the resources of the nation. Special emphasis is laid in this lesson on his learning. He wrote 3,000 proverbs. He composed poetry, and became an authority in botany, zoölogy and ichthyology. His writings became famous in many lands, and he became the foremost patron of learning of his age. People visited Jerusalem from all parts of the world, attracted by the wisdom of its king.

Culture is the fruit and the handmaid of prosperity. Rulers who have the interest of the people at heart will foster popular learning. Especially in a republic such as ours, where all the people share in the responsibilities of government, all must have knowledge. Education, whose privileges are open to all, is with us a prime necessity. No service can be greater than giving to our children, poor or rich, the opportunity to become both intelligent and righteous citizens. The maintenance of schools open to all without cost is essential to free and stable government. Happy the nation whose leaders are educated, and who believe that all the people should be also.

2. Pride of knowledge. Solomon came to know both too much and too little. The book of Ecclesiastes, written long after his time, appears to be a record of his experiences, at least of the experiences which might be expected of him when he came to use his wisdom for his own gratification instead of for the well-being of the nation. He learned to have a contempt for humanity. He came to believe that an upright woman was not to be found in the world [Eccl. 7: 26-28]. He drank the cup of pleasure to the dregs both through study and sensuality, and he came to the conclusion that the entire cup was dregs. The refrain of his thoughts was, "Vanity of vanities; all is vanity."

Such miserable pessimism may be the outcome of even the greatest possessions and the richest mental endowments when they are turned inward on self instead of being used for the service of mankind. The glory of Solomon is ever shadowed by the failure he made of life, the full consequences of which were not realized till long after his death. The Old Testament contains no more impressive lesson than that to be learned from his example. It took ages to apprehend the truth which every generation and every person needs to grasp afresh as the one chief conclusion both of biography and history: "This is the end of the matter; all hath been heard: fear God and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man."

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, Oct. 11-17. Right and Wrong Use of the Tongue. James 3: 2-18.

Self-control, modesty, righteousness, love in speech; thoughtlessness, conceit, bitterness, malice, strife in speech.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

Try to think into the middle of a subject and see it from the inside looking outward.—Dr. John A. Broadus.

It is not so much our difference of opinion that does us the mischief, but the mismanagement of that difference.—Philip Henry.

Strong Arms

are not necessary to do the washing when

Sunlight Soap

is used; it does most all the work itself. Just rub a little on the clothes, roll them up and put them back in the water. Then when you take them out you will see that

Sunlight Soap Does the work

Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson & Harrison Sts., New York.

Nothing Under the Sun will clean and polish Gold and Silver like

SILVER ELECTRO-SILICON POLISH

The Proof is yours simply for the asking.

Send address for trial quantity. Full sized box, post-paid, 15 cents in stamps. Grocers sell it.

The Electro Silicon Company, New York.

WHEATLET

Is not steam-cooked, therefore it retains the rich, Nut-like Flavor of Wheat.

TRY IT!

Sold in 2-lb. packages by all leading Grocers.

Made in a Moment

A delicious drink instantly made from WHITMAN'S INSTANTANEOUS CHOCOLATE.

Perfect in flavor and quality. Put up in pound and half-pound tins.

Stephen F. Whitman & Son, Sole Mfrs., Philadelphia.

SOMATOSE

a perfect food, tonic and restorative for the invalid or convalescent. Send for free pamphlets.

SCHIEFFELIN & CO., New York.

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

OUR OWN WORK.

How to Help the Cubans. The only Cuban Congregational chapel in the world is in Ibor City, a suburb of Tampa, Fla. It is simply a mission as yet, no church having been organized, but the modest little building stands in the midst of a Cuban population of over 9,000 and its opportunity is most inviting. A great wave of Latin immigration has swept over the gulf coast of southern Florida as a result of the war in Cuba, and thousands of exiles are staying in Key West and Tampa awaiting the return of better days. The Home Missionary well says: "We cannot aid in equipping the mysterious expeditions which sail away from time to time with arms and munitions of war, but we hope through the agency of the Immanuel Mission to equip and send forth truly converted sons of the Antilles, who will bear the glad tidings of a Saviour's love to that island 'waiting for his law.'" Rev. E. P. Herrick of Tampa organized this work and devotes much of his time to it. Sunday school services are held in Spanish, and a day school has an enrollment of over forty dark-eyed children. The mission is under the special care of the Florida Woman's Home Missionary Union, but the ladies need aid and ask the gifts and prayers of all true friends of Cuba.

Self-Support in South Africa. A young church composed of Zulus in Johannesburg, under the charge of Rev. H. D. Goodenough, has made a remarkable record in the matter of self-support. Over two years ago a chapel was built, largely by the natives themselves. During the first year a debt of $500 was paid, besides meeting the current expenses, and on April 1, 1895, there was a balance in the treasury of $85. For the year ending April 1, 1896, the receipts of the church were nearly $1,200 and came within about $70 of meeting all the expenditures, including the salary of the native preacher and a house for him, together with the cost of a classroom and some furniture for the chapel. Mr. Goodenough writes of a plan for establishing a new station eight miles from Johannesburg, at a railway and mining center where already a little chapel has been secured. The spiritual work does not suffer in the midst of the material prosperity. A letter from Mrs. Goodenough shows how successfully the native preacher is getting hold of the young men and says that they hope to secure one of their most active helpers, who was formerly a pupil at Amanzimtote, as evangelist and interpreter.

THE WORLD AROUND.

Uganda's Peculiarities. At the meeting in London to send a new band of C. M. S. missionaries for Uganda emphasis was laid on certain unique features in the growth and development of this mission. Strangely enough school work—indeed work among children in any systematic form—has never been pushed, yet no mission shows more strikingly the result of permanent educational effort. In early days the missionaries devoted themselves to teaching young men and lads to read. Their success is evident in the thirst for reading matter which has caused houses where the literature was kept to be fairly besieged. Even now we are told that no one comes forward for baptism who has not first learned to read—a circumstance quite peculiar to Uganda. But one of the provisions of the future must be a fuller educational system. Only less remarkable than the eager interest which has been shown in every part of the Bible yet translated is the zeal with which leading Christians have thrown themselves into the work of evangelizing their countrymen. Mr. Pilkington, who returns with the new party, said he hoped soon to be present at another dismissal—a departure of missionaries from among the Waganda to the nations around them and to those on the coast. A recent letter from Bishop Tucker tells of finding a church building and a responsive congregation in the kingdom of Toro, 200 miles west of Mengo. The king was baptized a short time ago. No English missionary has ever worked in this region, but the gospel was carried thither by evangelists of the Uganda church. The profession of "mission agent" with its carefully graded rates of pay is as yet unknown in Uganda, and the new missionaries were warned to avoid the temptation to spend English money upon the people. In one other respect is this mission unlike those in India and China. The upper classes have been first reached by the gospel, and the truth has spread downward rather than upward. There is danger that numbers will profess Christianity, because the fact that almost all the great chiefs are Christians makes it fashionable.

Should Missionaries Be Ascetics? Every now and then some globe-trotter with a passion for exhibiting his own narrowness arises to remark that Christian missionaries in foreign lands live in luxury, and thus give the lie to the gospel which they teach. To all such we commend the words of the British commissioner of Central Africa, Sir H. H. Johnston, who in his last report says: "Asceticism is all very well in a wholesome part of England, or in an equally healthy North African desert, but any attempt to live carelessly, uncomfortably and too frugally in the exceedingly unhealthy climate of Central Africa must sooner or later result in the permanent disablement of the missionary's health or his death, and can serve no useful or godly purpose whatsoever. The missionaries at one station at least eat bad food badly cooked, and the rude houses in which they live are, with the exception of the quarters assigned to the ladies, unfit even for a native's occupation. It is pathetic to see highly educated men from Oxford and Cambridge hollow-eyed and fever-smitten, crouching in little huts which no native chief would deign to occupy. They are guided in so doing by a false principle that the funds of the mission, which are not large, should be devoted entirely to mission work, and that little or no money should be spent on 'comfort.' I wholly disagree with them"

PEN AND SCISSORS.

The missionary society of Christian Indians in Nebraska and the Dakotas has pledged six shares or $300 to the A. M. A. Jubilee Fund. How many white churches and missionary organizations have given in like measure?

The Moravians report 150 mission stations, 400 missionaries, 234 day schools with 22,000 scholars, 110 Sunday schools and 93,000 converts in foreign lands. These remarkable statistics show the church abroad to be three times the size of the church at home.

It is a notable fact that on the staff abroad of the English Church Missionary Society no fewer than sixty-seven missionaries are working at their own cost. Moreover, as many as 189 are supported, not by the central society, but by particular individuals, parishes, or other organizations. Eighty new workers have been accepted this year and are ready to sail.

Again the girls in our school in San Sebastian, Spain, have acquitted themselves with credit in the matriculation examinations for the government University of Madrid. In spite of a policy on the part of the professors of severe tests and low grades, thirty-one girls passed the examinations, eight receiving the high mark of sobresaliente. Mrs. Gulick expects to visit America this month.

Mission boards are recognizing more and more every year the importance of sending their secretaries or other representatives to visit the foreign field occasionally. Sec. Robert E. Speer of the American Presbyterian Board has recently started on a tour to the missions of that church in Asia. He will visit Persia, India, Siam, China, Japan and Korea, and will probably be absent twelve or fourteen months.

The American Board missionaries en route for Gazaland have been detained on the East African coast, first on account of the prevalence of the rinderpest, which has made transportation difficult, and, latterly, by the disturbances caused by the uprising of the Matabeles. It has been decided that Mrs. Bates and Miss Gilson should remain in Natal until Mr. Bates can make satisfactory arrangements for reaching Mt. Silinda.

The latest letters from missionaries in Madagascar bring bad news from all parts of the country. With the exception of the capital and a few towns containing French garrisons the central portion of the island was at the mercy of bands of lawless raiders dominated by an anti-foreign and anti-Christian spirit. Indeed the most discouraging feature of the movement is its intense heathenism. Village chapels, schools, evangelists' houses, even dispensaries and a leper asylum, have been ruthlessly destroyed and the work of years overthrown. Where fifty or sixty congregations had assembled hardly a tenth of that number remain. Many Christians have lost their all; not a few have been murdered and large numbers have been grossly ill-treated.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. I. O. RANKIN.

Topic for Oct. 18-24. Are We Doing Our Best? Matt 5: 13-16; 25: 14-30.

The last stroke which finishes the work is good economy. If a man is lifting and exerts his strength up to the last pound necessary to move the weight, without that last pound all the rest goes for nothing. If a church lacks only a little self-consecration of persuading the world that its Christianity is real, that last self-consecration is worth a great deal of self-denial. When a Christian Endeavor Society is doing "pretty well," the difference between that and its best use of means and opportunities is often the difference between success and failure. It may be the first step that costs, but it is the last that counts. A little more faithfulness, a little more enthusiasm, a little more care in using the machinery of the society, a slight increase of watchfulness in the outlook for opportunities, brings large returns of enjoyment and of service.

When we ask ourselves whether we are doing our best, we ought to remember for whom we are acting and what He did for us. To be a little slack in our own interest might sometimes be excusable, but to grudge the slight extra service, care and exertion which makes all the difference between failure and success in his cause ought to make us ashamed and sorry. It was strenuous exertion joined with faith in the justice of the master which made it possible for the servants in the parable to double the talents he had given them. It is the nature of the light to shine, but it is our privilege and duty to see that it is in a place where it can do its office and to keep the medium clear through which it shines. Our best is not an unreasonable but a reasonable service. When we try to fulfill it we shall have power with God and men, and the full joy of the companionship of work with Christ.

Parallel verses: Heb. 12: 1-4; Mark 13: 33-37; Luke 19: 12-26.

Civilized life is not war, it is not pillage, it is not hate; it is mutual co-operation, mutual assistance and mutual benefit. It is peace, candor and good will. Civilized society is a great workshop, in which every man plays his separate part, but in which no man can work without benefiting all his fellowmen.—Hon. Bourke Cochran.

Literature

BOOK REVIEWS.

CHURCH HISTORY.

The third and concluding volume of A History of Auricular Confession and Indulgences in the Latin Church, by Henry Charles Lea, LL. D., deals with the subject of Indulgences. It shows the same painstaking and impartial care in handling an immense amount of learned material which we noted in the preceding parts. Protestants should read this history to learn what the doctrine held on the subject by the Roman Catholic Church really is. They will find that it has been a weapon of immense power in the hands of that church, but that its limits have been left undefined, so that there is room for the common misunderstanding and dispute as to what is really meant by the promises of an indulgence. We congratulate Dr. Lea on the happy completion of so great a work. [Lea Bros. & Co. $3.00.]

Vol. II. of Professor Kittel's History of the Hebrews forms Vol. VI. of the Theological Translation Library. The characteristics of the previous volume appear in this one. Use is made of the results of the higher criticism, although the author is conservative in his tendencies, and inclined to place far more reliance on the statements in the Biblical historical books than Wellhausen, Kuenen or Stade. While accepting many of the conclusions of present day scholars, he looks upon the history of the Hebrews as the history of a people chosen by Jehovah for a special service in the development of the political and religious institutions of mankind. Chronicles, as a historical source, he would use with caution. Two parts of the history are treated in this volume, viz., the pre-monarchic age and the first representatives of the monarchy, and the decline of nationality and the advance of religion. The criticism of the sources of the history are such as a specialist would best follow, although the conclusions reached are put in language which any one can understand. The sketch of the times of Samuel and Saul, of David and Solomon is instructive because it brings into clear perspective the superstitions of the period, and thus enables one to judge more accurately of the true character of David and Solomon. Professor Kittel traces the causes of the downfall of the kingdom, and estimates the power and place of the prophets and the part they had in preparing the people for the changes through which their political fortunes carried them. Whoever reads these volumes with a Bible open before him will secure a broad outlook over the experiences of the Hebrews, and will be better able than formerly to compare them with other peoples in whose behalf the divine interposition is not so apparent. The author is professor of theology in the university at Breslau. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $4.20 net.]

History of the Christian Church. Vol. I. Founding of the New World, 1–600 A. D., by George H. Dryer, D. D. This work is a fairly successful attempt to tell to ordinary readers the story of the Christian Church. The author deplores the lack of knowledge of church history among intelligent laymen. That no instruction is given in our colleges upon a subject so vital to the understanding of our civilization is to him, as it is to many others, a source of wonder. His work, however, in its present and projected form —four or five volumes—will never become a college text-book. Its sphere will rather be for popular reading in the home. It is issued in attractive form with illustrations.

Though following the five common divisions of his theme, the author avoids technical phraseology. Instead of history of "doctrine" he speaks of "the truths that won." In this first volume he portrays, in a vivid way, the civilization and political condition among which Christianity appeared, and shows how the church became the salvation of a falling world. The account of the organization of the church on the lines of the divisions of the empire is instructive. The description of the growth of the episcopate out of an earlier and simpler order, and of the advancement to the hierarchy and papacy through political considerations, will be received by most Protestant readers, but the references to the attitude of the Roman Church are not altogether in good temper.

A feature of much interest in this book is its ample biographical sketches of the great church leaders of the period. Another is the tracing of the development of the Christian service, and the account of the several families of liturgies. The literary work is not of the best. In places, indeed, the writing might be called slovenly, but the meaning is generally plain. [Curts & Jennings. $1.50.]

We are glad to have, after a long interval, a new edition of George Zabriskie Gray's The Children's Crusade. The episode of which he treats is one of the saddest and most striking of the mediæval time and is well worthy of study. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.50.]

SCIENCE.

Evolution or Creation, by Prof. Luther Tracy Townsend, D. D. Professor Townsend's book is interesting, but on the whole disappointing. In the first place he has not himself thought it of value enough to provide a topical index, which makes the work of comparison and consideration difficult, after a first reading. Again it is largely polemic and polemic by sarcastic reference to the inconsistencies of the leaders of scientific thought, a process which, upon this side or the other, is more tiresome than conclusive. He has, of course, little trouble in showing that the difficulties in the way of the evolutionists are very great and that there are stubborn facts making against their pet hypothesis. As against the men who treat the development theory as a settled fact instead of a useful working hypothesis his case is very strong indeed. Positively, his statement of the "ways proposed for bringing man and woman upon the earth" is not exhaustive. The three proposed are: First, man and woman came without any supernatural or miraculous interposition whatever. Second, they came by a sort of indirect, or mediate, supernatural or miraculous interposition. Third, they came by a direct supernatural or miraculous interposition and in precisely the way the Bible describes. But those who believe that they came by a direct interposition do not all believe that the account in Genesis is intended to be a history literal in detail; and the second theory, which Professor Townsend dismisses as unworthy of the slightest notice, is probably held by a majority of the younger Christian men of science, as by Prof. John M. Tyler, for example, in his Whence and Whither of Man. Professor Townsend distinctly abandons the long period explanation of the word "day" in the creation chapter. His constructive contribution to the question is the hypothesis that after the Great Ice Age, which he identifies with chaos, God created all the life of the present era of the world in a week of ordinary days. This hypothesis is carefully worked out and there is nothing in the Hebrew text to forbid its acceptance. We have given so much space to the book because we feel that it is time and there is ample room for a cool and intelligent discussion of this whole topic, in view of the recent tendencies of science, from the side of philosophy and faith, and we regret that Professor Townsend's book does not satisfactorily fulfill the requirements of the task. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.25.]

The Marine Biological laboratory at Wood's Holl has become one of the centers of American scientific study and research. The volume of Biological Lectures for the summer session of 1895 shows the scope and variety of the subjects treated and the high rank of the lecturers. [Ginn & Co. $2.15.]

ESSAYS AND SKETCHES.

The Listener in the Town, The Listener in the Country, by Joseph Edgar Chamberlin. Here is a man with eyes and ears who knows how to use them, a heart to interpret some of the meanings of the life about him and a power of easy and delightful expression that can only have been born of much hard work. The invitation of the essays is commonly given through a very happy title, the interest of which is seldom belied by what the author has to tell. Those who love nature and human nature and can appreciate genial sentiment and quiet humor in a traveling companion will enjoy these excursions in town and country. [Copeland & Day. 2 vols., 75 cents each.]

The Works of Max Beerbohm. Humor, irony, delicate satire and delight in observing the actions and the follies of society join to make this little book amusing, if not very profitable, reading. It is in style and topics the acme of artificiality. The praise of dandies, a rehabilitation of George IV., an amusing retrospective sketch of London society in 1880, a veiled satire on the artificiality of women, a sketch of a Bath dandy of a century ago—such are the themes of its chapters, which will appeal to those who think that bonbons have a place in the literary bill of fare. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25.]

The Religion of Manhood, by John Owen Coit. This little book is in two parts, Essays and Poems, and Quotations and Suggestions. The author has neither clarified his thought nor unified his material, and the general impression of the book is decidedly scrappy. Its spirit is devout, but it makes the common blunder of decrying existing methods without suggesting others to take their place. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. 75 cents.]

BIBLE STUDY AND ILLUSTRATION.

Jesus as a Teacher and The Making of the New Testament, by B. A. Hinsdale. This book consists of a series of inductive studies of our Lord's preparation for and work as a teacher, followed by a like study, expressly designed for plain people rather than scholars, of the making of the New Testament, regarded from the point of view of the earlier chapters. Professor Hinsdale has succeeded admirably in making his meaning clear and plain. With all his judgments as to the relative importance of facts and inferences, we hardly find ourselves in agreement, but the book will be helpful and inspiring to a large circle of readers. [St. Louis: Christian Publishing Co. $1.25.]

Thirty Studies in the Gospel by John, by Prof. W. W. White, Ph. D., of the Bible Institute, Chicago. This is a book for students of the English Bible, containing suggestive outlines of search in the gospel and a multitude of ingenious and helpful diagrams representing its contents from different points of view. The book does not touch upon the problem of authenticity or raise any of the external questions connected with the gospel. [Fleming H. Revell Co. 50 cents.]

A beautiful specimen of modern printing and book-making is The Illustrated New Testament, a pocket edition in small but clear print, bound in modern style. The illustrations are well-chosen and carefully reproduced photographs of the scenes of Bible history, inserted in appropriate places in the text. The idea is a good one and well carried out. [Thomas Nelson & Sons. $1 00.]

Whatever brings the Holy Land within closer range and makes it more real is of interest to all Christians, and especially to students of the Bible. Rev. Harvey B. Green has spent much time in Palestine, has made a careful study of its flora and with the aid of competent assistants has pressed and preserved a great variety of its wild flowers. Such of these as are noticed in the Bible, and some others, he has put in book form on blank pages opposite to descriptions of them, with Scripture selections referring to them. It is a dainty present for Sunday school teachers and others. [Rev. H. B. Green, Lowell, Mass. 50 cents and 75 cents.]

Shadow and Substance, an Exposition of the Tabernacle Types, by George C. Needham. This is one of the books which allegorizes the details given in the Old Testament into lessons and revelations for the modern church. It is suggestively done—the only trouble is that it seems to claim an authority for the results of a process which in other hands would inevitably produce variant results. With this caution the book may be commended to those who can get help from such a treatment of Scripture. There is a good portrait of the author. [American Baptist Pub. Soc. 75 cents.]

VERSE.

Songs, and Other Verse, by Eugene Field. This book contains a selection of Mr. Field's unpublished poetry. It illustrates the versatility of the author and his facility in clothing his fancies in easy rhyme. As always, he is at his best in pure sentiment and simple humor. When he begins to elaborate his patience and his art begin to fail. There is much in this volume which will not help the author's fame, but here and there we find a touch which the reader cannot help but thoroughly enjoy. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25.]

Lays of a Wandering Minstrel, by Anne Virginia Culbertson. These are the verses of an evident mistress of elocutionary effects, and they have a ringing movement which must have served her admirably in her public readings. Some of them rise to a high literary level, and she shows a remarkable skill in the use of the ballad form. The briefest quotable bit is this:

EXAMPLE.

(From the Apocryphal Gospel of St. Bartholomew).

If thy neighbor fall in sin,
Half the guilt is thine, no less.
Hadst thou shown of holiness
All the beauty dwells therein,
Then his fault had never been.

[J. B. Lippincott Co. $1.10.]

Vol. VI. of the exhaustive edition of The Poetical Works of William Wordsworth, edited by William Knight, has a steel plate portrait of the poet after H. H. Pickersgill. It contains poems written from 1814–20, with full notes and introductions. [Macmillan & Co. $1.50.]

STORIES.

The Crimson Sign, by S. R. Keightley, is a historical novel which gives a vivid picture of the struggle for religion in Ireland at the end of the seventeenth century, when James had been deposed and William and Mary established on the throne. The majority of American readers will gain much information from the book concerning an epoch with which they are not too familiar, while the interwoven love story will prove of unusual interest. The heroine is early rescued by the hero from a band of marauders, and during the siege of Londonderry she carries herself with great courage, finally discovering and disclosing the treachery of her own brother. After many dangers and sufferings the daring action of the hero rescues the well nigh discouraged remnant of the besieged and decides the conflict. The strongest and most successful character drawing is found in Captain Macpherson, whose sad life ended nobly in his country's service; but the actors are all real people, even the minor ones, like the cowardly Simon Sproule, being as cleverly developed as the more important. [Harper & Bros. $1.50.]

Wisdom's Folly, by A. V. Dutton. This story involves "a study in feminine development," in which the desire for experience of a different life than she has known leads a good woman to dangerous ground, from which her return to happiness is difficult and costly. It is well worked out and with enough reserve to make the handling strong. Few women, we suspect, would have felt the temptation in the way in which it appealed to the heroine, and we question the advantage for general reading of this sort of study of character on the borderland of immorality. There is, however, nothing immoral in the book, and the lesson that evil yielded to brings its sure punishment is thoroughly emphasized without preaching. [Henry Holt & Co.]

The Farmer and the Lord, by George H. Hepworth. The teaching of practical and hard experience in bringing the need of God home to an unbeliever is the topic of this book. The story is rather a sad one, and is told without much dramatic power or command of conversation or dialect, but the moral is strongly brought out. [E. P. Dutton & Co. 75 cents.]

The series of Stories by English Authors is brought to a close by the appearance of the volumes entitled Germany and The Sea. Taking the series as a whole, it gives an admirable variety of short stories, and the work of selection is very well done. [Charles Scribner's Sons. 75 cents.]

Other new volumes in the complete edition of Eugene Field's works are, The Second Book of Tales and The Holy Cross and Other Tales. [Charles Scribner's Sons. Each, $1 25.]

Conflict and Conquest, The Experiences of Father Flynn, by George C. Needham. This is a new edition of the story of the conversion and escape from Ireland of a Roman Catholic priest. It is interestingly told, and has had a wide circulation. [American Baptist Publication Society. 50 cents.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Council Manual of a Congregational Church, prepared by a committee of the National Council of the Congregational churches of the United States, has just been issued by the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society. It contains an introductory account of the occasion which led to its being prepared, a list of the names of the committee and of representative brethren who have examined the manuscript, made suggestions and with whose approval it is sent out. It contains two parts. The first is the manual, giving by-laws, statements of doctrine and form of reception of members. This part, containing thirty-two pages, is also published separately and may be had in lots of fifty or more with the name of the church proposing to use it printed on the front page. Part II. contains a brief historical view of the denomination, a statement of our polity, a full description of the method of organizing a Congregational church, with a number of forms of letters missive and forms relating to the dismission of church members. A great many questions asked of us by letter are here clearly and simply answered. This manual ought to be in the hand of all members of Congregational churches. We refer to it elsewhere editorially. [10 cents. 100 copies, $5.00. Postage additional.]

Buddhism, the first series of the American Lectures on the History of Religions, was delivered by Prof. T. W. Rhys Davids, LL. D. They were given at Cornell University, at the Lowell Institute, Boston, at Brown University, the Brooklyn Institute, at Columbia College and, in part, at the Peabody Institute, Baltimore, and at the University of Philadelphia. Professor Rhys Davids is chairman of the Pali Text Society, whose mission it is to collect and print the Buddhist writings, and he speaks not merely with knowledge but with sympathy of the faith which has done so much for Asia. He deals with the primitive forms rather than with the modern variations and corruptions of Buddhism, and his book affords an admirable opportunity to observe how deep and unbridgable, despite a multitude of superficial resemblances, is the gulf between the pantheism which Gautama taught and the individuality of God and man taught by Jesus. To this contest of beliefs, embodied historically by Jesus and Gautama, the tendency of thought again irresistibly drifts, and we are grateful to the author for a sympathetic and intelligible statement of the highest realized form of a philosophy which is as fascinating to many minds as it is essentially anti-Christian. A pantheistic Christianity is an essential contradiction in terms; but every Christian scholar will none the less welcome this clear account of the greatest system of pantheistic philosophy the world has known. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.50.]

Familiar Trees and Their Leaves, by F. Schuyler Mathews, is an interesting description of over 200 kinds of trees, with sketches from nature of their leaves. The frontispiece is an exquisite group of the painted beech, and all the illustrations are characteristic and truthful. Attractive in appearance and valuable in its interesting presentation of the facts of tree life, this book will be for many an introduction to a new world of beauty. [D. Appleton & Co. $1.75.]

Mr. Richard Shelburn has gathered a book of amusing skits and stories which he calls Our Humor. They are of the kind that pass in the newspapers and are many of them good. Mr. Shelburn evidently doubts the capacity of his readers for humor, and has emphasized the point of the jokes by printing all that leads up to them in capitals, so that we have the feeling of being seized by the buttonhole and personally conducted to the right point of view—which rather robs our laughter of its spontaneity. [Columbia Book Co. $1 50]

Cold Dishes for Hot Weather, by Ysaguirre and La Marca. Housekeepers will welcome this little volume which teaches them to prepare and serve daintily such cold dishes as shall please the eye and tempt the appetite in hot weather. All the receipts given are for dishes to be eaten cold. [Harper & Bros. $1.00.]

NOTES.

— In summing up the prospects of the autumn book trade the Publisher's Weekly notices the fact that "the gift-book, which was intended for the center table and appealed merely to the eye, has entirely disappeared from among new American publications."

— The plan for a memorial library in Bayard Taylor's birthplace, Kennett Square, Pa., is well under way. Land has been purchased, subscriptions have been coming in, the association having the work in charge has been incorporated, and a formal dedication was held at the proposed site not long ago.

— The differentiation of English in its world-wide sphere finds new evidence in a dictionary of Australasian English, which Professor Morris of the University of Melbourne is about to publish. It will contain the words added to the common tongue by the Australians, as well as those for which the word "Australianisms" might be coined.

— It is good news that the monument to Colonel Shaw, for which the corner of the Boston Common just in front of the State House has so long been waiting, is finished at last. Mr. St. Gaudens has been long about it because it was a labor of love. It is hoped that it may be in place by next May, and those who have seen the clay in the artist's studio assert that it is a masterpiece.

— Mr. J. M. Barrie has been persuaded to come to America and is sure of a warm welcome from a host of admirers of A Window in Thrums and The Little Minister. Sentimental Tommy, his serial which has been running in Scribner's Magazine, will be concluded with the November number, and will appear at once in the complete edition of his works which the Scribners are making.

— The publishers of The Pansy announce its discontinuance with the October number. "The changes in magazine make-up and methods demand an outlay not justified by the returns," they say. The Pansy has been a welcome and helpful visitor in many homes and we are sorry to learn of its disappearance. This is to be in the nature of a transformation, however, the good will of the magazine being transferred to the Junior Golden Rule, to which Mrs. Alden (Pansy) will be a regular contributor.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Roberts Bros. Boston.

SOME MODERN HERETICS. By Cora Maynard. pp. 382. $1.50.

NUGÆ LITTERARIÆ. By William Matthews. pp. 344. $1.50.

LAZY TOURS IN SPAIN AND ELSEWHERE. By Louise Chandler Moulton. pp. 377. $1.50.

A CYCLE OF SONNETS. Edited by Mabel L. Todd. pp. 93. $1.25.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL. By Lilian Whiting. pp 291. $1.00.

THE WONDERFUL FAIRIES OF THE SUN. By Ernest V. Wright. pp. 66. $1 25.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

WILLIAM HENRY SEWARD. By Thornton K. Lothrop. pp. 446. $1.25.

ROBERT BROWNING PHRASE BOOK. By Marie A. Molineaux, Ph. D. pp. 520. $3.00.

LOWELL LEAFLETS. Compiled by Josephine E. Hodgdon. pp. 102. 40 cents.

THREE LITTLE DAUGHTERS OF THE REVOLUTION. By Nora Perry. pp. 64. 75 cents.

Cong. S. S. & Pub. Society. Boston.

HIS BROTHER'S KEEPER. By Charles M. Sheldon. pp. 381. $1.50.

THE RAINPROOF INVENTION. By Emily Weaver. pp. 414. $1.50.

Arena Pub. Co. Boston.

THE MARCH TO THE SEA. By Maj. S. H. M. Byers. pp. 149. $1.25.

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

IN THE SOUTH SEAS. By Robert Louis Stevenson. pp. 370. $1.50.

FABLES. By Robert Louis Stevenson. pp. 92. $1.00.

THE POWER OF THOUGHT. By John D. Sterrett. pp. 320. $1.75.

WINNING WHIST. By Emily Boardman. pp. 159. $1.00.

PROBLEMS OF MODERN DEMOCRACY. By E. L. Godkin. pp. 332. $2.00.

PROF. WILLIAM HENRY GREEN'S SEMI-CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION. pp. 193. $1.50.

AN ILLUSTRATED FLORA OF THE NORTHERN UNITED STATES, CANADA AND THE BRITISH POSSESSIONS. Vol. I. By N. L. Britton, Ph. D., and Hon. A. Brown. $3.00.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

THE WAR OF THE STANDARDS. By Albion W. Tourgée. pp. 130. 75 cents.

SONGS WITHOUT ANSWER. By Irene Putnam. pp. 93. $1.00.

THE REAL AND IDEAL IN LITERATURE. By Frank P. Stearns. pp. 223. $1.25.

STUDIES IN INTERPRETATION. By William H. Hudson. pp. 221. $1.25.

THE TOWER OF THE OLD SCHLOSS. By Jean P. Rudd. pp. 277. $1.25.

COLUMBUS, HIS LIFE AND VOYAGES. By Washington Irving. pp. 412. $1.50.

THE BUSH BOYS. By Capt. Mayne Reid. pp. 388. $1.25.

THE BOY HUNTERS. By Capt. Mayne Reid. pp. 397. $1.25.

Thomas Whittaker. New York.

HEAVEN EVERY DAY. By Theodore F. Seward. pp. 160. 50 cents.

Harper & Bros. New York.

THE ELEMENTARY STUDY OF ENGLISH. By William J. Rolfe, Litt. D. pp. 86. 36 cents.

RICK DALE. By Kirk Munro. pp 282. $1.25.

CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES. Vol. II. By George Ticknor Curtis. pp. 780. $3.00.

Christian Literature Co. New York.

ANNOTATIONS ON THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. By F. W. Stellhorn. pp. 420. $2.00.

Longmans, Green & Co. New York.

THE VIOLET. By Julia Magruder. pp. 210. $1.25.

New Amsterdam Book Co. New York.

NEPHELE. By Francis W. Bourdillon. pp. 166. $1.00.

American Book Co. New York.

THE STORY OF GREECE. By H. A. Guerber. pp. 288. 60 cents.

LEGENDS OF THE MIDDLE AGES. By H. A. Guerber. pp. 340. $1.50.

FIFTY FAMOUS STORIES RETOLD. By James Baldwin. pp. 172. 35 cents.

ROBINSON CRUSOE. By Daniel Defoe. pp. 246. 50 cents.

Baker & Taylor Co. New York.

THE REGICIDES. By Frederick H. Cogswell. pp. 369. $1.50.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

SIR GEORGE TRESSADY. 2 vols. By Mrs. Humphrey Ward. pp. 307, 352. $2.00.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

FOR FREEDOM'S SAKE. By Arthur Paterson. pp. 322. $1.25.

THE GOLDEN FLEECE. By Julian Hawthorne. pp. 193. 75 cents.

American Sunday School Union. Philadelphia.

FRIENDS FOR GOOD. By MARY E. BRADLEY. pp. 367. $1.25.

Bean, Warters & Gaut. Knoxville.

AMERICAN CHURCH. By Rev. G. J. Jones. pp. 158. 50 cents.

Herbert S. Stone & Co. Chicago.

THE FEARSOME ISLAND. By Albert Kinross. pp. 143.

ARTIE. By George Ade. pp. 193.

PAPER COVERS.

Children's Mission. Boston.

FORTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

THE PHILOSOPHICAL REVIEW: German Kantian Bibliography. By Dr. Erich Adickes. Edited by J. G. Schurman and J. E Creighton. pp. 623. $1.00.

H. L. Hastings. Boston.

GREEN'S GREEK-ENGLISH LEXICON TO THE NEW TESTAMENT. pp. 208. 35 cents.

Rev. R. W. Wallace. Newport, R. I.

SERMONS ON CONGREGATIONALISM IN NEWPORT.

Scientific Publishing Co. New York.

UNIVERSAL BIMETALLISM. By Richard P. Rothwell. pp. 63. 50 cents.

D. Appleton & Co. New York.

FIAT MONEY INFLATION IN FRANCE. By Andrew D. White. pp. 86. 25 cents.

Department of Labor. Washington.

BULLETIN, No. 5. July, 1896.

MAGAZINES.

September. MASSEY'S.—THE WRITER.—MAGPIE.

October. THE POCKET.—HARPER'S.—HOMILETIC REVIEW.—LIPPINCOTT'S.—ST. NICHOLAS.—CATHOLIC REVIEW.—SCRIBNER'S.—NEW ENGLAND.—CHRISTIANITY IN EARNEST.—PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL.—THE CHAUTAUQUAN.

THE CRISES IN TURKEY AND JAPAN.

A paper presented by Rev. Dr. Judson Smith, foreign secretary of the American Board, at its meeting at Toledo this week had for its timely theme The Crisis in Turkey. He traced the marvelous history of the Board's missions in Asiatic Turkey, and pointed out the providential fact that there centers "the Eastern question, the sphinx of history," which the missionaries and their converts must ultimately aid in settling. He freely conceded that, until recently, the attitude of the Turkish government toward the missionaries of the Board has been one of toleration and impartial protection, during which time 700 missionaries have labored and the Board has expended at least $7,000,000. He doubts whether the Board has anywhere else achieved a more superb success, or has made a better contribution toward the solution of all missionary problems than that which it has won in the missions in the Turkish Empire.

Facing the ruin that has been wrought among the Armenians during the past year and looking forward into the mysterious and threatening future Dr. Smith asks, What is the Board to do with its missions in Asiatic Turkey? He refuses to believe that the time for retreat has come. The experience of all Christian history points against it. There is too great a stake in the work to be deserted. To withdraw would be to lose a great opportunity. The power of the martyr church must not be forfeited. The missionaries are against retreat. The will of the Lord does not require it. He said:

> The events of the past year in Asiatic Turkey have brought us face to face with the greatest disaster which has ever yet befallen any mission of the Board. Indeed, the occasions are few in the whole history of Christianity, in earlier or later days, in which the powers of evil have dealt the church more deadly blows. To a casual view it may seem that the results of all our seventy years in Turkey have gone down in the general crash, and that the only thing left for us to do is to withdraw from the field and count all as lost. But here, as in Julian's day, the deeper insight will reveal that though much is gone yet all is not lost; that what remains has in it the seeds of a nobler, richer growth; that instead of the night of ruin and despair this also is a little cloud and will pass away. . . . This is by no means the first time in Christian annals when progress has been suddenly checked and the labor of long years brought to seeming ruin. How many times in the centuries of persecution did it seem as though all were lost! Nero delivered the church a staggering blow; Decius seemed to have annihilated it. Diocletian filled all Eastern Christendom with bloodshed and fire and destruction. But the church that bled in witness for Christ was the church that grew. It was stronger when Decius's bloody work was done than it was when he began. Diocletian's fury ceased, not because the church was perishing, but because his own throne was tottering to its fall. The Netherlands grew strong and compact beneath the blows of Philip which were meant to destroy them. The fires at Smithfield weaned the whole English nation from the bloody queen who kindled them. The death of Bishop Hannington gave a greater impulse to the Christian cause at Uganda than years of his life could have done. When the pagan reaction was filling Madagascar with martyrs and closing its churches it was the time, not for the abandonment of the work, but for its renewal and more vigorous prosecution. . . . Something has been done in these churches during the past year which lays a powerful claim upon our sympathy and support. For the name of Christ many have met death without dismay; men and women who could have saved their lives by denying their Lord have joyfully chosen him at the sword's point, at the musket's mouth. Gathering now in rags from ruined homes and worshiping in dismantled churches they wear a glory that time cannot obscure. If it were ever possible for the American churches to retire from these fields we cannot think of it now when every heart in the civilized world thrills with admiration of their deeds. Those churches must be sustained at any cost. We should be giving aid to those beneath whose swords their dead have fallen were we to fail them in this extremity.

Dr. J. L. Barton presented an able paper on the Japan mission and its problems. He set forth vividly the contrast between the condi-

Continued on page 539.

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, Oct. 12, 10 A. M. Address by Prof. H. H. Neill of Amherst College. Subject, The Bible as Literature.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING, under the auspices of the Woman's Board of Missions, in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 o'clock A. M.

WORCESTER SOUTH CONFERENCE, Sutton, Oct. 28.

WORCESTER CENTRAL CONFERENCE, Piedmont Church, Worcester, Oct. 27.

WORCESTER NORTH CONFERENCE, Hubbardston, Oct. 27.

SUFFOLK WEST CONFERENCE, Newtonville, Oct. 14.

THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION will hold its seventeenth annual meeting at Berkeley Temple, Boston, on Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 10.30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Among the speakers will be Miss Miriam B. Means, Mrs. J. D. Kingsbury, Mrs. M. I. Fuller, Miss Nathalie Lord, Miss Lilla W. Davis, Mrs. J. W. Danielson, Mrs. C. L. Goodell and Rev. W. G. Puddefoot. An inexpensive lunch will be served. A full attendance is desired.

BOSTON PRIMARY UNION of Sunday School Teachers continues its weekly sessions in the vestry of Park Street Church, Park Street, Saturday, Oct. 10, at 2 o'clock, under the leadership of Miss Bertha F. Vella, State Primary Secretary. In addition to the teaching of the lesson, Child Study and new methods of work will be presented by teachers of experience, and the course of normal instruction will be given which will entitle any member passing the examination to the Massachusetts Sunday School Association's normal diploma.

A. B. C. F. M.'s EIGHTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING will be held in Toledo, O., in the First Congregational Church, beginning Tuesday, Oct. 6, at 3 P. M., and closing Friday noon, Oct. 9. Free entertainment will be given to officers of the Board and their wives, missionaries of the Board, corporate members and their wives, officers of the Women's Boards, Professors and students of our theological seminaries, and officers of the Congregational benevolent societies.

The Eastern, Central and Western Traffic Associations have granted a rate of one and a third fare to those attending the meeting. To secure this rate the purchaser will pay full fare going to Toledo, and must ask for and secure a certificate from the agent that full fare was paid to that point. This certificate will be visé by a special agent of the associations at the place of meeting, and will then entitle the holder to purchase a return ticket at one-third the usual rate.

JUBILEE MEETING OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.—The Fiftieth Anniversary of the American Missionary Association will be held in Boston on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 20-22. A large and enthusiastic meeting is confidently expected. The new Tremont Temple, Park Street Church and Faneuil Hall have been engaged for the meetings, and the list of speakers includes missionaries and prominent men and women in religious, literary and official life. It is proposed to make the meeting a celebration worthy of the completion of the association's half-century of noble service in the cause of religion and education. No city could have been more fitly selected for this great gathering than Boston. The spirit of the association has from the first been in line with that of the distinctive principles which have been the glory of New England, and are the rich heritage of the entire nation. It is most appropriate that some of the meetings of this Jubilee should be held in Faneuil Hall, the cradle of Liberty. It is confidently expected that many will make this meeting the occasion of a visit to the sacred spots in and about Boston connected with the history of the struggle for religious and civil liberty, a part of which has been accomplished through the efforts of this association.

Entertainment.—Hospitalities of the churches of Boston and vicinity will be extended to the officers of the association and speakers; to all missionaries, pastors, theological students duly accredited delegates who send their names to Rev. C. H. Beale, Roxbury, Mass., before Oct. 15. It will be absolutely necessary that application be made at least a week in advance of the meeting in order to secure entertainment. All other persons can obtain accommodations for $1.50 per day and upwards, at hotels and boarding houses, concerning which information will be furnished by the entertainment committee. Address general inquiries to Rev. William E. Barton, D. D., Chairman of Committee of Arrangements, Tremont Street, corner of West Brookline, Boston. Inquiries concerning entertainment should be addressed to Rev. Charles H. Beale, D. D., Chairman Committee of Entertainment, 33 Waverley Street, Roxbury, Mass.

Transportation.—The following railroads in New England, viz., Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany, Fitchburg, New England, New York, New Haven & Hartford (both divisions), Bangor & Aroostook, Maine Central, Central Vermont, have arranged to sell round trip tickets upon the following basis: Two cents per mile from points within twenty-five miles of Boston, $1.00 from points within twenty-five to thirty-three miles of Boston, and one and one-half cents per mile from points more than thirty-three miles from Boston. Tickets good going and returning, Oct. 20-22 inclusive, with the understanding that the time in returning to distant points in New England which cannot be reached Thursday night will be extended one day.

Railroads offering reduced rates from territory outside of New England will make use of the "certificate plan," and are the principal roads included in the Central Traffic Association, the Western Passenger Association, the New England Passenger Association and the Trunk Line Association.

Purchasers of these tickets will pay full first-class fare coming to Boston, and get a certificate to that effect from the agent of whom the ticket is purchased. The important stations are supplied with these certificates. Ticket agents at local stations, not supplied with certificates and through tickets to Boston, will inform parties of the nearest station where they can be obtained, and in such case purchasers should buy a local ticket to such station and there obtain their certificate and through ticket. These certificates must be obtained, covering the whole distance from starting point to Boston, in order to secure the one-third rate in returning, as no refund of fare will be made on account of any person failing to obtain one. Holders of these certificates, upon their arrival in Boston, must present them at an early session at the office of the transportation committee, for indorsement by its chairman, James G. Buttrick, and by the special agent of the railroads in attendance for that purpose.

On presentation of these certificates (thus indorsed), promptly upon adjournment of meeting, to the local ticket agents in Boston, return tickets can be obtained for one-third of the usual fare. These tickets, which are not transferable, are good for a continuous passage over the same lines used in coming to Boston.

Committee of Arrangements.—Rev. W. E. Barton, D. D., Chairman, Corner West Brookline and Tremont Streets, Boston; Rev. Charles H. Beale, D. D., Chairman Entertainment Committee, 33 Waverley Street, Roxbury, Mass.; Rev. Edward Sampson Tead, 8 Aldersey Street, Somerville, Mass; Rev. Edward M. Noyes, Newton Center, Mass.; Rev. Ellis Mendell, 38 Atherton Street, Boston.

FALL STATE MEETINGS.

Idaho,	Boise,	Oct.
New Mexico,	Albuquerque,	Oct.
Utah,		Oct.
Colorado,	Denver,	Tuesday, Oct. 20.
California, South'rn,	Claremont,	Tuesday, Oct. 13.
Nebraska,	Harvard,	Monday, Oct. 19.
Alabama,	Shelby,	Wednesday, Nov. 11.
Connecticut Conf.,	Winsted,	Tuesday, Nov. 17.

PASSING COMMENT ON THIS WEEK'S NEWS.

Could any one ask for a position of more far-reaching influence than that occupied by the leader of that Minneapolis Bible class?

Churches which desire a revival of the spirit of our former Fast Day will respond to the appeal for special prayer as promptly as one of the Boston churches did.

In view of the recent action of the Dubuque Association the questions next to be solved are: What will the Bay Conference do with reference to this action? and just what is the present standing of Dr. Brown?

Two bright ideas come from the enterprising pastor of Pilgrim Church, Duluth. We wish they had reached us sooner, as doubtless other churches would be glad to appoint delegates to the Toledo meeting on this inexpensive plan. But the A. M. A. Jubilee and a host of other gatherings yet to come will afford ample opportunity to utilize the suggestion.

The unquestioned relations of an organized Christian body to the numerous elements of city life were emphasized in a telling manner at a recent home gathering of a Maine church, and it would seem as if the idea would be likely to succeed in almost any community. Such a neighborly invitation and attractive program cannot be cast abroad in the highways without the acceptance of many.

While the average length of pastorates is undoubtedly shortening, we have four instances this week of ministers receiving repeated calls to the same field. In three cases the pastors were once recalled, in the other the church extends a third call to a favorite leader. Doubtless many pastors are better appreciated after leaving their flocks than before. But do these straws indicate that the pastorate of the future will be an intermittent one?

WITH THE WISCONSIN BRETHREN.

The passing study of the Wisconsin Convention at Antigo last week revealed to a new comer as his first surprise the discovery that these Western brethren believe in and sustain their State assemblage. Three days and four evenings are not considered too long a period to spend together. Nevertheless, about two hundred delegates are present, including the pastors of the leading churches, while from the farming districts and the distant forest out-stations come men bronzed with toil but eager for fellowship.

And a splendid body of men it is all told. Dignity, culture, ability go hand in hand with zeal and enthusiasm. The intellectual quality of the platform work is uniformly good, while the spiritual tone of the assemblage rings strong and true. They appear to care little for theological disputations, but much for practical Christianity in all its exhibitions and for personal devotion to the Lord Jesus Christ. Judging by this year's program, carried out under the skillful moderatorship of Rev. E. P. Salmon, genuine interest is taken in the sociological movement of the day and in wise endeavors after Christian unity and co-operation.

The Antigo church, which entertained the convention, though only fourteen years old, numbers 200 members, has for the last eight years been self-supporting, contributes generously to all the societies, and is radiating its helpful influences through the city and unevangelized districts beyond. The pastor, Rev. C. C. Campbell, and his people gave the convention an enthusiastic greeting.

The afternoon when the two State home missionary societies had the right of way was the next best thing to an extensive tour throughout the State with a view to ascertaining the condition of frontier Christianity. Superintendents and other field workers brought their budgets of interesting facts and incidents, and through their eyes the audience saw the progress of the campaign in out of the way places. It was a surprise to learn that there are still great stretches of territory even in the older sections of the State practically destitute of gospel privileges. But there is steady advance into the new regions and a gratifying measure of success in established centers.

Wisconsin is the only State in the Union excepting California that has two entirely distinct home missionary organizations. The Wisconsin Society cares for the southern and middle sections, for a little more than half of the State. Rev. H. W. Carter is superintendent. The North Wisconsin Society looks out for the northern belt, so much of which is thick with timber. The superintendent is Rev. T. G. Grassie, whose sturdy Scotch characteristics have been put to good use in Wisconsin for many years. This division of the State has obtained since 1886 and has inured to the advantage of both sections. The churches in the bounds of the Wisconsin Society not only maintain its work but contribute annually to the national society. The northern society is not yet self-supporting, but its record for wise Congregational church extension is a noble one. Its invariable policy is never to go into a field where any other evangelical church has started, unless in places having a population of over 1,500. And it has entered such places only three times in its history of ten years. Moreover, none of its churches has died and none is now without a pastor. Seventy-two out of the seventy-five churches planted in northern Wisconsin have been on absolutely virgin soil. Make a note of that, you people who think that our home missionary society cares more for denominational aggrandizement than for the progress of the gospel.

They take their six benevolent societies straight at the Wisconsin meeting and have a portion of time for the seventh, also, even for Rev. N. H. Whittlesey's pet and pride, the National Council's Ministerial Relief Fund. The American Board was represented by District-Sec. A. N. Hitchcock and Rev. G. E. Albrecht of Japan. The spokesman for the Home Missionary Society was Sec. H. D. Wiard. Dr. Roy made one of his old-time pleas for the American Missionary Association. The Church Building Society was on hand in the person of Dr. L. H. Cobb, while Rev. C. R. Bliss and Rev. G. C. Haun spoke respectively for the Education and the Sunday School Societies. The amount of time apparently willingly surrendered to the women by the men shows how large and outspoken a factor in Western Congregationalism the Dorcases and Marys are. Recognition on the regular program was accorded both the Woman's Home Missionary Union and the Woman's Board. The former society deputed Mrs. H. A. Miner to give a backward glance over the years, while the latter called upon Miss Luella Miner of China and Miss Alice Little recently of Micronesia to turn attention to the foreign field and to the function of the Oberlin Home as respects the children of missionaries. Then, too, each organization had its separate meeting, which the men were not compelled to attend.

Barest mention only can be made of Dr. G. R. Leavitt's helpful sermon, of Prof. Graham Taylor's thrilling account of the work of his students and of himself in the slums of Chicago, and of the other formal addresses of the conference, that of Rev. J. W. White on The Achievement of Character, that of Rev. R. W. McLaughlin on Thought as Related to Action, and that of Rev. S. S. Matthews on The Need of Eminent Holiness. Registrar H. A. Miner's record for the year showed six new churches organized, making the present number 240, with a total membership of 21,209, a net gain of 739 over the preceding year. Benevolent contributions aggregated $49,093

So Wisconsin Congregationalism, refreshed by another season of exceptionally rich fellowship, girds itself for fresh and better service. H. A. B.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Yale.

The president of the Missionary Association this year is Mr. C. C. Merrill. The superintendent of city mission work is Mr. M. B. Fisher.——Messrs. C. P. Pierce and A. E. Fraser have been elected deacons of the Senior and Middle Classes.——Prof. William Dorpfeld, first secretary of the Archæological Institute at Athens, lectured on Troy last week. ——Every member of last year's Graduating Class is settled. Several of this year's Senior Class and of the Graduating Class are supplying pulpits regularly.

Chicago.

Ex-Consul Waller addressed the students on Madagascar recently in connection with the noon devotional service of faculty and students.——The first general prayer meeting was held Sept. 24, in the afternoon, Prof. Graham Taylor leading, and the subject being The Unity of Christian Life.——Prof. Jernberg is anxious about the continuance of Evangelisten, which he has edited without compensation for seven years. He has received generous aid formerly from the Sunday School Society and the Home Missionary Society, and the paper has been one of the most important instruments for developing work among the Scandinavians. The Swedish and Bohemian Congregational papers are discontinued. The matter of continuing Evangelisten is now under advisement by a committee of the Sunday School Society.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

MASS.—Norfolk Conference meeting, Sept. 29, in Cohasset was well attended. Among the topics were Prayer, and Sunday School Work.

At the Andover Conference, Oct. 13, in Dracut, the topics were: Development of Intellectual Life of the Church, The Church Prayer Meeting, and Missionary Work of the Sunday School Society.

Franklin Conference met in Greenfield, Sept. 29, 30, and discussed Missionary Efforts and The Preacher and Layman in Politics, among other topics. Rev. C. I. Scofield preached the conference sermon and Rev. M. L. Richardson that of the communion service.

CLUBS.

MINN.—The 18th annual meeting of the Minnesota Club was held at Plymouth Church, Minneapolis, Sept. 28, entertainment being furnished by the Young Ladies' Club. Rev. D. N. Beach, D. D., gave a suggestive address on The Solidarity of the Christian Life. The club was favored in having with it Rev. H. A. Bridgman, who brought greetings from Boston and The Congregationalist. The attendance at this first meeting of the year indicates a successful year.

NEW ENGLAND.

Boston.

Berkeley Temple. The record of work from March, through the summer, shows that 414 applications for help were received by the church, and that of the congregation 91 were given aid. During the warm season 76 children were sent into the country, and 500 fresh air tickets were distributed. Rev. W. S. Kelsey, the assistant pastor, largely superintended this work. To enlarge the aid department one evening a week will now be given to dispensary work for the poor, and another to free legal advice. The School of Applied Christianity opened Oct. 1 with three courses, the Biblical, the normal class and a class in applied Christianity.

DORCHESTER.—Second. The day of prayer for our country in its present crisis—Oct. 8—which Mr. Moody has asked Christian people to observe, is to be marked by services in many churches. This one, for example, has invited neighboring churches to join with it in appropriate religious services on the afternoon and evening of that day.

Massachusetts.

BROOKLINE.—The new enterprise inaugurated lately at the Casino, Beaconsfield Terraces, began its regular services last Sunday with its recently called pastor, Rev. H. G. Hale. Until the edifice is erected, in the vicinity of the reservoir, the congregation will continue to meet at this place. The charter members of the organization will number about 50. The congregation last Sunday was unusually large for this place, and the Sunday school started hopefully.

BEVERLY.—Dane Street observed rally day with the largest attendance in its history. The school touched the high mark of 520 as it closed its 77th year. Special services were held the following week with a view to the deepening of the spiritual life. Neighboring pastors preached.

WORCESTER.—Pilgrim. Dr. Alexander Lewis preached a sermon Sept. 27, advocating the development of the church into a thoroughly organized institutional body. His recommendations include the opening of the church every day in the year, gymnasium with instructor and classes for men and women, the appointment of a large committee, some of whom shall assist in Junior Endeavor, a sewing school and kindergarten, the opening of a labor bureau, a hospitality committee to canvass the parish, a chapter of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, and a pastor's Bible and normal class. He desires also that a central committee be formed of the heads of departments and reports of work be made every month. Free pews will not be introduced for the present but more paid workers are suggested. It is recommended that instead of the Week of Prayer in January the two weeks before Easter be observed as a consecration and self-denial season and a special offering be made for the church. The church indorses the recommendations and most of them will be carried into effect at once. Rally Sunday was observed by the Sunday school with an attendance of 700.

SPRINGFIELD.—First. The Bible school had an interesting method of rallying this year. There was a rally day for the members of the school, Sept. 13, and a visitors' and new members' service, Sept. 27, when a special effort was made to increase the membership. The idea proved successful and the attendance is greatly increased over that of last year.

GRANBY.—The congregation re-entered its house of worship, after using the town hall three months, Sept. 27, holding special services. The house was well filled. It has been thoroughly repaired and greatly improved. All bills were paid before the reopening and provision is made for further changes in the interior furnishing. Rev. R. C. Bell is pastor. Rev. H. Boyd, a son of a former pastor, assisted.

ORANGE.—Central. The 50th anniversary exercises of a recent date attracted a large attendance. The pastor, Rev. G. W. Judson, gave a warm introductory address. The review of the History of the church showed a growth from 16 members to the present enrollment of 281. Greetings from other churches were given. Dr. Smith Baker preached the anniversary sermon.

Maine.

ELLSWORTH.—A parish evening recently held was a marked success. A free harvest supper to all interested preceded short speeches and papers by prominent men on such subjects as: The Importance of Religion in Shaping the Character of a City, The Church and the School, The Church in the Commercial and Social Elements of the City, The Relations of Young Men to the Church and of the Church to Young Men. Rev. D. L. Yale is the pastor.

A revival is reported through the labors of the Norway praying band in districts around Norway.

New Hampshire

EXETER.—Second. The invitation of the academy trustees to hold their Sunday morning service in the Academy Chapel has been accepted.

In Goffstown $135 were realized at an experience-telling party, and in East Concord $40 ——The meeting house in Gilsum was the scene recently of the only wedding performed in it for 25 years.—— The Marlboro church receives $2,000 as a bequest from the late J. S. Nason.

Vermont.

The late Alfred B. Darling of New York left to the East Burke church the property it now occupies and $10,000 additional.——At the Bennington County Conference two weeks ago the following students were approbated to preach: H. L. Reed, Auburn, and E. C. Partridge, Andover.

Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE.—North has refused to accept Rev. F. H. Decker's resignation. His health is steadily improving.——Pilgrim observed the first week of October as a week of prayer and spiritual preparation for the work of the coming year. Home prayer at 8.30, silent prayer at 12 o'clock and an evening fellowship prayer service at the church. A card with the call to prayer and the sermon theme for each evening was sent by the pastor to every household.

Connecticut.

HARTFORD.—Park. It was voted at a special meeting of the church last week to sell the strip of land in the rear of the edifice, where it was originally intended to erect horse sheds, and to lease the land adjoining just west of the church on Asylum Street.——New Britain Avenue. Rev. E. P. Hammond has been conducting a series of revival meetings, gaining many converts, especially among the children.

NEW HAVEN.—Grand Avenue. Rev. J. L. Mitchell preached the last of a series of three sermons on the principles involved in the present political campaign a week ago Sunday evening, taking The Attainment of a Just Equilibrium as his subject. Large congregations were present each evening and the sermons were received with favor.

BRIDGEPORT.—The pastor, Rev. C. F. Stimson, will study this year at Yale, but will continue his pastorate here.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

NEW YORK.—The new church on the West Side adopted the name Manhattan, Oct. 2. Last Sunday regular services were held throughout the day, including a Christian Endeavor meeting, a morning preaching service, and Sunday school under the leadership of Mr. D. B. Holmes, followed by an afternoon preaching service. All the services were well attended. The pulpit furniture, the Bible, the pastor's gown, the hymn-books and service-books and also the Sunday school Bibles and hymn-books have been presented by friends. A communion service is promised from other friends. Hearty expressions of sympathy and interest have been received from the pastors of neighboring churches, one of whom was present and pronounced the benediction at the afternoon service.

Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA.—Central. Prof. W. W. White, D. D., of Chicago, on his way to Calcutta for a two years' work among the educated young men of India, preached here Sept. 28. This church is joining with its neighbors this week in special meetings under the direction of Rev. C. I. Scofield of Northfield, Mass, preparatory to the great "evangelistic campaign" which is to be carried on through the entire city next month, under the superintendence of Dr. J. W. Chapman.——Park. This church has just held a unique "international sidewalk bazar," for the benefit of its church building fund. The profits were about $500.

LE RAYSVILLE.—This church, though pastorless, manifests spiritual interest. Rev. Dr. T. S. Devitt of Branford, Ct., a former pastor spending his vacation in town, has supplied the pulpit several times, and on Sept. 27 baptized and received 14 members on confession and one by letter, the largest addition for years.

PLYMOUTH.—Elm. Enthusiastic addresses and helpful sermons were listened to at the dedication services, Sept. 27, 28. The dedicatory address was given by Dr. T. W. Jones and the prayer offered by Rev. W. L. Evans.

THE SOUTH.

District of Columbia.

WASHINGTON.—Mt. Pleasant. Work has begun upon the foundation for the new church. The pastor, Rev. M. R. Fishburn, has returned from his vacation and the church is resuming work along its usual lines with fresh vigor.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE

DU MAURIER'S

NEW NOVEL

"THE MARTIAN"

BEGAN IN

THE OCTOBER NUMBER

35 cents a Copy. $4.00 a Year.

HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers, New York

Alabama.

SELMA.—The church rejoices in the return of Rev. T. J. Bell after a vacation spent in his Georgia home.——From Denver, Col., Dr. Burnell also returns to the A. M. A. work in the Burrell Academy, which has educated most of the colored teachers of the five schools of Selma. The new year opens favorably with eight teachers having 300 pupils in 12 grades.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

COLUMBUS.—North. Sept. 27 was a happy day, when a beautiful new edifice was dedicated practically free from debt. It is a frame building and cruciform, with a seating capacity of about 600. It cost $7,500. Dr. Washington Gladden preached the sermon on the Nature of the Kingdom. Rev. J. P. Milligan, the pastor, has been in poor health all summer, and has spent three months on his farm. Prof. A. C. Barrows has supplied the pulpit most of the time and presided at the dedicatory services. The church now rejoices at the return of its pastor, and the work in this important field will be carried on with vigor.——First. Dr. Gladden's return from vacation was the signal for great activity. During the summer he has been studying various forms of Christian work in and about New York, and is giving the results in a course of evening lectures. That the people of the city appreciate his efforts is manifest by the crowds who attend. He proposes this winter to make this church one of applied Christianity in fact and name. The work has been divided between 22 committees, and at a recent prayer meeting, where he outlined the work, he told those present that he wished every one of the 1,000 members to take up some active endeavor. Dr. Gladden's plan is generally carried out, and the influence of this church for good will be felt this winter.

Illinois.

CHICAGO.—Warren Avenue. Last Sunday witnessed the rededication of this edifice which years ago was built and paid for by the First Church. Last year it became too small. Additions to the membership have been numerous of late and in spite of hard times needful alterations have been made. The capacity of the audience-room has been doubled so that it now accommodates 1,000 persons. The location of the house is one of the best in the city. Although 180 persons were received into fellowship last year, it is confidently anticipated that an even larger number will be received in the coming twelve months. Rev. J. W. Fifield is pastor.

Michigan.

GRAND RAPIDS.—First celebrated its 60th anniversary Sept. 20. The event occurred on Sunday, when the people were rejoicing in a house renovated and improved at an expense of $2,000. A feature of the celebration was a laymen's meeting in the afternoon, when Mr. H. J. Hollister spoke of the seven pastors of the church from the beginning, whom he had intimately known, and Mrs. S. L. Withey, who was in the Sunday school the day it was organized, told of the early struggles of the 22 members, only one of whom now lives. They worshiped in a private house and paid their pastor in pine slabs and potatoes. Laymen from the several churches which have grown out of the First Church brought welcome and hearty greetings and told the history of their several enterprises. In the Sunday school seven of the former superintendents were present. Dr. James Gallup, for 15 years superintendent, made an address full of helpful reminiscences. Dr. D. F. Bradley is pastor.

Wisconsin.

NEILLSVILLE.—This church for a time was heavily burdened with debt and nearly discouraged. The debt is already nearly paid, and the church is hopeful for the future. Rev. F. B. Doe is pastor.

THE WEST.

Iowa.

DUBUQUE.—North. This church was abandoned some years ago, but a member of the Summit Church has superintended its Sunday school for the last three months, Rev. G. W. Sargent of Bellevue has preached alternate Sundays and now an interesting revival is in progress, in which he is being assisted by Dr. F. E. Hopkins of First Church and Rev. G. M. Orvis of Summit. Already about 20 conversions have been reported.

Minnesota.

DULUTH.—Pilgrim. The return of absentees and the opening of the autumn campaign have just been celebrated by a "fall reunion," which was largely attended. The program of informal speeches and music proved highly entertaining and helpful. Among other speakers was Rev. H. A. Bridgman of The Congregationalist, who also preached Sept. 27. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Patton, has instituted a new plan for securing the attendance of children at the morning service and also for filling the front pews. A prize is offered to all those who attend the morning service every Sunday in the year, the record being kept by tickets which are punched after each service. The older children are massed in the front pews (with guardians) where they give a homelike and pleasant aspect to the audience. About 100 children have entered for the prizes. They are allowed to make up unavoidable absences by evening attendance. This church will enjoy the meeting of the American Board through the reports of six delegates appointed two weeks in advance, not with the expectation that they can attend the gathering, but that they will read up about the meeting in the Toledo dailies and the religious press and give the people the benefit of their information.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Plymouth. Mr. David C. Bell observed, Sept. 27, the 31st anniversary of the formation of his men's Bible class. It has had a remark-

Continued on page 536.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday,
At 1 Somerset Street, corner of Beacon Street.
PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.
On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 11½ inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.
READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

Take

Care of your health at this season. See that your blood is pure, appetite good and all the organs in a healthy condition. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great building-up and blood purifying medicine, and therefore it is the best medicine to take in the fall when the atmosphere is laden with disease germs from decaying vegetation. Hood's Sarsaparilla prevents colds, pneumonia, bronchitis and fevers.

HOOD'S
Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills the best family cathartic and liver stimulant. 25 cents.

CHURCH ORGANS
Hook & Hastings Co.
Boston, Mass.

481.

Fix the number 481 in your mind. That is the number of different styles of easy-chairs now on exhibition in our warerooms.

It is difficult at first to conceive of this large number. Sit in a different chair every day from now until a year from next November, and you have tried each one of the new patterns now on our floors.

It would be odd indeed if in this great collection there was not the complete answer to your most cherished wish. There is certainly no form of fatigue of body or mind that some of these chairs cannot banish.

And the prices are a little under those of other stores. They are what you would naturally expect of a house which does a business equal to the combined trade of any six furniture houses.

New General Catalogue for 1896-97. Square octavo, 256 pp., 300 illustrations. Sent to any address on receipt of five 2-cent stamps for postage.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,
48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

For the Postage—A Sample of Famous

Sozodont
FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

A sample of liquid Sozodont by mail, provided you mention this publication and send three cents for postage. Address the Proprietors of Sozodont, HALL & RUCKEL, Wholesale Druggists, New York City.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

The slight improvement in the general merchandise movement, noted in previous weeks, continues. This improvement is stimulated by the growth of confidence and by the advance in the prices of several staples. Just as the advance, started over a month ago in the stock market, checked the slow panic then in progress in commercial circles, so the recent advance in wheat has confirmed the growing confidence in all branches of trade.

There seem to be legitimate reasons for the advance of wheat. Cotton goods are in better demand, and both the wool and woolen situations reflect a stronger tone. Iron and steel prices continue firm, and the amount of orders is increasing. There is a fair movement in boots and shoes, while lumber is rather quiet. Cotton and woolen mills are relatively more active than for months.

In the Eastern money centers money rates are easier, which facilitates general trade, as previous rates were so high as to hamper and restrict the movement of general merchandise. In the stock market there has been some recession of prices from the highest.

THE SILVER DEMOCRACY.

The Present National Crisis was the subject upon which Hon. Linwood S. Pratt addressed the Boston Ministers' Meeting last Monday. It was intended that he should reply to Mr. Capen's address on the same subject two weeks before. He began by saying that he was there to plead the cause of the poor and needy. He expressed the fear that he was addressing a jury whose verdict was already determined upon, but he would appeal to the brotherhood of man, which the Master taught, in behalf of those whom the Master loved. Mr. Pratt spent the larger part of the time allotted to him in stating his reasons for dissenting from the propositions of his political adversaries. He believes that the demonetization of silver in 1873 is at the bottom of the present hard times. This demonetization was brought about by the conspiracy of those financiers who control from London the governments of the world. Should the mints of the world be reopened to the free coinage of silver, the price of silver bullion would at once increase. The prosperity of the United States is dependent upon the prosperity of the farmers of the country, who have to compete with the farmers of Russia, India, China and Japan. The farmer in India fixes the price of his wheat in silver, therefore the rise in the price of silver bullion would raise the price of wheat, hence the American farmer would be richer and his prosperity would insure that of the entire nation. In closing, Mr. Pratt said: "We are passing through the birth throes of a new era, the struggle of God's people for existence. You can no more defeat the election of William Jennings Bryan to the presidency than you could have wrecked the Mayflower. All the forces of mammon are against us, but they who work with their hands are with us, and the instinct of the people is always right."

BOSTON SUPERINTENDENTS' UNION.

The home department and its needs were considered at the meeting last Monday night. The organization of this comparatively new branch, thoroughly Congregational in origin, was explained by Mr. E. P. St. John of the Springfield Training School. The working of it was described by Field Sec. J. N. Dummer. It brings the scattered membership of the community into as near relations with the main school as is possible. It provides for careful canvass of the parish, insistence upon accurate reports of study, and competent superintendence and regular visitation.

Rev. C. E. Jefferson of Chelsea, whose church has next to the largest home department in the State, told of results there. Nearly a score of persons a year have been influenced to join the church.

Fifty Years Ago.

President Polk in the White House chair,
While in Lowell was Doctor Ayer;
Both were busy for human weal
One to govern and one to heal.
And, as a president's power of will
Sometimes depends on a liver-pill,
Mr. Polk took Ayer's Pills I trow
For his liver, 50 years ago.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills

were designed to supply a model purgative to people who had so long injured themselves with griping medicines. Being carefully prepared and their ingredients adjusted to the exact necessities of the bowels and liver, their popularity was instantaneous. That this popularity has been maintained is well marked in the medal awarded these pills at the World's Fair 1893.

50 Years of Cures.

October Weddings.

New and beautiful designs of American cut glass pieces, equal to the finest foreign makers. Extensive variety to choose from. Pieces from $5 to $90 each.

Also the rich color and gold Carlsbad Glass Loving Cups, Vases and Hocks.

Handsome Lamps with Silk Shades from $5 to $75.

China Dinner Sets, all grades, from $20 to the most expensive decorations.

China Plates in single dozens, from $5 to $150 per dozen.

Wedgwood Boston View Plates, 12 subjects of historic buildings, costing $4.80 per dozen upwards.

Never was our stock larger, more valuable and comprehensive than now, and Never was the cost of China, Glass and Lamps so low, owing to the improved methods of manufacture and the low rates of duty.

INSPECTION INVITED.

Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Co.,

China, Glass and Lamp Merchants,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

(SEVEN FLOORS)

120 FRANKLIN STREET, BOSTON.

Comfortable
Convenient Charming

THE Arnold Lounging Robe
OF Teazle Down Cloth

Every woman who has seen it says it's "Just the thing."

Price, $2.75 to $3.50, according to finish

The "Arnold" Knit Night or Sleeping Drawers for Children, as well as Knit Goods for Mothers and Babies, are described in our free Catalogue, worth reading. Every dealer should and will keep these goods, but if you do not find them write us.

NOVELTY KNITTING COMPANY
325 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY.
Oldest and best known in U. S.
Established, 1855.
3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES.
4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-page Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & CO.

MAINE, BANGOR.
BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.
Choice between two courses of study, Classical and English Biblical, in Junior year; one course in Middle and Senior years. Optionals in Hebrew and Cognates, and in Greek. Entrance examination on Wednesday, Sept. 2, 9 A.M. Apply to Prof. C. A. Beckwith, or Prof. G. W. Gilmore, Bangor, Me.

CONNECTICUT, HARTFORD.
HARTFORD THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, 63d Year Opens Oct. 7, 1896.
Unexcelled Advantages for College Graduates. HARTFORD, CT.

MASSACHUSETTS, SOUTH BYFIELD.
DUMMER ACADEMY (Home School).
Founded 1763. Thorough training for College and Technical Schools. PERLEY L. HORNE, A. M.

MASSACHUSETTS, BRADFORD.
CARLETON SCHOOL for Young Men and Boys. College preparatory and general course of study. Individual teaching. Gymnasium bowling alley, etc. Circulars.
I. N. CARLETON, Ph. D.

NEW LONDON, N. H.
COLBY ACADEMY.
$200 to $250 a Year. Coeducational. 44th Year. Send for Catalogue. Rev. GEO. W. GILE, President.

MASSACHUSETTS, BOSTON.
College of Physicians and Surgeons.
Men and women. Rules of Assoc. Am. Med. Colleges 17th year opens Sept 16. Part tuition for clinical service. 20,000 med. calls in '95. Near Boston City Hospital. AUGUSTUS P. CLARK, A.M., M.D., Dean. (Send for Catalogue.) 517 Shawmut Ave., Boston, Mass.

CONNECTICUT, NORWALK.
MISS BAIRD'S INSTITUTE FOR GIRLS,
Norwalk, Conn. 25th year. Primary, Academic, and College Preparatory courses. Music, Art, and the Languages. Careful attention to morals and manners. New buildings, steam heat, gymnasium.

A PIANO BY MAIL.

You can buy an IVERS & POND Piano just as cheaply, as safely, and as satisfactorily of us by mail as in person at our ware-rooms. How? Write and we'll tell you.

We send our pianos on trial at our expense to any part of the United States where they are not sold by a local dealer. Send us a postal card and receive FREE our CATALOGUE and prices for cash and on EASY PAYMENTS.

If you want a Piano, a postal card may save you $75 to $100. Send it to-day.

Ivers & Pond Piano Co.,
114 Boylston Street, Boston.

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS in the World.
PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN).
Send for Price and Catalogue.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

BELLS
Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

IMPROVED
Cathedral Tubular Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS (Harrington and other patents.)
U. S. Tubular Bell Co. Sole Mfrs., Methuen, Mass.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

Stereopticon for Sale. Second-hand instrument, guaranteed in first-class condition; dissolves with lime-light; nickel-plated body; lenses, all achromatic, are 4½ in. condensers, ½ Darlot objectives. Another stereopticon in the church makes this one unnecessary. Rev. H. S. Brown, Danielson, Ct.

University Graduate, age 29, with two years' experience at home and four years abroad, desires a charge. Address "A. W.," 71 Revere St., Boston.

WORLD'S FOOD FAIR AND HOME CONGRESS.

Mechanics Building, Boston.

Monday, Oct. 5, to Saturday, Nov. 7. Daily, 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. Two hundred dealers in food products will distribute samples to the people. Most distinguished men and women in the land to participate in Home Congress (three sessions daily). Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer of Philadelphia lectures every afternoon on "Therapeutics of Diet." Season tickets at special rates. Five "Centurion" Bicycles given away to most popular teacher, pupil, mercantile or manufactory establishment employee, letter carrier, street or steam railway employee. It costs nothing to vote. Four hundred Souvenir Silver Spoons given away every day to first four hundred women purchasing tickets of admission. N. Y. Seventh Regiment, Reeves', Salem Cadet, Lafricain's Naval Brigade and Boyle O'Reilly Bands, also the Fadettes, Mendelssohn Club, etc Nothing like it since the Peace Jubilee.

ADMISSION 25 CENTS.

THE OVERLAND LIMITED.

The Fastest Train in the West.
RUNNING
EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR
VIA THE
UNION PACIFIC — THE OVERLAND ROUTE — WORLD'S PICTORIAL LINE

TO UTAH.
29 hours from Missouri River.
44 hours from Chicago.

TO CALIFORNIA.
21-2 days from Missouri River.
3 days from Chicago or St. Louis.

THE ONLY LINE
in the West operating Buffet Smoking and Library Cars.

Send for Advertising Matter. | E. L. LOMAX, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt., Omaha, Neb.

GAZE'S UNIVERSAL TOURS.

52D YEAR.

NILE TOURS — Illustrated program of our NILE TOURS, Season 1896-97, sent on application. Soon ag'ts for the The Nile Nile Nav. Co.

ORIENT, EGYPT AND PALESTINE — OUR ORIENTAL TOURS, visiting GIBRALTAR, ITALY, EGYPT, HOLY LAND, etc., leaves New York OCTOBER 3, JANUARY 16 and FEBRUARY 13.

SO. FRANCE AND ITALY — OUR regular South France and Italy parties, visiting Southern EUROPE and ENGLAND (a delightful two months' tour), leave New York monthly. All above tours under personal escort, and every expense included. Illustrated programs free. Mention Tour wanted.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED

INDEPENDENT TICKETS EVERYWHERE — As Official Passenger Agents for all Transportation Lines, we furnish tickets at lowest rates everywhere—Europe, the Orient, and Round the World; BERMUDA, NASSAU, MEXICO, WEST INDIES, etc.

WRITE FOR TOURIST GAZETTE AND SAVE MONEY.

Post Free Upon Application.

H. GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,
113 Broadway, New York, or
W. H. EAVES, New England Agent,
201 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

"Where Times are Prosperous"

IN THE

Rocky Mountains

TAKE THE...

ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

To Denver, Colorado Springs, or Pueblo.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO COLORADO SPRINGS, MANITOU AND PIKES PEAK

4 HOURS QUICKER TIME TO CRIPPLE CREEK

which should be included in your trip, and an investigation of the resources of this place may well repay your visit.

Tourist Dictionary ...Sent Free... Apply for it.

Address JOHN SEBASTIAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent, CHICAGO.

IN CORRESPONDENCE SUGGESTED by announcements in our ADVERTISING COLUMNS, please mention that the advertisement was seen in The Congregationalist.

FOR HONEST MONEY.

MR. CAPEN'S ARTICLE,

The National Crisis OF 1896.

This article, which was published in The Congregationalist of Sept. 24 and which has been so widely commended, we shall be glad to furnish and in such quantity as may be desired, to pastors and others who will agree to distribute it to voters.

FREE OF CHARGE

Address

THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK,
OFFICE, NO. 119 BROADWAY.

Eighty-Fifth Semi-Annual Statement, January, 1896.

SUMMARY OF ASSETS.

Cash in Banks	$469,914 59
Real Estate	1,705,895.91
United States Stocks (market value)	1,418,425.00
Bank, Trust Co., and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	3,946,493.00
State and City Bonds (market value)	855,927.93
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	463,009.13
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	426,550.00
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	515,227.06
Interest due and accrued on 1st January, 1896	52.185.92
	$9,853,628.54

LIABILITIES.

Cash Capital	$3,000,000.00
Reserve Premium Fund	4,395,659.00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	752,514.13
Net Surplus	1,705,455.41
	$9,853,628.54

D. A. HEALD, President.
J. H. WASHBURN, E. G. SNOW, } Vice-Presidents.
W. L. BIGELOW, T. B. GREENE, } Secretaries.
H. J. FERRIS, A. M. BURTIS, Ass't Secretaries.
NEW YORK, January 7, 1896.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley

and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. GATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

£ THE WORLD

has agents all over it who have cashed

Cheque Bank Cheques

for over Twenty Years. Excellent for Remitters and Travelers. Circular mailed on application.

Agency of
UNITED STATES CHEQUE BANK, L'd.
FREDERICK W. PERRY, Manager,
40 and 42 Wall St., N. Y.

St. Denis

Broadway & 11th Street, NEW YORK.

Opposite Grace Church.

EUROPEAN PLAN.

In a modest and unobtrusive way there are few better conducted hotels in the metropolis than the St. Denis.

The great popularity it has acquired can readily be traced to its unique location, its homelike atmosphere, the peculiar excellence of its cuisine, and its very moderate prices.

William Taylor & Son.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST., BOSTON.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, OCT. 2.

The leader of the meeting was Miss Lucy M. Fay of Lowell, who read passages from the first and third chapters of John's gospel and from his first epistle, bringing into prominence the subject of Light. Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, the "round the world missionary of the W. C. T. U.," led in an earnest prayer that all Christians might have a better appreciation of their duty as stewards, that the thousands now squandered on useless or harmful things might be diverted to the Lord's treasury, so that the mission boards might be able to send out armies where now they can furnish only scouts. Mrs. Louise Kellogg found an encouraging sign of the times in the attention at present directed to Christian stewardship, mentioning as valuable articles on the subject The Daughter of Tyre, written by Mrs. C. L. Goodell, a paper by Rev. Charles M. Southgate in the Golden Rule, and Ian Maclaren's recent contribution to The Congregationalist.

Among the missionaries present at the meeting was Miss Margaret Leitch, who gave a rapid survey of the work in Ceylon, which is now nearly self-supporting. Out of their poverty the native Christians give liberally, not only for religious work at home but to support native teachers outside their own province, sending workers even to Burmah and other parts of India. These Cingalese Christians, though their wages may be only about eight cents a day, give their tithes most regularly. They believe what they read in the Bible about giving a tenth to the Lord, and they act upon it. Miss Leitch introduced Dr. Irwin of Clinton, Ont., one of two young lady physicians who are on the eve of going to Ceylon to join Dr. and Mrs. Scott in medical work.

It was like welcoming back a worn veteran from the field of fierce battle to greet among us Mrs. A. M. Knapp of Bitlis, for more than forty years a missionary of the Board and the mother of Rev. George Knapp, who is still held in Constantinople to answer unjust and absurd charges against him.

Mrs. Ruth Baker spoke of the three hundred or more of Armenian refugees who had reached Marseilles homeless and penniless, of the substantial help given them by the W. C. T. U. through Lady Henry Somerset, and said that thirty of them were soon to come to the care of the Temperance Union here, for whom she bespoke an active interest; and Mrs. Leavitt, expecting to spend the winter in Jamaica, desired prayers that she might be able to carry gospel light to the darkened minds of some negro laborers there.

The meeting was closed with prayer by Miss E. C. Gilman of Norwich, Ct.

SINGERS LEAD THE WORLD.

Over 13,000,000 Made and Sold.

Highest Awards at the World's Columbian Exposition

FOR

Excellence of Design, Excellence of Construction,
Regularity of Motion,
Ease of Motion,
Great Speed,
Adjustability,
Durability,
Ease of Learning,
Convenience of Arrangement.

IF YOU BUY A SINGER,

You will receive careful instruction from a competent teacher at your home.

You can obtain necessary accessories direct from the Company's offices.

You will get prompt attention in any part of the world, as our offices are everywhere; and we give careful attention to all customers, no matter where their machine may have been purchased.

You will be dealing with the leading sewing-machine manufacturers in the world, having an unequaled experience and an unrivaled reputation to maintain—the strongest guarantees of excellence and fair dealing.

SOLD ON EASY PAYMENTS.

THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

OFFICES EVERYWHERE.

Your Hat

Will be a charming one if you'll only let our millinery artists design and make it for you.

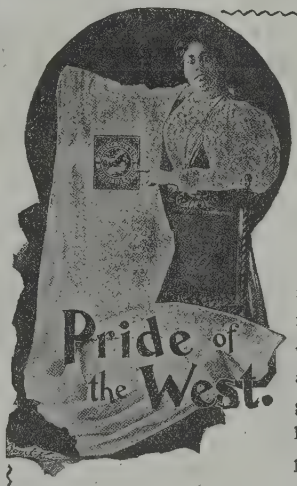
Come and see our display of the choicest effects in Millinery—imported Flowers, Feathers, Ornaments, Ribbons, Laces, etc.

Superior work at moderate prices.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,

The Leading Millinery House,

90 to 98 Tremont St., Boston.



36, 41 and 45 inches wide.

The best muslin made for underwear and general household purposes.

For sale by all leading retailers.

The Latest CORD EDGE BIAS VELVETEEN S·H·&M· REGISTERED TRADE MARK SKIRT BINDING.

It combines with the well-known durability of all S. H. & M. bindings an elegance and finish heretofore unknown. Ask for the Ever Ready, Vassar or Featherbone Edge.

If your dealer WILL NOT supply you we will.

Samples showing labels and materials mailed free.

"Home Dressmaking Made Easy" a new 72 page book by Miss Emma M. Hooper of the Ladies Home Journal tells in plain words how to make dresses at home without previous training; mailed for 25c.

S. H. & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, N. Y. City.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

ISAAC RILEY,

Successor to Baird & Riley,

PLUMBER AND SANITARY ENGINEER,

85 Joy St., Near Cambridge St., Boston.

Telephone, Haymarket 294.

"XII" Spoons

most exposed to wear, as indicated in the illustration. They have three times the usual thickness of silver on the places wear three times as long as ordinary spoons, and cost but little extra. The full trade-mark (stamped on each piece) is

1847 Rogers Bros. XII

For sale by dealers everywhere. Made by MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO. MERIDEN, CONN.; 208 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK.

The largest manufacturers of high-class silver-plated ware in the world.

Continued from page 532.

able history, and thousands of those who have been connected with it are Christians of influence in this and other countries.

Nebraska.

WALLACE.—Since his return from vacation, the pastor, Rev. C. G. Murphy, has been busy visiting the out-stations, preaching every Sunday afternoon in the country and at some points on week evenings. During the past year 30 persons have united with the home church, 21 on confession. Of these 12 were baptized, three by immersion. During the vacation the Y. P. S. C. E. and the Sunday school kept their work in vigorous operation, and the people generally lent a hand in renovating the interior of the building.

North Dakota.

OBERON.—This church celebrated its 10th anniversary Sept. 27. It was organized with four members by Rev. David Wirt, assisted by council. Rev. H. S. Wannamaker preached the anniversary sermon. Two of the former pastors, Rev. Messrs. William Griffith and J. E. Jones, were present. The pastor, Rev. O. P. Champlin, read a historical sketch. Seventy-two members have joined the church in the 10 years, 42 on confession.

VALLEY CITY.—The church has given a call to Rev. W. H. Gimblett, who has supplied them during the past month. The churches will regret to have Mr. Gimblett leave his work as State evangelist to assume a pastorate, but the financial stringency may compel him to do so.

Colorado.

DENVER.—South Broadway. At the unanimous request of the church the pastor, Rev. J. W. Sylvester, has withdrawn his resignation and will continue his work after a six weeks' vacation, during which he will supply Prospect Street Church, Cambridge, Mass.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

SAN FRANCISCO.—First. Public worship was resumed Sept. 20, after the house had been closed for several months. Rev. G. C. Adams, D.D., of St. Louis, who has been engaged as stated supply, was greeted with large congregations. No reference in prayer or sermon was made to the trials through which the church has been passing. Under Dr. Adams's wise leadership there is good reason to hope that it will recover its former strength and prosperity.

Washington.

VALLEY.—Whitman-Eells Memorial. A new chapel on the lot adjoining the burial place of Marcus Whitman was dedicated Sept. 27. It is a neat structure of wood on a brick foundation, and will cost, with bell and furniture, $1,600. This enterprise, now under the care of Rev. Elvira Cobleigh, is the crystallization of two Sunday schools, heretofore located on either side of the present site, about three miles apart. Superintendents A. J. Bailey and Samuel Greene assisted in the services. On the following Tuesday evening a Whitman memorial service was led by Pres. S. B. L. Penrose.

OTHER CHRISTIAN WORK.

The Evangelistic Association of New England will hold a conference in Everett, Oct. 12-18. Some of the speakers will be: Rev. Messrs. Alexander Blackburn, W. T. Perrin, L. B. Bates, A. H. Plumb and O. E. Mallory.

—Many Presidential Candidates but only ONE

HOLMES & EDWARDS,

and they manufacture

Sterling Silver Inlaid Spoons and Forks guaranteed in family use for 25 years.

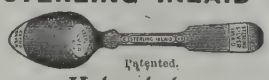
Always known by the

TRADE MARK

E. STERLING INLAID HE.



Patented.

Made only by

Holmes & Edwards,

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

Salesrooms—N. Y. City, 2 Maiden Lane.
" Chicago, 65 Washington St.
St. Louis, 307 N. Fourth St.
San Francisco, 120 Sutter St.

53

Wet Medicine vs. Dry Air.

Liquid remedies intended for use in the air passages should be avoided. The mucous membrane is too delicate for such treatment; besides, air is the only thing nature intended should enter the breathing organs. Did you ever get a drop of liquid in the windpipe? Nature instantly rebelled and threw it out. This proves that no liquids can enter the bronchial track, and that vapors, sprays, douches and atomizers are positively dangerous.

Common Colds vs. Hyomei.

In using BOOTH'S HYOMEI POCKET INHALER you breathe AIR impregnated with the aromatic, healing principle of "HYOMEI," and you break up a common cold over night. This is the famous Australian "Dry-Air" treatment of Asthma, Catarrh, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the nose, throat and lungs. It "CURES BY INHALATION."

Port Ewen, N. Y., Sept. 3, 1896.
I find Hyomei a preventative of colds, to which I am easily subject, and which are very stubborn. I have not had one since using Hyomei, which is an inexpressible relief, for they interfered sadly with my preaching.
(Rev.) B. C. LIPPINCOTT.

Inglewood, Cal., Sept. 16, 1896.
Will you please put Hyomei on sale in Los Angeles City? We cannot keep house without the remedy. A. J. COMPTON, M. D.

44 Main St., Greenfield, Mass.
I cannot say enough in praise of Booth's Hyomei Pocket Inhaler. I never have a cold now and I always had one before I used it. I had lost my voice so that I could not sing at all; but now I sing as well as I ever did.
(Miss) M. C. LANFAI.

Ohio Soldiers and Sailors Home, Erie County, Ohio, Sept. 1, 1896.
Soon after I commenced to use the Inhaler and Hyomei, my voice regained its natural tone; soreness in my throat very soon disappeared, and my hearing was improved to a degree that with gladness I discarded ear drums, and was never so happy as when I could again hear the conversation of my friends without the aid of artificial appliances. E. E. STEWART, Serg't Batallion A.

San Diego, Cal., May 27, 1896.
Your Pocket Inhaler has shown itself a record breaker in heading off and stopping colds this year. (Rev.) C. W. MAGGART.

Hyomei is a purely vegetable antiseptic, and destroys the germs which cause disease in the respiratory organs. The air, charged with Hyomei, is inhaled at the mouth, and, after premeating the minutest air-cells, is exhaled through the nose. It is aromatic, delightful to inhale, and gives immediate relief. It is highly recommended by physcians, clergymen, public speakers, and thousands who have been helped and cured.

Pocket Inhaler Outfit, Complete by Mail, $1.00, to any part of the United States; for foreign countries, add $1.00 postage; outfit consists of pocket inhaler, made of deodorized hard rubber, a bottle of Hyomei, a dropper, and full directions for using. If you are still skeptical, send your address; my pamphlet shall prove that Hyomei cures. Are you open to conviction? Extra bottles of Hyomei inhalant by mail, or at druggists, 50 cents. Hyomei Balm, for all skin diseases, by mail, 25 cents. Your druggist has Hyomei or can get it for you if you insist. Don't accept a substitute.

London Office: 11 Farringdon Ave., E. C.

R. T. BOOTH, 23 East 20th St., New York.

Carpets. Carpets.

JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & CO.

HAVE OPENED THEIR

WHOLESALE ROOMS

To the Retail Trade for the next thirty days, showing a large stock of

WILTONS, BRUSSELS, AXMINSTERS, VELVETS, TAPESTRIES, and INGRAIN CARPETS

At lower prices than ever before. Our wholesale trade has been very light; therefore we are left with a large stock that must be reduced. We will give the retail purchaser the advantage in every way.

JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & CO.,

163 to 169 Washington Street, Near Cornhill, Boston.

SAVE ⅓ YOUR FUEL

By using our (stove pipe) RADIATOR. With its 120 Cross Tubes, ONE stove or furnace does the work of TWO. Drop postal for proofs from prominent men.

TO INTRODUCE OUR RADIATOR, the first order from each neighborhood filled at WHOLESALE price, and secures an agency. Write at once.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR COMPANY,
41 Furnace St., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

How to Disinfect.

We desire to mail you free, a valuable illustrated book prepared at great expense. Simple directions on disinfecting in cases of contagious diseases and in everyday life—sinks, sewers, etc. Send your address.

"Sanitas" Co. Ld., 636 West 55th St., N. Y.

DON'T WALK on the side of your foot;—get rid of the corn. It's easy if you have A-Corn Salve 15c. box. Your druggist or by mail. GIANT CHEMICAL CO., 305 Cherry St., Phila.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

ARMSTRONG, Lyman P., Oxford, Ct., to Cuyler Chapel, Brooklyn, N. Y. Accepts.
BRIGHT, David F., Taylor, Neb., to Trenton. Has begun work.
BROTHERTON, Howard, Bay Mills, Mich., to Worthing, S. D. Accepts.
BRUCE, Chas. R., Plankinton, S. D., to Highmore.
BRYANT, Seelye, Cambridgeport, Mass., to Scituate. Accepts, to begin at once.
BURNS, Wm. C., Stanton, Mich., declines, not accepts, call to Wyandotte.
BURR, Horace M., W. Ferndale, Wn., to Plymouth, Ill. Accepts.
DUNSMORE, H. Chas., Garnett, Kan , declines call to Barrie, Ont.
FAIRFIELD, Edmund B., Grand Rapids, Mich , to First Ch., Mansfield, O., a former field, for a year. Accepts.
FORBUSH, Wm. B., Yarmouth, N. S., accepts call to First Ch , Warren, Mass., to begin Nov. 1.
GIMBLETT, Wm. H., Carrington, N. D., to Valley City.
HALL, F. E., Belvidere, Ill., to Palestine, Tex. Accepts.
HUBBARD, Geo. H., Norton, Mass., to Enfield.
HUGHES, John A., Wickford, R. I., to E. Longmeadow, Mass., for a year. Accepts.
JACKSON, Frank D., St. Petersburg, Fla., to Sutton, Neb.
JENKINS, David T., Dwight, N. D., to Hillsboro and Kelso. Accepts.
JONES, David, Hyde Park Ch. (Welsh), Scranton, Pa., to Eleventh St. Ch. (Welsh), New York city.
KLOCK, Edwin J., Niagara Falls, N. Y., to Norwich. Accepts.
LONG, F. W., Tabor College, to Percival, Io. Accepts.
MACFARLAND, C. S., Yale Divinity School, as regular supply at Bethany, Ct. He began work Oct. 4.
MASON, Philip H., New Ulm, Minn., to Kaukauna, Wis. Accepts.
PRESTON, Elmer E., Topeka, Kan., to Hyannis, Neb. Accepts. He will preach also at Hemingford and Reno.
QUEEN, Chas. N., Guthrie, Okl., to Rootstown, O. Accepts.
SCOFIELD, Cyrus L, E. Northfield, Mass., to return to First Ch., Dallas, Tex.
SNOW, Beecher O., Irvington, Neb., to Fairfield. Accepts.
WILSON, Henry, Chicago, Ill., to Hartwick, Io, Accepts.

Ordinations and Installations.

BROKENSHIRE, John J., i. Mayflower Ch., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 1. Sermon, Prof. W. D. McKenzie, D. D.
BURRILL, Arthur S., o. North Ch., Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 29. Sermon, Pres. Geo. Harris; other parts, Rev. Messrs. F. H. Page, P. D. Cowan, C. P. Mills, A. W. Hitchcock, C. M. Clark, G. H. Reed and G. H. Burrill, brother of the candidate.
GIBSON, Andrew, o. p., Loudon, N. H., Sept. 29. Sermon, Rev. H. P. Dewey; other parts, Rev. Messrs. J. O. Tasker, D. W. Clark, W. S. A. Miller, G. H. Dunlap, F. D. Ayer, D. D.
LAMBERT, Avery E., o. Lebanon, Me., Oct. 1.
POLLOCK, A. F., o. Speedside, Ont., Sept. 15. Parts by Rev. Messrs. A. T. McGregor, Enoch Barker, J. K. Unsworth
ROTHROCK, Edgar S., i. Park Ch., Cleveland, O., Sept. 29. Sermon, Rev. H. M. Ladd, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. H. O. Allen, R. A. George, C. W. Carroll, I. W. Metcalf.
TRUSLOW, Arthur, o. and i. Union Cong'l. Ch., Winthrop, Mass., Oct. 1. Sermon, Rev. R. R. Meredith, D. D.; other parts, Rev. R. A. McFadden and Drs. E. C. Smyth, J. W. Churchill, Alex. McKenzie.
WHEELER, Edgar C , o. Tacoma, Wn., Sept. 22. Sermon, Rev. E. L. Smith; other parts, Rev. Messrs. W. C. Merritt, W. H. Scudder, S. B. L. Penrose.
WILLIAMS, Stephen, o. p. Forman, N. D., Sept. 22. Sermon, Supt. E. H. Stickney; other parts, Rev. Messrs. G. S. Bascom, D. T. Jenkins, Supt. H. C. Simmons.

Resignations.

EMERSON, Jas. C., Alton N. H., to take effect Jan. 1.
GALE, Edmund, Medford, Minn.
GAMMELL, Sereno D., Tallmadge, O., after a seven years' pastorate. He has removed to N. Brookfield, Mass.
GEIGER, John W., Marion, Io., withdraws resignation for the present at request of the church.
HARLOW, Lincoln, Post Mills, Vt , to take effect Nov. 1.
HUBBARD, Geo. H., Norton, Mass., to take effect Nov. 1.
JOHNSON, Henry W., Bethany, Ct.
JONES, David, Hyde Park Ch. (Welsh), Scranton, Pa.
NEWLANDS, Robt. W., Port Byron, Ill.
PERRIN, J. Newton, Jr., Williamstown, Vt., after a five years' pastorate.
SHULL, Gilbert L., Baxter, Io., withdraws his resignation.
SYLVESTER, J. Walter, S. Broadway Ch., Denver, Col., withdraws resignation.
WELLS, Herman J., as assistant pastor Tompkins Ave. Ch., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Churches Organized.

PIONEER, Io., Clear Lake township, 22 Sept , 14 members. To be yoked with Garner.

Miscellaneous.

BAILEY, Gurdon F , recently completed his first year of service in Westbrook, Ct. Special gifts from members of the congregation increased his income about $100
CLAFLIN, Arthur H., returns with renewed vigor to his home in Allegheny, Pa., after a few weeks absence on account of ill health.
GATES, Chas. H., of Bar Mills, Me., is to retire from the ministry on account of ill health. He will return to his homestead at N. Wilbraham, Mass.
HOWELL, James and family of Coulee City, Wn., are bereaved by the loss of a daughter ten years old.
HYSLOP, James, and his wife, were pleasantly received into new relations with Mt. Hope Ch., Detroit, Mich., in the charmingly decorated parlors on a recent evening Neighboring pastors gathered to offer their congratulations and the pastorate was thus auspiciously begun.
KEITH, Adelbert F., formerly pastor at Providence, R. I., and Middlebury, Vt., is recuperating at his orange ranch in S. Riverside, Cal. He purposes to resume preaching as soon as his health will permit.

GOING away for the summer you should be sure to be supplied with a bottle of Pond's Extract; nothing is so refreshing and beneficial, after traveling, as a sponge bath of cold water and Pond's Extract.

THIS is the busy time in the crockery shops. Wedding presents, matching up the china closets and the fashion for better china since the departure from white to decorated ware have doubled the sales in this branch the past few years. Jones, McDuffee & Stratton's establishment presents a busy scene at this season of the year.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS. CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

WHAT IS BRIGHTER, more attractive, than the homestead painted white, with green blinds? It may not suit the critic, but we like it and it will please the owner. Painted with and Pure Linseed Oil, it will look fresh and clean longer than anything else; if properly applied, it will not scale, chip, or chalk off, but forms a perfect base for subsequent repainting; is therefore economical.

Pure White Lead

To be sure of getting Pure White Lead, examine the brand (see list of genuine brands). Any shade of color desired can be easily obtained by using NATIONAL LEAD CO.'s brands of Pure White Lead and Tinting Colors.

Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

NATIONAL LEAD CO.,
1 Broadway, New York.

NEW ENGLAND COOKING is Famous.
THE MAGEE RANGES are in General Use throughout New England.
The American kitchen is to the home what the foundation is to the house, and needs a Cooking Apparatus which Meets all the Requirements for the Most Exacting Work.
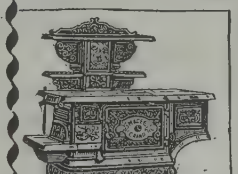
Such a type is the
MAGEE GRAND RANGE.
It Never Fails, it Saves Time and Economizes Fuel, being fitted with Special Features, found only in the MAGEE RANGES:
☞ Full Sheet Flue, Dock-Ash Grate, Oven Heat Indicator, Etc.



Thousands of families will use no other. Endorsed by Leading American Authorities on Cooking, and the Great Expositions, as the Highest Achievement in Cooking Apparatus.
MAGEE FURNACE CO., 32-38 UNION ST., BOSTON.
AGENCIES: 86 LAKE ST., CHICAGO. 27 NEW MONTGOMERY ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

Take a Combination Case of the LARKIN SOAPS
and a "Chautauqua" Antique Oak
Reclining Easy Chair or Desk
ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. From factory to family.

CASE CONTAINS . . .
100 Bars Sweet Home Soap. 10 Bars White Woolen Soap.
12 Packages Boraxine. 18 Cakes Finest Toilet Soaps.
Perfumes, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap.
If changes in contents desired, write.

The Soaps at retail would cost $10.00
Either Premium is worth . $10.00
Both if at retail . . . $20.00
You get the Premium gratis. Both $10.
AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00; IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.
Our offer explained more fully in The Congregationalist, Sept. 24th.

NOTE.—The combination offer of the Larkin Soap Manufacturing Co., although unusually generous, is genuine. From personal inspection of factory and experience with their soaps and premiums we know that they are all that is claimed for them and can heartily recommend them.—The Christian Work, New York.

"Cleanliness is nae Pride, Dirt's nae Honesty. Common Sense Dictates the Use of . . . . . SAPOLIO

We hear a great deal about purifying the blood. The way to purify it is to enrich it. Blood is not a simple fluid like water. It is made up of minute bodies and when these are deficient, the blood lacks the life-giving principle. Scott's Emulsion is not a mere blood purifier. It actually increases the number of the red corpuscles in the blood and changes unhealthy action into health.

If you want to learn more of it we have a book, which tells the story in simple words.

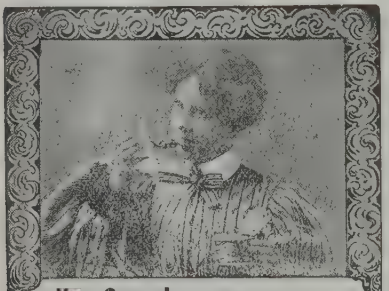
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.

Golden Yellow. Larger and Sweeter than the Chinese. Finest Flower for Winter. Frost Proof and Thrives in any Window.

Like the Chinese it blooms very quickly after planting, either in, soil, sand or pebbles and water. May be had in bloom by the Holidays, each bulb producing several spikes, the exquisite beauty and fragrance of which will surpass everything. To introduce it we will send (together with 64-page Catalogue and sample copy of "Mayflower" with two lovely colored plates,) by Mail, postpaid, 2 Fine, Large Bulbs for 10 cents, or 6 for 25c.

OUR CATALOGUE, ELEGANTLY ILLUSTRATED, of all kinds of Plants and Bulbs, for Fall Planting and Winter Blooming, also new Fruits, Shrubs, etc., is now ready, and will be mailed FREE to all who apply. Choicest Hyacinths, Tulips, Narcissus, and other Bulbs, at greatly reduced prices. Write for it at once Address

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park N. Y.



Van Camp's Boston Baked Pork and Beans

Prepared with tomato sauce. Ever ready, palatable hot or cold.

Choicest beans, juicy meat. Three sizes.

Send 6c for sample can.

VAN CAMP PACKING CO., Indianapolis, Ind.

Send for booklet; postal card will do.

The NEW Form of Admission

The committee appointed by the National Council to prepare a new Form of Admission have reported, and their Form of Admission is now printed in convenient form as an 8 pp. leaflet, No. 7 of the Congregationalist Leaflet series.

Sent, postpaid, for 3 cts.; 10 copies, 25 cts.; 100 copies, $2.00.

BOSTON CITY MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

It is desired to ascertain the residence of the following persons, if living, who were formerly in the service of the City Missionary Society, Boston: Rev. J. Osborne, Rev. John Gamble, Samuel Gale, Patrick O'Brien, Isaac Totman, Jr., John G. Merrill, Charles H. Whitney, Miss Charlotte H. Fenno, Miss Anna A. Rogers, Miss Mary S. Burgess, Miss Abigail Craig, Mrs. Eliza S. Clindinin, Mrs. Sarah S. Bailey, Mrs. Elizabeth Wilde, Miss Annie G. Hervey, Miss Nora E. Bass, Mrs. Louisa M. Gardner. Address D. W. Waldron, 7-A Beacon Street, Boston.

Marriages.

The charge for marriage notices is twenty-five cents.

PATTEN—RYDER—In Everett, Oct. 1, by Rev. C. E. Jefferson of Chelsea, Rev. Arthur B. Patten, pastor of the First Church, Everett, and Kate H. Ryder of Chelsea.

Deaths.

The charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each additional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The money should be sent with the notice.

LOWELL—In Spokane, Wn., Sept. 18, Mrs. Caroline Content Lowell, mother of Rev. E. J. Singer, aged 74 yrs., 2 mos., 5 dys. The daughter of Elnathan and Luria B. Bassett, she was born at Williamstown, N. Y. She crossed the plains in 1864 and since that time has lived in Montana and Washington.

MARVIN—At Loch Sheldrake, N. Y., Oct. 2, Charles D. Marvin of Brooklyn, N. Y., some time deacon of the Tompkins Avenue Church, Brooklyn.

ANNA H. L. SCRIBNER.

Mrs. Anna H. Langford Scribner, wife of the late Daniel Scribner, was born in Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 17, 1810; died in Raymond, N. H., July 17, 1896. She was the daughter of Antony and Nancy Langford of Candia, N. H.

Mrs. Scribner was converted and united with the Congregational church in Candia when only sixteen years of age. Her whole life was one of entire self-forgetfulness. Like her dear Master, she "came not to be ministered unto but to minister." Beautiful indeed was the selflessness of this life. Of rare culture and intelligence, her society was sought as a spiritual and intellectual companion. Her great love for the Bible had for years made her familiar with its words, and the sweet spirit of its inner breath filled her whole life.

She was the mother of seven children, six of whom are now living—Mrs. Dr. J. F. Brown of Manchester, N. H., Mrs. D. L. Guernsey of Concord, N. H., Misses Martha and Julia Scribner of Raymond and two sons, Mark and Charles Scribner of Raymond.

The final words of comfort were given by her pastor, Rev. A. H. Thompson.

GRACE LIBBEY.

"Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Grace Libbey was born in Brooklyn, Jan. 26, 1871, and died at Eliot, Me., Sept. 24, 1896. She was the granddaughter of Rev. Otis Holmes, a highly respected New England clergyman for many years. In very early life she united with the Central Congregational Church of Brooklyn, and, on changing her residence, became a member of the church in Eliot, with which she remained connected until her death. She was an earnest teacher in the Sunday school, three of her class having confessed Christ the past year. As a director of the Eliot Church Union she was eminently useful, seeking to carry out the design for which, aside from its musical character, it was formed, viz., to bring around the young people of the town such influences as should make them better men and women. She was the librarian of the Eliot Library Association, and no one could be more efficient and faithful in the discharge of her duties. Her life in the Christian Endeavor work was very active. Not only as secretary and treasurer, but as a consecrated follower of Christ she did whatever her hands found to do. Her voice will be greatly missed in the social religious meetings both in song and in prayer, as well as her earnest pleadings in Christian exhortation. Her testimonies were always the "word in season."

Nothing could better indicate her character and worth, as well as her influence, than the consecration service on the evening of the day after her burial. There seemed to be the very presence of God, and never was there before such deep and heartfelt consecration and purpose to take up the work which she had laid down. The very hymns, In Heavenly Pastures, Take Time to Be Holy, Only Remembered by What We Have Done, were a fitting memorial of her beautiful life. The last hour of her fading life the Twenty-Third Psalm was her comfort and stay. Twice she repeated the words, "Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me," and then looking up in serene and blessed faith said, "I know what that means." And then the flickering light went out, to be rekindled to shine forevermore in the presence of God.

A GOOD WATER SUPPLY

For GENERAL FARM USE, COUNTRY RESIDENCES, IRRIGATION, Etc.

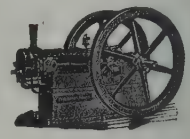
IS INSURED BY A PROPERLY ERECTED

ECLIPSE WINDMILL —OR— GASOLENE ENGINE.

Eclipse Wooden AND Fairbanks Steel Windmills & Towers.

TANKS.

Send for Catalogues.



FAIRBANKS-MORSE GASOLENE ENGINES.

2 TO 75 H. P.

For Pumping or Power. Send for Catalogues.

We have every facility for putting in complete WATER SUPPLY AND POWER OUTFITS, and will submit estimates upon application.

CHARLES J. JAGER COMPANY,

174 HIGH ST., BOSTON, MASS.

For The Asking

We will send our

New Art Catalog

Containing over 250 illustrations. It will be of great assistance in selecting your Abram French Co. 223 Devonshire St., Cor. Franklin, BOSTON.

CHINA POTTERY and GLASS

Our White China Book for Decorators, 341 different articles, sent upon application.

BRECK'S BULBS AND PLANTS

Beautify Winter Homes AND Spring Gardens

64 page Illustrated Catalogue with Cultural Directions. MAILED FREE.

JOSEPH BRECK & SONS EVERYTHING IN WOODEN WARE. EVERYTHING FOR FARM, GARDEN AND LAWN. LOWEST PRICES WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

47 to 54 North Market St. BOSTON, MASS.

PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

GOUT, RHEUMATISM, STONE, ETC.

DR. WM. B. TOWLES, Professor of Anatomy and Materia Medica, University of Va.: "I feel no hesitancy whatever in saying that in Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, Stone in the Bladder, and in all Diseases of Uric Acid Diathesis, I know of no remedy at all comparable to BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Spring No. 2."

Sold by Druggists. Pamphlet free.

Proprietor, Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va.

PRICE REDUCED FROM $25.00 to $10.00.

The Electropoise TRADE MARK

CURE WITHOUT MEDICINE.

THIS MOST WONDERFUL TREATMENT now within the reach of all.

The above price will continue till further notice. $10.00 by Express, $10.25 by Registered Mail, with Book of Directions complete. Do not miss this opportunity.

L. A. BOSWORTH, 36 Bromfield St., Room 18, Boston, Mass., General Agent for New England States.

UNTOLD TORTURES.

Agony Greater Than Any Horrors Portrayed by Dante.

Impure Blood and Disordered Nerves Lead to Organic Disease. Dr. Greene's Nervura, the Star of Hope, that Means Life, Health and Happiness.

How often we hear the expression, "My life is miserable," used among our friends and acquaintances as we pass through life! And why is life miserable? Because the speaker is troubled with dyspepsia, liver or kidney complaint, constipation, neuralgia, rheumatism, nerve weakness, or other equally distressing and harassing afflictions. What does the trouble arise from? In nine cases out of ten from weak nerves and impure blood The organs are all right, the machinery in perfect order, but the motive force is lacking in quality and quantity. The blood requires augmentation and vitalization. The nerves demand more strength and vigor. By what means can this be effected? By the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great blood renovator and nerve tonic, the incomparable health producer which never fails. Easy to take, always effective, bringing back appetite, strength and vitality. Get it today. Try it and at once begin to get well. Remember that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the prescription and discovery of the well-known Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and hence of necessity is perfectly adapted to cure just these complaints. An added value is the fact that Dr. Greene can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

ELY'S CREAM BALM is a positive cure. Apply into the nostrils. It is quickly absorbed. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; samples 10c. by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York City

Does Your Hair Fall Out?

Is it getting thin—lessening in volume? If so, I can help you. If totally bald do not write. Select family patronage for ten years. Send self-addressed stamped envelope to Miss RACHEL T. WYATT, Centerville, Mass.

Continued from page 529.

tion of the nation twenty-six years ago when the Board's mission was started in Japan and the present situation. A brief historical sketch was followed by a frank discussion of the theological attitude of the Japanese Christians, showing the reasons for their questionings and the prospects for their maintaining a stable faith. Dr. Barton then set forth the position of the Doshisha, which has been fully explained to our readers. After stating the number and disposition of the missionary force and its relations with the Japanese churches, and paying a deserved tribute to the missionaries, Dr. Barton spoke with emphasis and effectively of the outlook for continued work in Japan:

Within twenty-five years, mostly within eighteen years, not less than 42,000 Japanese have united with over 400 evangelical churches. Hospitals and asylums, and many other charitable institutions, springing only from the impulse of Christianity and built upon Christian principle, have appeared all over the land. A large, independent Christian literature, including more than forty periodicals, all in the vernacular, is in constant circulation. The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Young Men's Christian Association, Christian schools for boys and girls and many other similar organizations are working out the principles of Christianity as applied to Japan. The Christian Sabbath is a recognized and legalized day of rest in the government and in all schools. The stamp of Christianity is upon many of the civil laws of the empire and Christian ethics are widely studied even in some of the government schools. Over one million of at least one of the Testaments were circulated in Japan previous to last year, and during last year over 257,000 copies of the Bible, in whole or in part, were sold to Japanese. Students from that empire are in the higher institutions of our country, many of them studying Christianity most carefully in order to be able to enlighten their people upon the faith of the West and its practical bearing upon life.

In all the history of the missions of this Board there is no record of more marvelous growth or a more brilliant story of Christian conquest. Two decades in Japan have produced results not visible in some other fields after half a century of consecrated toil. . . .

No other mission of this Board has in so brief a period produced men of more marked spiritual power and Christian influence, not only among their own people but among outside Christian nations. There are names on the rolls of church membership in Japan which stand for self-forgetful, consecrated and manly devotion to the cause they love.

There is no mission field of this Board where the promise for large results in the near future is brighter, or where the call for aggressive, persistent work is more audible than it is in this mission at this time. The great student classes are largely unbelievers, but are seeking for a stable faith in which they may rest. Detached from the old they have not yet found the new and the true. They are ready to examine the claims of Christianity.

The 128th year opens auspiciously for Dartmouth, the entering class—the largest yet—numbering 160, an increase of twenty-eight over last year. Other classes have received additions, making the total enrollment in all departments nearly 600. This is an unmistakable witness to the increasing hold the college is gaining on the public esteem under President Tucker's administration, and marks the new era of prosperity upon which it is entering. Prof. G. D. Lord, after an absence of a year in Athens, returns to the chair of Greek, and E. F. Langley of the University of Toronto succeeds assistant Prof. Louis Dow in French. Butterfield Hall, now ready for occupancy, for the present will accommodate the departments of geology, mineralogy, zoölogy, botany, social science, political science and philosophy, while the departments of history and English literature will be transferred to Culver Hall. The Crosby House, built in the colonial style for a dormitory, has been completed and now accommodates forty students.

After a Day's Hard Work Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

It makes a delicious drink, and relieves fatigue and depression. A grateful tonic.

YOUNG mothers should early learn the necessity of keeping on hand a supply of Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk for nursing babies as well as for general cooking. It has stood the test for 30 years, and its value is recognized.

WELL BEGUN IS HALF DONE.—All lung troubles are simple if taken at the start. At the first symptoms of any soreness or irritation in the throat, or on the lungs, take Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, and it will nip the complaint in the bud. At all druggists.

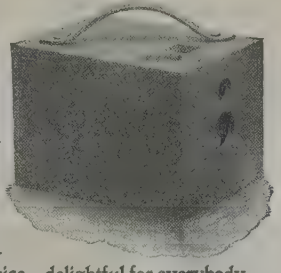
FIFTY YEARS HENCE.—In view of the constant changes and improvements which have been made in the last five years in easy-chairs, one falls to wondering what an easy-chair of 50 years hence will be. It seems, certainly, as if we had reached the very topmost point of comfort. It is impossible to conceive of greater luxury than is contained in some of the easy-chairs of this season, which are on exhibition at the Paine warerooms on Canal Street. If our readers will turn to another column of this paper, and see the winged leather library chair which this house offers, they will agree with us in this assertion.

FADS IN MEDICINE.—There are fads in medicine as in everything else and a "new thing" frequently sells for a short time simply because it is new. But in medicine, as in nothing else, the people demand and will be satisfied only with positive, absolute merit. The fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has stood its ground against all competition, and its sales have never wavered but have remained steadily at the top, demonstrates, beyond any doubt, the intrinsic virtues of this medicine. The new things have come and gone but Hood's Sarsaparilla rests upon the solid foundation of absolute merit and its power to cure, and its sales continue to be the largest in the world.

A MILLION gold dollars would not bring happiness to the person suffering with dyspepsia, but Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured many thousands of cases of this disease. It tones the stomach, regulates the bowels and puts all the machinery of the system in good working order It creates a good appetite and gives health, strength and happiness.

HOOD'S PILLS act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Cure all liver ills. 25 cents.

Photography Simplified.



Picture taking with the Improved Bullet camera is the refinement of photographic luxury. It makes photography easy for the novice—delightful for everybody.

LOADS IN DAYLIGHT with our light-proof film cartridges, or can be used with glass plates. Splendid achromatic lens, improved rotary shutter, set of three stops. Handsome finish.

Price, Improved No. 2 Bullet, for pictures 3½ x 3½ inches, - - - - - $10.00
Light-proof Film Cartridge, 12 exposures, 3½ x 3½ - .60

EASTMAN KODAK CO.

Booklet Free. Rochester, N. Y.

BROWN'S French DRESSING

For Ladies' and Children's Boots and Shoes

Ask your dealer for Brown's French Dressing and accept no other.

"ALL ARE DELIGHTED."

LEWINSVILLE, VA.,
Sept. 18, 1896.

I received my spoons and tea set, and the latter is even nicer than I expected, and all are pleased with the spoons. I am getting up another club of six. Thanking you for your promptness, I am,

Very respectfully,
MRS. W. B. BESLEY.

Is it not Impressive when Thousands upon Thousands of Ladies, writing from Cities, Towns, Villages, Hamlets and Rural Districts, take the trouble to acknowledge the receipt of their spoons in one unanimous chorus—"WE ARE ALL DELIGHTED"! Does it not give Tremendous Emphasis to our oft-repeated assertion that this set of Six Genuine World's Fair Souvenir Teaspoons, full size for daily use, is an INCOMPARABLE BARGAIN—a matchless opportunity—the most startling offer ever made by a reliable firm? And is it not convincing evidence of their genuine value that year after year since the great World's Fair closed its gates forever the demand for these marvelous spoons has increased as the years recede? "WE ARE ALL DELIGHTED" is something for every woman to remember. For, whether she has a birthday token to give, or a wedding gift in view, or is bothered about a suitable Christmas present, or needs a beautiful set of spoons for the table, or wishes to leave coming generations a memorial of the great World's Fair she cannot do better than join the great chorus of delighted ones.

ONLY 99¢

· FOR ALL SIX ·

FORMERLY SOLD FOR 9.00

THE ABOVE CUT SHOWS EXACT SIZE AND PATTERN OF SPOONS.

These are the Original World's Fair Souvenir Teaspoons. The panic of 1893 and the failure of a syndicate of private dealers to dispose of them on the Fair Grounds threw them back on our hands and slowly but surely we are awakening the public to the fact that for artistic merit, matchless elegance and serviceable durability a set of six of these Handsome and Famous World's Fair Souvenir full size Teaspoons at 99 cents is the GRANDEST BARGAIN OF THE TIMES.

Every visitor to the Fair knows that the price of these spoons on the Fair grounds was $1.50 apiece, or $9.00 for a set of six, or $18.00 for the entire collection of twelve different spoons, and here we sell you a set of six for only 99 cents.

Just Think of It!

The spoons are divided into two different sets as follows: Set No. 4 comprises these six buildings—Manufacturers, Horticultural, Woman's, Fisheries, Machinery Hall, Transportation. Set No. 5 comprises these six—Administration, Art, Agriculture, Electrical, Mining, Government.

You can have either set you like, but under no circumstances will less than a set of six be sold, nor will they be divided in any other manner than above. Bear in mind that these are not cheap, washed-over spoons, but genuine triple plate silver on white metal, stamped LEONARD MFG. CO., A1—a guarantee of reliability. They are FULL SIZE for table use, and the entire bowl outside and inside is gold-plated, showing a beautifully engraved and embossed building of the Fair. The set of six is put up in a handsomely lined box and is sent by mail PREPAID on receipt of 99 cents.

We Will Refund Your Money.

Remember, if this wonderful bargain does not come up to your expectations, or if you believe they have been misrepresented in any manner, we will refund your money on demand.

You will pay $1 50 for six ordinary plain, plated spoons—here you get a beautiful pattern, with gold plated bowls, at only 99 cents for six. A hundred dollars invested in something else for a birthday, wedding or Christmas gift wouldn't give half the genuine delight and satisfaction. Our references are the First National Bank, Chicago, any Express Company or Bradstreet's reports. Send money by express or postoffice money order or registered letter. We do not accept personal checks. State whether you prefer set No. 4 or set No. 5. Be sure to send for our new 1896 97 catalogue of incomparable silverware bargains, mailed free. Address, LEONARD Mfg. Co., Dept. H. W., 152-153 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Volume LXXXI Number 42

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 15 October 1896

A Battle Litany.

THE eyes of the world are weary,
And they look, Lord Christ, to thee;
Longing sore to behold thy beauty,
And be healed of the sights they see;
O, the hands that of work hang empty,
The lips that cry out for bread,
The feet that wander, the knees that fail,
And the hearts where all hope lies dead—
Have mercy on sorrow, O Lord!

The lips of the world are weary,
They are praying, Lord Christ, to thee;
Dumbly they plead, though despairing,
From their silence, O Lord, set them free;
For the cry of an evil world rises
Through the pauses of heaven's new song,
And, from under the altar, the souls of our saints
Cry ceaselessly, "Lord, how long?"—
Have mercy on sinning, O Lord!

Come down, for the world is waiting;
Come down, for the strife is long;
Turn the brother's heart to his brother—
Hate perishes, love is strong.
And the pain of the world is only
That it aches, Lord Christ, for thee;
Its bondage the drooping of hands outstretched
To thy scepter of liberty—
Have mercy on loving, O Lord!

Come down? Thou art ever with us!
Come down? Thou art always nigh!
The noise of the battle is stilled to calm
In the peace of thy passing by.
On thy heart falls every sword-stroke,
Thou diest with each victim that bleeds—
O, the way is long to redeem a world,
But courage! the Lord Christ leads—
Have mercy on conquering, Lord!

Written for The Congregationalist, by KATHARINE PEARSON WOODS.

Railroads and Excursions.

"Where Times are Prosperous"

IN THE

Rocky Mountains

TAKE THE . . .

ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

To Denver, Colorado Springs, or Pueblo.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO COLORADO SPRINGS, MANITOU AND PIKES PEAK

4 HOURS QUICKER TIME TO CRIPPLE CREEK which should be included in your trip, and an investigation of the resources of this place may well repay your visit.

Tourist Dictionary ...Sent Free... Apply for it.

Address JOHN SEBASTIAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent, CHICAGO.

JAPAN-AMERICA LINE.

New Route to the Orient.

Great Northern Railway

Duluth—St. Paul—Minneapolis

TO

Seattle, Washington.

Nipon Yusen Kaisha

TO

HAWAII—JAPAN—CHINA

Australia and India.

Native agents of the Company at foreign ports speak English and are in a position to render valuable service to tourists, students, temporary residents, and shippers.

Through rates and bills of lading to all Oriental ports. Special rates for Missionaries. For freight, express-parcel, and passage rates, sailing dates, and other information apply to railway or steamship agent, or address

F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn.

GAZE'S UNIVERSAL TOURS.

52D YEAR.

NILE TOURS — Illustrated program of our NILE TOURS, Season 1896-97, sent on application. Sole agts. for the Thewfikieh NileNav.Co.

ORIENT, EGYPT AND PALESTINE — OUR ORIENTAL TOURS, visiting GIBRALTAR, ITALY, EGYPT, HOLY LAND, etc., leaves New York JANUARY 16, FEBRUARY 13 and APRIL 3.

SO. FRANCE AND ITALY — OUR regular South France and Italy parties, visiting Southern EUROPE and ENGLAND (a delightful two months' tour), leave New York monthly. All above tours under personal escort, and every expense included. Illustrated programs free. Mention Tour wanted.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED

INDEPENDENT TICKETS EVERYWHERE — As Official Passenger Agents for all Transportation Lines, we furnish tickets at lowest rates everywhere—Europe, the Orient, and Round the World; BERMUDA, NASSAU, MEXICO, WEST INDIES, etc.

WRITE FOR TOURIST GAZETTE AND SAVE MONEY.

Post Free Upon Application.

H. GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,

113 Broadway, New York, or

W. H. EAVES, New England Agent,

201 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

TIMELY Congregationalist Leaflets

1. Planning.
3. Young Men in Politics.
4. Somebody is Wasting.
5. Renewal of Good Citizenship.

3 cts. each; 100 copies, $2.00.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST, Boston, Mass.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Paragraphs 545
- The Toledo Meeting 546
- New Educational Experiments 546
- Daily Use of the Bible 547
- Current History 547
- In Brief 548

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
- The Interior 549

CONTRIBUTIONS:
- A Battle Litany—cover poem. Katharine Pearson Woods 541
- The Currency of the United States. John Haynes, Ph. D. 550
- Charity Chance. Chap. XIV. Walter Raymond 551
- The American Board at Toledo 567

THE HOME:
- Nature's Worship—a poem. Frederic Perry Noble 555
- Paragraphs 555
- At the Mt. Holyoke Fire 555
- How Much Do Fathers Owe to Their Sons? Ellen Conway 555
- Sympathy for the Rich Man. S. E. B. 556
- Taking Things for Granted. Kate Upson Clark 556
- Father Marquette—a selected poem 556
- A Good Word for the Farmer—a selection 556
- The Three Graves—a selected poem 557
- Sleeping and Eating 557
- Closet and Altar 557
- Mothers in Council 558
- Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 559
- Corner Scrap-Book 559

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for Oct. 25 560

Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for Oct. 25-31 561

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 561

LITERATURE 562

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
- The Association of Washington 553
- The North Carolina State Meeting 553
- Cleveland's Gift to Missions 571
- Weekly Register 578

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Two Sunday School Conventions 553
- Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 554
- Rev. Crosby H. Wheeler, D. D. 554
- Armenian Preachers in Conference 554
- Ian Maclaren on the Art of Preaching 564
- Chips from the Board 566
- Notices 571
- Business Outlook 575
- Biographical 575
- Marriages 575
- The New A. B. C. F. M. Corporate Members 577
- Noteworthy Forthcoming Meetings 577
- Resolutions Passed at Toledo 579

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday,
At 1 Somerset Street, corner of Beacon Street.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.

On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 13 inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.

READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

The Latest CORD EDGE BIAS VELVETEEN S·H·& M· REGISTERED TRADE MARK SKIRT BINDING.

It combines with the well-known durability of all S. H. & M. bindings an elegance and finish heretofore unknown. Ask for the Ever Ready, Vassar or Featherbone Edge.

If your dealer WILL NOT supply you we will.

Samples showing labels and materials mailed free

"Home Dressmaking Made Easy" a new 72 page book by Miss Emma M. Hooper, of the Ladies' Home Journal, tells in plain words how to make dresses at home without previous training; mailed for 25c.

S. H. & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, N. Y. City.

Exclusive Millinery

Bright ideas crown the season's latest Millinery here.

We show a host of imported Hats and Bonnets, but the original creations by our own experts are equally admired—and the prices are about one-half.

If you wish a Hat exclusive in design, let our milliners make it for you. They are prepared to satisfy the most exacting taste.

Prices as modest as the styles are beautiful.

Trimmed Millinery—Second Floor.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,

The Leading Millinery House,

90 to 98 Tremont St., Boston.

WORLD'S FOOD FAIR,

MECHANICS' BUILDING, BOSTON,

10 A. M. to 10 P. M.

October 19 to October 24,

THE FAMOUS

New York Seventh Regiment Band will give two concerts daily.

Engaged at enormous expense. Every music lover should hear this World famous Band.

Admission 25 Cents.

EUROPE AND THE ORIENT.

TWELFTH SEASON.

SELECT PARTY will leave New York January 5, 1897, by express steamer "Columbia," 106 days' tour through ITALY, GREECE, SYRIA (DAMASCUS), PALESTINE, EGYPT, the NILE (to first cataract), the Riviera (Nice), SWITZERLAND, FRANCE and ENGLAND. Strictly first-class; exceptional advantages. For particulars of winter and summer tours address MRS. M. A. CROSLEY, 502 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, or Norwich, Ct.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc., published under this heading at ten cents a line.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

JAMES W. ELWELL, President.
REV. W. C. STITT Secretary.
W. C. STURGES, Treasurer.

FOR HONEST MONEY.

MR. CAPEN'S ARTICLE,

The National Crisis OF 1896.

This article, which was published in The Congregationalist of Sept. 24 and which has been so widely commended, we shall be glad to furnish and in such quantity as may be desired, to pastors and others who will agree to distribute it to voters.

FREE OF CHARGE

Address

THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

The Congregationalist
. . SERVICES . .

THIRTY-THREE SERVICES READY.

100 Copies, 60 Cents, postpaid.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST,
1 Somerset Street, Boston.

Educational.

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY.
Oldest and best known in U. S.
Established, 1855.
3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES.
4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-page Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & CO.

MASSACHUSETTS, BRADFORD.
CARLETON SCHOOL for Young Men and Boys. College preparatory and general course of study. Individual teaching. Gymnasium bowling alley, etc. Circulars.
I. N. CARLETON, Ph. D.

NEW LONDON, N. H.
COLBY ACADEMY.
$200 to $250 a Year. Coeducational. 44th Year. Send for Catalogue. Rev. GEO. W. GILE, President.

MASSACHUSETTS, SOUTH BYFIELD.
DUMMER ACADEMY (Home School).
Founded 1763. Thorough training for College and Technical Schools. PERLEY L. HORNE, A. M.

MASSACHUSETTS, BOSTON.
College of Physicians and Surgeons.
Men and women. Rules of Assoc. Am. Med. Colleges 17th year opens Sept 16. Part tuition for clinical service. 20,000 med. calls in '95. Near Boston City Hospital. AUGUSTUS P. CLARK, A.M., M.D., Dean. (Send for Catalogue.) 517 Shawmut Ave., Boston, Mass.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.
MRS. LESLIE MORGAN'S
Boarding and Day School for Girls, 15 West 86th Street, New York City. Re-opens Oct. 7th; Kindergarten, Oct. 15th. Thorough English from Kindergarten through College Preparatory. Miss Catherine Aiken's Method of Concentrated Attention in Mind Training a special feature; also conversational French and German. Home and Chaperonage for special students.

$50.00 REWARD

To Every One a Free Pattern of this Handsome Waist

500,000 new subscribers must be secured for the most practical, up-to-date Fashion Magazine in the world. To get them, we make you a business proposition by paying you for a little pleasant work.

MODES (by May Manton)

SPELLING CONTEST

Take the word Subscribers, using each letter as many times as you wish, but not more times than it appears in the word, viz., Subscribers, Scrub, Buss, Rib, Rubber, Rub, etc. Names of persons, places, or foreign words not admitted. We know you can easily make 15 words. We will pay $15 to the person able to spell the largest list of words correctly from the word "Subscribers;" $10 for the second largest; $5 for the third; $2 each for the next five; and $1 each for the next ten. The above rewards are given free and without consideration for the purpose of attracting attention to MODES, which has a present circulation of fifty thousand copies each issue, and is the most extensively advertised and popular Fashion magazine in the world, comprising 36 pages, each page filled with handsome illustrations of the latest fashions, being exclusively devoted to what women and children wear. Price, $1.00 a year. In entering this Spelling Contest, you must send with your list of words 25 cents in stamps or silver for a Three Months' Trial Subscription. Every person sending 25 cents and a list of 15 words or more, will receive an extra reward of a premium pattern of this elegant Parisian Ladies' Waist, No. 6862, in any size, 30 to 40 inches bust measure, the retail price of which is 25 cents. Send your list at once, and not later than December 1, so that names of successful spellers may be published in the following issue. REFERENCE: ANY PUBLISHER OR MERCANTILE AGENCY.

MODES FASHION MAGAZINE, Dept. 102, No. 130 White Street, New York.

(Notice this today. This ad. will not appear again).

$250 IN GOLD | GIVEN AWAY

Who can form the greatest number of words from the letters in EDITORS? You are smart enough to make fifteen or more words, we feel sure, and if you do you will receive a good reward. Do not use any letter more times than it appears in the word. No proper nouns. No foreign words. Use any dictionary that is standard. Use plurals. Here is an example of the way to work it out: Editors, edit, sot, dot, dots, to, etc. These words count. The publisher of WOMAN'S WORLD AND JENNESS MILLER MONTHLY will pay $50 00 in gold to the person able to make the largest list of words from the letters in the word EDITORS; $25.00 for the second largest; $15.00 for the third; $10.00 for the fourth; $5.00 for the twenty next largest, and $2.00 each for the twenty-five next largest lists. The above rewards are given free and without consideration for the purpose of attracting attention to our handsome ladies' magazine, twenty-four pages, ninety-six long columns, finely illustrated, and all original matter, long and short stories by the best authors; price $1.00 per year. It is necessary for you, to enter the contest, to send 12 two-cent stamps for a three-months' trial subscription with your list of words, and every person sending the 24 cents and a list of fifteen words or more is guaranteed an extra present by return mail (in addition to the magazine), of a large 192-page book, "The Master of the Mine," by Robert Buchanan, a remarkably fascinating love story. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case, or your money refunded. Lists should be sent at once, and not later than November 20, so that the names of successful contestants may be in the December issue, published in November. Our publication has been established nine years. We refer you to any mercantile agency for our standing. Write now. Address J. H. PLUMMER, Publisher, 905 Temple Court Building, B, New York City.

CHURCH REMODELING.
THOMAS W. SILLOWAY, Church Architect,
10 Park Square, Boston.

Mr. Silloway's long practice in building or remodeling over 400 church edifices enables him to save and utilize all the valuable parts, and for a comparatively small outlay produce a building preferable to a new one of much greater cost. He proposes to continue the work of remodeling as a specialty, and tenders his services to committees who would practice economy, and where the means are limited.

THE CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO. CINCINNATI, OHIO. SOLE MAKERS OF THE BLYMYER BELLS
FOR CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM &C
Catalogue with 2500 testimonials. Prices and terms FREE.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS in the World.
PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN).
Send for Price and Catalogue.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

The Council MANUAL for a Congregational Church.

Prepared by the Committee of seven appointed by the National Council of Congregational Churches for that purpose.

The Manual is printed in two parts, separable if desired. Part I. is the Church Manual, which contains:—1. A code of By-Laws; 2. Statements of doctrine as set forth in the Burial Hill Declaration of faith, adopted in 1865, and the one prepared by the National Commission of 1883; 3. A form for the reception of members.

Part II. contains information and suggestion essential to those not familiar with Congregational history, principles, and usages, and of value to all. It contains:—1. A brief sketch of Congregational history; 2 The principles and working of our polity; 3. The method of organizing a Congregational church; 4. A few forms of letters missive; 5. Forms relating to the dismission of church members.

Price 10 cents; twenty-five copies, 7 cts. each; 100 copies, 5 cts. each. Postage additional. In leatherette covers, 20 cts.

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,
Boston and Chicago.

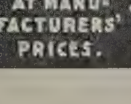
Since two-thirds of the churches of America have investigated our claims and are using

Church Cushions

made by us, we believe the remaining one-third would find it to their advantage to write for our free books, "Testimonial Wonders," and "Church Cushions."

OSTERMOOR & CO.,
116 Elizabeth St., New York.

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes, of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.



THE GREAT CHURCH LIGHT

FRINK'S PATENT REFLECTORS for electric, gas or oil, give the most powerful, the softest, cheapest and best light known for Churches, Halls and Public Buildings. Send size of room. Book of light and estimate free. I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl St., New York.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST., BOSTON.

Barrie and Stockton

Sentimental Tommy . . .

THE STORY OF HIS BOYHOOD

With 11 full-page illustrations by William Hatherell

12mo, $1.50

"Sentimental Tommy" has been undoubtedly the success of the year during its serial publication. It has been the one serial talked of, and, as more than one critic has said, to be "eagerly waited for." Mr. Barrie has made Tommy one of the most delightful characters in fiction, and has written a book which, not to speak of its genius, is one of the most entertaining of the time. Mr. Hatherell's illustrations are a rare instance of perfect sympathy between artist and author.

Mrs. Cliff's Yacht . . .

With 8 full-page illustrations by A. Forestier

12mo, $1.50

The many readers of Mr. Stockton's popular story, "The Adventures of Captain Horn," need no introduction to Mrs. Cliff. She is one of Mr. Stockton's most original and entertaining characters, and her further experiences are here narrated with all Mr. Stockton's well-known breeziness of style and whimsical humor. An added feature of interest, too, is the adventurous element which predominates in the story, and gives it the same fascinating interest that made "The Adventures of Captain Horn" such a popular success.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, - 153-157 Fifth Avenue, New York

THE ARMENIAN TROUBLES.

The Autobiography of a Truth.

A Story.

By EDNA LYALL,

Author of

"DOREEN," "DONOVAN," "THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A SLANDER," ETC.

12mo, Paper. Price, 30 cents.

 The motif of this story is the recent troubles in Armenia, and, though the characters depicted are of course fictitious, the story is founded on fact, and the sad incidents are very far from being imaginary.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.,
91-93 Fifth Ave., New York.

The Forward Movement IN Sunday School Work

The HOME Department

Originated by the officers of our society and perfected by experience of several years. Our motto is

A Home Department connected with every Congregational Sunday School.

We will send blanks and furnish lesson cards and FREE the necessary helps at reduced rates to any school agreeing to make an earnest effort to organize

A HOME DEPARTMENT.

Send for information and free sample blanks.

For 25 cents we will mail a copy of Dr. Hazard's "Home Department, Its History and Methods."

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,
Congregational House, Boston.

$11,500

TO BE DIVIDED

Within a short time by THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL. You can have some of it just as well as not. Never were such chances possible before. See for yourself by writing to

The Ladies' Home Journal
Philadelphia

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

Housekeeper. A situation as housekeeper, companion or mother's assistant is desired by a refined, middle-aged lady. References exchanged. Address A. B. C., 155 Warren Ave., Boston, Mass.

Housekeeper. An educated and highly respectable American lady of thirty-five, well versed in household duties, desires a position as housekeeper or companion. Address "H. D.," care of The Congregationalist.

Stereopticon for Sale. Second-hand instrument, guaranteed in first-class condition; dissolves with lime-light; nickel-plated body; lenses, all achromatic, are 4½ in. condensers, ¾ Darlot objectives. Another stereopticon in the church makes this one unnecessary. Rev. H. S. Brown, Danielson, Ct.

A NEW HARVEST SERVICE

In the Autumn Time.

By MARION WEST. With original music and recitations for main school.

HARVEST FRUITS, GOLDEN GRAINS FOR LITTLE GLEANERS, GATHERING IN THE HARVEST, all three for Primary Department.

Harvest Recitations, 15 Cents, postpaid.
Harvest Concert Book, 50 Cents, postpaid.

Complete lists of others free.

HENRY D. NOYES & CO.,
13½ Bromfield Street, - - - - - Boston.

THE NEW BOOK.

SACRED SONGS No. 1.

By IRA D SANKEY, JAMES McGRANAHAN, and GEO. C. STEBBINS.

Will be ready for use by Mr. D. L. MOODY, at the Series of Meetings to be held at Cooper Union, New York, November 9th.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 is of same size and style as Gospel Hymns No. 6.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 has an unusually large number of new and attractive songs by the authors and others.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 is furnished cheaper than any of the previous issues. In boards, 30 cents by mail; $25 per 100 by express.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 15 October 1896 Number 42

CHURCH CLUB AGENTS
SHOULD BEGIN WORK
NOW.
Send for Terms and Sample Copies.

✠ TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS. ✠

6 Months for $1.00
3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

THE death of Edward White Benson, Archbishop of Canterbury, takes away a man who was not merely distinguished for his own character and attainments, but also as the titular head of one of the great branches of the Christian Church. In the expansion of England the Established Church and its daughters have come to make a good third in point of numbers to the Greek and Roman Churches, and the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being, as primate, is the visible representative of their unity. Dr. Benson passed by the usual path of academic distinction to high ecclesiastical preferment. At Trinity College, Cambridge, he took a first class and a fellowship, became master in Rugby School and head master in the newly established Wellington College, was chaplain to the queen, and was appointed by Lord Beaconsfield first bishop of the re-established diocese of Truro in the extreme south of England, whence he was translated to Canterbury in 1882 after the death of Archbishop Tait. He was a lifelong friend of Mr. Gladstone, by whom he was appointed to Canterbury, and it was as his guest and in his pew in the church at Hawarden that he was stricken down with apoplexy during the morning service last Sunday. Archbishop Benson was a man of a catholic spirit and judicial temper. Dean Farrar said of him in his own cathedral after hearing the news of his death that "of more than ninety predecessors none was endowed with more graceful learning, more charming geniality, or holier or truer wisdom."

"A thunderbolt out of a clear sky" is what Cardinal Gibbons calls the sudden and unexplained removal of Bishop Keane from the rectorship of the Roman Catholic University in Washington, and the rector himself seems to have been equally without warning. He instantly and dutifully submitted, however, but emphatically, if respectfully, declined the call to Rome and the offer of a titular archbishopric conveyed in the pope's letter of removal. Coming as this blow does in immediate connection with the arrival of Archbishop Martinelli, the new papal delegate, whose appointment was as much a surprise to American Roman Catholics as Bishop Keane's removal, it is no wonder that it is received as a distinct condemnation of that American or liberal school in the church of which Archbishop Ireland is the recognized head and Bishop Keane one of the best known representatives. A mass meeting held in Washington last week gave utterance to the esteem in which Bishop Keane is held by all classes in the community, and to an undercurrent of indignation at the abruptness of the pope's action. Archbishop Ireland has given public expression to a similar feeling, and there is every indication of a deepening and broadening of the gulf between the two wings of the Roman Catholic body in America. If the new papal delegate proves to be in active sympathy with the ultramontane and un-American party it will make it hard for the liberal school of Roman Catholics, and tend to imbitter once more the tone of religious discussion which had seemed to be growing more charitable and Christian. It looks as if Pope Leo had played with liberalism as a cat plays with a mouse so long as it served his own interests, but with the fixed purpose that it should be swallowed up at last.

It is business depression which has aroused the discontent of the West and South, and business depression under modern conditions always means a collapse of credit. A very large share of modern business is done upon borrowed capital. When it is difficult to borrow contraction of business is inevitable; when it is impossible to borrow business must be contracted to the point where the owner can carry it with his own cash capital, which in many cases means a shrinkage to a very small proportion indeed of its ordinary volume. And what is true of the individual is true of the business community as a whole. If it cannot borrow it must contract, and contraction means less land cultivated, fewer mines worked, idle laborers, empty trains, hoarding for the timid, lost opportunities for the active, and general stagnation and distress. Looked at from this side the one important possession of a business community is its credit, the ability to borrow freely on good security, and the blow at credit in the threat of a cheapened dollar is in itself sufficient explanation of the business stagnation of the times.

A newspaper in Memphis, Tenn., which is in sympathy with Mr. Bryan, includes ministers of the gospel of Christ in its catalogue of those who are of "the classes." Inasmuch as the majority of the clergymen of this country have come from humble homes, have earned their education, receive an annual average income of less than $1,000 per year, and are compelled by the force of self-respect and public opinion combined to approach measurably near conformity to a life in harmony with a gospel of self-sacrifice, it is somewhat strange that they should be singled out for condemnation. Possibly it was done because the majority of the clergymen of this country are, either openly in their pulpits, or less publicly in their personal intercourse with men, casting their influence against Mr. Bryan. Nor is it altogether strange that they should, in view of the irreverent manner with which some of the most sacred symbols of the Christian faith have been treated by Mr. Bryan and his lieutenants. Not to say anything about the "crown of thorns and cross of gold" speech of Mr. Bryan at the Chicago Convention, what is to be said of the parody on the Lord's Prayer, called the Prayer of the Gold Bug, which is being distributed broadcast among working men to excite their hatred of their employers? Or what shall be said of the song, The American Marseillaise, which, as published by a well-known Chicago music firm, has on its cover page a large cross printed in yellow and a woven crown of thorns and on the upper arm of the cross a portrait of Mr. Bryan. Senator Lodge of Massachusetts did well to call attention to these facts in his speech in Boston last week, and Rev. Dr. Reuen Thomas of Brookline, in his letter to the Boston Herald last week, contending for the right of clergymen to speak their minds in this campaign, was equally felicitous in his description of the significance of these phenomena. Dr. Thomas is quite right in his contention that > Mere stump speaking in the pulpit is not what Christianized people need. But in times of public turmoil and strife, if the pulpit is silent, if no sympathetic illuminating voice is heard on "the things that are" here and now, I do not wonder that people should suppose that the clergyman is not a man, nor a citizen, nor a patriot, nor a prophet, but only that contemptible fragment of a man—a mere ecclesiastic.

Dr. Watson has undertaken so much work in his American visit that it can hardly be regarded as a holiday. We congratulate him upon the successful completion of his lecture course at Yale, which may allow him to feel that the chief end of his coming is triumphantly accomplished. Those who were fortunate enough to come within sound of his voice felt that they had before them a man who combined in an unusual degree the power of beauty and the beauty of power in thought and expression. His dry humor in phrase and illustration added much to his clear good sense and insight into the essential nature of the preacher's opportunity. The effect produced by these lectures will be to highten expectation and deepen public curiosity to hear more from their author.

A series of letters in the London Times has called attention to the widespread poverty among the ministers of the Established Church. Starving vicars, daughters of clergymen applying for positions as household servants, parishes where the enforced contribution to the fund for increasing the stipends of poor clergymen equals the whole proceeds of the parish, are among the grievances and sorrows reported. Upon this whole matter the London Speaker comments, drawing three lessons, of which the last is as follows: "And a third, most instructive of all, is the manner in which the endowments of the church apparently prevent the congregations from doing their duty, and in which the liberality of Non-conformist congregations and the comfort of their clergy stand out in flagrant contrast with the apathy and neglect of Churchmen and with the wretched poverty which the Establishment permits." This experience may be a comfort to some of our own people who are suffering with the straitness of the times. It is unquestionable that the offerings of the people are in the long run the only sure maintenance for church work. The ministers cannot afford to become either spiritually or financially independent of their congregations, nor can the congregations afford to feel that they are only spectators and not participators in the maintenance of worship and pastoral work. It is only in the peculiar conditions of modern city life that endowments seem to be necessary and promise to be of the greatest use.

THE TOLEDO MEETING.

Des Moines, Springfield, New York, Chicago and Worcester have become landmarks in the history of the American Board. Its meetings at these places were distinct steps in the forward movement of Christian missions. Toledo is now not less important in our missionary records. It will long be remembered as the place of a remarkable assemblage at a critical period.

Business of great significance to nations and to the kingdom of God, transacted with order, dignity and harmony, characterized this four days' gathering at Toledo. This business affects the welfare and the honor of millions of Americans and tens of millions of other nationalities. Candid consideration of the report presented on other pages of this paper will show that. We do not propose to discuss over again what was done, but by way of illustration we point to the two things which stood out most prominently among many great interests, any one of which was of sufficient consequence to command the absorbing attention of Christians. The first of these is our relations with Turkey. Her treaties with the United States she has openly violated. The property of our citizens within her territory has been wantonly destroyed by her subjects. Americans have been seized and are kept in prison without trial. As Mr. Wheeler so forcibly put the matter, if we thus allow the rights of our citizens to be outraged without redress we shall become the scorn of the great nations and the prey of the small. But in no assembly do these citizens in Turkey appeal so powerfully as in the assembly of those joined with them in the business in which they are engaged. Ought not their friends and partners to consider these interests and to rouse our Government to guard its honor and their lives?

The other topic is our work in Japan. The victories for Christianity in that country in recent years have commanded the attention of the world. Now great difficulties challenge the churches to maintain the ground they have gained and to go forward to greater deeds than they have done. The faith and courage of those on the field are stimulated by their difficulties. Do we appreciate the spirit of the professors of the Doshisha University who have left the chairs they have occupied for so many years to begin new work in regions still unreached by the gospel? To shrink from the attempt to bring to Christ a people in the throes and perils of a new national life, because they have become conscious of power and conspicuous for their intellectual activity and pride and inexperience, would be to confess to the world that the gospel of Christ is insufficient to fulfill its promise of deliverance for mankind.

The raising of the money necessary to carry on the work of which these two countries furnish illustrations calls for the deliberations and united counsel of men of experience in financial affairs. If those who have accepted responsibility for this work are Christians they can have no business of greater importance than this. The enthusiasm roused by the payment of the debt was dampened by the testimony of missionaries to the damage wrought by the retrenchment necessary in order to close the year without arrearages. The members of the corporation which carries on this enterprise ought to hear from the lips of those who have been sent out by them what is the condition of their common business.

Besides all this it pays to attend such a meeting as this was. Controversy draws crowds. United earnestness of consecrated men in consecrated work is more rewarding. Rarely has a meeting of the Board been marked by as great spiritual power as that of last week. It pays to abide for days in an assembly where great subjects are regarded with great faith. The bringing of the world to Christ appears in a different light than in any other place on earth. Separate items of missionary news may often be passed by without interest. But pictures of many fields, given by laborers just from their work, blend all their varied colors into one scene of conflict and conquest. The purpose which holds the Christian Church to its task grows luminous as pastors and laymen who view it from afar speak from deep reflection kindled into prophetic eloquence by mutual sympathy and quickened faith in the promised triumphs of the gospel. The noblest exhibitions of courage and self-sacrifice, real and practical, come before us. Life seems worth more, is measured by higher standards, through the united influence of men and women who believe in and give their lives for the salvation of the world. The larger vision becomes an abiding blessing. If any one's faith is shaken he will find himself steadied by throwing himself unreservedly into the spirit of these gatherings. They interpret Christian life as no private meditation can. They give richer meanings to prayer. They dignify Christian service.

The meeting at Toledo was attended by many persons of national reputation as educators, jurists and men of affairs. They witnessed, not only by their attendance but by their work, that the business in hand warranted such use of their time and money. The presence of such men in these meetings adds weight to the utterances made, to which it is of vital importance that American citizens should give attention. It puts new zeal into missionaries of Christ all over the world.

Self-interest calls for support of these great movements for Christianizing mankind. But a higher call comes to Christian ministers and business men, especially to those who, by becoming corporate members of the Board, have accepted the responsibility for carrying forward its work. Love for Christ commands the support of what has thus been undertaken in his name. Every one who answers calls to administer the Master's business rises to higher manhood. He blesses whole nations. He offers acceptable sacrifice to God. He hastens Christ's reign over all the earth.

NEW EDUCATIONAL EXPERIMENTS.

The American college combines general intellectual training with the preliminary stages of professional work in a way which makes the problem of oversight and control a difficult one. It long ago abandoned the older English theory of grouping a few students under the control of a tutor who was supposed to be responsible for their industry and good conduct, and has never put anything in its place. It is commonly said that the student learns from the faculty in the classroom and from his fellow-students everywhere, and that these two are the main sources of influence of the college course. Anything like learning from the members of the faculty in personal contact is, and must be under our present system, reserved for the Seniors who are interested in special branches and meet their professors in voluntary classes.

That something more than this is desirable, especially in the earlier college years, many of the best authorities upon educational methods have felt. Personal influence is the vital factor, after all. It should somehow be exercised by the teachers upon the taught. To meet this need President Hyde of Bowdoin proposes, in his annual report to the trustees, that the English tutorial system should be revived or adapted to the needs of the modern college. He says:

> The way to strengthen this weak spot is to employ, as supplementary to the work now done by the professors, and under their direction, tutors to do the work which the professors now are compelled to leave for the most part undone. These tutors should be young men, fresh from university studies, who expect to become professors in due time. It should be their duty to meet each student individually for a half-hour, at least as often as once a week, to review with him thoroughly and critically a specified portion of the work done in class during that period, to discover difficulties, to remove misconceptions, to correct wrong methods of study, to point out errors and superficialities, to insist on accuracy and thoroughness, to stimulate interest, to suggest lines of reading and by personal influence to bring the subject home to the student as a living reality.

We quite agree with President Hyde in his estimate of the effect upon students and tutors alike, and we should be interested in having the experiment tried. Indeed, it can hardly be called an experiment, for its value has long since been proved in English institutions. For example we need only to mention the influence of Dr. A. W. W. Dale, not only in one college, but in the whole university at Cambridge.

Another method of help for under-graduates which has passed the experimental stage is that employed by the Congregational Church of Berkeley, Cal. "In order to reach the students of the university," writes the pastor, "we have arranged a course of lectures in Biblical literature, comprising such topics as The Hebrew Language and Texts of the Old Testament, Hellenistic Greek, Canons, Versions, Inspiration, The Bible as Affecting English Literature, etc. These lectures are to be given by Professors Lovejoy, Goodsell, Mooar and Nash of our Pacific Seminary, and Professors Clapp, Bacon and Brown of the university, besides others equally good. The class meets as a part of the Sunday school, and the work is exciting a great deal of interest. The attendance is large and will increase. . . . In addition to this our Christian Endeavor Society considers the university its recruiting ground and is very successful in the earnest efforts it makes after the students as they come to the university."

This is in the direct line of suggestions made in these columns and we commend the example to other churches of our order in the university towns. Nor is it in the university towns alone that the need is felt for the systematic and careful study of the Bible in its historical environment and present relations. There is an aroused and wholesome curiosity which the churches are reaching out to meet. An interesting experiment in this line is that of the Bethany Congregational Church of Quincy, Mass., whose Training School for Christian Service, meeting once a week through the winter, plans for lectures upon such topics as The Literature of the Bible, Biblical Geography, the Different Periods of Bible History, The Life of Christ, The History of the Church, and Practical Applications of Christianity. If the earlier plans which we have described have reference especially to college students, this may be described as a Christian form of university extension work of which we can never have too much for the growth in knowledge of the people.

DAILY USE OF THE BIBLE.

Our part in the Bible is not so much a treasure in bulk as a daily allowance payable upon demand. If we come to claim it it is ours. If we neglect the opportunity we lose it. The book is so wide, so large, so deep that, even if we had the wish, we have not the capacity to use or enjoy it all at once. It is interpreted by our experience. It means more to us at one time than another. Some parts of it never come to be real to us until they have been passed through the crucible of our own parallel experience of trials and attainments. Then we wonder that the words could ever have seemed cold or hard, or that we could ever have misunderstood their purpose.

The teaching which Christ promised us was that of a personal and ever present Spirit, but the written word was to be his instrument. The reverent study of the Bible is, therefore, a direct claim upon his assistance, which should be constantly renewed and can never fail of answer. Through his recorded dealings with the ancient church he teaches us to know God's character. In the sins and victories of the ancient men we learn to take a faithful and impartial view of man. We see the mirror held up to our own heart's life. Daily study, by the aid of memory, becomes a laying up of weapons of defense like those which Jesus used in his temptation. It has the promise of God's indwelling in our hearts. It strengthens us to do his will.

The emphasis must fall upon the word "daily," because even the most important things are so easily crowded out of overbusy lives. "Give us this day our daily bread," we pray; but it is also written, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Shall we feed our bodies and starve our souls?

The attitude in which we come to our daily Bible readings is also of the greatest importance. If the Word is bread, we should come hungering. The soul that seeks shall find. It needs the purpose of faith and desire of a human heart as well as the teaching purpose of God's spirit to make the reading of even the Bible effective for building up our souls in righteousness.

CURRENT HISTORY.

The United States and Turkey.

The Marblehead, the Minneapolis, the San Francisco, the Cincinnati and the Bancroft are now off Smyrna under the command of Admiral Selfridge. Such an array of United States vessels cannot have been marshaled by our Department of State without some definite purpose. What is it? What the constituency of the American Board believes it should be may be inferred from the resolutions passed at the Toledo meeting last week, which resolutions are printed elsewhere, as is the calm but searching paper of Hon. E. P. Wheeler of New York, who goes so far as to plead for a display of force and reprisals by the United States. Certainly affairs cannot longer be permitted to drift. National honor and our duty to those who have certain rights guaranteed to them by solemn treaties demand that we should act swiftly and effectively, and if the Administration is not prepared to be American in this way let it cease posing as the especial friend of South Americans, or the world will conclude that, while we hold rigidly to the Monroe Doctrine, we do not intend to avenge insults, violence and thefts if done on European soil, be the Power ever so impotent or friendless.

Domestic Politics.

An extraordinary rush of voters to register in the great cities of the country indicates the intense interest that they have in the question which is to be settled on Nov. 3. From this time on the fight will wage hottest in the States of the North Mississippi Valley, where all concede that the balance of power of the nation lies. Mr. Bryan will work there exclusively, and thither ex-President Harrison, Speaker Reed, Hon. Carl Schurz and the weightiest speakers of both sides are wending their way. The local elections in Connecticut indicate the apathy of Democrats there. Georgia and Florida have both elected Democratic State officials, as was to be expected, but by majorities that reveal a waning strength and furnish some reason for believing that when the lines are drawn on national issues a different result may be expected soon, if not on Nov. 3. With party lines as inextricably mixed as they now are in North Carolina for instance, with white Populists and white Democrats fighting to win the votes of the Negroes as they are fighting in every State, with thousands of citizens in Virginia and West Virginia cheering to the echo the words of Mr. Harrison, a Federal general and Republican ex-president, no man can venture to prophesy what may not happen.

Mr. Sewall's letter accepting the Democratic nomination as vice-president rivals anything Mr. Bryan has said in its appeal to class and sectional prejudices, and is most anomalous coming from one with his business connections. The great Roman Catholic prelate, Archbishop Ireland of Minnesota, in an open letter to his fellow-citizens, has declared his intention to vote for Mr. McKinley and given his reasons for opposing Mr. Bryan. In brief, they are because he believes that the Chicago platform and its candidate mean national dishonor and anarchy if indorsed by the people. Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs of Brooklyn preached a sermon last Sunday in which he denounced the views of the Chicago platform as "simply appalling" and opposed "face to face with the divine command, 'Thou shalt not steal.'"

Behold a Miracle—Almost!

Last week 1,000 Confederate veterans from the Shenandoah Valley visited Mr. McKinley's home. Few of them had ever voted other than the Democratic ticket. They were the guests of the Union veterans of Canton. They met with a reception of the heartiest kind from men with whom they formerly fought, and to them the Republican candidate, a Union veteran, uttered these memorable words:

> Let no discordant notes grate upon this melody of peace. Let it go forth, let it be everywhere proclaimed, that the men of the North and the men of the South are together and stand for the enthronement of the justice and supremacy of the law. The voice that would reopen the conflict of the past and the bitterness of thirty years ago, that would array class against class or section against section, is not a friend but an enemy of our glorious Union and stands in the pathway of its glorious progress.
>
> Men of the South, the only force now needed in this free Government is that of conscience, justice, reason and intelligence. This is the irresistible power upon which rests our strength, security, permanency and glory. We have entered upon a new and blessed era, we have crossed the dominion of force into the kingdom of peace and law and mutual good will. Faith in each other, faith in a common country, faith in the future and a common destiny has made us one—forever one. We have learned that
>
> Peace and greatness best become;
> Calm power doth guide
> With a far more imperious stateliness
> Than all the swords of violence can do,
> And easier gains those ends she tends unto.

Apparently, if Mr. McKinley is elected the policy of Hayes, and not that of Grant, will dominate his Administration.

The Plight of the English Liberals.

The variant views of Mr. Gladstone, Lord Rosebery and Sir Vernon Harcourt, each representing factions of the Liberal party, as to the duty of Great Britain toward Turkey and the Armenian people at the present hour have brought about a disintegration within the party that dazes and astonishes the minor leaders and the rank and file. Lord Rosebery has resigned from leadership of the party, and named Mr. Asquith as his choice for the party's leader in the House of Commons. The Speaker and The Daily News, strong Liberal organs, lead in a demand that Lord Rosebery's resignation be withdrawn, and that he be firmly established again as Liberal leader. On the other hand, the Radical wing, represented by The Chronicle, and the Nonconformist Liberals, who never have fancied Lord Rosebery, insist that Sir Vernon Harcourt is the man to lead the party successfully. All agree, of course, that if Mr. Gladstone were once more to enter the House of Commons, or become a peer and enter the House of Lords, he would unite the party as no other man could.

If Lord Rosebery's speech at Edinburgh, made after he had won his freedom to criticise by resigning his post as leader, be examined it will be seen that there is very little difference between his position and that of Mr. Gladstone, but he does differ much from Sir Vernon Harcourt. The latter would go to considerable lengths in making concessions if the friendship of Russia might be won and an alliance formed that could settle the entire Eastern problem without bloodshed. But Lord Rosebery questions Great Britain's right to concede that which she does not own, and doubts whether it would be politic for her to do it if she could. This difference of opinion among the Liberals of course leaves Lord Salisbury free to do as he pleases, and as yet there is no indication of his policy. Rumors from Constantinople and other European capitals hint at a rapprochement between Great Britain on the one hand and Russia and France on the other. Reports from all quarters in Turkey tell of a renewal of violence and no abatement in the unrest and terror of the Christian population—Armenian, Greek and European. The Powers have refused the Porte's demand that the Turkish officials be given the right of search on European vessels. For this much courage let thanks be given. The irade calling on all Armenians to return to Turkey within two months or lose all rights of citizenship, and threatening all who do leave with a similar fate, will not greatly alter the situation of either present exiles or future refugees.

The Dual Alliance.

Bismarck must gnash his teeth as he reads of the reception given by the French people to the Czar of Russia last week, for the real significance of the remarkable event, unparalleled as a pageant, is not that the Republicans of France are so enamored of autocracy that they do not realize that there is a certain incongruity in the alliance of nations so different in political structure and peoples so different in their mental and physical traits. No. The real significance of it all is that an autocrat, a royalist, the head of a mighty empire, has recognized the republic as such, has deemed it worthy of support and co-partnership, and by his fiat has given it once more a high place among the nations of Europe, thus both setting at naught the machinations of Germany and lowering the effectiveness and rank of the Triple Alliance. Henceforth Russia and France, and, possibly, Great Britain, in a dual or triple alliance, are to maintain the peace or arouse the militant spirit of Europe, and Germany, Austria and Italy must be content to adjust themselves as best they can to new and by no means satisfactory conditions. If, as the czar said in his speech made in Paris last week, "precious bonds unite Russia and France," then a new era in European politics has opened, and as the American Christian looks forward into the future he perhaps may be pardoned if he doubts whether the political and religious outcome will be wholly or even predominantly good.

Du Maurier, the Artist, Dead.

The death of George Du Maurier in London, Oct. 8, just at the moment of the appearance of the opening chapters of his new story, The Martian, has a special element of pathos for his friends and readers. English and French by ancestry and education, he turned aside from chemistry, which he had taken up at his father's request, to the study of art. His boyhood is described in Peter Ibbetson, his school life in the as yet unpublished story, The Martian, and his studio and art experiences in Trilby. The sudden and complete loss of sight in one eye while sketching in a Brussels gallery turned his attention to illustration rather than painting, and he worked for Punch from 1860 on. This side of his genius has become familiar to Americans in his contributions to Harper's Magazine. As an illustrator Du Maurier showed many of the characteristics which have been so marked in his novels. His types are original, not perfect in drawing, but immensely effective in their appeal to sentiment. The study of human life from the point of view of the caricaturist made him a deviser of plots and situations, and a singularly individual outlook, experience and power of delicate and poetical expression made him successful when he turned late in life to novel writing. In all his stories the supernatural plays a large part. In Trilby we have the most logical and artistically perfect, though physically absurd, application of hypnotism. The wild and unthinking enthusiasm for this latter book and its title character was partly a reaction from the stiff inanities of a dominant "realism," and partly a genuine tribute of sentiment and sentimentality to a very effective bit of character drawing. That this extravagant enthusiasm has not yet spent its force, we gather from occasional absurdities and extravagances like those which became a weariness to the author. It is fortunate for the public that the last book Mr. Du Maurier wrote is complete. It will be read with a new interest and tenderness in the thought of the author's untimely death.

NOTES.

Miss Clara Barton, in a speech made at a reception given to her in Washington last week, pointed out that unless the open hands of charity, not of this country alone, but of all civilized countries, be reached out to the Armenians "hunger and cold will gather the victims in by the tens of thousands and bury them like the falling leaves beneath the snow."

Anarchy reigns in Madagascar. The French felt when they conquered the Hovas that their title to the entire island was secure, but they have found that such is not the fact. Americans and Englishmen resident in the interior have been murdered; the splendid chain of missions of the London Missionary Society has been practically destroyed; and M. Delroche, the governor, who is a Protestant, has been recalled, as if he were to blame, while, as a matter of fact, the situation is due entirely to the seeming innate inability of France to govern dependencies.

IN BRIEF.

Bishop Potter of New York recently deconsecrated a chapel. That is what many are constantly doing with temples of the Holy Spirit, their bodies.

On Oct. 22 Princeton College will be called a university. But she has been 150 years growing up to it, while there are parts of the country where universities start up in less than 150 days.

We failed to note any what might properly be called general compliance with Mr. Moody's suggestion that Oct. 8 be observed as a day of fasting and prayer. Are patriots this year thinking and acting—not fasting and praying?

Thefts from trust funds are all most evil and cruel, but thefts from the trust funds of hospitals seem especially so. Gloucester, Mass., and Washington, D. C., have reason to believe this, owing to the sensational revelations of the past week.

A replica of Thorwaldsen's Christ, the Divine Healer has been given to the Johns Hopkins Hospital by a Scotchman who has made a fortune in Baltimore, and it will stand in the center of the rotunda of the main hospital building. A beautiful thought and a beautiful deed.

The convicts' home established by the Salvation Army in Chicago may prove an advantage to the ex-jail birds, but whether the city, with all its present attractiveness to that class, will be profited by the occupation of a four-story building for such ends is yet to be answered.

That the converts from heathenism believe in foreign missionary work may be judged from the statement made in the letter of our Australian correspondent that nearly one-sixth of the money contributed to the London Missionary Society in a hundred years was contributed by native converts.

The returns from the Methodist conferences show a falling off in the vote in favor of the amendment admitting women to the General Conference which threatens its defeat. It seems to be a case of general apathy. The women must wake up and wake up the men or they will find themselves excluded after all.

The report of the recent conference of Armenian Congregational preachers in Massachusetts, which we publish elsewhere, will enlighten many, hitherto ignorant, concerning the work which is being done in a very quiet and effective way for a people who are fast winning a numerical and financial strength in the old commonwealth that has always sheltered the oppressed of all lands.

Rev. Dr. Behrends, in a recent sermon on the bull of Pope Leo denying the validity of the Anglican orders, brought out the point which needs to be kept in mind by non-Episcopal Protestants. He says that the decision "makes an end of the appeal from our Episcopal brethren that we accept orders at their hands. We should be no better off than we now are. The fulcrum has been wrenched away and the lever can no longer be worked."

A week hence we hope to be able to give definite information concerning the membership, officials and purposes of the Boston Young Men's Congregational Club. Just now it is only possible to call attention to the significant fact that the younger men in the churches of greater Boston are conferring together and planning for an organization which they expect will do much to develop denominational esprit de corps and themselves as well.

Rev. Dr. David R. Breed's article in the Presbyterian and Reformed Review (October), on Christian Endeavor and the General Assembly, gives his reasons for believing that the victory won by the friends of Christian Endeavor work at the last meeting of the highest judiciary of the Presbyterian Church was "in the line of independency, pure and simple," and "subversive of Presbyterian polity and those distinctive doctrines with which it is historically connected." How dreadful!

Was this the creed of Du Maurier?

A little work, a little play
To keep us going—and so good-day!

A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so good-night!

A little fun to match the sorrow
Of each day's growing—and so good-morrow!

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing! And so—good-by!

He wrote it. If so, was he then not, just what a writer in the Boston Transcript calls him, a "gentle modern pagan"?

A Congregational pastor in Iowa informs us that many Congregationalists there will cease to contribute to the Home Missionary Society because General Howard, its president, is stumping the Interior for Mr. McKinley; and, moreover, he says that he does not blame them. We prefer to believe that Iowa Congregationalists give now, and ever will give, to the C. H. M. S. because they believe in the work for which it stands. Nor do we think that there can be many who will boycott the society because its titular head is following his conscience in the performance of what he believes to be his duty as a citizen.

Many persons read The Congregationalist who are not our subscribers. We know this from frequent letters we receive referring to statements made in our columns. Some of these letters present arguments to show that we are mistaken, others ask questions and others still demand reasons for our positions. We mean to treat our correspondents with courtesy, but we give the precedence to our subscribers and should be pleased to have them, when asking for replies to their letters, mention their relation with us. If others do not receive the attention they desire, this paragraph may explain to them the reason for our apparent neglect.

Bishop Walker of North Dakota, bishop-elect of western New York, has done much for the Indian, but it was hardly wise for his friends, in informing the public of his transfer to the older and richer diocese, to claim for him that "he has done more than any living man to elevate the degenerate redskin." To go no farther than the Protestant Episcopal fold, what of Bishop Whipple of Minnesota, who had begun to love and labor for the Indians before Mr. Walker had left the divinity school and become a priest? And to pass to our own denomination, the red man has had and has no better friend than Senator Dawes and such missionaries as the Riggses.

There will be many to mourn the death, on Oct. 10, at the age of fifty-one, of Mrs. Gallagher, the wife of Dr. William Gallagher, recently principal of Williston Seminary and now of South Braintree. Few women have been more influential in church and educational circles. She fulfilled at the same time all her home duties and made her house a center of blessing to the students as they came and went at Easthampton. Her literary gifts made themselves manifest in frequent articles in the religious papers. How can any young woman of the period care to be included in the ranks of the "new women" when such a lovely character as that of Mrs. Gallagher reveals what true womanhood is?

Twenty-five years ago The Congregationalist said, "Alas, alas, that great city, that mighty city! For in one hour so great riches is come to naught. At the best how insecure are the works of men. Chicago, but yesterday one of the largest, busiest, proudest, most hopeful cities in the country and today destroyed." Twenty-five years ago the city had about 330,000 inhabitants and covered only thirty square miles of territory. Today its inhabitants number between 1,750,000 and 2,000,000, and the territory it covers is about 190 square miles. The history of the world has no parallel to the way in which Chicago rose, phœnix-like, from its ashes to become the metropolis of the Interior and one of the great cities of the world. Our letter from the Interior describes the way in which the city celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the terrible fire.

President Harper of Chicago University, in his latest official utterance, said that four years of experimenting with voluntary attendance at religious services had prepared him to admit that the success of the experiment had not been great. He placed the responsibility of explaining the comparative failure on the Christian students and teachers of the university. Some of his questions were searching:

Is it that the religious service has been dull and uninteresting? Yet it is true that the men who have conducted it have been the strongest men on the university staff, and the strongest men in the pulpits of the city of Chicago. Is it that sufficient effort has not been put forth to induce students to attend? Effort after effort has been made without avail. Is it that the chapel service is a thing of the past and no longer needed in a university? If this is true prayer itself is a farce and religion is a delusion. Is it, after all, that in student life, as in every life, there is needed for the performance of many of the higher duties a sense of obligation coming either from without or within? And is it possible that the policy of required attendance is perhaps better?

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Whitman College Again.

We are happy to announce that this college has received $9,000 toward the forty still necessary to meet Dr. Pearsons's conditions. Of this sum $5,000 are from Miss E. R. Dickenson and $4,000 from Miss Mary A. Dickenson of Romeo, Mich. The money came through the representations of Miss Virginia Dox, whose wonderful story of the work of Marcus Whitman and of the struggles of the college which bears his name everywhere arouses enthusiasm.

The Douglass-Lincoln Debate Memorial.

At Galesburg, Ill., Oct. 7, the thirty-eighth anniversary of the famous Douglass-Lincoln debate was celebrated on the grounds just in front of Knox College, and a tablet inserted in the walls of the college, on which a sentence from the address of Mr. Douglass and another from that of Mr. Lincoln are engraved. That representing Mr. Douglass reads thus: "Equality among the different States is a cardinal principle upon which all our institutions rest." The sentence for Mr. Lincoln is, "He is blowing out the moral lights around us who contends that whoever wants slaves has a right to hold them." At the dedication of a soldiers' monument in Hope Cemetery Hon. Robert Lincoln made the address. At the celebration on the college grounds the chief address was by Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, who has rarely done himself more credit than on this occasion. Senator Palmer, the regular Democratic candidate for the presidency, also spoke, and as was fitting bore his testimony to the greatness of the cause for which Mr. Lincoln stood. That the occasion was made an excuse for a Republican rally is not surprising, nor is it surprising that from ten to fifteen thousand persons should have crowded into Galesburg to take part in it. For the next three weeks great speakers will have the ear of the people of Illinois. Mr. Depew spoke at the Coliseum Friday night and was escorted thither from the center of the city, a distance of seven miles, by a company of wheelmen. The building was as full as when Mr. Bryan delivered the speech which brought him the nomination for the presidency. Thursday night Col. Robert Ingersoll addressed an immense crowd in the West Side tent, and with his almost matchless elcquence held the attention of his hearers from his first words to the last.

Chicago Day and Its Memorable Parades.

Twenty-five years ago Chicago was in ruins. Millions of money had been swept away and thousands of homes broken up by the devastating fire which had left the business portion of the city and nearly all the North Side as desolate as a prairie. The benevolence of the world had already begun to send its gifts hither and was eagerly asking what could be done for the homeless and penniless. Yesterday, Oct. 9, the quarter-centennial anniversary of that dreadful day was celebrated. While in many respects it may be said to have been a partisan celebration, it was not wholly so. In the evening the silver men had their chance. They turned out to the number of 13,000, more or less, and with their torches, their transparencies and their shouts for Bryan and Altgeld, and with the spectators who in far greater numbers lined the streets, made it clear that they constitute a force with which one is not to trifle. At Tattersall's in the afternoon 3,000 silver men listened to some of their best orators, and in the evening proceeded to make known their confidence in the triumph of their cause by an enthusiasm which was almost irresistible. Yet on some of their banners were the words, "Give us silver or —" and the blank was painted red, suggestive of the terrible alternative if the demand is not met. Upon the whole one could but feel on surveying this parade of the silver men that it represented the worst elements in the community, together with those which, while thoroughly loyal to the flag, are yet least capable of directing the affairs of state; that, in fact, it was made up of men like those who marched with Coxey on to Washington, and are ready to listen to leaders like Debs.

In the morning the parade was less enthusiastic. The millionaire employer of labor and the man who earns but $1 50 a day walked side by side. The managers of the packing houses and their men were in the ranks. Bankers and their clerks, contractors and employés marched through the streets shoulder to shoulder. All the great industries of the city, the factories, the banks, the packing houses, the stores, wholesale and retail, printing establishments, railways, express companies were represented. According to the Tribune a few more than 68,000 men made this five hours' march through the city. Others place the number much higher. There were not less than three-quarters of a million spectators scattered along the streets and occupying windows which overlooked them. The men in the parade were sturdy, resolute men. They neither shouted nor sung. They walked with a determination which indicated both readiness and ability to defend the country against any who may threaten its interests. Many displays were of great elegance, but the majority were simply designed to bear testimony to the intimate relation between prosperity, good wages, comfortable homes and a sound currency, protection and reverence for law.

It is useless to attempt a description of the devices employed in flags, floats, banners, mottoes and dress to express the sentiments of the men in line. Police arrangements were admirable. There were no arrests and no scenes of violence. Although the railways, surface and elevated, carried over 1,800,000 people to and from their homes there were less than a score of accidents, and none of these serious. The day was perfect. The seriousness both of those in the parade and of those who witnessed it indicated a consciousness of the momentous issues involved in the coming election. In the evening there were two great Republican meetings, one in the Auditorium, addressed by Secretary Morton on the blessings of a sound currency, and one in the Coliseum, where an audience which occupied 18,000 chairs and standing room for 5,000 people listened to Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, who spoke with an earnestness and eloquence rare even for him. In the early evening at least 20,000 men, representing the business interests of the North Side, paraded the streets. Though a professedly non-partisan organization, one could not fail to see where the sympathies of most of those who compose it are in the present campaign. Altogether Friday was a great day and was celebrated in a manner worthy the event it recalled.

Chicago, Oct. 10. FRANKLIN.

The Currency of the United States.

By John Haynes, Ph. D.

Our national currency laws are the growth of over a century, and those which were passed during and since the war everywhere bear the marks of compromise which show them to be the product of conflicting interests and diverse views. Their present form represents no clearly defined monetary theory. Probably no public man or economist would advise the adoption of such a system were we starting anew. Numerous intricacies necessarily confuse those who have not given special attention to the subject, and the maze of law furnishes ignorant or unscrupulous political speakers boundless opportunity to deceive the public.

This article will describe the present status of our currency with only so much of history as is necessary to make it clear, taking up each form of currency separately.

First, the standard of value in the United States is the gold dollar of 25.8 grains standard metal, i. e., nine tenths pure gold and one-tenth copper alloy. Dollar pieces are no longer coined, but all gold coins are multiples of such a dollar. Any person can take gold of the proper fineness to the mint and have it made into coin absolutely free of charge. This is "free coinage" of gold. Neither silver, nickel, copper, or any other metal whatever, can be so coined. The fact that unlimited quantities of gold bullion can be changed into legal tender coin without cost, with the further fact that all other forms of currency are now at par with gold, is conclusive evidence that gold is our present standard. The act of Feb. 12, 1873, which struck the silver dollar from the list of coins to be issued, made the gold dollar the "unit of value." The Bland Bill (Feb. 28, 1878) made the silver dollar a "legal tender for all debts, public and private, except where otherwise provided in the contract." It would be an error to think that this provision made silver equally a standard with gold.

There is a very important difference between a standard of value and a legal tender. A legal tender is a form of currency which a debtor can compel a creditor to receive in full discharge of a debt. A standard of value is that money in which prices are ordinarily quoted and debts ordinarily paid. Gold has been our standard since 1834 with the exception of the period from the war to Jan. 1, 1879. In this interval the standard was the irredeemable promises of the Government known as greenbacks. Till 1873 the mints were equally open to silver and gold, but scarcely any silver was coined because the value of the silver required to make a dollar piece was slightly greater than the value of the gold necessary for the same purpose.

Second, another form of currency consists of silver dollars, each of which contains 412½ grains of standard metal and 371¼ grains of pure silver, the same amount which all silver dollars from the beginning have contained. When the silver dollar was dropped in 1873 there was no metallic money (except on the Pacific coast) in circulation. All prices and debts were on a paper basis. The change of the law, therefore, had no effect whatever on transactions in general. It is noteworthy that the bullion value of the standard silver dollar then exceeded slightly the bullion value of the gold coin. Silver dollars were again introduced by the act of Feb. 28, 1878, whereby the Secretary of the Treasury was directed "to buy each month not less than two million dollars' worth nor over four million dollars' worth of silver and coin it into standard dollars." This law remained in force till the passage of the Sherman Act (July 14, 1890), which will be described in connection with the next form of currency.

Third, the Treasury notes owe their existence to the Sherman Law, which directed the Secretary of the Treasury to buy each month four and one-half million ounces of silver at the market price and pay for it with a new kind of note authorized by the act. These Treasury notes are made a legal tender and are by law redeemable "in coin." When redeemed in silver they are canceled but when redeemed in gold are reissued—a process to be more fully described in connection with United States notes. The purchasing clause of the Sherman Act was repealed Nov. 1, 1893, but the rest of the law remains on the statute-book. One clause is still of great importance, as we shall see. While the law was put in force 168,000,000 ounces of silver, capable of coining into 217,000,000 dollar pieces, were purchased at a cost of $156,000,000. Sept. 1, 1896, there was outstanding the sum of $126,741,280 in Treasury notes, the remainder having been redeemed in silver and destroyed. The Secretary of the Treasury is required to keep at all times an amount of silver, either in coin or bullion, equal to the notes which remain outstanding.

Fourth, another form of currency owes its existence to war legislation, viz., the United States notes or greenbacks, which are Government promises to pay one or more "dollars." Since Jan. 1, 1879, they have been redeemable "in coin." The Law of May 31, 1878, provides that when any of said notes may be redeemed they shall not be retired, cancelled or destroyed, but they shall be reissued and paid out again. There is no limit to the number of times the Government may be compelled to redeem the same note. When a note is paid in coin it is kept in the Treasury till used in paying some debt of the United States. As soon as it is paid out it may be immediately presented again for redemption in coin. This fact has led to the description of the process as "an endless chain"—a description not entirely true, because after one redemption of a note there obviously cannot be another till the note is again paid out and the redeemed note (though still legal money) would not need to be paid out at all if the income from taxation and other sources should equal the expenditures. During the larger part of the present Administration the receipts have fallen below the expenses, gold coin has been borrowed to redeem notes, and the redeemed notes have been used to pay expenses. By this process it has come about that in spite of the "deficit" or shortness in receipts there was Sept. 1, 1896, after deducting $100,000,000 gold reserve, a net cash balance of lawful money on hand of $143,346,400.

Fifth, national bank notes are the promises of national banks. When presented for redemption they may be paid for in any of the four forms of "lawful money" mentioned before which the bank chooses. They are not a legal tender.

Sixth, there are various kinds of fractional coins, none of which are legal tender for over $10. None of them contain metal equal to their face value, but all are redeemable at the choice of the Treasury in any one of four forms of "lawful money."

Besides the forms of currency already enumerated there are the gold and silver certificates, the latter of which is commonly in circulation. This form of currency differs essentially from any of the forms spoken of before. They are really warehouse receipts. The United States acknowledges that it has received certain coins which it stores and will return on demand. These certificates are not "legal tender" or "lawful money." They simply furnish a convenient method of using silver and gold coin without carrying it about.

No law of the United States expressly says any of its promises (except to redeem gold certificates) are payable in gold. Wherever it refers to the process of redemption it says "in coin," and silver is undoubtedly "coin." Why then does the Government pay gold? The answer is that the Executive Department in this and preceding administrations has interpreted certain provisions of the law as requiring that the holder of the note should be given his choice of the two kinds of coin. As this interpretation is disputed we will give the exact provisions.

A part of the Sherman Law which is still in force says the Secretary of the Treasury shall > redeem such notes [i. e. Treasury notes] in gold or silver coin at his discretion, it being the established policy of the United States to maintain the two metals on a parity with each other upon the present legal ratio or such ratio as may be provided by law.

The law of Nov. 1, 1893, says:

> It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to continue the use of both gold and silver as standard money and to coin both gold and silver into money of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, such equality to be secured through international agreement or by such safeguards of legislation as will insure the maintenance in the parity in value of the coins of the two metals and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payment of debts. And it is further declared that the efforts of the Government should be steadily directed to the establishment of such a safe system of bimetallism as will maintain the equal power of every dollar coined or issued by the United States in the markets and in the payment of debts.

If the provisions of these acts require the redemption of United States notes and Treasury notes in gold when demanded do they also require the Treasury to give gold for silver on demand? This has never been done, but Secretary Carlisle, in a letter made public Sept. 15, said "whenever he [the secretary] shall be satisfied the silver dollar cannot be kept equal in purchasing power to the gold dollar except by receiving it in exchange for the gold dollar when such exchange is demanded it will be his duty to adopt that course." This is the extreme view on one side. The extreme view on the other is that when more convenient the secretary ought to pay the Government notes in silver, and without any change of law. Mr. Bryan would probably do this if chosen President.

Though no gold dollars have ever been exchanged for silver, the silver dollar is equal in purchasing power to the gold dollar, though containing only 51 cents' worth of silver. This is accomplished by the limitation of the coinage of silver. Over two-thirds of our legal tender money being gold or paper redeemable in gold, the quantity of silver money is not large enough to drive out gold. Besides this, silver dollars are receivable by the Government for all taxes and dues. Under such circumstances there is nothing in natural monetary law to prevent the maintenance of the parity.

Something ought to be said about the "gold reserve." No law has ever been passed which required that the Treasury should have on hand any given sum in coin, either gold or silver, but the act of July 12, 1882, provides that no gold certificates shall be issued when the amount of gold in the Treasury reserved for the redemption of United States notes should fall below $100,000,000. Since that time this sum has been placed in the Treasury statements in a separate fund as "reserved for the redemption of United States notes."

The currency of the country (leaving out certificates which, if included, would cause some coin to be really counted twice, and excluding copper and nickel pieces), Sept. 1, 1896, consisted of $570,557,083 in gold coin, $434,502,041 in silver dollars, $126,741,289 in Treasury notes, $346,681,016 in United States notes, $229,613,896 in bank notes, and $75,609,268 in fractional silver; total, $1,783,704,584. Of this total $1,539,169,634 was in circulation, or 21.48 per capita. The remainder was in the United States Treasury.

As the laws now stand the gold coin may be indefinitely increased by presentation of bullion for coinage; the United States notes must remain the same in amount; the Treasury notes may in time be canceled, as $30,000,000 already have been, by redemption in silver; the silver dollars may be increased by the coinage of the silver bullion originally bought with the Treasury notes, but no further. The bullion now on hand will make sufficient coin to redeem the $126,000 000 of Treasury notes in existence and leave the Government with $20,000,000 or more to add to the resources of the Treasury, but after this is done no more silver dollars can be coined under the present laws.

If the Treasury is administered according to precedent and the laws remain as they now are there is no reason to fear any serious trouble with our currency. It is greatly to be regretted that the maintenance of the system depends upon the interpretation of ambiguous provisions of law. With safe interpretation the system is safe. Safety, however, is not perfection. Our great need after certainty as to the standard is elasticity, which is now almost entirely lacking. Proper legislation as to bank note issues would secure this advantage.

Drury College has met with a great loss in the death of Prof. William J. Whitney, who for the last year had done excellent work in history and German. He graduated at Harvard in 1894 and took the A. M. degree the next year. President Fuller has entirely recovered from his recent illness and resumed work at the opening of the year. The college starts well though the hard times and drought have slightly diminished the number of students.

CHARITY CHANCE.*

A SERIAL STORY BY WALTER RAYMOND.

XIV. THE SETTLEMENT.

Thus the months passed until spring came, and again the meadows of the coombe were studded with daffodils. But there was no longer any glory in their gold and Miss Graham scarcely turned her head to look at them. A fear as dark as winter clouded all her thoughts and chilled her heart. She dreaded to hear that Charity had married Prentice, for dearly still she loved the girl and her dislike to this man—to whom she had never spoken—was instinctive and deeper than prejudice. It worried her, too, that Poltimore Briggs, being engrossed in public business, found no time to attend to her request about the settlement. This neglect irritated her the more since he had almost a personal interest in the matter. A gentleman, she told herself in her proud way, under such circumstances, would not lose a moment. She began to suspect him of purposely putting it off. Mistrust settled like a dust in the mansion of her mind and to know it there hurt her self-respect. She worried herself with thoughts of taking the matter into her own hands by altering her will, and procrastinated through fear of hurting the feelings of Poltimore-Briggs. And she had no one to share the burden of this anxiety, for Graham had gone away.

The dread haunted her that "something would happen" before her wishes were fulfilled. At last she wrote to Poltimore-Briggs, telling him to take no further trouble. She had changed her mind, she said, and determined to leave not only the money as arranged, but the Babblecombe estate to Charity. It would not be long to wait.

He replied in haste that the business was already put in hand, and urging her to do nothing until she had seen him. He would come to Babblecombe in a few days, he promised. But weeks passed and her wishes were still neglected. The early summer came and she had heard nothing further.

One afternoon in June she was sitting out of the sun in the old corner by the yew-hedge. The Mortimers were not there that day. It was quiet and she was able to think. The time for the garden party drew close upon her and she was wondering what she would do. Every year since she came to Babblecombe had this great function taken place without a break. But now she was weighing inclination against duty. She did not feel fit for it. She could not bear the fatigue. Yet responsibilities rest upon wealth and position, and she recognized her obligation to the neighborhood.

Strangers would inquire about Charity—and what was she to tell them? And if she did not have it the Babblemouth people would talk and say she moped because the girl was gone. A dozen times she changed her mind and still came no nearer to a decision. Then her meditations were disturbed. The gate fell to behind an approaching visitor and Poltimore-Briggs walked up the path.

She was aware of something unusual in his appearance. He had walked from Babblemouth and his boots were white with the dust of the summer road. That in itself was strange. For years she had not known him to go so far on foot. And his face looked altered. It was thinner than formerly and quite pale and drawn from anxiety and overwork. At once her doubts were changed to sympathy. He had managed everything so well for years, and now, when he was overwhelmed with cares, her thoughts had been ungenerous and unjust. She welcomed him warmly. For a moment she held his hand quite affectionately, then pointed abruptly to the seat by her side.

"I have been hoping to see you, Henry, for a long time," she said. "And now I cannot help feeling how kind it is of you to come."

He sat down slowly, in obedience to her gesture. With one elbow upon his knee he leaned forward and, resting his forehead upon his hand, looked down at the yellow gravel.

"I know, Helen. I have been remiss, I know," he stammered, uneasily. "But I haven't been able to call my soul my own. Not for years—I mean for months—since I undertook this parliamentary business. Otherwise your wishes would have received my first attention—as they always did, Helen"—

"Yes, yes. I don't know how I should have managed," she said, warmly, and with real gratitude. Her quick eye observed him attentively. His white waistcoat, always so spotless, was soiled with the dust, and there was a black mark from the rubbing of the long gold chain. "He knows he will lose the election," she thought, "and that is a blow to his pride." At the sight of his dejection a dead kindness revived—a tenderness of long ago, when a lover, spick and span, used to steal to the old house in Bath, at the hour when her father was from home. It seemed only yesterday. She pitied him. Life is so little, yet disappointment goes so deep. All that she understood, as in mute sympathy she laid her hand upon his shoulder.

"And you must not altogether blame me," he went on, quickly, in self-defense. "These lawyers are so dilatory. But I have looked over the deed at last. It will be ready to sign in a few days. I quite agree that you could do no less. I have made it that should she die without issue the money will come back to Graham, or his children if he have any."

"How wonderfully you think of everything!" she cried, in admiration. And this was the man whom she had suspected.

"But I came over to speak about something else. I—I want you to do me a favor, Helen."

"Of course. Of course." In her contrition she was quite eager to grant him his request unheard.

He moved restlessly in his chair. He was so nervous that his hand shook like a drunkard's, and he kept swallowing as if something choked his utterance. Then, reassured by the readiness of her consent, he found his tongue at last.

"Some years ago I made a very bad investment. A speculation, in fact, which proved disastrous. Anybody might have been deceived. And since then I have been—eh—hampered—at times sorely hampered for—eh—ready money. And we have lived extravagantly—I own that. Mrs. Poltimore-Briggs and myself have never—well, have never got on. Everything would have been different if poor Irene had lived."

He stopped and sighed. Deep in his heart, then, was still the recollection of Irene. No misfortune could have recommended him to the pity of the little cripple like this one touch of sentiment.

*Copyrighted, 1896, by Walter Raymond.

"And you want money, Henry?" she cried, quite cheerfully.

A gleam of eager expectation flashed across his face. He drew a long breath and sat upright, as if in relief from a heavy burden. He became more himself, and regained something of the large manner she had always disliked so much.

"The fact is, a man is pressing me at a very inconvenient moment. There is political animus, without question. But that makes it the more incumbent to meet him without delay. I should prefer, if possible, not to postpone payment a day. Of course, in a week or so, when rents come in, and so on, it would be easy enough. But I will admit to you, Helen, candidly admit to you, my self-esteem—my—my pride will not permit me to ask a favor. If you could lend me a couple of hundred pounds—say until the beginning of next month, when I pay you your dividends, you would do me a great service. I should be really grateful."

His momentary elation had subsided, and he leaned forward in anxiety for her reply.

Was that all? she thought, and felt quite glad to be of use. Yet to a vain man it must be hard indeed to ask.

"Of course, there is no difficulty about that. I should have had to get you to take care of it, so it is quite the same thing," she told him, laughing, to make light of his needless distress.

"Could I have it before the bank closes, Helen?"

Leaning upon her ebony stick, she rose. "No, don't move. I can go very well. Stay here in the cool and rest. I will go in and write you a check."

He watched her slowly pass along the path, until, by the steps into the drawing-room, she stopped to rest. Then she turned toward him and asked, "Are you sure that will be enough?"

He hesitated a moment.

"Yes, quite enough," he answered hoarsely.

The time was endless until her return, and he kept glancing at the open door. His dejection had vanished. He had taken heart at her readiness to assist him. His head was raised, alert and listening for the slightest sound, but in his uncontrollable impatience he bit his nails to the quick.

At last she came.

The serenity of human kindness smiled upon her face as she beckoned to him, before cautiously descending the step. She had inclosed the check in an envelope. That looked so much less like lending money. She carelessly handed it to him between her long, thin fingers.

"Come, I must not keep you."

Her tone was dictatorial, as it sometimes used to be with Charity. She did not give him time to speak, but, taking his arm, turned toward the entrance gates.

"I have handed over my hoard, so now until you bring me more I shall be penniless," she laughed gayly. Then her voice sank into a whisper, tender and confidential. "But make what use you like of it. What you have told me quite troubles me, Henry. It makes me feel that things have not been just. It is wrong, of course, but the very poor do not appeal to me like people who have been affluent and become pinched. That seems so painful—to be straitened and pinched. I could never have lived if I had been driven to worry about pennies. But there is nothing to save for now. Graham will have plenty. Charity you have seen to. There is nothing wanting—that money can supply. And my little superfluity, I suppose, may make all the difference to you?"

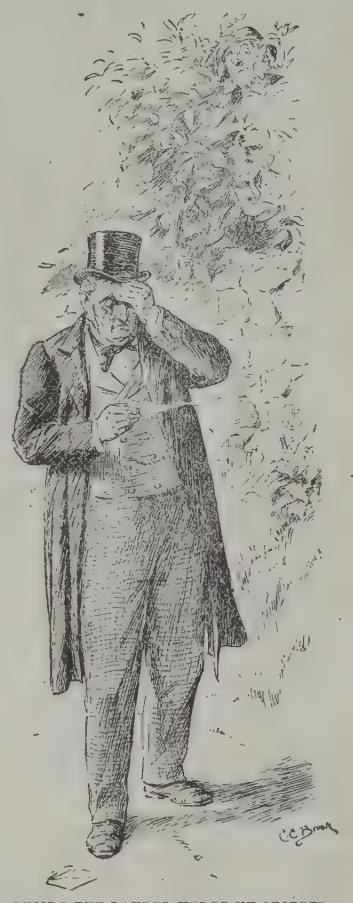
They were at the corner of the house, and she stopped, waiting for an answer to her inquiry.

But her kindness touched him. He looked quite dazed and could not speak.

"Will not that make it right? At least, whilst I am here. And then Graham is goodness itself."

She spoke so cheerfully, making the best of it to comfort a sad heart, that he made an effort to cover his confusion.

"God bless you, Helen! God bless" you! he stammered with emotion.



BESIDE THE LAUREL HEDGE HE STOPPED.

She held out her hand quickly to prevent his thanks.

"Good-by."

"Good-by."

He was so deadly white and stared at her so strangely that she was filled with alarm. He staggered as he turned toward the gate.

Between the stable yard and the Babblemouth road is a low stone wall and above it a slanting laurel hedge. There, a short distance away, Jan Sprake was trimming back pretentious shoots which pressed before their fellows.

"You are not well. You ought not to walk in the sun. Let me have you driven," she urged anxiously.

He shook his head in refusal. "I—I did not wish my visit known," was all he said. Then he waved his hand to her and was gone.

Jan Sprake peered down at him inquisitively as he passed down the road.

Beside the laurel hedge he stopped, opened the envelope Miss Graham had given him and drew out "a long leaf o' paper like." He was so close that Jan could have read the wording himself if he "had but a-bin a bit of a scholard." His hand shook like an ague. The man cried like the rain.

"Poor Helen! Poor little Helen!"

Those were the words he muttered, Jan could take his Bible oath of it any day of the week. Then of a sudden he tore the paper into shreds and threw them, fluttering, upon the roadside. For many a summer day the tiny pink scraps lay there amongst the dusty grass in silent testimony to the truth of Jan Sprake's statement. And Poltimore-Briggs did not go straight home to Babblemouth. He turned off where a lane leads to the pathway over the cliff. Jan Sprake stood among the laurels and, wondering, watched him out of sight.

On the afternoon of the following day there rustled around Babblemouth a rumor so ridiculous that no one with any sense in his head could find patience to listen to it. Nevertheless, being constantly repeated it grew and grew. It was said that bailiffs had been in the house of Mr. Poltimore-Briggs for a week past, and a sheriff's officer was aboard the yacht.

Certainly this had been kept marvelously quiet, but things will leak out at last. Servants will talk. A leading tradesman of the town first got wind of it, and without delay strolled mysteriously down to the house to present his little account. Mr. Poltimore Briggs was not in. The man would wait. Mr. Poltimore-Briggs was away from home.

The matter was of particular importance, and could Mrs. Poltimore-Briggs grant the favor of Mr. Poltimore-Briggs's present address? But Mr. Poltimore Briggs had been called unexpectedly to London and his address was uncertain.

Before night the little town was all astir. It became known to all the world that Poltimore-Briggs, having laid hands on every penny he could get hold of, had absconded, it was believed, to Spain. And not an hour too soon. There was vague talk of money obtained by fraudulent representations, and it was no secret that a warrant had been issued for his apprehension. The place was in a ferment. Political opponents had always anticipated that something of the sort must happen one of these days. Supporters, who for the most part were also creditors, declared that he was the last man upon earth of whom any one would have thought it. There were bets at The George as to how soon he would be taken.

Only one person remained in ignorance of these proceedings. Little Miss Graham, happy in the belief that she had helped him over his difficulty, was the last to hear. The thing was altogether so unexpected and astounding that for the moment Mrs. Mortimer was mute.

(To be continued.)

The Herald of Gospel Liberty expresses a common and increasing sentiment in our churches when it says: "There are now several denominations, which, on account of their tendencies toward truth, freedom and Christian union, ought to be one; and, until they can be organically one without the sacrifice of the honest principles of any one of them, they ought to devise some manner of closer co-operation in Christian work: the Christian Union, the Christians, the Methodist Protestants, the Congregationalists, the Free Baptists and the Church of God."

Two Sunday School Conventions.

THE MASSACHUSETTS AT NORTHAMPTON, OCT. 6-8.

It was a large and representative gathering. A special train conveyed more than a hundred delegates from the eastern part of the State. Ample provision had been made for the comfort of the delegates and all were made to feel at home when the pastor of the First Church said, "The town is yours, the church is yours, our homes and hearts are yours and Christ's." Vice-president W. H. Emerson presided and Rev. Albert E. George of Boston told in appropriate words For What Have We Come? He said we have gathered because we desire a higher type of work, a better knowledge of the Book and a practical application of theories in our Sunday school work. Rev. G. W. Brown, D D., of North Adams conducted a "quiet half-hour of devotion." The music was led by Mr. and Mrs. Willard B Wilson, whose duet singing added much to the convention. Rev. G. E. Merrill spoke on Tuesday evening on The Great Christian Manuscripts and illustrated his address by nearly 100 stereopticon views.

Rev. J. M. Gray of Boston conducted "a half hour with the Bible" each morning and thereby deepened the spiritual work of the convention. Rev. J L. Hurlbut, D. D, of New York followed Mr. Gray each morning and on Wednesday spoke on Organization Plus Co-operation Equals Success In the afternoon he presided over on open conference on Difficulties Plainly Stated and How to Overcome Them. Dr. Hurlbut presented the normal work. W. N. Hartshorn conducted a State parliament on Wednesday morning, in which Miss Bertha F. Vella, State primary secretary, and J. N. Dummer and H. S. Conant, field secretaries, each reported parts of the work, conditions of the field and some results of the year. Six members of the State executive committee spoke for different departments of the work. These were followed by strong testimony regarding the value of the work by F. O. Winslow.

Mrs. Julia Dimock Dudley spoke of The Uses of the Sand Map, and closed the convention on Thursday morning with a talk on Children of Other Lands.

Mr. C. C. Barry, the treasurer, reported receipts for the year $5,268 92, and expenditures $5,220.12, with a balance of $48 80, with liabilities for the year of $824.50 in addition to the $4,000 for money advanced from 1893 to 1895 Mr. C. V. S. Remington followed Mr. Barry and obtained pledges for the new year.

Pres. G. Stanley Hall spoke on Some Methods and Results of the Recent Studies of Childhood and Their Bearings upon Sunday School Work, and again addressed the convention on Adolescence, Its Nature and Treatment as the Central Problem of Education. He advocated the old method of conversion, and spoke at length of its value. Pres. M. E. Gates followed with the topic The Bible and the Central Problem of Education. Conferences were conducted on Thursday morning for primary workers by Miss Vella, for home department and visitation by Secretary Dummer and on Rally Sunday, festival and parade by Secretary Conant, much interest developing in the practical discussion of the subjects.

The election of officers resulted in the choice of Henry A. Barton of Dalton as president; treasurer, C. C. Barry; and as chairman of the executive committee W. N. Hartshorn. H. S. C.

THE CONNECTICUT ASSOCIATION AT HARTFORD, OCT. 6-8.

The twentieth biennial State convention was held in the Pearl Street Congregational Church. The address of welcome was given by Rev. Dr. Stone of the Asylum Avenue Baptist Church, and the response was made by Rev. Dr. Bates of Norwich, presiding elder of the Connecticut Eastern Conference (Methodist). A service of prayer was followed by an address by Prof. H. M. Hamil. He urged all his hearers to have and read Dr. Dunning's Bible Study and Dr. Trumbull's Teachers and Teaching. The evening session was taken up with a praise service, reports of the officers and executive committee and another address by Professor Hamil.

A Bible reading by C. D. Meigs, State secretary of Indiana, opened Wednesday morning's session. It was followed by a praise service under the leadership of Professor Excell of Chicago, and a series of short addresses by different delegates on interesting topics relating to the work. House to House Visitation was opened by Mr. Meigs and discussed by several. Another praise service and the report of the assistant secretary, Miss May B. Lord, closed the morning session. The principal address of the afternoon was by Rev. H. C. Trumbull, D. D., the first secretary of the convention. Short reports from new schools, a season of prayer and a discussion in charge of Rev. W. G. Fennell of Meriden made up the remainder of the program. In the evening Dr. Julia Morton Plummer of Boston made an address on Physical Redemption, followed by a discussion of the theme Teacher Training by Professor Hamil. The business session resulted in the re-election of Pres C. B. Foote of New Haven and Sec. W. H. Hall of West Hartford.

Thursday the convention divided itself into four parts, under efficient leaders, for the discussion of the different departments of work. In the afternoon an address by Rev Floyd W. Tomkins, Jr, of Providence was the principal feature of the program, and after disposing of the unfinished business a special season of prayer closed the convention. It was by far the most successful ever held by the State Association, 1,000 delegates being in attendance at one time. It is expected that new life will be infused into the Sunday schools on the return and reports of these delegates.

E D C.

THE ASSOCIATION OF WASHINGTON.

The meeting was held, Sept. 22-24, with the First Church, Tacoma, Rev. W H. Scudder, pastor. President Penrose of Whitman College was chosen moderator. The sermon was by Rev. E. L. Smith of Walla Walla on The True Function of the Church. This "set the pace" for the sessions. It described a high standard to be reached by plain and practical processes, such as education, which means belief, developing a strong will and cultivating the spiritual.

The general theme was The Coming of the Kingdom. Papers were read on different phases; by Rev. W. C. Merritt on Intemperance, by Rev. C. L. Diven, D. D., on Infidelity, by Rev. S. B. L. Penrose on Fellowship of the Churches, by Rev. T. W. Walters on Financial Methods, by Rev. F. B. Doane and Miss J. Miller on the C. E. Society and on Tact in Soul Winning by Rev. R. W. Farquhar. These papers and addresses were all full of fresh, interesting and helpful thoughts.

An evening was given to foreign missions. A paper was read by Mrs. W. C. Merritt on The Present Status of the American Board, and addresses were given by Rev. J. E. Walker of China and Rev. J. C. Perkins of India. The congregation was thoroughly interested and pronounced the theme practical and profitable.

All the societies were remembered, Rev. W. H. Wikoff speaking for the C. C. B. S., Rev. Samuel Greene and others for the Sunday School and Publishing Society and Superintendent Bailey for the C. H. M. S.

A half-day was given to educational matters. No subject finds a more hearty response in this State. Rev. E. L. Smith reported for Whitman College. The faculty are competent educators and earnest Christian workers, taking personal interest in the students. President Penrose, who visited Ahtanum Academy on his way to Tacoma, reported enthusiastically for that institution, commending most highly the principal, O C. Palmer, and the academy. Brief reports were given of Puget Sound and Tacoma Academies, and of the new Eells Academy in Colville, in the center of a region which was the field of labor of Father Eells for many years. Resolutions commending these institutions and indorsing their leaders were heartily passed.

At the hour for the women's meeting Mrs. L. M. Bailey read a paper which offered a suggested new departure. The author, disclaiming any thought of revolution and intent only on evolution, urged such changes as may be necessary in order to make what is now the Woman's Missionary Society include the entire church. The question is not now one of woman's work, the greater concern is for the men. Co-education in missions is the natural method and is adapted to our times. These suggestions were heartily and almost unanimously approved at the business meeting.

The question of the religious newspaper was discussed, and a general feeling was expressed that the churches of this State have not at present just what is needed to serve their interests, though the way is not yet clear for a paper of their own.

The report of the registrar was encouraging beyond anticipation. Not a church has reported difficulties without showing also a brighter side, and the general tone is of cheerfulness and courage even in the midst of trials which test faith and endurance. With all resources restricted there are no complaints, but a sublime trust in God for all needed blessings. A. J. B.

THE NORTH CAROLINA STATE MEETING.

We met at Haywood, whose fate hung in even balance with Raleigh 104 years ago for the selection of the capital of the State; but the casting vote of the chairman decided adversely. No further ambition seems to have disturbed the town, now one of the quietest inland villages of the State. On the afternoon of Sept. 24 we were welcomed to this quaint old place, now thoroughly aroused with hospitality.

The thirteen churches which within a year have broken away from the ecclesiastical sway of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion conference have all lost their homes and are struggling to build. The Haywood church acted nobly, and without aid erected by its own labor a neat building, tastefully finished in native pine, with 280 sittings. We found it ready for dedication, and already consecrated by a revival and forty-two conversions. Its membership is now 225.

Long before the first service the house was crowded. After a letter of greeting from the retiring moderator, Rev. C. C. Collins, whose ill health had constrained his resignation of the important post at Troy, Rev. J. P. Sims of Beaufort preached the opening sermon. The keynote was given at the devotional meeting the next morning by Rev. R. B. Johns, fresh from a revival of wonderful power at Dudley. Half the forenoon had passed before we could turn our attention to the business of the day. Rev. S. S. Sevier was then chosen moderator, Rev. A. W. Curtis scribe.

Time was limited for reports from the churches, but the many revivals mentioned showed that good work has been in progress. One church, long languishing, was added to the rolls, five new ones received, and eight ordained ministers. Among the notable papers were those of Rev. Orishatukeh Faduma on How to Cultivate a Love for Reading, and Rev. S. S. Sevier on The Importance of Constant and Thorough Preparation for all Christian Workers.

The Woman's Missionary Union filled an evening session, and greatly interested the crowded house. The reports from the fields were a surprise. How, with their deep poverty and hard work, they manage to do so much for missions is a problem. Miss Cathcart's address on Life in Micronesia was a revelation.

A forenoon was filled with brief reports and addresses on Sunday School Work in a special State convention, and then Rev. R. B. Johns's address on The Right Use of the Bible resolved itself into a talk on The Anointing of the Spirit for Service, which resulted in special consecration. An hour was set apart for the examination of candidates for approbation to preach. The five-minute speeches on Temperance filled hours with hot shot that fell with telling effect—two or three speakers on their feet at once. Tobacco was strongly denounced, since so many use it in the South; and the opium habit was not spared, nor drinking. Sabbath desecration and excursions were denounced with strong resolutions. Many conversions resulted from that evening's work. Numbers of white people were present each night.

The dedication on Sunday proved the house much too small. Rev. F. G. Ragland preached an appropriate sermon. Rev. R. B. Johns offered the dedicatory prayer. The collection which followed was unique. A small debt still remained, and the pastor, Rev. J. E. McNeill, had told his people the night before to bring a nickel each. The aisles were cleared and a procession was started, and even from out of doors; keeping step to quaint old plantation melodies, each, as the spirit moved, came forward and put down a nickel or other small amount. Nearly $20 were raised.

In the afternoon we gathered again for the C. E. Union, in charge of Miss Cathcart, a wide-awake, earnest meeting, which included the best things in two minutes from each society's report, five breezy reports of the Washington convention and several stirring addresses. At night a prayer and praise service found a packed house again. The moderator's sermon was full of the spirit of united effort for Christ and his kingdom. The communion service followed, the wine administered from the water pitcher in glass goblets—their best—but the words spoken carried us beyond thought of these. Eleven persons responded to an earnest plea to the unconverted to decide for Christ at once. With tender prayer for these and the song, "Blest be the tie that binds," as all stood with clasped hands, the eighteenth annual association came to a close, to meet at Wilmington next year.

A. W. C.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, OCT. 9.

Mrs. C. E. Billings presided, and after reading Christ's prayer for his apostles and for all believers in John 17, spoke upon the power of prayer, recalling many illustrations of the subject in the Bible and the frequency of ejaculatory prayer. The calendar topics for the different days of the week were read, including prayer for the American Board and Woman's Board, the Norfolk and Pilgrim and Old Colony Branches, Sunday schools, a livelier faith in the promises of God, missionaries under appointment and the workers in the rooms of the Woman's Board. Many petitions were offered for these various interests and others.

Miss Stanwood, having recently returned from her vacation in Colorado, spoke of a pleasant meeting with representative foreign mission workers among the ladies of three churches in Denver, the First Church, Plymouth and South Broadway, and of the disadvantage under which they labor in their distance from headquarters, Chicago being as far from Denver as it is from Boston, and visits from Board officers and missionaries being necessarily infrequent; also of a call at the rooms of the W. B. M. I. in Chicago, where she had an interview with Miss Pollock and Miss Wright.

Mrs. Pedley of Niigata, Japan, was introduced. She went out in 1887 as Miss Martha Clark from Peacham, Vt., but during her residence in Japan has changed her name. She spoke of her own work, both before her marriage and since, and of the work of Miss Clara Browne of Niigata, especially among the children, asserting that the great need of Japan at present is a baptism of the Spirit.

Miss Agnes M. Bigelow of the Zulu Mission was also introduced, having reached her home in Lowell only the previous Saturday. From her experience in two schools, at Umzumbe and Inanda, she spoke of the different motives which influence the girls to attend.

Mrs. Huntington of Cleveland, connected with the Presbyterian Woman's Board, was cordially welcomed, and with her friendly greeting reiterated the assurance that "all are one in Christ Jesus."

Miss Caldwell announced that the Woman's Board Calendar for 1897 is now ready, and urged that a larger circulation than usual be secured.

Mrs. Billings reminded those present that the hour from five to six on Sunday afternoon is devoted to prayer for our missionaries and their work by many connected with the Board.

REV. OROSBY H. WHEELER, D.D.

Ex-President Wheeler of Euphrates College was born in Hampden, Me., Sept. 8, 1823, and died at Auburndale, Mass., Oct. 11. He graduated from Bowdoin College in 1847 and from Bangor Seminary in 1851. He served four years as pastor at Warren, Me. Then, offering himself to the American Board, he was accepted, and sailed for Smyrna in January, 1857. Six months later he arrived at Harpoot, there to remain, save for occasional visits to this country, until last July. He was the founder and first president of Euphrates College. How much he was beloved by the pupils of that institution may be inferred by the resolutions passed at the recent conference of Armenian preachers in Massachusetts, published on this page. He has been living for the last few months at Auburndale, and it has been a joy to his friends to minister to him after the awful ordeal through which he and his family passed.

ARMENIAN PREACHERS IN CONFERENCE.

The fourth semi-annual meeting of the Armenian preachers of Massachusetts and Rhode Island was held at the residence of Rev. M. H. Hitchcock, 3 Allston Street, Boston. The following named gentlemen, who are in active service, were present: H. S. Jelalian, Boston; H. Benneyan, Worcester; H. M. Filibbosian, Cambridge and vicinity; H. H. Sargavakian, Whitinsville; H. K. Santikian, Lowell, Lawrence and Nashua, N. H.; Caspar Ghazarian, Lynn; Kasbar der Kasbarian, Providence and vicinity; Haig Adadourian, Malden and vicinity. Rev. C. G. Kemalyan, Rev. A. M. Iknadiosian and Rev. M. H. Hovhannesian, now retired, Rev. Joshua Coit, secretary Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, and Rev. M. H. Hitchcock, superintendent Armenian Missions in Massachusetts, also met with the preachers in active service. Superintendent Hitchcock presided. The morning session was occupied by reports of the missions and a discussion of methods of work. The last mentioned item had been divided into three heads, preaching, visiting and helping. The first part was taken up in an essay by H. K. Santikian, the second by K. der Kasbarian, and the third by Haig Adadourian. Intemperance and licentiousness were discussed in the afternoon session by H. H. Sargavakian and H. M. Pilibbosian, respectively.

In the general discussion of the field and the work it was shown that sixteen different places are reached by these Armenian preachers or missionaries, that there are at least 2,300 Armenians living in these mission centers, and that these missionaries have been devotedly at work among these Armenians, looking after their secular as well as religious interests. The progress of the work in general was encouraging and the prospect promising. Mr. Coit, who was present at both sessions, was highly pleased with the amount of work accomplished, and expressed his hope that the Home Missionary Society would continue the partial support of the work as it has been doing during the past four years.

It may be added here that the work in Worcester and Providence is independent of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society; that is, the work in these cities is carried by local missionary societies. In all these different places, however, Armenians take their part in the support of the work.

A letter of appreciation to Rev. C. H. Wheeler, the veteran missionary to the Armenians and ex-president of Euphrates College, Harpoot, Turkey, signed by eight graduates of Euphrates College and one graduate of Central Turkey College, Aintab, Turkey, was drawn up and sent. Following is the text of the letter:

We, the eight Armenian ministers of the gospel, graduates of Euphrates College, laboring among our countrymen in various cities in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, convened at a ministers' meeting at 3 Allston Street, Boston, do hereby express our heartfelt gratitude to you, who have been the cause and the means of our mental and moral education. Your memory will be everlasting with us. We hope you will live in and through us. Yours was a life of self-denial and patient diligence. The world has been blessed by your life and work. God grant that our country may secure the desired freedom, so we may go back and continue the work which you began and continued so nobly and which is now in such a sad condition.

H D.

An institution which strongly appeals to our sympathies is the Mission High School at Ahmednagar, India. One of its departments is a manual training school, which promises much for a class of boys till now shut out from every opportunity of earning honorable self-support. Many of these boys are selected from native Christian families, whose income is not more than one cent a day for each member. After graduating from this school they are equipped to earn a living. The sum of $10,000 is needed to erect and furnish a workshop with benches and tools and to enlarge the boarding department. The government has given a site of four and a half acres. A gentleman in Bombay has promised $3,000 toward the shop, and has given $1,250 for new dormitories. In addition to gifts and pledges received, $5,000 more are needed, and the principal, Rev. James Smith, is now in this country, hoping soon to secure this sum. It costs only $15 a year to educate a boy in this school. We hope Mr. Smith may be able promptly to return to his work with the amount needed. Contributions may be sent through Mr. F. H. Wiggin, treasurer of the American Board.

The Home

NATURE'S WORSHIP.

BY FREDERIC PERRY NOBLE.

Not souls alone, O loving One, yield homage unto thee,
But bird and flower, in shrines of thine, make ceaseless melody.
Our hearts they soothe, our souls they lift, as praise and prayer they raise,
Till all of life's deep notes are keyed to thine eternal days.

A bright woman who was desirous to form a woman's club in the small town where she lived sent a circular letter to several of these organizations asking what benefits had accrued from them. One pithy reply was: "It's the best gossip killer I know of!" It is perfectly obvious that many good-natured people talk about their neighbors because they have nothing else to talk about. Once let their interest be kindled in something outside this narrow range of personalities and it is surprising how soon they cease to care whether Mrs. Jones took up her parlor carpet this fall, or to speculate where Mrs. Smith can be going all dressed up at this hour of the day. J. G. Holland said that "the confirmed gossip is always either malicious or ignorant. The one variety needs a change of heart and the other a change of pasture." God's grace must effect the first and one need not go afield for the last, as the ends of the earth are now brought to our notice by various agencies, not the least useful of which is a properly conducted woman's club.

It is significant, also, that so many of these clubs are turning their attention to subjects pertaining to the home. In examining a long list of topics to be discussed the present season by clubs in the vicinity of Boston alone, we were impressed that in nearly every instance there was a committee on child culture, or some kindred theme of paramount value. Literature and art by no means hold the monopoly of interest. In Newton Center, for instance, Prof. Charlton Black is to give a course of practical talks on Home Education for Children, presenting the ideals of the best English writers, and showing how children may be interested in them. Next February there is to be a national congress of mothers held in Washington, another indication that less vital subjects are not likely to usurp the attention of American women. Of special importance will be a discussion on means of developing in children characteristics which will elevate and ennoble them, and thus assist in overcoming the conditions which now prompt crime and make necessary the maintenance of jails, workhouses and reformatories.

The World's Food Fair, which opened in Mechanics Building, Boston, last week, is the third gathering of the sort in the same place within five years, showing that there is an increasing interest in the scientific principles that underlie the proper sustenance of the human body. Both the commonwealth and the city were represented on opening night and the fair may be said to have assumed national proportions, inasmuch as speakers of national repute like W. T. Harris, United States Commissioner of Education, J. S. Morton, Secretary of Agriculture, Hon. Carroll D. Wright and professors from several of the leading colleges are to be among the speakers during the five weeks' session. Each day there is a home congress, at which is discussed the relation of what we eat to the moral and mental as well as the highest physical development of the individual. All students of social conditions and all temperance workers now recognize the evil effects which accompany malnutrition, and it is believed that a scientific study of foods will be a step towards reform. There is a proposition to establish a national school of industries where these theories may be practically demonstrated.

AT THE MT. HOLYOKE FIRE.

"Blood will tell" in institutions as well as in families. This broader scope of the law of heredity had an emphatic illustration in the scenes connected with the recent destructive conflagration at Mt. Holyoke College. The sterling principles of common sense, self possession, perseverance, loyalty, conscientiousness, faith, which Mary Lyon held and practiced and taught in the early days of her seminary, have outlasted "the stones and brick and mortar" of the edifice she builded with so much zeal and self-denial sixty years ago. They have followed "South Hadley girls" wherever they have gone and remained the heritage of alma mater at home. It is said that at the burning several years ago of the daughter seminary at Oxford, O., one pupil in an upper story, met by the flames in the hall, returned to her room, carefully tied sheets and blankets together according to instructions previously given, let herself down beyond the second story, dropped to the ground and immediately reported to the principal with the quiet question, "What shall I do next?"

Similar presence of mind and systematic activity prevailed at the mother college. A private letter says, "There was no panic, no screaming; everybody worked and every body was sensible." It is reported that one pupil, in carrying down stairs her belongings tied up in a sheet, dropped in the hall a bottle, which broke, and that she immediately procured a broom and swept up the pieces of glass lest others might be injured by them. That was worthy of Mary Lyon. Before the fire was out a systematic arrangement was planned and manned—by women—and all the students distributed among the hospitable homes of the village.

At nine o'clock the next morning, by announcement passed around while the fire was still doing its work, the school met in the village church. One of the scholars writes: "When we saw the vestry filled with the girls and the faculty facing us from the platform, some one started, "H-o l-y-o-k-e, are we!" Then we felt that we were the college, although the building was no more. The cheer rang out brave and beautiful, and the teachers applauded. Then came a more inspiring part. Mrs. Mead arose and read the Ninety-first Psalm, which meant a great deal to us. Then the roll was called, and of all the nearly four hundred girls there was not a single one who did not either answer Present, or was answered for by some other one. Was it not a splendid record that nobody went shooting off on the electric cars without telling anybody? Then the doxology was sung and one of the professors made a wonderful prayer of thanksgiving. Then Mrs. Mead spoke of our plans. The only word of Mt. Holyoke would be to 'go forward." We were not to stand still for a moment. She brought us right back to the heart of things, and when she finished the college spirit was at its hight and we gave long, ringing cheers for the president and faculty and for the South Hadley people, and parted singing our chorus,

Holyoke, Holyoke, tried and true,
We will love her ever;
Alma mater and the blue
We'll forget, no never.

HOW MUCH DO FATHERS OWE TO THEIR SONS?

BY ELLEN CONWAY.

It is not any abstract question that is in mind, but one of literal dollars and cents. How much ought a father to spend for his son, how good an education, how many advantages ought he to give him, before he may feel that his duty to him is done? It is hard, to be sure, to discuss such a question in general terms. Circumstances differ. No rule will fit all cases. The income, the father's health, the size of the family, the boy's talents, the talents of his younger brothers and sisters—all these factors enter into every such problem, and no two problems are exactly alike. Each household must solve its own. And yet every household solves its problems with an eye out to its neighbors. Public opinion affects our private expenditures. We are all conscious of general standards to which we try, more or less, to conform. The standards and the public opinion ought surely to be fair subjects of discussion.

Now the question is, are not the standards of today getting to be rather high for parents? Is not public sentiment growing rather exacting towards them? For a rich father, of course, it is simple enough to do whatever the fashion may demand. From one in obviously narrow circumstances little is expected. It is the man of moderate means who really feels the perplexities of the situation. His boy must go to college, of course. No matter what he means to do afterward, no matter how little liking he has for books, it is a foregone conclusion that he goes to college. He must have a good "fit." He must not "crowd himself." He must not enter college too young. Eighteen is young enough. Many authorities prefer nineteen. At college, beside his regular bills—tuition, board, books, clothing, traveling, incidentals—there will be a formidable list of society expenses, for he will maintain—and quote his professors to support him—that the society life is "one of the most valuable educating influences of the course." Perhaps he gets tutoring to help out, or finds work to do in some of the long vacations, but more likely not, unless his father is really poor. The boy graduates, say, at twenty-two. Then come two or three years spent in studying his profession, one or two more in getting his start, and at twenty-five or twenty-six the young doctor or lawyer is ready to provide for himself.

Now it is perfectly true that his father has not been counting it a burden to maintain him all these years. It has been a pleasure, rather, a delight. Fathers do not complain of what they do for their children. They rejoice in it. Nevertheless, the matter is one that needs to be looked at from the standpoint of practical common sense as well as of sentiment and affection. "Parents ought to make sacrifices to give their children an education." Certainly they ought. But may not the parents' sacrifice be out of proportion, sometimes, to the child's benefit? And as for "education," is there to be no limit to its exactions? If it claims twenty-five years now, is it to claim thirty in the next generation, and then thirty-five?

It might seem harsh to say that boys ought to become actually "independent" as soon as they become legally so. And yet, taking into account the needs of younger brothers and sisters, as well as of fathers and mothers, is it certain that a reaction in that direction would be for the worse? The father who is able to send his son to college and a professional school is usually able to provide something in the way of insurance against his death. But often he is not able to provide much against the emergencies of life, against sickness, or hard times, or loss of work, or old age. Maintenance for four years to one son, or for eight if he has two, means four or eight years given away of his own maintenance in old age—why not? Indeed, it means much more than that, counting interest. It may be said that filial affection and gratitude will provide for that time when it comes. But surely it is more pleasant for parents not to be wholly dependent on affection and gratitude. Is it not also more fitting and more fair?

Suppose it were to become the custom, the expected thing, for a young man to regard his education, at least after twenty-one, not as something his father had owed to him, but as something he owed to his father? Suppose he were to give his father notes for the indebtedness, and were to make it his first business to pay them?

"It is pretty hard for a young man to begin life in debt." So it is. But it is pretty hard, too, for a middle-aged man to go plodding on through life just on the edge of debt, never far enough away to draw a long breath and begin to take things easily. "Marriages would have to be deferred?" Yes. But is it any harder for the girl to wait for her lover than for the wife to watch her husband growing old before his time?

Life is hard. We cannot get away from that, any of us. But is not the tendency in these days to accumulate too much of its hardness upon the period of middle age and to give youth too long an exemption from its cares and responsibilities?

SYMPATHY FOR THE RICH MAN.

One of the generous givers of the Northwest, who has passed on, remarked to us once, in a pitiful tone: "O, that I might now and then receive a word of kindness and love! Why am I deprived of human sympathy? Why do I never receive tokens of regard from those about me? The poor are cared for, flowers and loving letters are sent to the sick and sorrowing, pleasant surprises are prepared for those who have served their generation long and well, but I, who hunger for some intimation that I am valued in my church and community, am passed by, save as almost daily called upon to minister to others."

This cry of a strong, generous, lovable man opened up another side of the question. In this case, although loved and valued for his good deeds, highly esteemed for his work's sake, called upon in a thousand ways to minister to others from his abundant means, a superintendent of a large Sunday school for years, yet he went to his grave a hungry and, in one sense, a lonely man. He was appealed to constantly for charity, was consulted as to every form of religious activity, was ever generous and ready to listen to calls for help, was expected as a matter of course to head every "contribution paper," secular or religious, and was a gentleman in every sense of the term. At his funeral flowers were scattered in profusion. Eulogies, public and private, were pronounced. He was sincerely, truly mourned, but so far as he was concerned it was too late.

This is no fancy picture. We to whom he confided his feelings on one occasion saw his heartache, because with all that wealth could bestow he had few to say from the heart, "God bless you for your deeds of love." It was not that he craved fame, not that he desired notoriety, not that he coveted a reward for his noble gifts lavishly bestowed, but, like a simple-hearted child, he hungered for words of love from those he loved. He gave money, time, talent, but he received little in return, in a long life, to tell him that he was appreciated by his friends and neighbors. It was simply neglect on their part and a lack in expressing their true regard. They never dreamed that this strong, loving soul cared for any indication on their part showing their esteem, but by the very fact that he was lovable should receive in his lifetime the warm grasp of the hand and the manifestation of their love. S. E B

TAKING THINGS FOR GRANTED.

BY KATE UPSON CLARK.

This is an age of reason. We are taught that nothing should be taken for granted. Challenge, investigation, the probe and the meter are the order of the day, and yet, let us take a few things for granted still. Indeed, this must be done or else all reverence and those beautiful attributes which go with it must decay. Nathaniel, in Friend Olivia, alludes to one of these attributes when he says of Asa Bevin, "He was wise in that learning which comes by reverence." There is little enough remaining of it. Leave us still its shreds and patches. Thus the inquiring child, modern methods to the contrary notwithstanding, must take most truth for granted at the hands of his parents. Even as we grow older we must depend on the word of the wise in nearly every department for our knowledge. No human being can begin to experiment for himself in one-tenth of the lines in which he is sometimes obliged to work. His premises and most of his facts must be obtained from others.

The child's ideals must be formed from those of his home. Without express words he learns, if he has the right kind of parents, that the habit of smoking is folly, and worse; that no respectable man, if he loves his country and his God aright, will ever be seen in a liquor saloon; that moral worth and mind culture are in price far above rubies or any form of material wealth; that the churches represent God in the world, and that if one would help on God's work he must go to church and side with church-going people against the other sort; and a hundred other postulates, which accompany or follow these as inevitably as the day the sunrise.

All children will doubtless object sometimes to attendance upon church or school when there seems no special reason for doing so. They will sometimes treat guests rudely in spite of the best efforts of conscientious guardians, but the proper routine of a home assumes so much that the well-bred child comes to take certain things for granted and as essential to the every-day conduct of the family. He expects to go to church as surely as he expects to eat his breakfast on Sunday morning. He expects to bathe himself at certain stated hours, and if he cannot conveniently do this every day he sets aside certain times in the week for it, because he has been brought up to do it so regularly that he takes it for granted that the things must always be done thus and so. He accepts the duty of entertaining visitors and, perhaps, of seeing them to their homes as necessary.

"Why, how do your children learn to do these things without protest?" inquired one mother of another. "Mine make a fuss about going to bed, and another about getting up in the morning. They scold every-Sunday about going to church. If they can trump up the slightest excuse they want to stay at home from school. My eldest boy, who is fourteen, and ought to know better, almost refuses to see Miss H. home when she comes to make her calls, which have to be in the evening, for she has no other time. How do you contrive to have your children perform all these duties so willingly?"

The explanation was made that they had been from their earliest years required to do these little tasks so unwaveringly, and the possibility of any alternative had been so strenuously concealed from them that no question ever arose in their minds in regard to them. It was taken for granted that they were to be done; the ideals of the family as impressed every moment of every day since the children were born clearly demanded it, and accordingly they were done.

FATHER MARQUETTE.

You have room for the Pilgrims, as forth they embark,
God's rainbow above them, in Freedom's frail ark;
No room for the freedom of speech and of thought
That over the wave of the ocean they brought?
Ashamed to confess that you owe him a debt?
You've room for Columbus, but none for Marquette.

O nation first cradled in the bosom of God!
O nation whose fathers the martyr-path trod!
O fear not the Bible that fostered your youth,
And fear not the churches, the pillars of truth.
Rise up and confess that you owe him a debt!
You've room for Columbus, make room for Marquette.

—Pres. J. E. Rankin, Howard University.

A GOOD WORD FOR THE FARMER.

The farmers contribute the highest average moral character of any portion of our people. For four years I was governor of the commonwealth of Michigan, and once in every two or three weeks during the whole time I visited the normal reform school, where we have five or six hundred boys. I have talked to those boys a great many times, and I have asked all who came from farms, who were born and raised on the farms till they came there, to raise the right hands. I have asked this repeatedly, and out of 500 boys we never had fifteen. I do not say this to criticise people who do not live in the country. By nature we are all very much alike. But the farmer is right out in contact with honest mother nature. She teaches him lessons of fidelity and faithfulness and honesty. This is one thing you contribute very largely that you couldn't figure in dollars and cents.—Ex Governor Luce of Michigan, in an address at Chautauqua.

THE THREE GRAVES.

[See Conversation Corner.]

'Twas autumn and the leaves were dry
And rustled on the ground,
And chilly winds went whistling by,
With low and pensive sound.

As through the churchyard's lone retreat,
By meditation led,
I walked with slow and cautious feet
Above the sleeping dead,

Three little graves, ranged side by side,
My close attention drew;
O'er two the tall grass, bending, sighed,
And one seemed fresh and new.

As, lingering there, I mused awhile
On death's long, dreamless sleep
And opening life's deceitful smile,
A mourner came to weep.

Her form was bowed, but not with years,
Her words were faint and few,
And on those little graves her tears
Distilled like evening dew.

A prattling boy, some four years old,
Her trembling hand embraced,
And from my heart the tale he told
Will never be effaced.

"Mamma, now you must love me more,
For little sister's dead,
And t'other sister died before,
And brother, too, you said.

"Mamma, what made sweet sister die?
She loved me when we played;
You told me, if I would not cry,
You'd show me where she's laid."

"'Tis here, my child, that sister lies,
Deep buried in the ground;
No light comes to her little eyes,
And she can hear no sound."

"Mamma, why can't we take her up?
I'll put her in my bed;
I'll feed her from my little cup,
And then she won't be dead;

"For sister'll be afraid to lie
In this dark grave tonight,
And she'll be very cold, and cry
Because there is no light."

"No, sister is not cold, my child,
For God, who saw her die,
As he looked down from heaven and smiled,
Recalled her to the sky.

"And then her spirit quickly fled
To God, by whom 'twas given.
Her body in the ground is dead,
But sister lives in heaven."

"Mamma, won't she be hungry there,
And want some bread to eat?
And who will give her clothes to wear
And keep them clean and neat?

"Papa must go and carry some,
I'll send her all I've got;
And he must bring sweet sister home,
Mamma, now must he not?"

"No, my dear child, that cannot be,
But if you're good and true,
You'll one day go to her, but she
Can never come to you.

"'Let little children come to me,'
Once our dear Saviour said,
And in his arms she'll always be,
And God will give her bread."

—Seba Smith.

There is a fact concerning child life and a child's education which is more than hinted at in the statement which Barrie makes concerning Elspeth in his serial, Sentimental Tommy, now running in Scribner's. "Elspeth," he says, "often carried in her pocket a little Testament, presented to her by Rev. Mr. Dishart for learning by heart one of the noblest of books, the Shorter Catechism, as Scotch children do or did, not understanding it at the time, but its meaning comes long afterward and suddenly, when you have most need of it."

SLEEPING AND EATING.

The grape cure, which consists in living for six or eight weeks on good stale bread and the best of grapes, has proved beneficial in cases where the system is suffering from being over fed, but the treatment is not wise for consumptives, thin people or those who have any sort of wasting disease.

Miss Parloa says that the right way to boil an egg is not to boil it at all! It should be placed in boiling water in a covered vessel and kept on the back of the range for ten minutes, or a little longer if cooked on the table. In this way the albumen will be cooked evenly, whereas, if the egg has been boiled three minutes, it would have been soft within, tough without and very indigestible.

Dr. Felix Oswald maintains that frost is a great promoter of sound, protracted sleep, as proved by the fact that insomnia is a rare affliction of wintry climates. He also deprecates the use of too warm and heavy bedding. An air bath before retiring, a current of pure, cold air in the room all night, and the bedding so arranged that extra covers over the feet may be pulled up as the cool of dawn approaches are conditions likely to insure healthful slumber.

The same eminent authority advocates eating the principal meal at the end of the day for the reason that repletion causes somnolence. His argument is based upon the habits of from 80,000,000 to 100,000,000 men in an age far surpassing the present era for health worship and sanitary insight. From 800 B. C. to the third Christian century the one meal system prevailed all over Northern Europe and the Hellenized portions of Western Asia. That one meal was eaten at the end of the working day.

One great danger in giving up flesh food altogether is that one does not get a balanced diet. There will be an excess of starchy food and a deficiency of nitrogenous matter, in which flesh foods are abundant. To correct this the vegetarian should eat less potatoes, few or no turnips, parsnips and the more watery vegetables, substituting for these more of the grains in their varied forms, more onions, eggs and such leguminous foods as beans and peas, also more fruit and nuts. A few of the latter after a meal promote the secretion of saliva and aid digestion.

A notable series of lectures was delivered at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington not long ago by Prof. Elmer Gates, and the New York Medical Times, commenting upon one of them, says:

We know that great grief, fright or intense anger may so poison the milk of the nursing mother as to carry death to the child. Professor Gates has not only isolated this poison and shown it in crystals, but has demonstrated that bad and unpleasant feelings create harmful chemical products in the body, which are physically injurious, while good, pleasant and benevolent feelings create beneficial chemical products, and these products may be detected by chemical analysis in the perspiration and urine. Professor Gates claims that this is not a theory but an actual fact. By exciting definite emotions in individuals and analyzing the perspiration, he has already been able to identify forty poisons and as many beneficially chemical products. If with every bad or good emotion there is a corresponding chemical change in the tissues, the one depressing and poisonous and the other exhilarating and life promoting, the secret of heaven and hell in our present life, and how to avoid the one and secure the other, is in a measure unfolded.

Closet and Altar

When prayer brings no solace to your weary heart try praise.

Good and holy sentiments are the oil which feeds the lamp of prayer. And this suggests an occasional use of good books over and above their normal use. There are seasons to every devout person when the vessel of the heart seems to run dry and the flame of prayer burns low in the socket. You may then often replenish the vessel by reading the favorite spiritual author. Pass your eye once more over that marked passage, over those words which glow with such a fervor of devout sentiment; and the oil will flow again, drop by drop, into the vessel.—E. M. Goulburn.

"Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Is it so? Is this a fact in our own personal experience? Peace with God. This is the starting point of all blessing, the opening out of a vista of "joy unspeakable and full of glory." Look well into these words in the sunlight of God's favor. Then look out humbly into the battle of life and say it, in your wife's face, in your children's faces, in your servants' faces: "We have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."
—Webb Peploe.

It seems an easy thing,
Mayhap, one day to sing;
Yet the next day
We cannot sing or say.

Keep silence with good heart,
While silence fits our part;
Another day
We shall both sing and say.

. . . . . .

Can we not sing or say?
In silence let us pray,
And meditate
Our love-song while we wait.

—C. G. Rossetti.

As you value your faith, your God and your Saviour, as you look for a nobler and better character, keep the spiritual eye upward. Pray when and where you will, but pray as a habit. The heavenly eye must be kept trained and adjusted to heavenly visions if it would gain anything from them.
—Bishop Lawrence.

Almighty God, we would not rush into thy presence with hasty words upon our lips; but we would seek thy face with meekness of heart and humbleness of mind. Grant that we may be given the right spirit with which to address thee; that we may understand thy perfections and be submissive to thy will concerning us; that we may remember that thou art our Father in heaven and that we should come to thee with the confidence and trust of little children. Implant in us, we pray thee, O God, desires pure and sincere, so that when we pray we may not ask only with our lips for such things as would please thee, but that we may long for them with our heart, and with all the strength of our spiritual being. O Lord, may we desire and ask only for those things which make for peace, those things which will better fit us for membership in thy church below, and for citizenship in thy kingdom above, to which we hope to come through him who loved us and gave himself for us, even Jesus Christ our Saviour. Amen.

Mothers in Council.

TEACHING CHILDREN ABOUT DEATH.

I was interested in the article on teaching children about death and heaven, and it occurred to me that possibly my experience might help some one, as children will ask questions when one has no caterpillar and butterfly with which to illustrate.

Some years ago the mother of a little girl, then four years old, died. During the last few days of the mother's illness the child was at her grandmother's. I think she was not told of the event till her father brought her home after the house had settled to quiet again. She came running in and looked on the lounge, then ran to the bedroom where she had always found her mother. Stopping on the threshold, she looked back to the lounge, while a puzzled look came over her face.

"Where is my mamma, auntie?"

"Mamma has gone to live with Jesus, dear, where she will never be sick any more."

"What made her go there?"

"Because Jesus wanted her to come."

"Can't I go and see her?"

"Not now. By and by, if you love Jesus, you will go and see him and mamma." I talked with her about heaven, how pure and happy every one was who went there. Before the mother went she wished the little one to see her after she was placed in the casket. When everything was ready I took her in my lap and said, "You know mamma has been sick a good many weeks, don't you?"

"Yes. But she isn't sick now."

"No. Mamma has gone to live with Jesus, and will never be sick again. But God made mamma a house to live in while she lived here, and when she went to live with him she left that house, because she did not need it here."

"But why doesn't she need it now?"

"Do you remember that you lived in Mr. Blank's house before you came to this house to live?"

"Yes."

"Why don't you live there now while you live here?"

"We can't live in two houses, of course."

"No, and Jesus has given mamma a nice new house to live in that will never be tired nor sick any more, and so she does not need the house she has lived in so long any more. She left it here when she went to her new one. Now I am going to take you into the other room and let you see the house she left."

As I held her in my arms by the casket I said: "Remember, darling, this is not mamma, but only just the house she lived in. Don't you know when she was here she always opened her eyes and smiled at you?"

"Yes. Why doesn't she now? It looks like mamma."

"Do you remember when we all went away last summer we closed the blinds and locked the doors? Somebody came to see us while we were gone. Did we speak to them?" t

"No."

"Why didn't we?"

"Because we were not here, and didn' know when they came."

"Did the house speak to them?"

"No; the house couldn't talk."

"Just so mamma has gone away to be with Jesus, and can't speak to her little girl, and the house she has left cannot speak to you."

Some weeks later she asked, "Is my mamma dead? B—— said she was."

"No, dear, your mamma is alive; but when people go away as your mamma has then people say they are dead, but it is only the house they lived in that is dead, because they have gone out of it, so it can't be alive any longer."

A few days after the funeral she asked, "What made the men put mamma's house in the ground?"

"Because that is the right way to take care of our house after we are gone out of it."

"Won't it make mamma feel bad?"

"Do you remember when mamma made this little dress for you?"

"Yes."

"What did she do with the old one that was worn out?"

"Put it in the rag-bag."

"Did you feel bad because it was put in the rag-bag?"

"No."

"Why?"

"Because I had this new one to wear and did not want the old one."

"Just so God has given mamma a new house to live in so much better than the old one that she does not care any more about that one being put in the ground than you cared because the old dress was put in the rag-bag."

So far as I can tell she has not one unpleasant thought about death or dying. When she has been good or gained some victory over temptation, and I say that I think Jesus is pleased with his little girl, quick as a flash she adds, "And mamma." Jesus and mamma seem to be linked very pleasantly in her thoughts. A member of her Sunday school class died about a year after the mother went. Not long afterwards, she asked: "Do you think Nellie has seen my mamma and talked to her? What do you think she said to her?"

It seems to me so much better to give a child such an idea of death and heaven than to let one gain the impression of one little child I know about. Her grandpa died, and some weeks after, when asked, "Where is grandpa?" she replied, "All deaded and carried off in a cupboard." AN AUNTIE.

HOW FAR SHOULD A MOTHER NEGLECT HERSELF?

"I am an old woman now," writes a subscriber, "but I read your department of Mothers in Council with deep interest, and I fairly ache to give young mothers the benefit of my mistakes. But would they listen to me? Does not every married woman have to go through her own bitter experience before she learns how to bring up a family properly?"

Omitting the parts of the letter which have no relevancy to the question asked above, we give the substance of what our friend says concerning self-neglect, for we believe her case is a typical one:

No woman can do the best for those she loves unless she takes care of herself first of all. This sounds selfish, but it is not. The regular round of housework, with no opportunity for change or recreation, if continued year in and year out, will surely break down the health and spirits of the strongest woman. And when the housemother has fits of depression it makes the whole family unhappy. I wish now that I had left windows unwashed and clothes unironed and insisted upon my right as a human being to some time for recreation and self-culture, not for my own sake, but to be in better condition to minister to others. I would not advocate slack housekeeping, but if something must be neglected don't let it be folks. It is much easier to work, too, when one feels rested and happy, but it is impossible to be cheerful with a jaded, worn-out nervous system. Little faults in the children which nearly worried me to death when I was so weak and miserable I saw afterwards in a different light, and I realize now that I made mountains out of molehills.

Still I have no one to blame but myself. My husband was always urging me to "let things go," but I felt it was my duty to "sacrifice" myself for him and the children. But I believe that with such sacrifice the Lord is not well pleased. Months of enforced rest at a sanitarium opened my eyes at last and now I feel like saying to every young mother: Don't neglect yourself except when illness or something else demands it. Look out for number one, not selfishly, but conscientiously, in order that you may have more health and better spirits for your family and friends.

A mother was explaining to a diminutive juvenile the meaning of a picture representing a number of martyrs who had been thrown to some hungry lions. She tried to impress his infant mind with the terrors of the scene, and thought she had succeeded, when suddenly he exclaimed, "O, ma, just look at that poor little lion behind there! He won't get any."—Answers.

Your Neighbor

doesn't know what she is missing by not using Cleveland's baking powder.

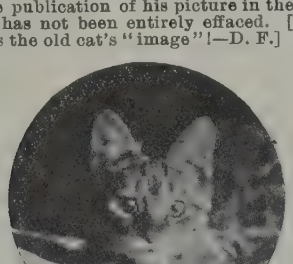
Absolutely Pure-Delicious-Nutritious

The Breakfast Cocoa
MADE BY
WALTER BAKER & CO. LIMITED
DORCHESTER, MASS.
COSTS LESS THAN ONE CENT A CUP.
NO CHEMICALS.
ALWAYS ASK YOUR GROCER FOR WALTER BAKER & CO'S. BREAKFAST COCOA MADE AT DORCHESTER, MASS. IT BEARS THEIR TRADE MARK LA BELLE CHOCOLATIÈRE ON EVERY CAN.
AVOID IMITATIONS

The Conversation Corner.

THE place of honor this week is given to a letter concerning one of our Corner pets. I was thinking the other day that it had been a long time since we had heard from him; we shall all read now with interest the latest—and last—tidings from Bonnie-Joli.

Dear Mr. Martin: With all the various cats that have been brought, of late, to the attention of Cornerers, I trust the image of one who has been honored by the publication of his picture in these columns has not been entirely effaced. [O, no, here is the old cat's "image"!—D. F.]

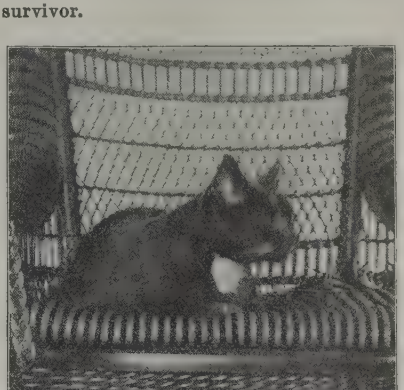


Of course you remember that this was no other than Bonnie-Briar Bush, alias Bonnie-Joli, the Huntington Avenue cat, for which a name was solicited through the Corner some two years ago. [See Corners for Nov. 22, 1894, and Jan. 24, 1895.] You recall the delightful gathering you attended, together with D. F., the editor of the Home Department, and the lady from the Congregational Library, when these discreet persons selected, from seventy or more suggested names, the one which has become familiar throughout Cornerdom. You remember too, perhaps, that later, when housekeeping was broken up in the Huntington Avenue apartments, an excellent (Congregational) home was secured for him in the city of Newton. A few months later still, Bonnie's new mistress moved to New York for a time, and he was bequeathed to a neighboring grocery, where he has dozed on the counter, sauntered about in a lordly way and become the friend of many customers. Before he was transferred to the grocery and at least four months after he left our abode I visited him in his Newton home, and hardly had my wheel paused at the gate when down he trotted from the piazza, purring me his old-time welcome.

Now comes the saddest part of this cat tale. Last week I received this letter from the people in Newton where he was first housed: "Bonnie died suddenly a few days ago. He had the best of care up to the last. He had become the pet of the neighborhood and was considered the wisest and most loving cat in Newton. He had many friends because he showed himself friendly. The store people said they were so surprised to find him lying, as if sound asleep. He had died in the night. No one can imagine the cause." So this is the end of dear Bonnie-Joli. If I had more time I should let the tears drop that are trembling on my lashes, for I loved Bonnie and I think he loved me. Anyhow, he was a great credit to the Corner, and his example ought to raise the standard of cat behavior all through our constituency. H. A. B.

I feel like expressing something like sympathy with H. A. B., for I know I should be grieved if anything should happen to Kitty Clover—I am sure I should find time to let the lash trembling tears actually drop, although I never sent my cat away to board nor left him to lounge or languish on the counter of a grocery store. It is scarcely necessary to add that now, with the passing of B. J., Kitty Clover is not only our senior charter member, in the cat department, but that in age and social position he ranks every other Corner cat. We do indeed discern signs of infirmities belonging to his advanced years—he likes to occupy an easy-chair in the parlor much of the day and his sight seems to be getting dim; yet even now if he sees a dog approaching, or a man with plumber's tools at the back door, he executes an alibi in double quick time!

So, having enticed him by a lunch of catnip and a favorite shawl to face Willie D.'s courteous camera, I am able now to present to you, as a companion picture to the cat that is not, the photograph of his worthy survivor.



HARVARD, MASS.

Dear Mr. Martin: . . . I wonder if any one of the Cornerers has ever seen a cat that can catch butterflies. Riding by a house one morning, not long since, I saw a pussy pounce upon a butterfly that alighted on the ground near it. A few days after I saw the same pussy spring for another butterfly; but the butterfly attempted to escape, winging its way along the street. The cat gave chase, jumping into the air and trying to catch it with its forepaws, as a boy would spring to catch a ball. Several times the butterfly was struck to the ground, but managed to elude its pursuer till some rods were covered, when the persistent cat secured its victim. The way that cat jumped into the air and "played ball" was a novel sight to me!

OLD CORNERER.

As cats have now introduced butterflies, here is a letter about the insect kingdom:

CLINTON, CT.

Dear Mr. Martin: Yesterday I found a little green "walking-stick." He is just the color of a blade of grass. His body is two and one-half inches long, and he has six legs, each one inch long. Can you tell me the name of any book on bugs or insects? MARY H.

Professor Packard's Entomology for Beginners (Holt & Co., New York) is the standard book for young folks and it refers to your walking stick family, but I fear it would be too learned for you. Julia McNair Wright's Nature Readers, or Seaside and Wayside, describe in a simple and interesting way all sorts of "bugs"—ants, bees, barnacles, butterflies, beetles, crabs, and so on to wasps. (D. C. Heath & Co., Boston; No. 1, 25 cents; No. 2, 35 cents; No. 3, 50 cents.) Sir John Lubbock has a book on Ants, Bees and Wasps (Appletons, $2), S. H. Scudder of the Boston Society of Natural History has one on Butterflies (Holt & Co., $1.50), and one of Mrs. Sanborn Tenney's Young Folks' Pictures and Stories of Animals is on Bees, Butterflies and other Insects (Lee & Shepard, 30 cents) The first is more scientific, the second more popular, the last for children.

The request still coming from all parts of the country for copies of the old verses referred to in Corners of July 16, Aug. 27 and Sept. 24—"'Twas autumn, and the leaves were dry,"—lead to the publication of the whole poem in the Home Department of this week. A letter from a lady in Roslindale, Mass., gives us at last the true authorship, so long in question, viz., Seba Smith. Many of you will not know now who he was. Ask your grandfather, and he will tell you that he was "Major Jack Downing" of Portland who, over that nom de plume, wrote a remarkable series of letters in the hot political times of "Gin'ral Jackson." He wrote this poem in early life, as also another, equally famous, "The Mother Perishing in a Snowstorm"—"The cold winds swept the mountain's hight." I am interested to see in Professor Cleveland's history of Bowdoin College (where the author graduated in 1818) that Mr. Smith also wrote, when in college, that beautiful little poem, "The Nazarene," which I remember as the first piece I ever spoke "on the stage," and which I think I still have somewhere, in the sprawling hand of a boy of nine years old.

Mr. Smith died, after a checkered life, in 1868. His wife, who was well known in other years as Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith, a gifted lecturer and author, died in North Carolina in 1893. Both are buried in the little hamlet of Blue Point, Long Island. Was "Memnon," appended to the verses in the Providence reader, his nom de plume?

Mr. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

A Wreck that Was not Wrecked. I received a letter last evening from a business man in St. John, N. B., expressing his interest in the picture and account of the "Wreck of the Glendon at Hampton Beach" on this page in the issue of Sept 17, as he had often shipped cargoes by her, and "she seemed like an old friend." I have just now seen in an English magazine the strange story of another St. John vessel—perhaps he would like to know about her. It was the Rock Terrace of St. John, bound from Philadelphia to Japan with a cargo of oil and phosphates, worth over $100,000. When near the Philippines—see where they are on your map—she apparently became unseaworthy, and the crew insisted on abandoning her, the captain reluctantly consenting to go with them. The underwriters were convinced that she must have foundered soon after she was abandoned and paid the owners the insurance. More than a year afterwards the Rock Terrace came sailing into one of the harbors of the Gilbert Islands—in Micronesia, you know—without captain, pilot or crew! The natives took possession of her and landed the entire cargo. They had never been accustomed to the use of phosphates, as their cocoanut and breadfruit trees do very well without artificial fertilizers! The oil they appreciated more and it was distributed around among them. Our correspondent might suggest to the commanders of St. John vessels the historic motto, "Don't give up the ship!"

A Jersey Jumper. It was a Jersey cow in Harrodsburg, Ky. She did not jump over a fence as cows have been known to do before, but up into the branches of a maple tree, eight feet from the ground. No one saw her make the jump, but she was found, according to the newspapers, tightly wedged between the branches, and had to be got down with a derrick. It is a mystery how she could, and why she should, make such an ascent. If there were any academy or college near the solution would be easy—for that has been a favorite diversion of brainy scholars for generations to guide the steps of some forlorn cow or mule to some great hight, like a chapel tower. Have the boys in the Blue Grass country adopted that venerable pastime?

L. H. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR OCT. 25. Prov. 1: 1-19.

PROVERBS OF SOLOMON.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

The last lesson treated of the wisdom of Solomon. It is appropriate, therefore, that the lesson which follows that should be selected from what are known as his wise sayings. These verses are chosen as specimens of the entire collection. We therefore consider:

I. The place of the book of Proverbs in the Bible.

1. Its history. The name of Solomon has been given to the entire book, as the name of David has been associated with the collection of Psalms. But the book represents the practical wisdom of ages before and after the time of Solomon—wisdom expressed according to Oriental habits of thought. It was not completed till several centuries after Solomon died. It includes five books, the first (chaps. 1-9) made up of poems on wisdom. The collection made in Hezekiah's time (chaps. 25-29) must be dated at least 300 years later than Solomon. The proverbs from chap. 22: 17 to chap. 24 inclusive are called "sayings of the wise." "The words of Agur" are contained in chap. 30, and "the words of Lemuel" in chap. 31: 1-9. The remainder of the chapter, of unknown authorship, is an elaborate acrostic poem whose subject is "a virtuous woman." The whole book, as is plainly shown, is the fruit of the observation and experience of many wise men in many ages. There is hardly a single reference in it connecting it with the history of Israel. It is the utterance of the wisdom of the ancient world, not exclusively of any one nation.

2. Its structure. Proverbs, Ecclesiasticus, Ecclesiastes, the Wisdom of Solomon and Job are included in what is known as the wisdom literature of the Bible, two of the books being placed in the Apocrypha. Proverbs includes sonnets, epigrams, folk songs and proverbial sayings, 375 of the latter in a single collection. For a study of the structure and contents of the book, the student may well consult the volume devoted to it in Professor Moulton's Modern Reader's Bible.

Its value. No doubt those who prepared and those who collected these proverbs intended that they should be committed to memory. "It is a pleasant thing if thou keep them with thee, if they be established together upon thy lips." It would be of great service to this country if Sunday school teachers generally were to encourage their pupils to learn the proverbs by heart, and if the recitation of them were a common custom. Some years ago a young man wrote to the New York Tribune asking what was the best short treatise to guide him to success in business. The editor named first the New Testament and next the book of Proverbs, adding that he had known a young man who had gained great success who in early life committed the entire book to memory, and afterward, when he came to employ a number of persons, gave to each one a copy of the book, with the request that they, also, learn its contents. The thrift of the Scotch people can in large degree be traced to their esteem for this book, whose sayings are household words in many of their families. "The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails well fastened."

II. The substance of the book of Proverbs. This first chapter is an introduction to the entire collection. The general thesis is stated in v. 7: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but the foolish despise wisdom and instruction." We have:

1. The thesis stated positively [vs. 7-9]. The blessedness of being wise is presented to the young as:

(a) The fear of God [v. 7]. The marginal translation makes it "the principal part of knowledge." Men of all classes are moved by their consciences to respect the man whose conduct is governed by the will of God. They know he is to be trusted. The stability of government and of society is assured when leaders fear God. Health, a clear head and serenity of mind come from obeying divine laws. "It shall be health to thy navel, and marrow to thy bones." Prosperity, in its truest meaning, follows such obedience. "Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom"; and wisdom says: "Whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favor of the Lord."

(b) Loyalty to parents [vs. 8, 9]. They are regarded in the Bible as representing God to the child. They ought to stand in that relation to their children. Marriage "in the Lord" means not only the greatest happiness but the most solemn responsibilities. The stability and safety of the nation depend on the integrity of its homes. Those who are true to the ideal of the Christian home bless the whole race. The young man who is thinking about marriage should consider whether he owes it to society to establish a home and what kind of marriage will be most likely to do that service honorably for his fellowmen. The selfishness which avoids such responsibilities often defeats itself, and the man finds himself in mature life uncared for and uncaring, with a very different estimate of life and of his fellowmen from what he would have had if he had surrounded himself with wife and children. To plant and foster homes in which God is honored and obeyed must be the aim of all good citizens. Children must be trained to live for that end, to love their homes and to look forward to establishing homes for themselves in the fear of the Lord.

2. The thesis stated negatively [vs. 10-19]. It is briefly, have no fellowship with sinners in their evil doings. The language of injustice is not now usually so frank as this in our lessons. Those who want to appropriate the property of others do not commonly say, "Let us lurk privily for the innocent without cause." They rather say, "The innocent hold possessions to which we have rightful claim. But the laws of the land are unjust and will not let us have them." They take the language of Proverbs in saying, "We will all have one purse," but they mean to keep the purse. They glibly tell how we can all enjoy power and how we can all get money if we will only combine to do it. "We shall fill our houses with spoil; cast in thy lot among us." But the honest man who is deluded by these speeches, which in heated political campaigns seem to fill the air, will cast in his purse and find himself cast out in the end. The curse of wickedness is self-destruction. Greed of gain "taketh away the life of the owners thereof."

Yet wisdom is always crying in the streets, if one will listen for her. Her words are simple and easily understood. In present crises in many a life, and in our nation as well, her words in this wonderful first chapter of Proverbs may be translated, "Don't be fools," and the wise will understand them. "For the backsliding of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them. But whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell securely, and shall be quiet without fear of evil."

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, Oct. 18-24. Daily Use of the Bible. Ps. 19: 7-14; John 14: 20-27.

For knowledge of God, of man, of self; for power to resist temptation, to realize the presence of God, and to do his will.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

In my opinion, there can be no words too strong for denouncing suitably the abominable practice of gambling—now, I believe, more rife even than during my youth—and the ruinous consequences to which it directly leads. I am aware of the arguments raised upon the definition of the word, but I regard them as little better than mere quibbles.—William E. Gladstone.

Sunlight Soap
SAVES its cost in LABOR ten times over. Rub it on lightly; let the clothes soak a short time; then rinse. It washes Clothes itself and doesn't hurt the clothes.
Pure Soap No Chemicals. No Adulteration.
Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson and Harrison Sts., New York.

The Many Fail, One Succeeds:

Liebig, the great chemist, succeeded in making that scientific marvel, Extract of Beef, —the essence of all that is best in beef. The makers of succeeded, over thirty years ago, under his direction, in making this product so perfect as to secure his endorsement and the right to use his signature on every jar.

Liebig COMPANY'S Extract of Beef

There have been many imitations, mostly failures, but none approaching the Liebig COMPANY'S for purity, strength and fine flavor.

Quick as a Flash!

WHITMAN'S INSTANTANEOUS CHOCOLATE.

HOW TO USE IT. Take three dessert spoonfuls to a cup of boiling water or milk. Stir briskly a moment, and your Chocolate is ready to serve. Put up in 1 lb. and ½ lb. tins.

Stephen F. Whitman & Son, Sole Mfrs., Philadelphia.

When you Buy Entire Wheat Flour

See that the barrel is marked with our

Trade-Mark WWW

Franklin Mills Co., Lockport, N. Y.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

ISAAC RILEY,

Successor to Baird & Riley,

PLUMBER AND SANITARY ENGINEER,

85 Joy St., Near Cambridge St., Boston.

Telephone, Haymarket 294.

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

OUR OWN WORK.

Among the Red Men. An attractive illustrated article by Secretary Ryder on our Indian work appears in The American Missionary for October. He points out two encouraging features in the development of Christian life in the States in which Indian reservations still exist: the increasing responsibility felt by the white Christians for the solution of the Indian problem, and the advancement of the Indian churches in Christian life and Congregational methods. It is most unfortunate that the school work at Santee, Oahe and Fort Berthold has suffered on account of reduced appropriations. One can scarcely believe that the bright, intelligent, neatly-dressed children at Santee, whose pictures appear in connection with this article, are of Indian parentage. After looking at their eager faces we read with fresh regret that the number of pupils at Santee has been reduced during the past months from 240 to about 100, although the former number could have been not only maintained but largely increased if the funds had warranted it. The industrial department has suffered as the superintendents of blacksmithing and shoemaking have been dismissed. The out-station missionary work, however, which is so important, has not been allowed to decline, and Secretary Ryder describes with enthusiasm the dedication of the Congregational church at Blue Cloud's Village, otherwise known as the Remington Station. The Indians themselves contributed $400 toward the erection of the new building. Another evidence of spiritual growth is the organization and recognition of a church at White Horse Village, to be supported by the native missionary society. At the Crow Agency the outlook is cheering. Ours is the only Protestant mission among this tribe of 3,000 thrifty and intelligent Indians. The United States Government has recently granted a plot of land to the A. M. A. for missionary purposes among this tribe. That this was done in accordance with the express desire of a majority of the Crows shows that their confidence has been won.

Missionary Work and Special Objects. An important editorial in The Missionary Herald under this title sets forth the attitude of the American Board with regard to donations for the support of particular objects. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (South) has placed itself on record as deeming it "not wise to multiply special objects in the foreign field to which contributions are devoted by churches, societies, Sunday schools or individuals, as diverting attention from the great work of Christ, which is one, and as embarrassing the executive committee in its control of the mission funds." The Herald looks on both sides of the matter. It acknowledges that donors have a right to decide upon the objects to which their gifts shall be devoted, and it recognizes the fact that interest is more easily aroused in a particular individual or school than in the missionary enterprise in the abstract. On the other hand, it points out the danger in losing sight of the true missionary motive, which, in simple loyalty to Christ and in love for the world for which he died, strives to give his gospel to any and all who can be reached. The American Board, however, does not discourage special offerings. It takes them gratefully if they be gifts, not in the place of, but over and above, the contributions to the general work.

Clocks and Medicine. In writing of the evangelistic efforts in connection with the Tung-Cho Hospital and Dispensary, Dr. J. H. Ingram says he has often thought that the want of clocks in China will certainly be one of the means by which God will save many souls. One of the most satisfactory results of the past year has been the opportunity for work among the women who come to the dispensary. They frequently arrive very early, as they have no means of telling the time at home and they are usually so anxious for treatment that they err on the safe side and appear an hour or two before dispensing time. One of the Bible women talks with the early comers while they are waiting for the doors to open and seed is sown in the waiting-room from day to day which sometimes bears visible fruit. The opening for medical work among Chinese women is evidenced by the increasingly large numbers flocking to the hospital and dispensary. Of the 10,000 treatments given the past year over one-third have been to women.

THE WORLD AROUND.

The Plain Truth. The most stirring feature of the semi-annual meeting of the New York Presbytery was the report and the earnest pleading address of Dr. J. R. Davies, chairman of the committee on foreign missions. After announcing that the receipts during August were thirty-four per cent. less than during the same month last year, Dr. Davies declared that never has the problem of foreign missions been so perplexing. Not only has the financial support been steadily declining, but obstacles and barriers of other kinds have arisen in many directions to thwart and paralyze the efforts of the church to convert the unevangelized nations. He pointed out with intense earnestness that the falling missionary contributions and other signs indicate the need of a great spiritual awakening and revival not only among lay members but among the clergy of the church. Dr. Davies looks forward with hopefulness to the series of meetings to be held in New York by Mr. Moody in November, and begged his hearers to take advantage of this occasion to arouse themselves to "greater devotion and zeal in the cause of Christ, that he may be enshrined in us, not only as prophet and priest, but especially as King."

In a Spanish Prison. One of the most interesting and aggressive missionaries now in the United States is Rev. A. C. Diaz, the well-known Baptist pastor in Havana, who has been giving addresses on Cuba in many places. It will be remembered that Mr. Diaz was arrested a few months ago for preaching civil and religious liberty to his congregation, some of whom were sympathizers with the insurgents. He was warned to cease promulgating such doctrines, but he persisted and was finally routed out of bed by a body of Spanish soldiers. His experiences in a Spanish prison under sentence of death prove that even today the servants of Christ may be called upon to endure imprisonment for conscience's sake. For two weeks he and his brother were confined in Morro Castle and were permitted to see preparations being made for their execution. Mr. Diaz describes the critical situation graphically:

> All that day and evening we prayed and sang hymns, preparing for death. Toward midnight, when I was almost asleep, I was startled by feeling some one kissing my hand. I jumped from my bed and found a Spanish soldier weeping bitterly by my side. I recognized him as a member of my congregation, and he asked me if he could do anything for me. I took pencil and paper from him and wrote a telegram to the president of the Southern Baptist Missionary Union, telling of my danger. The soldier succeeded in smuggling the telegram through, and the next day everything was changed. Instead of being shot we were allowed to converse, to receive friends and have everything but liberty. I was afraid that the same danger might arise again and asked one of my members to send a telegram to Secretary of State Olney, telling of my imprisonment and the fact that I was an American citizen. Weyler refused to allow the telegram to be sent, but my faithful messenger succeeded in smuggling it on board a steamer, and he was arrested just as the steamer pulled out. The man confessed to having sent the telegram, and when Weyler heard of it he immediately telegraphed to Washington, "Diaz released." That same day I was released, and with my family I was exiled and forced to leave on the next steamer.

PEN AND SCISSORS.

Miss Cornelia Sorabji, in a recent article on the education of Indian women in the Madras Review, thus characterizes the life of an average Hindu girl after the age of ten years: "And it came to pass that the child grew and was admitted to the select vituperations of her mother-in-law and the care of a masculine appetite."

The Archbishop of Canterbury has announced the subjects for discussion at the Conference of Bishops of the Anglican Church, to be held at Lambeth next summer. Under the heading of Foreign Missions are these topics: The Duty of the Church to the Followers of Ethnic Religions, Judaism, Islam; Development of Native Churches; Relation of Missionary Bishops and Clergy to Missionary Societies.

The Church Missionary Society is advancing into Central Soudan. Bishop Tugwell, accompanied by two other missionaries, has visited several points in Sokoto, with a view to establishing a mission among the Hausas, the most important nation of the Soudan. The king and chiefs at Koeffe received them graciously and Mr. L. H. W. Nott, who is familiar with the language, will probably return in a few months to open Christian work in this dark corner of Africa.

An interesting tribute to the character and influence of American missionaries in Turkey comes from Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador in Turkey. He is reported to have said in a recent letter: "I feel the most sincere respect and admiration for the courage and devotion shown by the American missionaries in Asia Minor, and it is a consolation for want of success in other directions if I have been able to assist them to continue their labors in the cause of religion and civilization."

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. I. O. RANKIN.

Topic, Oct. 25-31. My Favorite Bible Proverb, and Why. Prov. 2: 1-10.

Men who have thought much about life are very apt to put their opinion of it into a short sentence which they can easily remember. Sometimes they make it themselves, oftener they borrow it from the wisdom of other people. Such a bit of concentrated wisdom is often helpful to us when we have to make sudden choices. It is like the needle of the compass which tells us at once the direction in which we wish to go.

The Bible is full of these short, sharp and easily remembered sayings, and the one book which especially goes by the name of Proverbs has probably given us more wise and helpful sentences than any other in the world. No safer guide for daily conduct for young men can be found. Its wisdom is just as well adapted to this age as it was to that of Solomon, and the various sayings fit all sorts of temptation and discouragement. It is a good book in which to search for a motto to live by, and the proverb we choose will be likely to show our view of life.

Not all proverbs are from the Bible, however, and a proverb is sometimes only half a truth. "The world owes every man a living" is a proverb, but it is not true unless the man is a man. That "charity begins at home" is a proverb, but the people who like to quote it often do not let charity begin at all. We must avoid the devil's wisdom or we shall be led astray. We want a many-sided proverb if we are going to live by it, not one that will make us more one-sided than we already are. Our favorite proverb will be a test of character as well as a help to character. It should lift us up, not let us down. It should broaden us out, not shut us in. It should take account of God and man, and help us to resist temptation and do right perseveringly. If this be true of it, the oftener we remember it and the more closely we follow it the better will it be for our Christian life.

Literature

BOOK REVIEWS.

LITERARY STUDIES.

Social Forces in German Literature, a Study in the History of Civilization, by Prof. Kuno Francke of Harvard University. The sub-title of this book is the key at once to its dominant purpose and to its point of view. Looking upon literature as the expression of a nation's growing life, the books and writers fall into an order of importance somewhat different from the usual one. The scope of the book is wide. Beginning with an introduction on the epochs of German culture, it takes up the scanty but significant literary remains and traditions of the period of the migrations, and notes the achievements and transitions of the life of the people and its expression in literature down to the revolution of 1848, adding a supplementary chapter on Richard Wagner and the contemporary drama. In spite of the author's disclaimer, the English of the book is excellent throughout. We wish all the quotations had been Englished for the sake of readers to whom German is a sealed book. With the relative value assigned to a few authors, even from the writer's point of view, we are not wholly satisfied, as, indeed, it would be too much to expect we should be. The picture of modern Germany in the epilogue is strong and graphic. Altogether, Professor Francke has given us the most consistent and philosophical history of German national life and its literary expression which we have yet seen. Since the publication of the book the author has himself called attention to an error of translation (p. 511), where "Holy Virgin" of the text should be "saintly virgin." [Henry Holt & Co. $2 00.]

Literary Landmarks of Venice, by Laurence Hutton. Venice has few great literary names of her own children, but has attracted and sometimes held a great company of the poets and writers of other cities and nations. Mr. Hutton has joined the patient care of the archæologist with a warm enthusiasm in making this hand book to the places in Venice of interest to the student because associated with the great writers. The illustrations are in keeping with the good library form of the book. [Harper & Bros. $1.00.]

Accompanying the completion of the Temple Shakespeare arrives proof of its great popularity and success in the reported sale of 50,000 copies. We have, as yet unnoticed, six numbers, Antony and Cleopatra, Timon of Athens, Macbeth, Julius Cæsar, Pericles and Cymbeline. The careful editing, with separate glossary in each volume, convenient shape and size, clear print and paper and general good taste, quite sufficiently explains its popularity. [Macmillan Co. 45 cents each.]

Another tasteful and convenient edition of Shakespeare is that which has been appearing in Longmans's English Classics. Each play is edited with a view to school or college study, with well-selected historical illustrations, suggestions for teachers and notes at the foot of the pages. Print and paper are good and the editorial work generally commendable. Of these editions we have, in addition to earlier issues already noticed, As You Like It, with introduction by Professor Wendell of Harvard and Professor Phelps of Yale—a happy conjunction of institutions and of names—A Midsummer Night's Dream, edited by Professor Baker of Harvard, and The Merchant of Venice, edited by Professor Gummere of Haverford. [Longmans, Green & Co. 60 cents.]

In the same series we have The Vicar of Wakefield, edited with introduction and notes by Prof. Mary A. Gordon of Smith College; The Sir Roger De Coverley Papers from "The Spectator," edited by D. O. S. Lowell, M. D., English master in the Roxbury Latin School; Southey's Life of Nelson, edited by Edwin L. Miller, A. M., of the Englewood High School, Illinois; Macaulay's Life of Samuel Johnson, edited by Huber Gray Buehler, English master at the Hotchkiss School; and Paradise Lost, Books I. and II., edited by Prof. Edward Everett Hale, Jr., Ph. D., of Union College. These are all prepared under the general editing of Prof. George Rice Carpenter of Columbia to meet the needs of students preparing for the 1897 examinations, but are of great interest and value for general reading and are strong and serviceable examples of bookmaking. [Longmans, Green & Co. 75, 60, 75, 50 and 50 cents.]

Shakespeare's comedy of As You Like It has been edited by Homer B. Sprague, Ph. D., with notes and suggestions for study. We have noticed earlier numbers of the series under the same editorial care and again commend the success of the plan and the general helpfulness of the editing. [Silver, Burdett & Co. 48 cents.]

BIOGRAPHY.

George Fox, by Thomas Hodgkin, D. C. L. Professor Hodgkin is admirably equipped for the work he has undertaken in this book. Sympathy, balance of judgment, good temper and knowledge combine to make it an ideal brief biography of the father of the "sect called Quakers." It is a vivid picture, one sided, of course, and incomplete, but clear and informing, which the reader gets of the state of society in which Fox grew up and gave his testimony in favor of the inward light. The author distinguishes carefully and successfully between the important and the accidental elements in Fox's work, and succeeds in leaving with us a strong impression of the man. The portrait, after Sir Peter Lely's painting, prefixed to the book is admirable. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.00.]

In the series of books called the Heroes of the Nations the publishers have very wisely included a reprint of Washington Irving's condensed Columbus, His Life and Voyages, which shows well in the good print and paper and with the well-chosen illustrations of the series. The portrait prefixed is especially interesting. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.50.]

BIBLE STUDY.

In the Lutheran Commentary, edited by Henry Eyster Jacobs, the latest volume is Annotations on The Acts of the Apostles, by F. W. Stillborn, professor of theology, Capital University, Columbus, O. This is a convenient and helpful running commentary in the general style of others of the series which we have noticed, with fuller treatment of special points in brief essays. [Christian Literature Co. $2.00.]

The Holy Spirit in the New Testament Scriptures, by William Campbell Scofield, is a study of the teaching of the New Testament in regard to the Holy Spirit's presence and work. The method is that of citing the passages, followed by hortatory comments. It is addressed to plain people, covers the ground carefully and will be helpful and suggestive. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.00.]

In the Modern Readers' Bible, edited by Prof. Richard C. Moulton of Chicago, the most recent volume is The Exodus. It has the same admirable editing and arrangement as the other volumes of the series, which is now appearing at the rate of one a month. [Macmillan Co. 50 cents.]

TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

The Library of Contemporary Exploration and Adventure. The publishers of this series propose to include in it "such standard works of travel and adventure by well-known authors as are of permanent value." They have made an admirable beginning with four handsome volumes, well printed and illustrated and tastefully bound. They are: Edward Whymper's Travels Amongst the Great Andes of the Equator; Two Years in the Jungle, by William T. Hornaday; Among Cannibals, by Carl Lumholtz, translated by Rasmus B. Anderson; and On the Border with Crook, by John G. Bourke. All level up well to the standard of merit proposed. [Charles Scribner's Sons. Each $2.50.]

It is well in this time of reawakened interest in Arctic exploration to have a new edition of Dr. Isaac I. Hayes's earliest book, An Arctic Boat Journey in the Autumn of 1854. His experiences and the results of his work are of the greatest value for comparison with more recent adventures and publications. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.50.]

RELIGIOUS.

Manhood's Morning, or "Go It While You're Young," by Joseph Alfred Conwell. This is a series of earnest talks to young men upon the possibilities and dangers of their lives. It does not hesitate to speak very plainly about the flagrant sins of the time, and its warnings should be widely read and heeded. [Hominis Book Co., Vineland, N. J. $1.00.]

The Creed and the Prayer, by J. Wesley Johnston, D. D. The sermons in this book were preached in the ordinary course of his work by a Methodist city pastor, and are timely for people of that denomination of whose worship the last General Conference decreed that the recitation of the creed should be a part. They are earnest, simple and practical. [Eaton & Mains. $1.20.]

Children of God and Union with Christ, by Samuel B. Schieffelin, is prefaced by a note written by Dr. John Hall of New York. It is a study of the relations of men to God, and contains a number of reverent and earnest expositions of Scripture teaching. [Board of Publication of the Reformed Church in America. 25 cents.]

A Square Talk to Young Men, by H. L. Hastings. This book contains a lecture on the inspiration of the Bible. That it has been successful and popular the fact that it is in its third million testifies. A later lecture appended considers the history of the preservation of the New Testament. [Scriptural Tract Society. 75 cents.]

A dainty little book in blue and silver, small enough to go in the vest pocket, is Consecration, by Hugh L. Hastings. It is a devout exposition of the topic which cannot but be quickening to faith. [H. L. Hastings. 25 cents.]

STORIES.

Tyne Folk, Masks, Faces and Shadows, by Joseph Parker. It would be impossible for the pastor of the London City Temple to be dull, and his swift sense of humor and sledge hammer-like force of style serves him well in these pictures of Northumberland people. "The pulpit was a box clinging to the wall like a large swallow's nest. There was no room in it for a peroration," for example, is a characteristic bit, and the knowledge of human nature throughout is admirable. Nevertheless, it must be confessed that the dramatic movement and sense of proportion which is essential to the successful short story is not attained. The book will be read, but can hardly hold its own on the basis of pure artistic merit. [Fleming H. Revell Co. 75 cents.]

M. Betham-Edwards, in The Dream-Charlotte, has shown us what a powerful influence the character of Charlotte Corday exerted upon her friends and acquaintances, amounting almost to worship in the case of her foster-mother and sister. The parallel of emotion and conviction between the active and the quiet sisters is strikingly brought out. We are shown, too, the combination of circumstances which so excited her impressionable nature as to make her think even murder justifiable in the effort to save France, which made her glory in martyrdom for her country's sake. Incidentally, there are interesting glimpses of the hard conditions of peasant life just before the Revolution, and there is also the inevitable love story. [Macmillan Co. $1.25.]

Jerry the Dreamer, by Will Payne. This is a story of Chicago newspaper life. The hero comes from the country, gets a position, meets and elopes with the daughter of a wealthy man who objects to his attentions, grows absurdly jealous of her friendships and makes himself extremely and foolishly unhappy. The reader must turn to the book for the subsequent history of the two, which is interestingly told. [Harper & Bros. $1.25.]

Three Old Maids in Hawaii, by Ellen Blackmer Maxwell, is a pleasant, but rather diffuse, story of the travels, love affairs and minglings with the Americans and natives of three tourists. The exciting scenes of the recent revolution in the islands play a large part in the book and give an opportunity for an expression of patriotic Americanism, as well as sympathy with missionary work. [Eaton & Mains. $1.50.]

A Country Girl, by Lillian Cornell. We are sorry if, as seems probable, this story is studied from the actual life of an American farmer's family. The father is a skinflint who grudges the smallest expenditure for travel, pleasure or education except as a means of preparation for teaching. The mother is a spiritless drudge whose first holiday comes out of her daughter's earnings with her husband's very reluctant consent. The eldest daughter and heroine is a morbid and self-conscious person who makes herself an amazing amount of unnecessary self-torture. Her lover is a prig, and her sister inexcusably pert and hoydenish. Whether all this is worth while we leave the reader to judge. The author has evidently not served her literary apprenticeship. She has constructive ability, but must take time for study of better models than she now imitates if she wishes to succeed. [Irving Co. 50 cents.]

Blind Leaders of the Blind, by James R. Cocke, M. D., is a story in which studies of moral disease, experiments in hypnotism, perverted ideas of social life, loose morals, false ethical teachings and travesties upon religion are blended together in rather heterogeneous fashion and without much literary skill. [Lee & Shepard. $1.50.]

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

Shakespeare the Boy, by Dr. W. J. Rolfe, gives a remarkably full and comprehensiv picture of Shakespeare's boyhood. The knowledge has been gained from a patient study of the plays, as well as of all that has been recorded concerning the manner of life in that age. Only an enthusiastic Shakespearean scholar could have succeeded in such a task, for the book tells us all about boy-life in the time of Henry VIII. In describing the sights by which the boy dramatist was surrounded—his home, his schools and his amusements—much light is thrown on many otherwise unintelligible allusions in the plays. While it was written for boys, a large part of it having previously appeared in the Youth's Companion, it will prove very interesting reading for people of all ages. [Harper & Bros. $1.25.]

Through Swamp and Glade, a Tale of the Seminole War, by Kirk Munroe. This is a vigorous and successful story of the war which grew out of the rapacity and cruelty of the frontier whites in Florida, lasting from 1835 to 1842. Osceola, the Seminole chief, who was one of the strongest of the great men of Indian blood, is one of the characters and heroes of the story. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25.]

Another book by the same author is Rick Dale, which is a story of a millionaire's son who escapes from his enervating surroundings, gains health and learns manliness in a series of exciting, but not sensational, adventures. The scene is Puget Sound and its neighborhood. The story is wholesome and well managed and the boys will delight in it. [Harper & Bros. $1.25.]

Most English boys are brought up on a diet of Mr. G. A. Henty's books. His young heroes mingle in all the great affairs of history with which their nation has had any share. If there is a strong family likeness among them it is at least a likeness of manly qualities joined to self-reliance and an honest purpose, and the story is always entertaining as well as improving. They are good reading for our own American boys, who seldom know too much of the history of other nations. The latest volumes received range from the fifteenth century, with At Agincourt, by way of the wars for South American freedom in With Cochrane the Dauntless, down to our own century and the history of the first Burmese war in On the Irrawaddy. [Charles Scribner's Sons. Each $1.50.]

Another popular English writer of stories for boys is Harry Collingwood. The Log of a Privateersman is a story of the English wars with France and Spain at the beginning of the century. It is full of stirring sea adventure very well told and of a good degree of literary merit. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.50.]

A new edition of the stories for boys of Captain Mayne Reid, under the name of the Nimrod edition, begins with The Boy Hunters and The Bush Boys. The books are well printed, illustrated with good pictures and tastefully bound in blue cloth stamped with the heads of wild creatures. We hope that the boys of this generation will get as much pleasure from these wholesome books as their fathers did. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.25 each.]

The Paladins of Edwin the Great, by Sir Clements R. Markham, K. C. B. This is far too learned a book, we fear, to be successful with the boys for whose instruction in early English history it is evidently intended. Only their talent for skipping will bring them through the detailed historical matter of even the introductory chapter. If most of the archæology could be cut out it would be a capital, if not very original, historical story of adventure in the days of the conversion of the Anglo-Saxons. If the story were omitted it would be a very tolerable monograph on the history of the same period. [Macmillan Co. $1.50.]

A Bad Penny, by John T. Wheelwright, with illustrations by F. G. Attwood. We cannot wholly commend this story of sea and shore in the times of the second war with England. The literary standard is no high, and the real teaching of the book, disguised in a story of adventure, is that a man may be as worthless as he pleases if only he is brave. It is in our judgment just the book boys ought not to read. [Lamson, Wolffe & Co. $1.25.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

History of Philosophy, by Prof. Albert Weber of the University of Strasburg, translated by Prof. Frank Thilly of the University of Missouri. In this comprehensive book we have another admirable introduction to the study of philosophy. Its style is clear, concise and exact. In its notes, those of the author and of the translator, information is given in regard to the sources of philosophical knowledge for which one might elsewhere look almost in vain. In fact, the value of the work has been distinctly increased by the translator. Of the larger divisions Professor Weber has but three, the Greek philosophy, that of the Neo-Latin period and that developed since the fifteenth century by the Germans chiefly, and ending with Kant and his immediate successors. The student who will carefully study this volume and compare it with Windelband's general history of philosophy and Falckenberg's history of modern philosophy will find himself in a position where the reading of the great masters of philosophy will become a pleasure. Paulsen's more recent history of philosophy should not be overlooked. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $2.50 net.]

The Epworth League Reading Course for 1896–97 includes The Vision of Christ in the Poets, by Charles M. Stuart; The Social Law of Service, by Prof. R. T. Ely; Torchbearers of Christendom, by Robert R. Doherty; and In League with Israel, by Annie Fellows Johnston. The idea of the course is a good one and the variety aimed at commendable. Professor Ely's book is much the strongest of the four and may be heartily commended, while no one falls below a good level of knowledge and ability in writing or in editing. It seems a pity, however, that books recommended to and likely to be used by so many thousands of young people could not all have been selected from acknowledged classics, or have reached the very highest levels of taste and power. [Eaton & Mains. 4 vols., $3.80.]

In The Industrial Army Mr. Fayette Stratton Giles takes up Mr. Bellamy's idea of a community of labor, suggesting practical methods of realizing it. We cannot enter into his plan, but commend it to those who are curious to see the working out (on paper) of one of the most difficult of all problems. We do not share Mr. Giles's faith in the good will and tractability of human nature, and we fear many of his statistics will not bear close examination and analysis. [Baker & Taylor Co. $1.25.]

An interesting story of the providential ordering of a life for great but unexpected usefulness and of the fruit borne by one man's self-devotion is A Story of Madeira, by Della Dimmit. It tells of the Scotch mission in Funchal, the persecution which followed and the missionary activities of the Illinois colony of exiled Protestants. [Curts & Jennings. 60 cents.]

The record of the proceedings at the Celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the appointment of Prof. William Henry Green as an instructor in Princeton Theological Seminary makes a large and handsome volume, which is prefaced by a good portrait. We commented editorially upon the celebration at the time of its occurrence last May. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.50 net.]

The recent interest in whist as a game capable of the highest scientific treatment finds evidence in such a book as Winning Whist, a harmonious system of combined long-suit and short-suit play, by Emery Boardman. The sub-title sufficiently indicates the plan of the book, which attempts to combine the best elements of the two schools into which students of the game are divided. To this purpose the quotation from Emerson on the title-page is appropriate. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.00.]

The bound volumes of Littell's Living Age for July, August and September of the current year includes the usual well-selected winnowing from the English reviews and magazines.

NOTES.

—— The Atlantic for October begins a new department called Men and Letters, which is to include short signed articles appropriate to its topic.

—— It is an age of memorials, some of them of wide interest. It is now planned to place two stained glass windows in the chapel of Trinity College, Dublin, in memory of Toplady and Lyte, who were both graduates. The subject chosen would recall their two famous and much loved hymns, Rock of Ages and Abide with Me.

—— Mr. Harold Frederic says that "it has become an open secret that Mr. Alfred Austin, the poet laureate, is practically under an injunction to preserve silence." An office in the enjoyment of which it is enjoined by somebody having authority that the mission of the office shall not be exercised certainly deserves to be called a sinecure.

—— Mr. Gladstone seems to have been suffering from the importunities of the would-be poets, if we may judge from his reported utterance that "his experience leads him to believe that the supply of poetry, or of verse assuming to the poetry, is more egregiously in excess of the demand than any other description of literature."

—— A new English magazine is the Temple, edited by Frederick A. Atkins. It is to be illustrated and sold at sixpence, and promises to be suitable for Sunday reading. Dean Farrar has promised his Reminiscences and many of the other famous English clergymen will contribute. The prospectus promises stories also by "Ian Maclaren," Crockett, Gilbert Parker, Quiller Couch, Miss Wilkins and others.

—— A statue in memory of the great Danish story-teller, Hans Christian Andersen, was unveiled in Lincoln Park, Chicago, recently. It is of bronze and represents the writer seated in a chair in a thoughtful attitude. The figure was modeled by Mr. Johannes Gelert, and was cast in Chicago. It rests on a pedestal of granite furnished by the Danes of Minnesota. The work has been paid for and presented to the management of Lincoln Park by a Danish organization, which has had the matter in charge for rather more than a year. Addresses at the unveiling were in English and Danish, and in spite of the rawness of the afternoon and the threat of rain fully 10,000 persons witnessed the ceremonies of unveiling.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

THE MINISTER'S WOOING. By Harriet Beecher Stowe. pp. 417. $1.50.

THE PEARL OF ORR'S ISLAND. By Harriet Beecher Stowe. pp. 402. $1.50.

AGNES OF SORRENTO. By Harriet Beecher Stowe. pp. 376. $1.50.

THE POEMS OF CELIA THAXTER. pp. 272. $1.50.

Cong. S. S. & Pub. Society. Boston.

A SON OF LIBERTY. By Willis Boyd Allen. pp. 262. $1.25.

THE TWINS AND THEIR TROUBLES. By L. Amelia Wilder. pp. 225. 75 cents.

THE FAIRIES OF FERN DINGLE. By Mrs. Harriet A. Cheever. pp. 250. $1.00.

Living Age Co. Boston.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. July, August, September, 1896. pp. 823. $2.25.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

A PRACTICAL METHOD IN MODERN GREEK. By Eugene Rizo-Rangabé. pp. 249. $2.10.

MORCEAUX CHOISIS DE JULES LEMAITRE. Edited by Resine Mellé. pp. 284. $1.00.

GREEK INFLECTION. By B. F. Harding. pp. 44. 60 cents.

GUIDE TO THE STUDY OF AMERICAN HISTORY. By Edward Channing, Ph.D., A. B. Hart, Ph.D. pp. 471. $2.15.

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

THE EXPOSITORY TIMES. Vol. VII., October, 1895–September, 1896. Edited by Rev. James Hastings. pp. 568. $2.50.

CHERRY AND VIOLET. Introduction by Rev. W. H. Hutton, B. D. pp. 302. $2.25.

A BOOK OF MARTYRS. By Cornelia A. Pratt. pp. 179. 75 cents.

WITH OPEN FACE. By Alexander B. Bruce, D.D. pp. 257. $1.50.

MRS. CLIFF'S YACHT. By Frank R. Stockton. pp. 314. $1.50.

THE SENSE OF BEAUTY. By George Santayana. pp. 275. $1.50.

THE ROGUE'S MARCH. By E. W. Hornung. pp. 403. $1.50.

THE MAKING OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By Arthur Hassall, M.A. pp. 149. 50 cents.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

A TEXT-BOOK FOR TRAINING SCHOOLS FOR NURSES. By P. M. Wise, M.D. 2 vols. pp. 247, 327. Each $1.25.

THE STUDENT'S DIARY. By C. W. Wendte. pp. 201. $1.25.

Thomas Whittaker. New York.

THE WARDSHIP OF STEEPCOOMBE. By Charlotte M. Yonge. pp. 309. $1.25.

THE INSPIRATION OF HISTORY. By James Mulchahey, S.T.D. pp. 135. $1.00.

Stone & Kimball. New York.

W. V. HER BOOK. By William Canton. pp. 150. $1.25.

THE WASHER OF THE FORD. By Fiona Macleod. pp. 332. $1.25.

Frederick A. Stokes Co. New York.

VAWDER'S UNDERSTUDY. By James K. Reeve. pp. 197. 75 cents.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. New York.

AN ESSAY ON THE PRESENT DISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH. By Charles B. Spahr, Ph.D. pp. 184. $1.50.

American S. S. Union. Philadelphia.

PEOPLE'S COMMENTARY ON THE ACTS. By Edwin W. Rice, D.D. pp. 371. $1.25.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

THE MURDER OF DELICIA. By Marie Corelli. pp. 274. $1.25.

BIRD-LAND ECHOES. By Charles Conrad Abbott, M.D. pp. 270. $2.00.

THE MISTRESS OF BRAE FARM. By Rosa Nouchette Carey. pp. 437. $1.25.

BILL NYE'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND. Illustrated by W. M. Goodes and A. M. Richards. pp. 213. $1.25.

Commissioner of Education. Washington.

REPORT FOR THE YEAR 1893–94. Volume I. containing Part I. pp. 1,061.

PAPER COVERS.

Directors of the Old South Work. Boston.

OLD SOUTH LEAFLET, NO. 74. Hamilton's Report on the Coinage. 5 cents.

D. Appleton & Co. New York.

IN OLD NEW ENGLAND. By Hezekiah Butterworth. pp. 281. 50 cents.

E. S. Steele. Washington, D. C.

ARMENIA IMMOLATA. By E. S. Steele. 25 cents.

American Academy of Political and Social Science. Philadelphia.

UNCERTAINTY AS A FACTOR IN PRODUCTION. By Edward A. Ross, Ph.D. 25 cents.

FINANCIAL PROCEDURE OF THE STATE LEGISLATURES. By E. L. Bogart. 25 cents.

MAGAZINES.

October. TREASURY.—CHAP-BOOK.—REVIEW OF REVIEWS.—APPLETON'S POPULAR SCIENCE.—ART AMATEUR.—BIBLIOTHECA SACRA.—OUR ANIMAL FRIENDS.—AMERICAN KITCHEN.—DONAHOE'S.—CENTURY.—JOURNAL OF HYGIENE.—EDUCATION.—BOOKBUYER.—LITERARY NEWS.—CHRISTIAN LITERATURE.—EDUCATIONAL REVIEW.—BIBLIA.—NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.—INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF ETHICS.—JOURNAL OF PRACTICAL METAPHYSICS.—KINDERGARTEN NEWS.

IAN MACLAREN ON THE ART OF PREACHING.

The Lyman Beecher course of lectures on The Art of Preaching, given at Yale by Rev. Dr. John Watson of Liverpool, ended last week. Following are abstracts of five of the lectures:

THE NEW DOGMA.

The progress of theological science has not been along a straight line, but by a series of advancing and often intersecting circles. These are divided into four segments, and the first was the pre-doctrinal period, when the church held its faith in solution. This was essentially the age of mysticism. In the second period the solution was precipitated, either through intellectual necessity or in consequence of attack from without, and we have the age of dogmatism. The next period was one of little human interest; a period of great pedantry and bigotry. Men followed doctrines into details and made applications which their authors never thought of. This was the period of scholasticism. And then men began to get weary. They felt that the life had gone out. They began to tear down the whole structure that they might get at the foundations again and we have the present age of criticism.

But the age of criticism is nearly over. We are already passing through an age of mysticism. The mystic writers are being largely read today. Large bodies of Christians are meeting together every year in religious conferences, and their effort is now the deepening of the spiritual life. There are not only converted and unconverted people; there is a third distinction—the perfect or inner class. They are getting hold of an esoteric religion. You will find them. Be kind to them. This mysticism is really a reactiom from criticism. There was never a time in the history of the church as today, when so many people are saying, "We don't care what men have said; let us hear what Christ said." The next thing we will see is the beginning of the creation of "the new dogma." It will be marked by a consistency between criticism and faith which will not hide Christ, but will bring him out in supreme relief.

The material for the new dogma is at hand. It can exist only on two conditions. The first of these is liberty. The second is a delineation of territory between religion and dogma. We must recognize that a man may be an erroneous thinker and a good liver, and that he may be an accurate thinker and a poor liver. The two great schools of the early fathers were those of Augustine and Clement. Augustine conceived of God as a judge and governor, Clement as a father. We have wished that Clement had won. But we are wrong. The divine spirit has done well. There must be order in all things. Some things must be learned first. The conscience needed awakening first. Augustine saved the moral sense in an immoral age. We are now ready to receive the doctrine of the divine Fatherhood and to preach it with true ethical force and in keeping with the doctrine of the divine government.

"I congratulate you that you are entering upon the period of the renaissance in theology. It will not be necessary for you to reconcile reason and faith, science and religion. Religion and dogma will be rejoined in the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God in Jesus Christ. Here the dogma of the intellect and the religion of the heart come together in one great harmony."

THE MACHINERY OF A CONGREGATION.

Originally the congregation was a single organism. Now it is a complicated affair and one needs to understand the "science of congregationalism." The house of God should be beautiful, more so than the homes in which we live. Its workmanship ought to be beyond reproach. Better plain stone walls than poor workmanship and veneering. It should be comfortable, but that does not mean that it is to have all the conveniences of a theater. The church ought above all to be so arranged that the people can both see and hear the preacher. Every church should have a business room where councils may be conveniently and comfortably held. The minister's room should be the best in the church, artistic and inspiring.

As to polity, we must acknowledge the divine right of every system of church government. Episcopalian, Presbyterian and Congregational have all been proved from the Acts and the epistles. As to the individual church, there must be some government. It should be in the hands of one man. One and not ten should rule, and that one the minister —not the noisiest nor the richest man in the church—and the minister must rule "with a velvet hand, with charity, courtesy, simplicity and humility."

The minister as a constitutional monarch must have a council. In this must be the head of each and every department. There must be no taxation without representation. If there is there will be a war of independence and disaster will follow. To these a half-dozen should be added of the elderly men who may serve in the cabinet without a portfolio. This council is the brain of the church. It must be in vital connection with the remotest member; absolute secrecy must be maintained. There must be implicit confidence in this council. Whatever the minister wants to do he must get his council to go with him. And unless it will go with him he had better not go, unless it be a matter of conscience. If it does go with him he need not be troubled about what all the old women in the congregation say about it.

As to cases of discipline, people are only partly sanctified, and if it be only a twist, be charitable. But if the disturber be really evil-minded and Pharisaical go to him frankly and ask him to leave. If one comes from another church with a bad record it is a sin to receive such a one who has broken a brother minister's heart and wrecked a congregation. If it be a large city I would advise having a church for such, a sort of "quarantine chapel." For their minister let one of their own number be selected who has wrecked three churches. Their day of repentance will then come, and upon due confession they may be received back into such churches as they may select.

THE WORK OF A PASTOR.

The millennium will come when congregations will be formed of 4,000 people with church buildings to hold 2,000. Such an amalgamation of four churches into one will be an important advance. First, it will save three quarters of preaching power and waste and give the other quarter more power. A man has great stimulus in preaching to a large body of people and very little in preaching to scattered congregations. Then, too, such a church would not be eternally trying to solve the problem of making nineteen shillings do the work of twenty shillings. It would be delivered from financial appeals and from bazars and tea meetings, which are no help to character and are a scandal to the gospel in many cases. Such a church would have at hand all kinds of men. Men to give, to counsel, to work and to pray. In large congregations there do not exist those rivalries, petty jealousies and squabbles as in small. The congregational bully has no opportunity. But the main point is that the large congregation would not require one man to preach, organize, be a financier, lecture, teach and render pastoral service. There would be several and the work divided among them. Perhaps I am too optimistic, but I hope for a future class of ecclesiastics for organization and kindred work. In that day also perhaps each congregation will employ some Biblical scholar who can't get a pulpit because he reads essays in the pulpit and maintains silence in the sickroom. Such men now are a great waste, but they might be used. These may be optimistic dreams, but we may surely have large congregations over which the work of the pulpit and the pastoral work might be divided.

Some men are born thinkers and preachers. They go into the pulpit and wrestle with great problems and resign regularly every night before they go to bed. Other men there are who start out for an afternoon of pastoral calls just as a lover of art goes to an Italian gallery, and then are delayed an hour before they get under way by two little children who have called and thought they must see him. In sickness and trouble the people send for him by instinct. The sick folk declare he did more towards curing them than all the doctors put together. Never compare these two men. Each is created of God for a special purpose.

Nothing is more spiritual than a true pastor and his feelings for his people. He looks upon each as a human soul which he has to take care of and educate for Jesus Christ. We are reminded of him in that beautiful story of St. John the divine. He left one of his charges under a presbyter, went away for a time, and when he returned found he had become a robber. He sought him out, knelt at the robber's feet and brought him back. This is the spirit of the true pastor. He gives his own life to his people. He never criticises them. He never makes them the subject of raillery.

The pastor's work is like the physician's, indoor and outdoor. It is both visitation and consultation. Some people depreciate pastoral visitation. They think it is just an escape from his study and to get a little exercise. To be sure, some ministers have given abundant reason for this caricature. But the real pastor's work is so exacting that an afternoon of baptism in its agony leaves him with trembling knees and an empty soul. He must enter into sorrows, deaths, cares, anxieties, joys, poverty; all this in four hours. The true pastor does not do this with a detached soul. All these are not only his people's, but they are his.

Besides regular visitation there should be occasional visits. "Now," said Dr. Watson, "I put my life in your hands. You may call me superstitious. But I believe that impressions come to us sometimes that we ought to go to a certain house. There is no reason for it. Go! Go at once! You will find them anxious for a visit. This is more spiritual than what we commonly call a providence. It is an actual communication from the Spirit of Jesus Christ."

We speak hardly against the Roman Catholic confessional and not without reason. But it supplies a human want. So far as that want is real it must be supplied by you. People go for their physical ailments to a doctor, for their legal difficulties to a lawyer. Man has other difficulties when he wants to go to some person who understands life; for these he will come to you. In replying consider the following suggestions: The pastor should never press for any confidence not freely offered. He should urge the person to reveal nothing more of a painful secret than is necessary in order that he may give advice. He must hold what he hears as an absolutely sacred confidence, even if he take no oath of secrecy. Emulate the medical profession in this respect, and there are other ways in which we might adopt medical professional etiquette. You will never hear one doctor criticising another doctor—I think ministers do not always follow this—nor will they allow laymen to criticise another doctor to them. We clergymen may learn a great deal of professional etiquette from the medical profession. The minister will give practical advice, especially urging restitution, reformation, watchfulness, and he must never fail as far as able to lead the troubled one to Christ.

Diagnosis is very difficult. You will need to know much of casuistry. You must learn to distinguish between a skeptic with his face toward the light and one with his back to the light—between the great merchant who loves to make great commercial strokes for sheer love of his business regardless of money and another who is full of the lust of greed, between the hot-blooded youth fighting passion and the low, mean fellow who is reveling in foul literature.

Above all, be charitable. It is a wise saying, "God save us from young judges." You will grow more and more charitable as you discover more and more the deep-down goodness of human nature. The old pastor never judges. He never condemns. He comforts, guides and helps.

THE PUBLIC WORSHIP OF GOD.

One must frankly admit, he said, that in most countries attendance at public worship is on the decrease. This is not a good omen for religion. Ingenious advocates may put in several saving pleas about worshiping God in the home, with a book or with nature. They may say that the people who are not present at public worship are often most spiritual and that those present are often not most spiritual. The advocate may say that the sunset has done more for his soul than all the sermons he ever heard or that ever were preached. But he has not gone to the root of the matter. The distinction is not between people who worship at home and those who worship at church. The distinction is between people whose faith in the resurrection of our Lord leads them to meet and honor him on the first day of the week, and those whose faith is so faint that they practically do not believe that Christ really exists and who have such an impersonal idea of God that they can behold him as readily in a running brook as they can in the face of Jesus Christ. Religion and worship had an austere grip on our fathers. With us it has weakened into a loose faith. Often in our services there is no awe and not much worship. This weakening of godly fear is a weakening also of parental authority. Now the ten-year-old child is allowed to have its likes and dislikes concerning the minister and to stay away from divine worship if it wants to.

Another difficulty is that we have so many services. Bizarre and outré services are increasing in numbers, in sensation and vulgarity, and are tending to turn the people aside from regular, orderly worship.

A liturgy whose materials have been drawn from the classic ages of devotional literature has a charm of style and thought which satisfies the ear and clings to the memory. A liturgy instinct with the idea of universal sympathy lifts out of sectarianism and into Christian catholicity. It may express the ordinary wants of all kinds and conditions of men. It is independent of the officiating clergyman. It is especially suitable for old people, because it is unchanging. People who are wearied by toil are not forced to follow a prayer through all sorts of unknown countries. It gives the young people some part in the service. It can be taught to the children, and they will love it and respond to it. That is one side of the case.

Now let us consider the custom of free prayer. It encourages the grace of prayer which comes through the influence of the Holy Ghost. Free prayer gives a certain life and freshness which is impossible when the same form is continually repeated. It makes it possible to render thanks for great mercies, help in sore straits, with particular and comforting reverence. It gives a tenderness of heart and nearness to God not possible under any other form.

In public the standard must not be the lowest but the highest in taste. The people will object to having things asked for that they don't want and in having things ignored which they want asked for, and they will object to having themselves represented in language which they would not themselves have used to a local dignitary. There is no excuse for preaching when praying. If the preacher uses his prayers for the statement of doctrine or other such purposes, or if he adds on a collection of perorations from the prophets or of the sayings of Job's friends, then, I say, he has quite mistaken his work. Neither can he be egotistical or slovenly. The man on whose soul the awe of the eternal should have fallen will not shout the name of the deity at the top of his voice and fill up the interstices with the awful name which the Jews revered too much to even mention. Nor let him have a prayer embroidered with frills and fringes, nor one in which he takes occasion to fling poisoned arrows at his congregation.

Public worship should be the flower of the week. It should be enthusiastic, beautiful, not superstitious, but full of reverence and godly fear. It should lift the people out of the world and bring them face to face with the eternal. Today it has got to be pleasing. Today it has got to be resting, and I've sometimes feared I should live until the people insisted that it be amusing. We need the austere faith, devotion and reverence of our fathers.

THE MINISTER'S CARE OF HIMSELF.

Three of the gospels are directly or indirectly from the open air and the fourth from a physician. There is nothing mawkish or unmanly in the gospels. They are able-bodied books by able-bodied men. They are in touch with reality in life and in human nature. If a minister inherits a disordered constitution and is below par physically he is most certain, unless he have very abundant grace, to be peevish, intolerant and pessimistic. He is subnormal and his thinking will be subnormal too.

If the clergyman does not take care of his time even the most conscientious man will allow his work to dwindle down to mere details. He must be delivered from useless cares and his room must not be made a public agency office. He cannot sit on every church committee. If the church wants a general canvassing agent let it get one. But if it wants a prophet let him not be ever driven about hither and thither any every dusty highway.

In all frankness I say that his public and his private life cannot be separated. The question of celibacy is not entirely a vain question. Every man should face it. There is no question but an unmarried man is best in many places where he needs to be free from social cares and entanglements. And I believe that more and more, without vows, there will be a large body of unmarried clergy. But if he decides otherwise do let him remember this that on the character of his future wife largely depends his success. I do not mean that every minister should marry a professional Bible woman, any more than every physician should marry a sick nurse.

After the last lecture Dr. Watson spoke a few words of farewell to the theological students. He expressed appreciation of the kind treatment he had received in a frank, open, informal manner, and stated that the printed lectures which are to be issued very soon are dedicated to the dean of the Yale theological faculty, Prof. George P. Fisher. By his open, manly manner Dr. Watson has won the highest esteem, and it is not too much to say the personal love of the students, with whom his lectures will ever remain a source of inspiration and of hope. C. S. M.

Western Reserve University opens with 275 new students, a larger number by far than any previous record. Three new buildings are occupied for the first time this year, and other additions are necessary. The great gift of John D. Rockefeller to the park system of Cleveland makes the situation of Adelbert College, the college for women and the professional schools exceedingly beautiful.

Chips from the Board.

It is atmosphere rather than logic that changes opinion.—President Angell.

Is there a man on earth that more needs the gospel than the unspeakable Turk?—Dr. Plumb.

New Haven next year, with Rev. R. R. Meredith, D. D., as preacher and Rev. N. Boynton, D. D., as alternate.

The local committee was much aided in its work by a full report from the committee of arrangements in Brooklyn last year.

"No reflections on Brooklyn are in order," said Dr. Storrs, when something was said that might have been construed in that light.

The fountains of God are not dependent upon the ballots of men. The purposes of God are not dependent upon the rulership of men.—Dr. Goodwin.

A time of adversity is a blessed time for the Church of God. Our hardest and darkest times in the ministry of the gospel have been the most educative.—Dr. Storrs.

Through the courtesy of the Century Company a collection of hymns and tunes was supplied, chosen from its forthcoming book, In Excelsis, which is to be issued next January.

Every one noted and admired the beauty of diction and grace of discrimination which marked Dr. Herrick's memorial, printed elsewhere, in honor of the late Secretaries Clark and Alden.

Those who left before the Friday morning meeting lost one of the spiciest and most profitable of the entire session. It happens often, we have noticed, that the Friday morning meeting has a special value.

Not a muscle of Dr. Storrs's face moved, but the risibilities of the congregation were considerably excited, when he calmly remarked in giving out the closing hymn, How Firm a Foundation, that it was written for the occasion.

One of the local dailies informed the public that Rev. B. H. Storrs, D. D., called the meeting to order and Secretary Donaldson read the minutes, and the casual reader wondered what had become of Dr. R. S. Storrs and Secretary Stimson.

Organist S. D. Cushing, formerly of the South Church, Springfield, Mass., and the First Church, Northampton, besides playing at the evening services, favored those who remained after with special selections on the fine instrument of which he is so thorough a master.

The audience responded quickly when ex-President Bartlett characterized the silver rule in ethics as worth about fifty-three cents on a dollar. He meant by the silver rule the negative codes of ethics prevailing in the ethnic religions as compared with the positive mandate of the Golden Rule.

At the Boody House, where most of the officials of the Board stayed, a convention of laundrymen was in session, and it flustered the waiters a little at the start to differentiate the convention affiliations of their respective guests. But there was no clash between the two gatherings. Why should there be, if cleanliness is next to godliness?

The same hotel is much frequented by traveling men, and one of them was overheard commenting on the Board meeting. He remarked to a fellow-drummer that if the attendants upon the Board would spend their money trying to lift up people here at home it would be a far better thing. His brother of the grip-sack spoke up like a man and said, "See here, my friend, you stop just where you are. These very persons, and those whom they represent, are raising every year millions of dollars for work in this country." And nobody at that table, during the rest of the meal, ventured to indulge in jibes at foreign missions.

Dr. Storrs in his address apparently took great pains not to be partisan in his discussion of the current political campaign. With the utmost ingenuousness he declared his indifference as to what money we used, provided it was money good for its face value in all the markets of the world. Thereat a great wave of applause swept over the assembly, and the Bryan men—if there were any—looked pensive.

It was a touching incident Miss Miner related about the woman in North China whose husband undertook to burn her Bible and to thwart her Christian purposes at every point. This faithful soul declared that, though her husband took away all her helps to Christian living, he never would be able to burn the Bible verses which she had enshrined in her heart. A striking illustration surely of the value of committing Scripture to memory!

Western college presidents and ex-presidents were unusually abundant, their Eastern brethren, with the exception of Dr. Bartlett of Dartmouth, being conspicuous for their absence. Oberlin sent the venerable and benign Fairchild, Ann Arbor its Angell with strong wings and keen vision, Olivet the genial, capable Sperry, Beloit the scholarly and popular Eaton, Drury the quiet but alert Fuller, Carleton the dignified and affable Strong.

Missionaries came together by themselves Thursday noon and had a right good season of fellowship, Rev. M. P. Parmelee presiding over the informal gathering. One after another arose, introduced himself or herself and in some cases added a word telling how they had been led into the missionary service. The spirit of brotherhood was marked and, though at the start many were not acquainted with their fellow-workers in other fields, at the close of the hour everybody knew every one else.

With State Secretary Marion Lawrence presiding, with row after row of eager little faces and with the best and liveliest speakers, the children's meeting possessed almost every essential of success. A pleasant feature of it was the repetition in concert of the Twenty-third Psalm, after which Mr. Lawrence asked each of the speakers to repeat the same sentence in the language of the country in which he or she labored. Missionaries made their story of life and service in the foreign field simple and pictorial enough to hold the attention of the children, and at the same time suggestive enough to command the ear of the older people who had strayed into the gathering. The list of speakers comprised Miss Little of Micronesia, Mr. Albrecht of Japan, Mr. Roberts of China, Mr. Perkins of India, Miss Howe of Japan.

If the providential and almost romantic elements in Mr. Albrecht's career were more widely known, it would make his admirable speeches still more effective. Rev. W. H. Warren, now home missionary superintendent of Michigan, when a pastor in Springfield, O., nearly a score of years ago, discovered in the stalwart German born lad the making of a man and of a Christian. Up to that time the young machinist was utterly indifferent to religion, but, becoming a Christian, life at once put on a new front. After a season of study with his pastor he went to Oberlin, where hard work soon put him abreast of his fellow-students. He became in due time the first superintendent of the German work prosecuted by the national Home Missionary Society and helped lay the foundations of the German department at Chicago Seminary, whence he went to Japan nine years ago. There his familiarity with the German tongue and thought has been of invaluable assistance in his missionary work.

"One of the best, most successful and noblest we have ever enjoyed."—DR. STORRS.

The American Board at Toledo.

An Exceptionally Important and Inspiriting Annual Meeting.

CHARACTERISTICS: Harmony, hopefulness, intelligent appreciation of the present problems and an indomitable purpose to grapple with them patiently and wisely, and to persevere unto the end.

THE GIST OF ACTION TAKEN.

President Cleveland is urged to take peremptory action in demanding indemnity from the Turkish Government and in securing to our missionaries full protection in prosecuting their work.

The Japan mission is to be maintained in its full strength in the belief and expectation that Christian agencies are still imperatively needed there.

The Prudential Committee is instructed as far and as fast as possible to relieve the missions that are suffering most from retrenchment.

The churches are urged to contribute the $65,000 needed to restore appropriations to the standard of previous years.

It was not exactly the "enemy's country" in which the American Board took up its abode for four days last week, but it was a region which, as Dr. Storrs said, was rather unfamiliar to many in attendance, for although the Board has met in cities to the east and south, west and north, it has never convened in Toledo before. Certainly the accessibility of the place, being directly on the great highway between Chicago and Cleveland, six hours from the former and three from the latter city, may well commend Toledo as an exceptionally favorable rallying point for a gathering whose constituency comes from all parts of the country.

As respects warmth of welcome and generous provision for the varied wants of so great an assemblage one could ask or expect nothing better. The city of 110,000 inhabitants compares favorably with other municipalities of its size in the evidences of substantial prosperity and of a high degree of intelligence and culture. Congregationalism is not inferior in strength and influence to its sister denominations. It shares with Presbyterianism the honor of being first upon the ground, and it is interesting to know that the First Church, in whose spacious edifice the Board met, represented at its start fifty years ago a mingling of both the Congregational and Presbyterian elements, and until less than a score of years ago occupied the somewhat analogous position of being Congregational in its government while allied with a presbytery. Its Congregationalism now is Simon-pure and warm-blooded. It has been the parent of all the other churches in the city, having fostered in particular and with affectionate care most of the other five Congregational churches. These united with their mother in providing entertainment, which was so abundant that many rooms prepared for guests were not utilized.

Rev. W. W. Williams, D.D., senior pastor of the First Church, who formally welcomed the Board, has been the honored shepherd of his flock for forty-four years, and has thoroughly endeared himself to several generations by his participation in all the sacred and joyous family occasions. He has had few superiors in executive capacity and in ability to help shape the financial policy of the church. About five years ago he was provided with an associate in the person of Rev. D. M. Fisk, who made himself useful in various ways to the delegates, while an attentive staff of helpers, both ladies and gentlemen, was continually at hand to serve strangers.

The attendance of persons from outside was considerably larger than at Madison two years ago, about 325 being registered; of these about eighty were corporate members. Missionaries to the number of about thirty persons were present. The townspeople did not flock in large numbers to the sessions, the house being full only on the evening of Dr. Storrs's address. Though corporate members were comparatively few in numbers, they included many of the denomination's foremost men—pastors of strong city churches and influential and devoted laymen. Barriers which once divided the conservatives from the liberals were completely down and no echoes of the now "ancient days of party strife" fell upon the most attentive ear.

The meetings were remarkable for concentration of attention upon three issues—the Japanese question, the problems of Turkey and the question of financial resources. Each was taken up and handled thoroughly and brought to a settlement that commanded the almost unanimous approval of all present. Moreover both the prepared and extemporaneous utterances in regard to all these subjects were of extraordinary excellence and fitness. Rarely does a missionary meeting sustain so high intellectual and spiritual level. The hearer felt that he was face to face with world-wide problems brought to his attention by men of expert knowledge of them, of great wisdom and balance of mind and of decided Christian convictions. So the meetings sloughed off all the conventional qualities with which, the outsider thinks, a missionary meeting is largely encumbered, and the gathering became closely related to the life of the modern world and pulsating in sympathy with all the vast and vital concerns of human life the globe over. It would have been a splendid meeting for the doubter, the critic of missions, the faint-hearted disciple, the worldly professor of religion to attend.

DR. PACKARD'S SERMON.

Those familiar with Rev. Dr. E. N. Packard's type of preaching expected from him a strong, sensible, well-balanced and inspiring discourse. They got it. He did not hesitate to take a theme which has often been brought to the attention of annual meetings of the Board, but he treated it in a fresh manner and in felicitous relations to contemporary conditions. From the text, Acts 2: 14–18, he deduced the theme Missions and the Pentecostal Church. He pictured first the life and ardor of the infant church, in order to give point to his basal thought that the original missionary enterprise was sustained by the whole life of the church, and in fact was that very life. Then followed a rapid review of the history of missions, in order to show that, eras of advancement have been periods of manifest outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Coming to modern times, the preacher stated that, in view of achievements already won, doors opening on every hand and serious financial straits, the greatest need of the church is a realization of the presence and guidance of the Holy Spirit.

One of the most striking portions of the sermon was the statement of certain correspondences between the conditions of the primitive believers after Christ's ascension and before the Day of Pentecost and the conditions of the Christian world today. Then, as now, was a full knowledge of all the facts concerning the earthly life of Jesus, but to use these facts in effective testimony was and is the difficult thing. We are bewildered today in trying to apply the Sermon on the Mount to industrial and social problems, yet many voices are telling us that we must make such application. Then, too, the whole body of Christ longs for greater oneness, but still walls between believers are stubborn. In these times then of suspense and nerveless-ness let us expect and labor for a new and mightier Pentecost.

THE YEAR ABROAD.

In the annual survey of the field through the eyes of the foreign secretaries, Rev. Judson Smith, D.D., and Rev. J. L. Barton, D.D., the gladdening and saddening features made a singularly bold and effective contrast. There have not been many years when tidings of encouraging advance, of revivals, of deepening of Christian life, of increase in native contributions, of well-filled schools and of longing for greater educational and spiritual privileges have been so abundant and gratifying. On the other hand, it has been an exceptionally trying year, owing to the unprecedented retrenchment, to a cut of ten per cent. in the salaries of all missionaries excepting those in Eastern Turkey, and to the sweeping and almost ruthless curtailment of the work itself by dismissing evangelists, closing schools and leaving flocks without shepherds.

To be particularly noted are the marked development in the Zulu Mission of the active pastorate and high principle of self-support; the unusually encouraging report from the four missions in China, whole villages seeking teachers and offering to provide for them support; steady progress in India and Ceylon, where are the oldest missionaries of the Board, and where leading Hindus are more and more recognizing Jesus as the only perfect man; the slow but effective working of the leaven in papal lands, where Christian schools are rearing a generation whose life will tell mightily for an intelligent Christian faith. Even in Turkey, where the story of the year is one of bloodshed, terrorism and destruction, the secretaries were able to see some token of the divine purpose of all, particularly in the better understanding that has been brought about between the Gregorians and Protestants, and in the religious awakenings which in many places have followed the awful massacres.

The statistical summary shows twenty missions with 102 out-stations under the care of the Board; 178 ordained missionaries, sixteen of whom are physicians; 471 churches, with 43,013 members, 2,957 of whom were added during the year. The theological seminaries and station classes number eighteen. The whole number of pupils under instruction in various higher and lower institutions is 52,619. The native contributions last year so far as reported amounted to $107,509.

THE YEAR AT HOME

The home department, rendering account of its stewardship through Sec. C. H. Daniels, offered first a tribute to the fourteen corporate members who have died during the year. Among them, besides Secretaries Clark and Alden, were such pillars in Congregationalism as George F. Magoun, Charles Theodore Russell, Philo Parsons and John W. Harding. The year has been sadly notable, too, in that only seven missionaries—two young men and five women—have gone to the front.

Liberal space in the report was properly given to the agencies which have been at work for the increasing of financial resources through the circulation of literature, and particularly through the labors of co-operating committees of energetic business men in Boston, Chicago and New York, who have given freely their time, substance and sagacity to the needs of the Board. Through their efforts and the persistence of the officials in Boston and of District Secretaries Creegan, Hitchcock and Frear, the final raising of the debt was due. There has been large use of missionaries in this country on furlough, and there never has been a year when churches and local conferences were made so fully aware of the importance of the work through the regular visitation of secretaries and missionaries and through special and carefully planned rallies. Perhaps it is due to this that the number of churches that make no offering to the Board has been reduced from 2,300 last year to 2,083 this year.

The financial showing is as follows:

	Receipts.	Gain or loss.
Regular donations of churches and individuals,	$426,730	$3,357 gain
Special gifts,	43,989	1,569 loss
Legacies,	116,988	33,446 loss
Special fund for the debt,	131,246

These receipts with income from funds and other sources make the total receipts up to Aug. 31, 1896, $743,104. The expenditures have been $742,601, leaving a balance of $503.

The report referred with commendation to the Quick Relief Fund advanced by the Western district secretary and to the forward movement led by the Misses Leitch, and which operates largely among Endeavor Societies and Sunday schools.

JAPAN AND THE SITUATION THERE.

If any came to the meetings with misgivings with reference to Japan they must have been put to flight by the character and developments of the Wednesday morning session, which was devoted to the Japan mission and its problems. Certainly the whole tenor of the remarks was toward reassurance and enheartenment for the work which manifestly remains to be done. The paper by Secretary J. L Barton, D. D., whose contents were summarized in The Congregationalist last week, won many encomiums, both for its literary qualities, its discriminating attitude and its comprehensive grasp of conditions. He sketched the marvelous political, commercial and industrial advancement made in Japan during the past quarter of a century, outlined the distinctive history of our mission, treated at length the question of the Doshisha, the property question and the theological question, admitted frankly the fact that there has been during the past year an actual decrease of 1,278 persons in church membership, as well as a decline in the number of missionaries until only forty-nine are now on the field—the same number that was there in 1887. Nevertheless, Dr. Barton felt that, in spite of discouragements like these, the brilliant results of a quarter of a century of mission work not only testify to, but imperatively demand, its continued prosecution on a broader and larger scale.

This paper formed an excellent point of departure for the addresses that followed, which one after another drove home its salient truths. Rev. George Albrecht, himself a splendid representative of the strong group of men that compose our Japan Mission, made an impassioned plea for the continuance of the work in Japan. To say, "O, let us abandon Japan to its pride, its pantheism and its superstition," is a far greater heresy than has yet been advanced in our history. The native church is not strong enough yet to complete the Christianizing of Japan without further aid from us, and the influences which surround Christianity in Japan tend away from Christ. If we abandon Japan now it would have been far better if the United States, under the lead of Commodore Perry, had never brought the country in contact with Western thought. Difficulties and discouragements there are and the work as yet is only partially successful. But Bunker Hill and Bull Run were not a success at the time, and from one point of view, at least, the earthly mission of our Lord was a failure.

Taking up this strain of hope and courage, ex-Pres. S. C. Bartlett, D. D., said that the present situation, instead of calling us to retreat, summons us to go forward with greater patience and a more tender love. Present conditions grow out of human nature and can be overcome in time. Let us dismiss all fears as to the conquering power of the gospel of Christ. The words of Rev. J. G. Johnson, D. D., who spoke next, were all the more effective because of his recent personal acquaintance with Japan as a member of the deputation. He deprecated applying to Japan the precise standards of thought which we employ in this country, where we have had 250 years of Christianity as over against Japan's twenty. The Christians in Japan who diverge from the truth are certainly few. Most of them give evidence of a genuine Christian experience and of possessing the Holy Spirit. He was glad to testify that no germs of the departure teaching could be found in the teachings of our missionaries, either in what they have said or in what they have not said. It would be impossible to find a truer body of Christians in the world. They are thirsting to go forth to preach the gospel in needy and inviting fields.

The culmination of the morning came in Pres. J. B. Angell's finished and telling speech. He too had had the advantage of residence in the country under consideration. He spoke first of that temperamental quality of the Japanese which makes them less disposed to follow to the close a given study or undertaking. They know little of the Chinese "long pull." They live today in a seething caldron of conflicting ideas, and their problems arise from trying to cover in twenty-five years the step from feudalism to parliamentary government, which step it took Europe 800 years to accomplish. Every college in the world is today confronted with the same atmosphere of intellectual unrest and doubt which prevails in Japan, but we do not on that account abandon our collegiate institutions. For the same reason we should stand by missionaries and enable them to steer the nation to a worthy destiny. Reactionary periods have been not unknown in the history of the church. Call to mind the days of Julian the Apostate, the ebb and flow of the tide in the Sandwich Islands, and believe that in Japan a favorable reaction is likely to set in which will prove as surprising as the unfavorable reaction of the last few years.

REV GEORGE E ALBRECHT,
Of the Japan Mission.

POSITION TAKEN RESPECTING JAPAN.

Resolved, (1) That this Board, though compelled by the laws of Japan to convey the legal power over the lands which it had purchased and houses which it had built in Kyoto for missionary perposes to Japanese trustees, did not surrender its moral right in, and ownership of, that property; and it urges said trustees, on the ground of honor, rectitude and Christian principle, fully to recognize that ownership.

Resolved, (2) That this Board regrets the action of the trustees of the Doshisha in terminating, without consultation, the joint management of the Nurses' Training School and Hospital, which has been so largely created, furnished, equipped and sustained by funds furnished by and through this Board and its mission, in displacing at the same time its skillful founder and director, and in constraining the deputation to an alternative which they were reluctant to accept.

Resolved, (3) That this Board deeply laments the attitude which the present trustees of the Doshisha have adopted towards the Christian religion which it was specially founded and endowed to promulgate, and the Board will look, in the spirit of fraternal kindness, and yet in grave and earnest expectation, for such a change of policy and method as moral and Christian principle seem to require, and it will gladly co-operate with them again in carrying out the design of the founders whenever they shall place the institution on a Christian basis which this Board can accept.

Resolved, (4) That the Board advises the continuance of the full working force of the mission, increased rather than diminished, directed in such channels and by such methods as the change of conditions may seem to require; it advises the retention of all such spheres of influence as the mission can consistently occupy; it sanctions the withdrawal of the missionaries from the Doshisha in its present attitude toward Christianity; it urges an earnest co-operation with the Kumiai churches; it favors the establishment, in conjunction with these churches, of a theological training school or institute in the vernacular tongue; would specially approve the increase of all practical efforts to carry the gospel into the smaller towns and rural districts; and it strongly commends the establishment of an evangelical review, conducted and controlled by the mission.

Resolved, (5) That this Board thankfully recognizes the able and faithful labors of the recent deputation, and appreciates the suggestion of sending similar deputations from time to time to this and other missions of the Board.

THE CRISIS IN TURKEY.

Dr Judson Smith's paper with this title was summarized in The Congregationalist last week. It was an able and comprehensive review of the planting and growth of missions in the Ottoman empire and a vivid rehearsal of the awful blow that has fallen upon the work. He interpreted these painful events as a challenge to more faith and greater effort. The work is already too large to be deserted To withdraw would be to lose a great opportunity. We must give great weight to the judgment of the missionaries and follow the leading of providence.

Dr. Plumb's long service as chairman of the sub-committee of the Prudential Committee that has in charge Turkish missions qualified him to speak intelligently and effectively on the issues raised by Dr. Smith's paper. He felt that the ferment in Turkey was only what might be expected when the purity of the Christian faith came in contact with the false beliefs which are the real root of the troubles. This crisis is therefore instructive, as a tribute to our religion. It is prophetic, as well, of larger conquests by Christianity.

Following Dr. Plumb Rev. W. S. Dodd, a missionary, pointed out some of the brighter lines in the dark picture Turkey presents. He rejoiced in the readiness of the natives to receive the Bible and in their growing desire for education. He found, too, a recognition on their part of the relation of national sin to the present calamities.

EVERETT P WHEELER'S GREAT SPEECH.

After carefully demonstrating the inalienable rights which belong to American citizens in Turkey guaranteed them by the treaties between the two countries, Mr. Wheeler went on as follows. The limitations of space necessitate abridging his illustrative matter.

What then is the duty of America? I cannot claim on this point to speak as the representative of the American Board. But I thank you for the opportunity of presenting the case as it appears to an American citizen who loves his country and desires most earnestly that her honor be unstained and her citizens be secure. In the position in which Turkey has placed us is there any course consistent with honor or duty?

By this I do not mean that we should begin with war or bombard Turkish cities. I do mean that unless redress and security are both assured we should take possession of Smyrna and other ports and collect their revenues until indemnity for the past is obtained and the cost of our occupation reimbursed. Moreover, we must place a guard wherever American citizens are in danger. We go to save men's lives—not to destroy. This is what Vattel and Wheaton designate as reprisals, and what they advise as an alternative preferable to war and to be adopted whenever just demands for reparation meet with long continued neglect or refusal. . . .

Let us consider briefly the objections that have been made to this proposition. I will endeavor to satisfy you that it has the support, not only of the traditions and precedents of this Government, but of well-established principles of international law.

First, it is said that this Government has no power to undertake anything of the sort. This somewhat disgraceful argument is not supported by the facts. The fleet we already have is far more than a match for the Turkish fleet. The army we now have is more than a match for any troops that the Turks could send against us. The whole Turkish empire is in a state of absolute unrest; in every part of it troops are required to keep down the native population, who would be only too glad to rise against their hated oppressors; most of the Turkish troops are mutinous, and either poorly paid or not paid at all. And why should we expect resistance? The American soldier or marine on Turkish soil would not go as an enemy. He would not wage war, but preserve the peace. He would not assail the Mohammedan religion nor seek to dethrone the sultan. He would go to prevent violence, which the sultan has always disavowed, and to give that protection which the sultan is either unable or unwilling to afford. But if it were otherwise we should not hesitate. One of the richest and most powerful nations in the world will never listen for a moment to the unworthy argument that it has not the power to redress wrongs committed on its citizens. As Mr. Fiske in his review of our early history justly said: "A government touches the lowest point of ignominy when it confesses to an inability to protect the lives and property of its citizens."

The next objection, and one deserving more careful consideration, is that such a course is opposed to the traditional policy of our Government not to interfere with the quarrels and internal affairs of the nations of Europe. This is undoubtedly the policy of our country, but it has never been construed to forbid our giving ample protection to the persons and property of our citizens residing in foreign countries or doing business with them. . . .

Another argument that has been brought forward, and which I believe has influenced the Administration, is the apprehension that other nations would prevent our interference in the manner suggested. To this argument I reply: What possible motive could any European government have for interfering to prevent this exercise of our just rights? "It is perfectly understood," to use again the language of President Cleveland, "that we desire only the liberty and protection of our own citizens and redress for any wrongs they may have suffered, and that we have no ulterior designs or objects, political or otherwise."

To hold Armenia or any other part of the Turkish dominions permanently as an American colony would be opposed to all the traditions of our Government, and no one would think even of suggesting such a measure. The reason why the Powers of Europe have been jealous of each other in this matter is that each has, or is supposed to have, designs upon a part or all of the Turkish dominions. Russia has feared that England might establish herself at Constantinople. England has feared the same of Russia. Both have been apprehensive of Austria. But no such reasons could exist for opposition to the interference of America. Indeed, every sentiment of humanity in these countries would rejoice at our interference. It is not possible that in the year of grace one thousand eight hundred and ninety-six any Christian Power would interfere to prevent the United States, free as we are from any suspicion of a desire for territorial aggrandizement in Turkey, from protecting the rights, the persons and the property of our own citizens. How could they justify such an act, in view of the precedents to which I have referred? Has it come to this, that the fear—the baseless fear—of foreign Powers should prevent the United States of America from protecting our own citizens in foreign countries? If they should, the question would undoubtedly become a very serious one. We are a peaceful nation; we do not desire war with any one. When that question comes we will meet it like men. England and America united would be a force that the Continental Powers would not care to encounter. They do not desire war and we need not fear it.

But this question does not now arise. The matter we have now in hand is to deal, not with continental Europe, but with Turkey. Let us not, through cowardly and unreasonable fear of possible opposition, refrain from the pursuit of our just rights, or from redressing the wrongs that have been inflicted upon our own people. The time has come for us to guard the imperiled lives of our heroes in the Orient and to stay the tide of blood that threatens to engulf them.

One argument remains to be considered, and I am persuaded it is that which has most influenced our statesmen. It has been said the American citizens in Turkey are missionaries, and go where they are not wanted. What right have they to embroil this country in war for the sake of giving protection to them? This argument has been answered so fully by the venerable Dr. Hamlin, in the current number of the North American Review, that it hardly seems necessary to add anything to what he has said, and said so well. But yet I will briefly state some considerations that seem to me controlling. In the first place, the argument rests on a false assumption. Our citizens are wanted in Turkey. It is true the Turks do not want them, but the Turks are not the whole of the people of Asia Minor. They are a minority, exercising by force of arms a government which they won by force, but which they have not had the moderation to retain by dealing justly with the subject races. The great Roman historian tells us that provinces are won by force but are kept by just government. This the Turks have never learned. These subject races are an important part of the people of the Turkish empire. To them the presence of American citizens, bringing education, bringing hope, bringing medicine and relief in sickness and aid in undeserved distress, is most welcome. Fellowship in suffering, the sympathy and help freely given by England and America have brought the native Christians and their American neighbors into the closest brotherhood. It were base to desert our citizens who, with the full consent of the Turkish Government, with rights guaranteed by sacred treaties, have gone to perform imperative obligations of humanity. It were most base to desert them and leave not only our own, but those whom they have benefited, exposed to the cruelty and oppression of the Turk.

When Lieutenant Greeley went on an expedition of scientific interest to the Polar regions, did we desert him and his followers? No. We spared neither men nor money. We sent expedition after expedition. The President, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy vied with each other in their efforts to succor our citizens in their need. Is humanity less sacred than science? Is education less important than the study of the Arctic currents? Are the school and the college less entitled to our care than the barometer and the theodolite? Is the discovery of the pole more imperative than the protection of Christian civilization?

But let us not stop with general statements. All general statements can best be brought to the test of particular instances. The most notable of these is that ever memorable incident in the history of our citizens in Turkey, Corinna Shattuck at Oorfa. There, in her single person, she stood for all that the American Government stands for—for righteousness, for justice, for law. There she had been sent by your Board, there she had been established with the consent of the Turkish Government, there she had acquired a home and used it for the education of children and their parents and for the relief of the suffering and distressed. When a cruel Mussulman mob sought to outrage and slay native Christians they found refuge with her. Her little inclosure was packed with the innocent victims of Turkish outrage and Turkish rapacity. She faced the howling mob. To every demand that she should yield and allow them to pass she interposed the dignity and authority of her womanhood and the sacredness of treaty rights secured for her and all our citizens by the Government of her native land. During the massacre she writes: "Our house was full; 240 found refuge. We began to have refugees Monday and Tuesday, and all our house and schoolroom are full of widows and orphans and wounded. How willingly would I have died could my death have spared parents to their children. I remain here for the present. I could not leave our orphaned people."

If the American Board, with all its outlay of money and time and thought, with all its memorable and precious history, had accomplished nothing but to put Corinna Shattuck at the door of her house in Oorfa, standing as she did as a protection and shield for hundreds of innocent Christians, that result of itself would more than repay all the labor, toil, expenditure of the past. Wherever this gospel shall be spoken of throughout all the world there also what this woman hath done shall be told as a memorial of her. Nor she alone. A noble army whose courage and heroism shed undying luster on the American name have endured hardship as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

And now we have considered briefly the arguments that have been presented to deter our Government from adopting the honorable, the manly, the American course that every obligation to our own citizens and every consideration of our own honor, not only in Turkey, but in other countries, demands of us. These things have not been done in a corner. They are perfectly well known to the nations of the world. America is on trial today before the great international court. If we submit tamely, if we allow the rights of our citizens to be outraged with impunity and without redress, how can we ever expect them to receive protection in any country in the world? In such case we should become the scorn of the great nations and the prey even of the small. Turkey is one of the smallest and weakest of them all. Her only strength lies in the propping of opposing forces. She is in a state of unstable equilibrium. The slightest derangement of the forces that keep her in her place will bring her to the ground. The time is ripe for us to intervene. Let us, not think it a small incidental advantage that the protection we give to our own citizens in Turkey will be recognized by the Turks as a protection to the native Christians. They understand very well that the interests of the one are identical with those of the other. Wherever the native Christians have suffered our citizens have suffered. Wherever our citizens have been protected the native Christians have been protected. Let us therefore assert the place to which our wealth and our power justly entitle us. Let us secure to the American citizen the protection which the Roman citizen enjoyed in the days of the Roman empire. The whole history of the Turkish Government for the last century shows that it will yield to a resolute show of force which is understood to be backed up by adequate power. But in this business it is very essential to success that it should be understood, not only by the Turks, but by other nations, that we do not fear war, and that if we are obliged to draw the sword in a just cause we will never lay it down until that cause is vindicated and the object of the war is accomplished. Congress has pledged to the President its support in whatever vigorous measures he may take for the protection of our citizens in Turkey. Let us pledge him ours.

AS RESPECTS RESOURCES

The title of Secretary Daniels's special paper, No Backward Step, was an index to its character. It was a vigorous and solemnizing working out of the thought that the spirit of missions, the promise of Christ and the providences of God are all against a policy of retreat. This central position was fortified by illustrations drawn from the Board's own history. Its most signal advances have often had their inception at a time when the financial outlook was gloomiest. This fact was demonstrated at such acute crises as marked the periods beginning, respectively, in 1831, 1857, 1873 and 1893. In view of the young men and women now ready to go to the field and of the call from Japan, India, Turkey and elsewhere for them, Dr. Daniels expressed his hope and conviction that the churches would go forward more ardently with their missionary activities, realizing the great mission of the Board, apprehending the divine purposes, and offering more fervently the prayer for the outpouring of God's Spirit upon all flesh.

The modest, calm, searching words of Rev. J. C. Perkins of the Madura Mission showed the spirit which animates our workers there. Believing profoundly in the insufficiency of the Hindu religion for the race among whom he labors and the sufficiency of Christianity, he expressed his purpose to stick to his post even if severer retrenchment came, and even if to support himself he had to practice law in the morning and preach in the afternoon.

Mr. D. Willis James's great and honorable part in raising the debt of the Board has become so widely known and appreciated that his appearance on the platform was the signal for a particularly hearty round of applause. Disclaiming any desire to make a speech, he nevertheless, by the directness and tenderness of his words, produced a noteworthy spiritual impression. He felt that the root of interest in missions lay in an appreciation by each member of the church of the glory of missions, and illustrated this point by referring to his own boyhood. A little lad he went with his mother, herself a corporate member of the Board, to a missionary breakfast in Liverpool, where he saw for the first time those heroes of missions, Robert Moffatt and John Williams. Mr. James always carried with him the impressions which these magnificent men made upon his plastic mind, and to them in part is due the deep interest which he has always had in the world-wide evangelism. He made a touching plea for greater personal realization of the benefits which we receive from Christ, that our zeal may be thereby quickened.

Then came Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D. D., whose six months' pastorate in Detroit has certainly not lessened his power of direct and forceful speech. He went straight to the spiritual aspects of the question, and showed clearly that the distinctive and encouraging element in missions today is the evidence of the presence of the Holy Spirit, that is sustaining our brethren in Turkey and Japan and operating, too, here at home. It belongs to those already interested in missions to secure through a clearer vision of Christ an increase of faith and zeal. Forward movements always start in the hearts of Christian men and women, not in the outside world.

The only difference in opinion in regard to the financial policy which the Board should pursue the coming year was as to the extent of the power which should be vested in the Prudential Committee. Some, like Dr. Meredith, favored definite instructions restoring to the missions the full amount of last year's cut, and if such a liberal action should result in another debt it was believed that the churches would bear their share of it rather than have the work so terribly restricted. Other members of the Board, though believing that every effort should be made to return to the scale of appropriations of previous years, hesitated to order a policy which might result in another debt. Dr. Storrs held this opinion, and after a spirited but friendly debate and after considerable consultation and deliberation in committees, resolutions were adopted which left with the Prudential Committee the decision as to the scale of appropriations for the coming year, it being plainly intimated that every effort should be made to secure resources that would justify an advance. In this connection it should be said that Mr. D. Willis James's services on the committee in the home department were of great value.

THE ADDRESS OF DR. STORRS.

It is enough to say of Dr. Storrs's Thursday evening address that he was himself. All his wonted charm and grace of diction, all the force of powerful delivery and his characteristic sweep of thought and flight of imagination were in the speech. It had beyond that the tender and spiritual quality that made it something more than a brilliant piece of oratory.

FRANK H WIGGIN,
The newly elected treasurer.

He began by referring to the exceptional character of the circumstances under which the Board met. A great and urgent political campaign is in progress, in regard to which it is the duty and privilege of every citizen to express his conviction by the ballot. It is a time when the nations of the earth are in a condition of change and turmoil. What bearing has this state of affairs upon foreign missions? First of all we gather together to consult for the purification and elevation of personal souls all over the earth. Other aims are almost as important. We want to make the politics of this country better and nobler, we want to lift the politics of the world. The greatest forces are impalpable. The invisible gospel of Christ operates on individuals and on communities wherever it goes. The plan of God is behind this gospel and its advances. Dr. Storrs went on to vindicate the plan of God, even though Turkish outrages seemed to belie its effectiveness. Our God is a God of patience. He honors us with a share in working out his purposes. Thus we stand in spiritual succession with the noblest of all the ages, and thus we come into sympathy with Christ himself.

WOMAN'S MEETING.

As usual this gathering was second to none in interest. For three hours the large congregation convened in the pretty auditorium of the Central Church, was fed with facts, diverted and touched by striking incidents, and moved to renewed activity by the appeals of the strong and successful workers who addressed the meeting. Mrs. Moses Smith, the veteran president of the Woman's Board of the Interior, was in the chair, and at the start gave a practical tone to the proceedings by suggesting that each woman go home and get her own church to give more largely to the Board.

Then came the series of missionary addresses. Miss Miner of North China described the condition of women there, pointing out the steadfastness of the Christian women and the fortitude of little children. Mrs. Stover of the West Central African Mission pictured the disappointment involved in the cut in appropriations, but scouted the idea of giving up Africa and abandoning the plant already established there. In the opinion of Miss Jones of Constantinople, one of the silver linings of the dark cloud now hanging over Armenia consisted in the increased confidence which the natives now have in the missionaries. Mrs. Washburn's thirty-seven years of patient endeavor in India have made her only more anxious to prosecute the work. Fifteen hundred homes in India where the Bible is taught show that Christian missions there have not been in vain. Miss Cozad drew aside the veil which shields the inner life of the Japanese, and though the disclosures in reference to the morality of the husbands were painful, there was some relief in her assertion that, as a rule, morality prevails among the women. Mrs. Bale, daughter of Dr. Bliss of Syria, told of her joy in finding in Toledo a colony of Syrians, some of whom were her own children in the faith. Miss Howe of Kobe delighted every one with her graphic descriptions of kindergarten methods and successes in Kobe and elsewhere in Japan.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Little of the excitement of the years of debate characterized the business meeting, and there was entire unanimity as respects the candidates presented by the committee on officials, of which ex Lieut.-Governor Haile was chairman. The four members of the Prudential Committee whose terms had expired, Messrs. Whitcomb, Vose, Hyde and Hall, were re-elected for three years, and in place of Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D. D., resigned, Rev. W. H. Davis, D. D., was elected for a term of two years. E. R. Brown, Esq., of Dover, N. H., was chosen auditor in place of R. H. Stearns, Esq., resigned.

The most notable change was the transference of Frank H. Wiggin to the treasurership. He has been assistant treasurer since the death of Mr. Ward eighteen months ago, and promotion comes as a reward for his ten years of faithful and competent service in the treasury department. He is considered abundantly able to fulfill the important duties connected with his office, and there is every reason to believe that his trust will be administered with the same success that marked the official life of his predecessor. Mr. Wiggin has been a member of Mt. Vernon Church, Boston, for over twenty years and has served on its board of deacons for the last few years. He is a native of Wolfboro, N. H., and is about forty-five years of age.

Rev. Dr. John Henry Barrows, in one of his recent letters from Europe, says of the German universities, "It is the universal testimony of men coming hither from our richer Eastern colleges that there is more real drunken dissipation in these American institutions than in the German universities."

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, Oct. 19, at 10 A. M. Address by Rev. James H. Ross on From a Log College to Princeton University.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING, under the auspices of the Woman's Board of Missions, in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 o'clock A. M.

WORCESTER SOUTH CONFERENCE, Sutton, Oct. 28.

WORCESTER CENTRAL CONFERENCE, Piedmont Church, Worcester, Oct. 27.

WORCESTER NORTH CONFERENCE, Hubbardston, Oct. 27.

THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION will hold its seventeenth annual meeting at Berkeley Temple, Boston, on Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 10.30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Among the speakers will be Miss Miriam B. Means, Mrs. J. D. Kingsbury, Mrs. M. I. Fuller, Miss Nathalie Lord, Miss Lilla V. Davis, Mrs. J. W. Danielson, Mrs. C. L. Goodell and Rev. W. G. Puddefoot. An inexpensive lunch will be served. A full attendance is desired.

THE twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions will be held in the First Church, Manchester, N. H., on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 4, 5. Morning sessions at 10; afternoon sessions at 2. Addresses are expected from missionaries from Africa, Turkey, India, China, Japan. Reports of the home and foreign departments of the work will be given, also an account of the visit of the home secretary to mission fields. It is hoped that reduction of fares over New England railroads will be secured, of which notice will be given later.

ABBIE B. CHILD, Home Secretary.

JUBILEE MEETING OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.—The Fiftieth Anniversary of the American Missionary Association will be held in Boston on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 20–22. A large and enthusiastic meeting is confidently expected. The new Tremont Temple, Park Street Church and Faneuil Hall have been engaged for the meetings, and the list of speakers includes missionaries and prominent men and women in religious, literary and official life. It is proposed to make the meeting a celebration worthy of the completion of the association's half-century of noble service in the cause of religion and education. No city could have been more fitly selected for this great gathering than Boston. The spirit of the association has from the first been in line with that of the distinctive principles which have been the glory of New England, and are the rich heritage of the entire nation. It is most appropriate that some of the meetings of this Jubilee should be held in Faneuil Hall, the Cradle of Liberty. It is confidently expected that many will make th s meeting the occasion of a visit to the sacred spots in and about Boston connected with the history of the struggle for religious and civil liberty, a part of which has been accomplished through the efforts of this association.

Entertainment.—Hospitalities of the churches of Boston and vicinity will be extended to the officers of the association and speakers; to all missionaries, pastors, theological students, life members and accredited delegates who send their names to Rev. C. H. Beale, Roxbury, Mass., before Oct. 15. It will be absolutely necessary that application be made at least a week in advance of the meeting in order to secure entertainment. All other persons can obtain accommodations for $1.50 per day and upwards, at hotels and boarding houses, concerning which information will be furnished by the entertainment committee. Address general inquiries to Rev. William E. Barton, D. D., Chairman of Committee on Arrangements, Tremont Street, corner of West Brookline, Boston. Inquiries concerning entertainment should be addressed to Rev. Charles H. Beale, D. D., Chairman Committee of Entertainment, 33 Waverley Street, Roxbury, Mass.

Transportation.—The following railroads in New England, viz, Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany, Fitchburg, New England, New York, New Haven & Hartford (both divisions), Bangor & Aroostook, Maine Central, Central Vermont, have arranged to sell round trip tickets upon the following basis: Two cents per mile from points within twenty-five miles of Boston, $1.00 from points within twenty-five to thirty-three miles of Boston, and one and one-half cents per mile from points more than thirty-three miles from Boston. Tickets good going and returning, Oct. 20–22 inclusive, with the understanding that the time in returning to distant points in New England which cannot be reached Thursday night will be extended one day.

Railroads offering reduced rates from territory outside of New England will make use of the "certificate plan," and are the principal roads included in the Central Traffic Association, the Western Passenger Association, the New England Passenger Association and the Trunk Line Association.

Purchasers of these tickets will pay full first-class fare coming to Boston, and get a certificate to that effect from the agent of whom the ticket is purchased. The important stations are supplied with these certificates. Ticket agents at local stations, not supplied with certificates and through tickets to Boston, will inform parties of the nearest station where they can be obtained, and in such case purchasers should buy a local ticket to such station and there obtain their certificate and through ticket. These certificates must be obtained, covering the whole distance from starting point to Boston, in order to secure the one-third rate in returning, as no refund of fare will be made on account of any person failing to obtain one. Holders of these certificates, upon their arrival in Boston, must present them at an early session at the office of the transportation committee, for indorsement by its chairman, James G. Buttrick, and by the special agent of the railroads in attendance for that purpose.

On presentation of these certificates (thus indorsed), promptly upon adjournment of meeting, to the local ticket agents in Boston, return tickets can be obtained for one-third of the usual fare. These tickets, which are not transferable, are good for a continuous passage over the same lines used in coming to Boston.

Committee of Arrangements.—Rev. W. E. Barton, D. D., Chairman, Corner West Brookline and Tremont Streets, Boston; Rev. Charles H. Beale, D. D., Chairman Entertainment Committee, 33 Waverley Street, Roxbury, Mass.; Rev. Edward Sampson Tead, 8 Aldersey Street, Somerville, Mass; Rev. Edward M. Noyes, Newton Center, Mass.; Rev. Ellis Mendell, 38 Atherton Street, Boston.

FALL STATE MEETINGS.

Idaho,	Boise,	Oct.
New Mexico,	Albuquerque,	Oct.
Utah,		Oct.
Nebraska,	Harvard,	Monday, Oct. 19.
Colorado,	Denver,	Tuesday, Oct. 20.
Alabama,	Shelby,	Wednesday, Nov. 11.
Connecticut Conf.,	Winsted,	Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Benevolent Societies.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY is represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No. 9 Congregational House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin B. Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room No. 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. Annual membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Contributions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS, Congregational House, No. 1 Somerset Street, Boston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles E. Swett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in New York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Congregational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; Miss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible House, New York. Missions in the United States, evangelistic and educational, at the South and in the West among the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Congregational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street; Cleveland office, Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may be sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY —Church and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D. D., Secretary; Treasurer, 59 Bible House, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Including work of former New West Commission.) Aids four hundred students for the ministry, eight home missionary colleges, twenty academies in the West and South, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New Mexico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congregational House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

CONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.—Contributions used only for missionary work. Rev. George M. Boynton, D. D., Secretary; W. A. Duncan, Ph. D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treasurer, Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.—Treasurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, Boston Address applications to Rev A. H. Quint, D. D., Congregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little timely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign missionaries and ministers and their families, the committee of the National Council asks from each church one splendid offering for its permanent invested fund. It also invites generous individual gifts. For fuller information see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year-Book, 1893, page 62. Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, New Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B. Forbes, Hartford, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trustees of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States" (a body corporate chartered under the laws of the State of Connecticut) [here insert the bequest], to be used for the purpose of Ministerial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States at its session held in Chicago in October, 1886.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, established by the Massachusetts General Association, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies. Careful attention is given to applications from without the State. Room 22A, Congregational House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

THE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized 1827. Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. Open day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. Daily prayer meeting, 11 A. M., Bible study, 3 P. M. Sunday services, usual hours. Meetings every evening except Saturday. Branch mission, Vineyard Haven. Is a Congregational society and appeals to all Congregational churches for support. Send donations of money to B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Congregational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort bags, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, 287 Hanover St. Bequests should read: "I give and bequeath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum of $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and purposes of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT ON THIS WEEK'S NEWS.

Churches in New Jersey reported this week believe in correspondence as an aid to quickening activities all along the line. And quite generally this is a time for pastoral letters. Copies of some of them have come to us, full of inspiration for the opening of a new year. Let the pastor's friends reflect the encouragement which he endeavors to instil by offering him the warm hand grasp, the cheery word and the radiant face.

It seems fitting that while Children's Day comes in the early summer, its correlative, Old Folks' Day, should occur in harvest time, though the latter festival is not yet generally observed, nor has a specific date for it been appointed. Our news from Minnesota and Nebraska, however, contains instances of churches which delight thus to honor their venerable members.

A fascinating method of studying missions is that pursued by the young people of Lyndale and Fifth Avenue Churches, Minneapolis, who unite in forming a tourists' club for better acquaintance with various foreign fields. The pastor of the last-named church leads the club, illustrating his talks with the stereopticon.

A Massachusetts church found one day of rallying so helpful that a week was planned for its continuation. The record of the past few years shows consecrated planning and accomplishment which may well be a signboard to other churches seeking suggestions which promise success.

The increased attendance of young men at the church in Santa Barbara, Cal., which has organized an athletic club and provided a teacher, is only what was to be expected.

Such awakenings as we note in a New Hampshire church cannot occur without a widespread influence in the whole community.

Breadth of view was sought for and attained at a recent New England Congregational club, and in a simple manner.

Cottage prayer meetings seem to be gaining in prominence as a means of following up the parish and pulpit work of the pastor.

The outlook for Congregationalism in southern Illinois is broadened and bettered by a recent event in that section.

Home and foreign missions have been closely bound together in a Wisconsin church with definite results.

The men's club steps to the fore for aggressive action this winter.

CLEVELAND'S GIFT TO MISSIONS.

Pilgrim Church invited last Friday all the churches of Cleveland Conference and several others in northern Ohio to a council called for the ordination of Mr. Horace T. Pitkin to the Christian ministry and as representative of Pilgrim Church in foreign missionary service. Nearly every church in the conference was represented, and for the evening session many city churches gave up their prayer meetings. After an extended examination the council unanimously voted to proceed. The public services were attended by a congregation that filled the spacious floor of the church. Dr. James Brand preached the sermon, Sec. Judson Smith offered the ordaining prayer, Dr. A. H. Plumb gave the charge to missionary service, Rev. H. P. Beach the right hand and Dr. H. A. Schauffler a charge to the church.

Mr. Pitkin is under appointment to the North China mission of the American Board. He is a graduate of Yale College and Union Seminary. With his accomplished wife, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke, he will bring strong re-enforcement to this important field. Pilgrim Church first became acquainted with him a year and a half ago, when he visited Cleveland in the interest of the volunteer movement, in which he has been a leader. The church assumes his support, the Sunday school, Endeavor Societies, Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, King's Daughters and other organizations pledging with enthusiasm enough to double the present annual offering of the church for foreign missions.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin become members of Pilgrim Church, and their connection with the church deepens and strengthens missionary interest throughout the entire congregation. This advance step is taken by the church with devout gratitude to God for this new privilege of enlarging its work for the kingdom.

At the same time that Pilgrim Church sends one of its members to China it welcomes an Armenian boy, escaped from persecution and coming with a letter of introduction to one of the Pilgrim pastors from personal friends in Turkey. Until work can be found for him he is cared for by friends in the church.

I. W. M.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Bangor.

Rev. Henry Blodget, D. D., a former seminary student, addressed the students at their first missionary meeting on Mission Work in China.——The students commenced their regular class work in the gymnasium Oct. 6, under the instruction of Mr. C. M. Bursley, physical director of the Bangor Y. M. C. A.——Messrs. W. C. Adams, W. H. Dunnack, W. C. Martyn, J. H. Quint and R. R. Morson, graduates of the Class of '96, have entered Bowdoin for advanced study.

Andover.

Dr. Torrey has returned to take up his regular work.——Professor Hincks will conduct an evening class in German during the winter, reading some recent book on theology.——President Harris has outlined the study of English literature for the Middle Class on Monday evenings. The works of Tennyson, Wordsworth, Browning and Hawthorne will be considered in their moral and religious aspects.——The faculty has voted to suspend the work of the seminary Oct. 21, 22, that the students may attend the A. M. A. jubilee meeting.——The annual reception of the Society of Inquiry will be held, Oct. 14, at the house of Professor Taylor.——President Harris is seminary preacher for the month of October.

Hartford.

The opening address and reception to the students by President Hartranft was omitted this year because of the Sunday school convention in this city last week Wednesday. Instead, the president gave a welcome at the chapel Thursday morning.——The students enrolled this year number 63, including six women, three Armenians, a Persian and a Japanese.——The Junior Class of 22 is the largest that ever entered.——The first prayer meeting was held Friday evening, and was followed by an informal reception to the Juniors by the other students.——All the professors have returned from their vacations except Professor Mead, who is expected shortly.

Yale.

The men elected to deliver addresses before the school this year are Messrs. Coolidge, Evans, Fisher, Knapp, Ladd, Lynch, Macfarland, Merrill, Pierce, Rall, Rice and R. W. Stimson.——Mr. E. W. Lyman has been elected deacon of the Juniors.——A large oil painting of the faculty of many years ago, executed by Professor Weir of the art school, has been hung in the Trowbridge Reference Library.——Professor Blackman's work in sociology with the Senior Class will include a scientific study of New Haven and visits to New York for similar purposes.——Mr. G. E. Ladd of the Senior Class was recently married to Miss M. A. R. Hamlin, daughter of Dr. Cyrus Hamlin of Lexington, Mass.——Resolutions of sympathy have been sent by the Senior Class to Mr. W. S. Beard relative to the recent death of his father, Rev. W. M. Beard of South Killingly.

Oberlin.

Seminary work was suspended from Tuesday to Friday of last week to allow attendance upon the meeting of the A. B. C. F. M. A large number of students availed themselves of the opportunity.——Two years ago the English course was lengthened from two years to three. This fall the regular work of the third year is being provided for the third year men, viz., church history, a third year of Bible study and a course taken in the college in the department of sociology.

Chicago.

Professor Harper is using with beginners a new series of Hebrew lessons, revised and improved, but still in manuscript.——There are 13 students in the advanced division in Hebrew of the Middle Class.——The advanced division in Hebrew of the Junior Class numbers 10.——President Fisk attended the meeting of the American Board.——Rev. Dr. N. I. Rubinkam lectured on Robert Browning at the conference Thursday afternoon.——In view of the political interests involved the seminary observed Chicago Day by suspending all lectures.

Pacific.

The neighboring pastors are assisting in the training course for lay workers just begun, and Rev. W. W. Scudder of Alameda is now lecturing on the Life of Christ.——Prof. F. H. Foster is pastor of the church in West Oakland and President McLean of the Plymouth Avenue Church near the seminary.——Rev. George C. Adams of St. Louis, now in San Francisco, addressed the students at the first "conference" of the year on Be Ye Wise as Serpents.——A 40-hour course in Christian ethics was begun Sept. 30 with the Seniors.——The sociology class visited the county almshouse last Saturday. They discovered a model establishment.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

VT.—Union Conference met last in North Londonderry, Oct. 6, 7. Topics were: Power of the Gospel Seen in the Individual, Church, Nation; Better Enforcement of Laws; How to Deepen the Interest of Men in the Church; and The C. C. B. S. Rev. O. S. Davis preached.

CT.—The Middlesex County Conference held its autumn session in Old Lyme. The topics were: Has the Church Outgrown the Prayer Meeting? The Decay of the Prayer Meeting, The Prayer Meeting the Pulse of the Church.

N. Y.—The Susquehanna Association met in Candor, Sept. 29, 30. Among the topics were: Memories and Lessons from a Ministry of Fifty Years, The Claims of the C. H. M. S. and of the C. C. B. S., Keuka College and Temperance. Rev. W. A. Farnsworth from Cæsarea gave a particularly interesting account of the work among the Armenians, and an Armenian minister continued the subject. A forcible sermon was preached by Rev. T. K. Beecher of Elmira.

IND.—The Northwestern Association met in Whiting, Sept. 29, 30. Rev. W. C. Gordon preached the opening sermon. Topics were: The Prayer Meeting, The Missionary Spirit of the Churches and The Relation of Home Missions to the Nation's Welfare. The reports from the churches were full and encouraging.

IO.—The meeting of Grinnell Association was held at Baxter, Sept. 29, 30. The topics were eminently practical: Church Life and Amusements, Keeping the Sabbath, Christian Coldness, Development of a Church's Working Power, How to Secure the Results of Preaching, The Kind of Pastoral Work Needed, Relation of Beneficence to Christian Character and The Mission of Christian Endeavor. This association gives generous hearing to missions, the women especially always having an opportunity to impart their missionary enthusiasm. The sermon was by Rev. G. A. Taylor of Stuart.

The Dubuque Association at its session, Sept. 29, at Strawberry Point, not only refused to listen to the request of the Bay Conference of California and rescind its action in regard to Rev. C. O. Brown, but received him into fellowship, thereby expressing its complete confidence in his personal integrity and practically condemning the action of the Bay Conference. As the constitution of the association requires that candidates for admission be in good standing, or come by examination and with proper credentials, it is thought the procedure will prove to be irregular and will make trouble in the future. The sermon was by Rev. S. J. Beach. Addresses were made by Rev. G. E. Albrecht of Japan and representatives of home fields. Among the topics discussed were: The Tendency of German Thought, Duties of Church Trustees, Strongholds of Congregationalism and Its Perils.

NEB.—The Republican Valley Association held its annual session at Red Cloud, Oct. 5, 6. The meeting was one of sustained interest and abiding good. The reports from the churches, while dwelling to some extent upon the unfavorable conditions in the southwestern part of the district, were hopeful and indicated progress. The sermon was by Rev. W. H. LeBar. The program was principally devoted to the interests of Sunday School Work, Foreign and Home Missions and Education, the last two topics occupying the whole of the second day. Supt. Harmon Bross read a significant paper showing the union of these two interests in the lives of the early leaders, Reuben Gaylord and Isaac E. Heaton. The association warmly commended the work of Evangelist T. E. Horton.

The Frontier Association, the latest formed in the State, held its annual meeting at Grant, Sept. 29, 30. The attendance was not large but the meeting was one of deep spiritual interest. The churches in this association are aggressive and successful with work in country districts. The associational sermon was by Rev. C. W. Preston of Curtis. There were symposiums on Temperance Work, Sunday School Interests and Our Benevolent Societies.

CAL.—Santa Clara Association met at San Juan, Sept. 15, 16, in the newly papered and carpeted edifice. Visiting brethren were present, representing various departments of the general work. Earnest discussion followed papers on How Can the Churches Aid Each Other? A Church Its Own Evangelist, Has the World Outgrown the Mosaic Legislation?

CLUBS.

N. H.—The most successful meeting yet held by the Ascutney Club was that of Sept. 29. The subject was The Christian Church, under the topics: From the Point of View of a Business Man, Physician, Lawyer, Teacher and Clergyman. Addresses were given by representatives of these various professions.

VT.—The Western Vermont Club met for its latest meeting in St. Albans. Papers were given on The Diaconite or Stephen, Men of the Church, The Christian Brother's Opportunity. An address on The True American, by Dr. W. S. Smart, elicited general enthusiasm.

CT.—The New Haven Club held its first meeting of the season with the Second Church, Fair Haven, Oct. 12. Rev. F. L. Goodspeed of Springfield gave an address on Savonarola.

NEW ENGLAND.

Boston.

ALLSTON.—A young men's current events club has been organized, with 25 members. Its object is to promote the fellowship, culture and usefulness of its members. The pastor, Rev. J. O. Haarvig, is preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons on The Book of Jonah in Relation to Modern Life.

The ministers who gathered in Pilgrim Hall last Monday had a rich treat in the paper read to them by Prof. H. H. Neill of Amherst on The Bible as Literature.

Massachusetts.

WAKEFIELD.—Gifts of Mrs. L. B. Fuller of late to the West Gloucester and Magnolia churches amounted to $500 each. That to the latter was for a Fuller memorial window.

TAUNTON.—All the pastors are again in their places and the fall work opens with good congregations and strong courage. The Trinitarian and Winslow Churches united in their Sunday services during the vacation, with mutually satisfactory results. The former, Rev. S. V. Cole, pastor, is to insert a Tiffany memorial window to Rev. Erastus Maltby, who was pastor of the church for 45 years. A tablet will also be placed to the memory of the first pastor, Rev. Chester Isham. These memorials will mark the 75th anniversary of the founding of the church. The event will be observed with appropriate exercises Oct. 25, 26.

NEWBURYPORT.—Bellville. The memorial tablet recently placed at the right of the pulpit in the auditorium was dedicated last Sunday morning. It is in memory of Rev James Miltimore, the first pastor here. It is of bronze and was provided by funds left by his granddaughter, the late Miss A. E. Rousseau. The pastor, Rev. A. W. Hitchcock, read selections from the old Bible formerly used by Mr. Miltimore. Dr. D. T. Fiske, the senior pastor, gave the address.

LOWELL.—Eliot. Dr. J. M. Greene, the pastor, is giving Sunday evening talks on topics suggested by the young men of his congregation. An opportunity to ask questions is offered at the close of the talk. A Good Citizenship Club has been formed among the younger members.——Kirk Street. The congregation has been worshiping at the First Church edifice since vacation, but the repairs on the building have now progressed sufficiently to permit services to be held in the vestry. The pastor, Rev. W. A. Bartlett, is a musical expert, and is arranging for a series of Sunday evening chorals as soon as the repairs are completed.

WORCESTER.—Church of the Covenant, at its annual meeting, held recently, invited Rev. J. E. Hurlbut to remain as pastor another year. The church membership is 81, of the Sunday school enrollment 191. A Men's Association has been organized recently.——Belmont. In spite of the splendid work accomplished since W. B. Oleson became pastor less than two years ago, the church is burdened by a heavy mortgage and is seriously considering giving up the present property and starting anew in another locality.

SPENCER.—First. The church has just observed "rally week" with special services. A harvest home reception and entertainment was held, as well as the annual church supper and roll-call The attendance has been large. During the present pastorate of Rev. S. W. Brown the church has grown steadily in numbers and deep spiritual interest. During his three years' pastorate 100 new members have been received, 80 on confession. He was the pioneer of the Men's Sunday Evening League in the East, starting one in Spencer two years ago.

WESTBORO.—The various women's societies of the church have been organized into a Ladies' Union. No changes were made in the officers, times of meeting or constitutions. The united body meets quarterly. After a short program refreshments are served. At the last meeting about 75 were present.

SPRINGFIELD.—First. The women held a successful Puritan fair last week. The parlors were attractively decorated. The ladies of the church and congregation were distinguished by their caps and kerchiefs, and a number of articles for sale found ready buyers. The proceeds are for the recent repairs on the church building. The annual meeting was held last Thursday. Encouraging reports were received from all departments. The membership of the church is now 959 and of the Sunday school 743.——Hope. The annual meetings of several church societies were held last week. The pastor's wife, Mrs. R. W. Brokaw, takes the presidency of the ladies' benevolent society. The two normal classes of Seniors and Juniors are now in progress.——South. The Sunday afternoon vesper services are proving as popular this season as last. An excellent and well-drilled chorus renders fine music.——Eastern Avenue. The annual meeting was held last week. With new officers and renewed interest, the prospects seem brighter for the coming year.——Park. A normal training class is in process of formation. The choir and chorus are doing unusually fine work this year.——Emmanuel. Rev. D. L. Kebbe preached his first anniversary sermon last Sunday morning. In the evening reports were given by delegates to the Sunday school convention at Northampton.

Maine.

NORTH BRIDGTON.—There is increased attendance since the house was renovated. Some of the Sunday school classes now have much needed accommodations in the new vestry. Two Christian families have recently been united to the working force. The missionary meetings have added interest by the use of the stereopticon.

BINGHAM.—An appeal is being made for the sum needed to wipe out the debt of this little church, which is doing a noble work here. The pastor, Rev. J. C. Gregory, became personally responsible for $600 in order to secure funds conditional on the whole being raised, and still needs $440.

THOMASTON.—The annual parish meeting has just been held and all bills have been paid, leaving a balance in the treasury. The pastor, Rev. C. D. Boothby, has an increase of salary, also. The putting in of electric lights, contributed by a former parishioner, is gratefully acknowledged.

ALFRED.—The absence of the pastor, Rev. R. C. Drisco, at Bangor and Fort Fairfield has been improved by painting and renovating the church buildings at an expense of about $300. The various departments all seem prosperous.

FARMINGTON.—Rev. G C. Wilson at a meeting of the Bible Society reported seven missionary colporteurs in Maine working in Hancock and Waldo Counties and the northern parts of Franklin, Somerset and Piscataquis Counties.

KITTERY POINT.—This church has prospered, and though still few in numbers is doing good work. It was organized in 1714, and at one time in its history had only one female member. Rev. H. V. Emmons is pastor.

SCARBORO.—The finances have been placed in good condition, and friends outside the church have assisted. The parsonage has received an addition and has been painted.

New Hampshire

ANTRIM.—This church was organized in 1893, and has made in three years a net gain of 50 per cent. in membership to a present enrollment of about 75. It holds services in a hall and needs a church building greatly. A movement for building has been started and the people have subscribed generously. This church is two miles from any similar organization and reaches people five miles away.

MARLBORO.—The pastor, Rev. J. S. Colby, has begun a series of discourses on Some Contrasts Between the Old and New Dispensations. The Ladies' Home Circle recently netted nearly $80 from a birthday party, the largest amount ever realized in the place from an entertainment. The weekly sessions of the Literary Circle for the study of classics have been resumed at the parsonage.

FRANCESTOWN.—In September Rev. Ralph Gillam, the evangelist, conducted a 12-days' series of evangelistic services resulting in great spiritual quickening, and leading more than 50 to avow their purpose to lead a Christian life. The change in the religious atmosphere and attitude of the community is manifest, and larger and more far-reaching results are anticipated.

EAST CONCORD.—The ladies of the society, with characteristic enterprise, have recently secured the painting of the vestry, and under their inspiration the gentlemen are pushing efforts to procure the necessary funds to paint the outside of the church edifice which are likely to be successful.

The Salisbury meeting house has lately been greatly improved by putting in stained windows. ——The newly repaired house in Claremont was rededicated Oct. 6, Pres. W. J. Tucker of Dartmouth College preaching the sermon.

Rhode Island.

TIVERTON.—Amicable. Interesting facts were brought out in connection with the recent celebration of the 150th anniversary. Some of the stirring events of the Revolution came close to the men of Tiverton. In those days the pulpit and pews were moved out of the meeting house and the building was used as the barracks of the Continentals. Afterwards the General Assembly of Rhode Island granted the petition of the church for holding a lottery to provide for the repair of injuries. The mother of Adoniram Judson was one of the baptized children of the church, belonging to a family that is still loyal to the church.

PAWTUCKET.—Park Place, Rev. J. J. Woolley, pastor, held its annual meeting Sept. 29. Reports were encouraging and the financial condition satisfactory. The combination of social features with the business attracted a large representation.

Connecticut.

WILLIMANTIC.—The newly decorated and furnished meeting house was opened recently for servic the first time, and large congregations were present. The ceiling has been divided into 18 panels by beams running at right angles. These together with the walls and entire interior have been newly frescoed in light warm colors that harmonize well. The pulpit recess and windows are arched in the Gothic style of architecture. The chapel has also received a thorough repairing, including a new roof, and has been newly decorated in harmony with the auditorium. New carpets and new cushions complete the pleasing appearance of the interior. The work has been going on over two months, and was done entirely under the direction and at the expense of the women. Rev. E. A. George is pastor.

MONTVILLE.—The internal improvements of the building have been rendered complete by the hanging of a beautiful new chandelier, the gift to the church of the Robertson heirs, proprietors of the paper mill industry of the town. The women's society has appropriated money for the reshingling and new boarding of the horse sheds.

EAST HAMPTON.—Rev. A. P. Miller of New Haven occupied the pulpit recently. He was formerly a slave and did not receive his freedom until after the war, since which time he has received an education at Fisk University and Yale Divinity School. He is now connected with the Board for Armenian Missions

ROCKVILLE.—Union. The Endeavor Society has presented the society with a check for $50 to be applied on the church debt. An unusually large Sunday school was present on rally Sunday, 420 pupils being present. It was voted to contribute $25 towards the State association.

WETHERSFIELD.—Workmen are now employed on the chapel in converting the room formerly used by the Wethersfield Library Association into a parlor for the women's meetings. A kitchen is also being built in the rear of the chapel, connecting with it for use at sociables.

NEW HAVEN.—At the opening Ministers' Meeting, Oct. 12, an address on Ethics and Authorship was given by Rev. J. B. Smith. This gathering is composed of all religious denominations in and about the city, instead of each denomination meeting by itself only.

NEW BRITAIN.—First. Rev. G. H. Sandwell has been heartily welcomed on his return from a two-months trip to Europe. Mr. Sandwell has been preaching with acceptance at Christ Church, London, during Rev. F. B. Meyers's absence in this country.

NEWINGTON.—Rev. Herbert Macy, the pastor, has been elected acting school visitor. The school has voted $25 a year for two years towards the work of the State Sunday School Association.

ROXBURY —Additions have been received of late at every communion service. Mr. G. A. Bushee, recently of Yale Divinity School, will be ordained this month.

FAIR HAVEN.—Second is holding a series of vesper services, at which music of a high order is presented with addres es by the pastor, Rev. D. M. James.

LITCHFIELD.—As a result of the Armenian agitation in this town nearly $200 have been forwarded to the National Relief Committee.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

BINGHAMTON.—Plymouth. Rev. W. H. Kephart preached his last sermon in this city, Oct. 3. and on the following Tuesday his connection with the local association was officially severed. Mr. Kephart came here in June, 1889, under engagement to take charge of a flourishing mission Sunday school supported by the First Church. In 1890 the school grew into a church of 125, over which Mr. Kephart was installed. This little church twice outgrew its place of worship, and in January, 1893, a site was obtained at Oak and Lydia. The church now numbers 350 and is in a flourishing condition. The North Church, New York city, over which Mr. Kephart has just become pastor, numbers about 250 families, its Sunday school having a membership of not far from 700. The church was organized in 1890.

RENSSELAER FALLS.—The parsonage is undergoing needed repairs. Neighborhood cottage prayer meetings are being held and there is a marked interest throughout the parish.——Rev. G. M. Rowland, after spending several months with his aged mother, is returning with his family to his mission field in Japan. They sailed from Vancouver Oct. 12

CORNING —The corner stone of the new building was laid Oct. 2. Rev. Ethan Curtis gave the address and other clergymen of the city took part. The building will cost about $20,000.

PATCHOGUE.—First. The church is still without a pastor, but it is in a flourishing condition. The house of worship is greatly admired by those who have preached here.

Rev. S. G. Heckman and his people at Watertown are rejoicing in the payment of their church debt.

New Jersey.

GLEN RIDGE.—The board of deacons has issued a letter to the members of the church calling upon them to join the deacons in loyally supporting the work of the church and pastor. The Sunday school reopens with good numbers and is greeted by a stirring letter from the superintendent in the church paper. About 51,000 bouquets of flowers have been sent to the poor in New York, where they have been greatly prized.

PLAINFIELD.—The pastor has just issued an earnest pastoral letter calling upon all in the church to fresh loyalty in worship and work. Accompanying the letter is an inquiry slip with questions as to what the person addressed is doing and is willing to do.

NEWARK.—First. By the will of the late Deacon C. M. Hill the church receives a legacy of $1,000, to be held in trust, the interest being used for the benefit of the poor of the church.

Pennsylvania.

ARNOT.—Some time ago this people, Rev. R. J. Rees, pastor, came to self-support and have lately started two missions in Landers and Maple Hill. The latter has now been placed in the care of the Welsh Church of Blossburg. Five conversions are reported from Arnot during August.

KANE.—The edifice has been refitted and frescoed at a cost of $350, a sum which was raised by the Ladies' Aid Society. The new parsonage cost $3,000. The church seeks to do faithfully its share of Christian work in the town. The pastor is Rev. C. A. Jones.

LANSFORD.—The Sunday evening congregations are large, requiring extra seats in the aisles. The Sunday school has voted to devote the first Sunday of each month's collections to missions. The new pastor is Rev. J. C. Handy, formerly a Methodist.

COALDALE.—Second. The troublesome debt of this church has been extinguished, and Rev. R. N. Harris, who was the moving spirit in the work, goes to Mt. Carmel for a new pastorate.

THE SOUTH.

Louisiana.

Rev. C. F. Sheldon has returned to Lake Charles from a tour among the churches of the northern and central parts of the State. He has been assisting the pastors in special services, which have resulted in much good.

Texas.

DALLAS.—First. Rev. W. E. Reed, who has been with the church since January, 1896, has decided to take up foreign work in Ecuador, S. A., and will close his work at Dallas in December. The church has asked Dr. C. I. Scofield, who is now at East Northfield, Mass., to return and resume his pastorate at the end of the year.

The First Church in Paris is putting in new windows.

HARPER'S WEEKLY
THE SEMI-CENTENNIAL
OF ANÆSTHESIA
Celebration in Boston of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the FIRST USE OF ETHER
in Surgery
Illustrations and Text
IN THE ISSUE FOR OCTOBER 17
10 cents a Copy $4.00 a Year
HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers, N. Y.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

COLUMBUS.—Eastwood is feeling the influence of the "hard times," but is hopeful, united and vigorous. The pastor, Rev. R. S. Lindsay, and his wife were given a hearty reception by their people on their return from vacation. Mr. Lindsay spent four weeks in Canada and supplied the vacant church at Barrie, Ont., for two Sundays.——Mayflower and St. Clair Avenue are both in excellent condition. Rev. D. F. Harris of the latter is one of the leaders of the State Anti-Saloon League movement.——Plymouth, Rev. Alexander Milne, pastor, rejoices for the first time in its history in freedom from debt. The church may be expected in the near future to take up some new work on the North Side.——South is pushing forward into a prominent place in the German community in which it is situated. Rev. C. A. Gleason is the first of the city pastors to call in the aid of the Boys' Brigade, and he is succeeding. The former pastor of this church, Rev. Jesse Bright, does not recover so rapidly as was hoped, and it will be some time before he is able to resume work.

Illinois.

ALTON.—The annual meeting was one of the most encouraging the church has held of late. Reports show that faithful work has been done. The benevolences were large and the treasurer reported all bills paid and a surplus. The church enrollment has increased from 161 to 215 during the present pastorate. Rev. J. H. J. Rice is pastor.

ALBION.—The corner stone of an edifice of brick and stone, the largest in the southern part of the State, was laid Oct. 2. The pastor, Rev. E. E. Shoemaker, gave the principal address. President Hines of the Southern Collegiate Institute, which is located here, also spoke.

Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS.—Fellowship celebrated, Oct. 4, 5, the sixth anniversary of the founding of the Sunday school, out of which grew the church. Already the subject of a larger and permanent house of worship is being agitated. One brother has offered a subscription of $1,000 to start with.——Pilgrim has largely increased congregations since the coming of Rev. A. F. Ayres, and non-church-going families are being attracted to the minor services.——Plymouth. The institute adjunct of the church opened for the winter, Oct. 8, with a full list of night and day classes in various departments; particular attention is given to child study and literature.——Northeast. This recently organized church is the outgrowth of religious work conducted for two years in a manufacturing locality and sustained by the local W. C. T. U. Cottage prayer meetings have had a strong effect.

Michigan.

UNION CITY.—First. Rev. H. S. Mills preached his last sermon as pastor last week Sunday. The church has passed resolutions stating heartfelt appreciation of the faithful and efficient labors of the pastor and his wife, especially among the poor. The interest and prayers of this people follow them to their new field of labor.

The congregations are increasing in all three fields just entered, Allendale, Eastmanville and Bass River ——A most successful pastorate is initiated at Conklin with the laying of the corner stone of Plymouth Church.——Smith Memorial Church, Grand Rapids, hopes soon to attain to self-support. ——Rev. W. H. Underhill has finished with his own hands the foundation of the church at East Grand Rapids, and is toiling with the carpenters to inclose the building before snow flies.——Fremont Church rejoices in coming to self support.——The church in Hart has just finished a fine parsonage.

Wisconsin.

STOCKBRIDGE.—Miss S. E. Margetts was lately ordained and installed over this church. It is doing an excellent work in the field formerly occupied as a mission to the Stockbridge Indians by the American Board. Thus a foreign mission field becomes a home mission field and then a church.

CHILTON —An inoperative church here has been revived this summer under the superintendence of District Missionary F. L. Dexter. Mr. Chester Ferris of Yale supplied the pulpit during vacation, and the church is now ready for a settled pastor.

The Elroy church maintains two regular preaching stations outside the town in connection with branch Sunday schools.——In Spring Green a Men's Sunday Evening Club has just been organized and is meeting with encouragement.

THE WEST.

Missouri.

ST. LOUIS.—First. Miss Lucile Barnes, a graduate of the Moody School in Chicago, has been employed as a parish helper and pastor's secretary. Ten members were received Oct. 4, eight by letter. ——Compton Hill. Rev. G. C. Adams has been called to First Church, San Francisco. The salary proposed is $4,000, with a promise of $5,000 as soon as the finances of the church will permit. He is offered $1,000 for moving expenses.——At the Ministers' Meeting, Oct. 5, Rev. R. M. Sargent, D. D., read a paper giving reminiscences of his long life of active service, connected with many important passages in Congregational life both in the East and West.

SPRINGFIELD.—Central. The departure of Rev. G. S. Brett to Waukesha, Wis., is greatly lamented. During his pastorate the church has come to self-support, and he leaves it in good condition.

The City Missionary Society, which during the service of the present superintendent, Rev. A. L. Love, beside carrying on its other work, has built seven new meeting houses, added a new front and made extensive repairs on an eighth, and before the year is out expects to complete a ninth, finds itself hard pressed to meet its running expenses, the money available for building not being at its disposal for current needs. For this reason it is announced that the superintendent will sever his connection with the society Nov. 1.

Rev. J. C Plumb is now pastor of the church in Joplin for the third time.

Iowa.

The local association meetings this fall have been unusually interesting. Much sympathy has been shown for the weaker churches. It is believed that the association ought to look after missionary churches within its own bounds, and to give needed advice and assistance when demands are most pressing, rather than wait for the regular visits of the missionary superintendent. For the same reason it has decided to look after neglected fields, and do

Continued on page 576.

DANGERS IN FOOD SUPPLIES.—A lecturer on cooking the other day made the surprising statement that the asylums are being filled with country people in much greater proportions than city people mainly because they were more careless in regard to their food. While a diet of fat meats may be more characteristic of people living in rural districts there are other dangers just as insidious to which the residents of the big cities are subject. Scientific research is every day emphasizing the fact that man is what he eats.

Probably there have been no more active advocates of pure food than the manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder. The vigorous campaign against adulterations carried on by them was no doubt due in a large part to the fact that in scarcely any other division of food supplies are harmful ingredients used lavishly as in the compounding of baking powders. The absolute purity of the Royal has become in the nature of an axiom, and its proprietors are naturally disposed to spread broadcast the doctrine of pure food. It has been claimed, without contradiction, that no other article of human food has ever received so many emphatic indorsements from the highest authorities.—Journal of Health.

CLUBBING RATES.

For the convenience of our subscribers we have made arrangements with the publishers of some leading periodicals by which we can furnish them, in connection with The Congregationalist, at a special rate. The postage is prepaid in all cases. Subscribers may order as many of the publications named as they choose, at the prices annexed.

Atlantic Monthly	$3.25
The Century Magazine	3.60
St. Nicholas	2.60
Scribner's Magazine	2.60
Harper's Magazine	3.25
Harper's Weekly	3.25
Harper's Bazar	3.25
Harper's Round Table	1.60
American Kitchen Magazine	.75

Let all who send to us for the above periodicals take notice that, after receiving the first number, they must write to the publication itself, and not to us, in case of any irregularity, or if they wish to have the direction changed to any other post office. The money which is sent to us for these periodicals we forward promptly to the various offices, and our responsibility in the matter then ceases.

Votes

Have been cast by thousands of sufferers from impure blood, and their verdict has settled the question of the great curative power of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Every mail car brings in these letters of praise for Hood's Sarsaparilla. They tell the same wonderful story of health restored, pain and suffering relieved, and happiness brought back. They prove

HOOD'S
Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills cure all Liver Ills and Sick Headache. 25 cents.

BOSTON
Macullar Parker Company

BEST CLOTHING FOR MEN
BEST CLOTHING FOR BOYS
MADE IN CLEAN WORKSHOPS
ON THE PREMISES

Macullar Parker Company
PROVIDENCE

MISTAKEN NOTION.

There are many persons who do not buy a Parlor Cabinet because they feel that the first thing is to collect the contents for it.

That should go ahead of the purchase of the Cabinet.

And yet, without their knowing it, nearly every one of these houses contains the contents of a good sized cabinet. Scattered now in a dozen places, here and there, their value is unrealized, their beauty goes unappreciated; whereas, if collected together and rightly displayed, each one would gain in dignity and value from the presence of the rest, and the whole collection be a notable attraction in the house.

This week is the chance of a lifetime to secure a fine cabinet from our new fall stock of nearly one hundred beautiful patterns, special low prices.

New General Catalogue for 1896-97. Square octavo, 256 pp, 300 illustrations. Sent to any address on receipt of five 2-cent stamps for postage.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,
48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

An increased nervousness and timidity of capital as election day draws near is apparent. The banks are preparing for they know not what, and the merchant and the manufacturer are not making any new commitments until certainty succeeds uncertainty.

Of course, here in the East it is considered that McKinley will be elected, but there is not that comforting certainty about the complexion of the next Congress, which latter is, after all, the most important. The enormous crowds who come forth to listen to Bryan are making the conservative element still more conservative. The argument that these people come from mere idle curiosity does not satisfy the thoughtful man, who knows that mere curiosity will not make 20,000 Americans stand for hours in the rain.

One of the most prominent features of the whole mercantile situation is the enormous movement of wheat to Chicago and the other grain centers. Not only this, but there is a very heavy export demand for wheat, freight room in the steamers being very scarce.

Dry goods are in moderate request, and the mills are operating largely on full time. Woolen mills are fairly busy on orders or completion of the same. Iron and steel are still strong in tone, although the amount of new business is disappointing.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

REV. HENRY MARTYN BRIDGMAN.

Rev. H. M. Bridgman was born at Westhampton, Mass., Jan. 8, 1830, and died Aug. 29, at his post at Umzumbe, Natal, South Africa. He graduated at Amherst College in 1857 and from Union Seminary in 1860. He was ordained in June, 1860, and the following September sailed for Durban, South Africa, where he has labored in the Zulu Mission of the American Board these many years. He was a man of firm convictions and of steadfast devotion to the work which for thirty-six years has been the joy of his life. He leaves a son, Dr. Burt M. Bridgman, and a daughter, Mrs. Amy Bridgman Cowles, who are helping to perpetuate their father's influence in South Africa. Mr. Bridgman's home letters were models of description, revealing to the last a humorous spirit that found sunshine in most repellant surroundings and even in the physical suffering of many long years. The notices of his death in the Natal papers pay him the highest tribute, as a man endeared to white and black, to natives and foreigners, "by his earnest Christian character, his consecration to his work, his ready sympathy and genial wit, which made his name in Southern Africa honored and esteemed." He kept in touch with political life, reading the daily papers with eager interest, and was alive to the welfare of his country.

REV. HARVEY ADAMS, D. D.

His death at his late residence in New Hampton, Sept. 23, is another break in the thinning ranks of the famous Iowa Band, leaving only four of them this side of the grave. Mr. Adams was born in Alstead, N. H., January, 1809. He fitted for college at the Montpelier Academy and entered the University of Vermont in 1836, graduating from this institution in 1839. He graduated from Andover Seminary in 1843 and came with other members of the band to the Territory of Iowa in the autumn of this year. His first pastorate at Farmington extended over a period of twenty years. His other pastorates were at Council Bluffs, New Hampton, Fairfax and Bowen's Prairie. He was a trustee of Iowa College from its founding until his death.

Marriages.

The charge for marriage notices is twenty-five cents.

CUSHMAN—CHAPMAN—In White Cloud, Kan., Sept. 19, Rev. Charles E. Cushman and Belle Chapman.

EDWARDS—COOK—In Milton, Oct. 5, by Rev. A. K. Teele, D.D., Arthur B. Edwards and M. Beulah Cook, both of Milton

THE difficulty of disposing of the fruit stone is no small matter, and the danger in eating fruit from which the seeds have not been removed has brought into existence a most necessary as well as one of the neatest and handiest of all kitchen utensils, the Enterprise Raisin and Grape Seeder, manufactured by the Enterprise Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia, whose ad. appears in another column of this paper. This little machine fastens on the table and is so simple a child can manage it, and seeds a pound of fruit a minute without waste.

A POUND of facts is worth oceans of theories More infants are successfully raised on the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk than upon any other food. Infant Health is a valuable pamphlet for mothers Send your address to the New York Condensed Milk Company, New York.

GREAT sales prove the great merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and great merit enables it to accomplish wonderful cures.

THE ROENTGEN RAY ILLUSTRATED —One of the most interesting spots at the Food Fair in the Mechanics' Building is that where the great Roentgen Ray discovery is illustrated. The X-ray apparatus is so powerful that the ribs and spinal vertebræ of the body can be plainly seen. Ladies have discovered bits of needle, soldiers a bullet and sportsmen shot embedded in the arm. The apparatus used is the L. E. Knott. The modus operandi, which is very interesting, is briefly as follows: a current of fifty-two volts is taken from the street and sent through an Edison and a Tesler high-frequency coil, which raises the voltage to nearly a million. The coil is insulated with sperm oil which runs between all the layers The newly invented electric motor fan interrupts the current at the rate of 2,000 interruptions a minute. Into a glass tube, which is practically a vacuum, the current, purple in color, rushes, becoming green as it strikes the disc at the top and bottom of the tube, and is reflected by the v-shaped disc upon the Edison fluoroscope. On the fluoroscope the arm or hand is laid, and through them the person is able to look, screened in a dark closet. When the current is fully on it sounds from the gallery like a powerful jet of water from an engine hose played upon a building, the hose nozzle being held only a few feet away.

VON BULOW'S WIFE.

Bulow gave Wagner his wife, saying, "Master, I am proud to think I have something worthy of your acceptance"

We have something worthy of your acceptance—a handsome "Bay State" Mandolin, perfect in tone and perfect in workmanship, for the extremely low price of $8.50.

The "Bay State" instruments are pronounced by experts to be the finest in the world. We have in stock cheaper Mandolins than the above, and others costing ten times this price; but for a substantial, serviceable instrument at a low price no other instrument manufactured can compare with it.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

JOHN C. HAYNES & CO.,
453-463 Washington Street, Boston.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley

and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 3 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

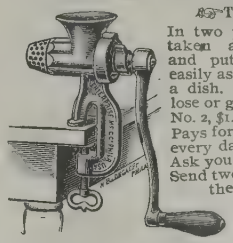
E. P. CATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

Chop

Any kind of meat, cooked or uncooked, for sausage, hash or mince-meat; lobster and chicken for salad; tripe, codfish, etc., with the

Enterprise NEW MEAT CHOPPER

TINNED



In two pieces—can be taken apart, cleaned and put together as easily as you can wash a dish. No parts to lose or get out of order. No. 2, $1.75; No. 4, $2.25. Pays for itself. Useful every day in the year. Ask your dealer. Send two 2c stamps for the "Enterprising Housekeeper," 200 recipes.

The Enterprise M'f'g Co. of Pa., Phila., Pa.
Makers of the Enterprise Raisin Seeder

Guaranty Trust Co. of New York.

Formerly New York Guaranty and Indemnity Co.
Mutual Life Building,
65 CEDAR STREET, N. Y.

CAPITAL, - - - - - $2,000,000
SURPLUS, - - - - - - $2,000,000

ACTS AS TRUSTEE FOR CORPORATIONS, FIRMS AND INDIVIDUALS, AS GUARDIAN, EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR. TAKES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATES.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS subject to check or on certificate.

WALTER G. OAKMAN, President.
ADRIAN ISELIN, Jr., Vice-President.
GEORGE R. TURNBULL, 2d Vice-President.
HENRY A. MURRAY, Treas. and Sec.
J. NELSON BORLAND, Assist. Treas. and Sec.

DIRECTORS.

Samuel D. Babcock,	Adrian Iselin, Jr.,
George F. Baker,	Augustus D. Juilliard,
George S. Bowdoin,	James N. Jarvie,
Frederic Cromwell,	Richard A. McCurdy,
Walter R. Gillette,	Walter G. Oakman,
Robert Goelet,	Alexander E. Orr,
G. G. Haven,	Henry H. Rogers,
Oliver Harriman,	Henry W. Smith,
R. Somers Hayes,	H. McK. Twombly,
Charles R. Henderson,	Frederick W. Vanderbilt,
	William C. Whitney.

£ WORTH LOOKING INTO.

The merits of the celebrated

Cheque Bank Cheques.

They will pay your way ALL OVER THE WORLD. You can pay your debts with them ANYWHERE. Send for circular.

Agency of
UNITED STATES CHEQUE BANK, L'd.
FREDERICK W. PERRY, Manager,
40 and 42 Wall St., N. Y.

"OUR NAME—FAMILIAR IN THE MOUTH AS HOUSEHOLD WORDS."

MAGEE RANGES & HEATERS ARE THE BEST
ALWAYS RECIEVE HIGHEST AWARD

LEADING AUTHORITIES ON COOKING say the

"MAGEE GRAND"

fulfills every requirement. "All who see the working of the OVEN THERMOMETER are delighted with it."

The wonderful Dock Ash Grate is the only one by which a continuous fire can be kept.

SOLD BY LEADING DEALERS. DESCRIPTIVE CIRCULARS FREE.

MAGEE FURNACE CO., 32-38 UNION ST., BOSTON.

AGENCIES: 66 LAKE ST., CHICAGO. 27 NEW MONTGOMERY ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

Continued from page 574.

its best to cultivate them. In this work of exploration and development the Dubuque pastors have been leaders, and it is expected that as a result of their work two new churches will soon be organized in the city.

The church in Charles City has engaged Evangelist A. E. Thomson of Ohio for a series of meetings in November.

Minnesota.

ST. PAUL.—Milton Street. Rev. H. W. Parsons has been spending some time with this church visiting the people. It is desired to secure a resident pastor who will also work in some other section of the city.—Cyril Chapel. The Bohemian work is prospering under Mr. Charles Trchka, an Oberlin student. His ordination will probably take place soon.—Pacific reports a growing congregation under its new pastor, Rev. J. A. Jenkins. It is making a brave attempt to pay a part of its debt.

DULUTH.—Mayflower. An all-day fellowship meeting was held with addresses by five neighboring pastors. The topics were: Personal Responsibility to the Church in Its Various Departments; In Good Citizenship; In One's Belief; In Living One's Belief. The church has progressed since the coming of the new pastor.

ELK RIVER.—A touching memorial service was held, Oct. 4, in memory of the deceased pastor, Rev. David Henderson. No minister was present, the members conducting the service. Letters from churches which Mr. Henderson had served were read and many tributes were paid to his patience, fidelity and ability.

FARIBAULT.—A recent service was devoted to the older people, the pastor, Rev. G. S. Ricker, preaching upon How to Make Life Long, and the music being rendered by a choir of old folks. By a happy providence, Rev. Edmund Gale, for 18 years pastor here, was present and made a touching address to his old flock.

A New Idea

A Cracker Plate

Fine China, beautifully decorated and gilded.

To Introduce OUR Art Catalogue We will send this beautiful plate together with a book of over 300 illustrations for 75 cents free of express charges. This elegant Art Catalogue will be of great assistance in selecting China, Pottery and Glass that may not otherwise be obtainable. Catalogue only, for the asking.

ABRAM FRENCH CO.,
223 Devonshire St., cor. Franklin, Boston.

75 Years A China Store. | Our White China Book for Decorators, 341 different articles sent on applicaion.

Wonderful Cures

of Coughs, Colds and all kinds of Sore Throats and Lung Troubles are made every day

- BY -

Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam

It gives instant relief, and cures, permanently, the worst cases. Time-tried and thirty years tested.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.
SOLD BY THE BEST DRUGGISTS.
Prices 35 cts. and 75 cts. a Bottle.
Trial size 10c.

OWATONNA.—This church, under the advice of its retiring minister, aims to avoid spiritual loss during the interval between pastorates by employing Evangelist C. N. Hunt to hold services. Congregations are large, conversions are reported and the way is thus prepared for a new leader.

MONTEVIDEO.—The house of worship has been enlarged to accommodate the growing audience, at an expense of $1,400, which has been provided for. Many students of Windom Institute make this their church home. A fitting service of reconsecration was held Sept. 27.

The churches at Springfield and Selma have paid some of their debts and already have a minister on the ground.

Nebraska.

GRAFTON.—A delightful meeting for old people was held Oct 4. This service is intended as a correlative to that of Children's Day. The Y. P. S. C. E. entered heartily into the effort to make this "old folks' day" one of cheer and comfort, decorating the audience-room with bright autumn flowers, fitting it with easy-chairs, inviting the venerable guests and driving them to the meeting house. The pastor, Rev. A. A. Cressman, preached upon The Comforts of Old Age to a congregation including 17 persons of 65 years of age and upwards.

INDIAN CREEK.—The revival work done at this point, near Red Cloud, by Evangelist Horton culminated in the recognition of a church of 24 members Oct. 5. The whole aspect of the community has been changed by this work. There is a large Sunday school, and the schoolhouse is crowded with interested hearers at every meeting. Rev. Messrs. Samuel Williams, O. E. Tichnor and Samuel Deakin took part in the recognition service. Rev. O. E. Tichnor will care for this church in connection with Red Cloud.

TRENTON.—Rev. D. F. Bright, who lately closed labor at Taylor, has begun work here, preaching also at Fairview. He has established a promising out station at Rosefield, a country district settled largely by a superior class of Welsh people.

Oklahoma.

ALTONA.—This church, organized in 1895, was recognized by council Sept. 27 and the same day dedicated a house of worship. Rev. Messrs. J. H. Parker and R. B. Foster preached at the latter service.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

OAKLAND.—Market Street. At the recent annual meeting 103 accessions during the year were reported, an increase of 50 per cent. in the Sunday school and the organization of three new departments—a missionary society, a Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip and an Intermediate C. E. Society. A pleasant feature of the banquet was the presentation to the church of the new and commodious tables, including dishes, by the pastor, Rev. E. S. Chapman, in behalf of friends.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Third. Among interesting features of the annual meeting of the W. H. M. U. was the report of the H. M. Daughters who, in their first seven months of service, had gathered $217; also the presence of 10 bright-eyed Italian girls as an object lesson of the work done among that class by Rev. Mr. Lafronchi, their pastor, who is supported by this society.

SANTA CRUZ.—In a desirable location Mr. G. Morgan has erected a two story building for the use of the Chinese Mission. Though only rented to the latter the friends felt their title sufficient to warrant a dedication of the house, and on the evening of Sept. 22 gathered with Dr. W. C. Pond for such a service. A social hour with refreshments followed.

Rev. F. V. Jones of San Mateo, with some of his young people, holds occasional services at the county poor farm, which are heartily enjoyed.—The young ladies' branch of the Woman's Board of the Pacific, during the decade of vigorous work just completed, has raised $8,000.

Washington.

ST. JOHN.—Rev. J. A. McCroskey, who has been obliged to give up his pastoral work here in the interest of his wife's health, acknowledges the generous treatment of his people, in particular the sisterly kindness shown by the women to Mrs. McCroskey in her illness. He is now at Ash Grove, Mo.

Since the coming of Rev. Mathias Peterson to western Washington the Swedish pastors and churches have been greatly strengthened and drawn into closer fellowship with other Congregational churches, which they find most enjoyable.

For Indigestion
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. W. W. GARDNER, Springfield, Mass., says: "I value it as an excellent preventive of indigestion, and a pleasant acidulated drink when properly diluted with water, and sweetened."

NEEDLESS SUFFERING.

Homes Everywhere Filled With the Weak and Nervous.

No Need to Feel Tired and Irritable—Knowledge That You May Never Have Possessed.

People often have pale and sallow complexions, the muscles are weak and flabby; there is a weak, nervous feeling and a general tired and exhausted condition; the appetite is gone. The spirits are depressed; strength, energy and ambition are lacking; the sleep may be disturbed, there may be neuralgia and rheumatic pains. In fact the entire system lacks vigor of nerves and power of the body. These conditions arise from a disordered state of the nerves and blood. What is needed is Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to build up the wasted, weakened, diseased nerves, and to give a supply of purer, richer blood.

MISS E. BURKE

Miss E. Burke of Amoskeag, N. H., writes. "I was stricken down with nervous prostration, and no one knows what I suffered."

"I was so nervous that the least little thing would cause my heart to flutter and palpitate. I was also troubled with severe headache and dizziness, which unfitted me for any mental work.

"I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. What a blessing it has proved to me! I can truthfully say that I owe my present health to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This wonderful medicine has done me so much good that I urge others to use it and get well."

This grand medicine transforms the body from a weak, ailing, disordered condition into a strong and vigorous one. It is the prescription of the great specialist in nervous diseases. Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

Grand National Prize of 16,600 francs at Paris

Quina-Laroche

Possesses in the highest degree the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark. Endorsed by the medical faculty as the best remedy for Fever and Ague, Malaria, Poorness of the Blood, General Debility and Wasting Diseases; Increases the Appetite, Strengthens the Nerves and builds up the entire system.

Paris: 22 Rue Drouot
New York: E. FOUGERA & CO.
26-30 N. William St.

NEW A. B. C. F. M. CORPORATE MEMBERS.

MAINE.

Hon. Nelson Dingley, Lewiston.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Rev. Cyrus Richardson, D. D., Nashua.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Rev. A. Z. Conrad, D. D., Worcester; Rev. C. E. Jefferson, Chelsea; Rev. E. A. Reed, D. D., Holyoke; Samuel Usher, Cambridge; C. J. Holmes, Fall River; S. B. Shapleigh, Allston; Philip W. Moen, Worcester; Rev. E. C. Ewing, Danvers; William B. Plunkett, Adams; Rev. William E. Wolcott, Lawrence; Rev. John A. MacColl, New Bedford; Charles N. Prouty, Spencer; Rev. S. V. Cole, Taunton; George E. Tucker, Ware; L. J. Gunn, Greenfield; Charles E. Swett, Winchester; T. Y. Crowell, Boston.

CONNECTICUT.

Rev. Joseph Anderson, D. D., Waterbury; James B. Williams, Glastonbury; George M. Woodruff, Litchfield; L. D. Warner, Naugatuck; Rev. John DePue, Norfolk; Prof. George B. Stevens, D. D., New Haven.

NEW YORK.

Rev. William E. Griffis, D. D., Ithaca; Rev. Lyman Abbott, D. D., Brooklyn; Rev. C. H. Dickinson, Canandaigua; W. A. Hobbs, Warsaw; Guilford Dudley, Poughkeepsie; C. Delano Wood, Brooklyn.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Justice David J. Brewer, LL. D., Washington.

OHIO.

Rev. Henry M. Tenney, D. D., Oberlin; J. C. Noyes, Cincinnati.

WISCONSIN.

Rev. Eugene G. Upoyke, D. D., Madison.

IOWA.

Rev. E. S. Hill, D. D., Atlantic; S. F. Smith, Davenport; Rev. W. W. Gist, D. D., Osage.

MISSOURI.

Pres. Homer T. Fuller, Springfield.

NEBRASKA.

William A. Higgins, Omaha.

COLORADO.

Rev. F. T. Bayley, Denver.

WASHINGTON.

Pres. S. B. L. Penrose, Walla Walla.

CALIFORNIA.

Rev. C. R. Brown, Oakland.

MINNESOTA.

William H. Laird, Winona.

NOTEWORTHY FORTHCOMING MEETINGS.

Indian Conference, Lake Mohonk, N. Y., Oct. 14–16.

American Missionary Association, Boston, Mass., Oct. 20–22.

Convention of the Open and Institutional Church League, Hartford, Ct., Oct. 20, 21.

Woman's Home Missionary Association, Annual Meeting, Boston, Oct. 28.

International Convention of Christian Workers, Louisville, Ky., Nov. 5–11.

National W. C. T. U. Convention, St. Louis, Mo., Nov 13–18.

"BEAUTIFUL beyond compare" was the tribute paid the Deerfield Valley by an eminent traveler. His judgment was excellent, and if you take the Fitchburg Railroad's popular $2 excursion of Oct. 17 to the Hoosac Tunnel you will be sure of it.

CABINET APPOINTMENTS.—It is an easily demonstrable fact that nearly every house has in it the materials for filling a parlor cabinet, and if this fact was once fully realized there would not be any lack of purchasers at the special sale of parlor cabinets at reduced prices at Paine's, 48 Canal Street, Boston, this week. It is the chance of a lifetime to secure a cabinet, and thus add a beautiful new attraction to the house. Just collect together your curios and bits of china or silver, and see how beautiful a picture they will make in a group.

THE Good Templars of the United States and Canada are evidently satisfied that the election troubles will not interfere with their proposed visit to Europe. The international meeting of the Good Templars will be held at Zurich in June, 1897, and arrangements have been completed for several hundred members of the Independent Order of Good Templars from all parts of the United States to take an extended trip to Europe during May, June and July. The tour will include England, Belgium, Germany and Switzerland, with a protracted stay at Zurich during the international convention. The whole of the arrangements for ocean steamers and European travel have been placed with Henry Gaze & Sons, Ltd., the well-known tourist firm of New York, Chicago and London. It will be remembered that the Ancients of Boston, who also numbered several hundreds, traveled under the arrangements of this tourist company.

OUR OWN DOMINION.—The Bishop of Niagara, preaching in Holy Trinity, Winnipeg, during the meeting of the General Synod of the Church of England, referred to the church's missionary operations in the foreign field, among the heathen, the ancient civilization in India, China and Japan. He then dealt with the colonies, and finally with the Dominion of Canada. The Bishop said: "It is only when we may journey from east to west that we at all begin to realize the inheritance that is ours in this great country. We need another Moses to stand and say to the Canadian people, 'Ye shall bless the Lord your God for the good land he hath given you.' The greatest railway in the world opens up the full extent of this land, carries us from ocean to ocean, from coast to coast, through the most majestic, the most astounding scenery on earth; over the inland seas that we call lakes, the boundless prairies, the measureless plains; cloud-capped mountains, awful gorges, appalling precipices, rolling floods, yawning chasms, broad rolling rivers, writhing with the everlasting hills, boring through the rocks, jumping round them, interjoining with them, playing with the curves, flying over the cañons, crossing the awful depths, shooting out again on the plains, battling with the opposing forces that nature through bygone centuries piled up, marvelous engineering feats and continuous eluding, overcoming, beating them down, making all subservient to man's will, till at last we come face to face with the great Pacific. All of this is accomplished with a luxury so great, such an abundant provision for eating and drinking, for rest and enjoyment, easy-going sleepers, superb dining cars, beautiful hotels nestling among the eternal mountains, and standing out in the coast cities, and undoubtedly constitutes the trip one of the most enjoyable that it is possible to make, and the great railway and its management throughout all its details, the wonder and admiration of the traveling world, and incomparably the mightiest undertaking ever accomplished for the exploration, exposition and development of Canada.—Manitoba Free Press, Winnipeg, Sept. 10, 1896.

SURPASSING ALL OTHERS
"All over the world."

Either Lock-Stitch or Chain-Stitch.
Each the best of its kind. See the Latest Model.
The SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & CO.
ARE JUST OPENING A FEW BALES OF
Oriental Carpets and Rugs.
Among them are some very choice pieces. What is there more appropriate for WEDDING GIFTS?
ALSO, JUST RECEIVED SOME CHOICE STYLES of SCOTCH AXMINSTERS and ENGLISH WILTON and BRUSSELS CARPETS.....
ADAPTED TO FINE FURNISHING.
JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & CO.,
163 to 169 Washington Street, Near Cornhill Boston.

The Most Natural Thing
For a woman who uses a Glenwood Range is to wish for a Glenwood Heater, and the home that the heater makes cozy must forsooth be supplied with the range. WHAT WONDER? Both are models of merit, of economy, of comfort. The oven that is gauged by the "Glenwood Indicator" tells so plain a story, a Child Knows All About It. Aye, even the Children Praise the Glenwood

KNICKERBOCKER.
No more round shoulders. Shoulder Brace and Suspender combined. Easily adjusted. Worn with comfort. Sizes for men, women, boys and girls. Sold by druggists, appliance stores, general stores, &c. By mail $1 per pair ($1.50 silk). Send chest measure around body under arms. Circulars free. Address
KNICKERBOCKER BRACE CO., EASTON, PENN., U. S. A.

The NEW Form of Admission
The committee appointed by the National Council to prepare a new Form of Admission have reported, and their Form of Admission is now printed in convenient form as an 8 pp. leaflet, No. 7 of the Congregationalist Leaflet series.
Sent, postpaid, for 3 cts.; 10 copies, 25 cts.; 100 copies, $2.00

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

BELSEY, Geo. W., Geneva, O., to Plymouth Ch., Toledo. Accepts.
BERRY, Edw. A., Central Ch., Chattanooga, Tenn., accepts call to First Ch., Cedar Rapids, Io.
BIDWELL, Chas. A., Boston, Mass., accepts call to S. Main St. Ch., Manchester, N. H.
BLACKMAN, Virgil W., Bethel, Vt., to Swanzey, N. H. Accepts.
BOWRON, Jos., Amble, Eng., to Memphis, Mich.
BULL, David W., Pitcher, N. Y., to De Ruyter and Lincklaen.
COBURN, David E., to supply for a year at Otisfield and Casco, Me. Accepts.
CONLEY, Isaiah B., accepts call to Springfield, Me, where he has been supplying.
COOLIDGE, H. A., E. Jaffrey, N. H., to Wilmot. Accepts.
COX, Jacob W., Economy, N. S., to Noel, Lower Selmah and Maitland. Accepts, with address at Lower Selmah.
DARLING, E. S., to Henrietta, N. Y.
DAY, Wm. H., Chicago, Ill., accepts call to First Ch., Aurora.
DOUGLASS, H. Paul, formerly of Manson, Io., to Harlan, Ames and Gilbert.
FREEMAN, Henry A., Monson, Me., to Holden and Dedham. Accepts.
HALBERSLEBEN, Henry C., Linwood, Neb., to Irvington and Bennington. Accepts.
HANNAFORD, Wm. H., Benzonia, Mich., to First and Second Chs., Salem. Accepts.
HUMFREYS, John, Grand Haven, Mich., to Wyandotte. Accepts.
JANES, Henry, formerly of Andrews, Ind., to Angola. Declines (not accepts), to engage in further study at Oberlin Sem.
KING, Willet D., to Moorland, Io., for another year. Accepts.
LONG, Sam'l A., Clare, Mich., to Richmond. Accepts.
MILLS, Richard B., Holden and Dedham, Me., to Strong. Has begun work.
MOORLAND, Jesse E., Howard Chapel, Nashville, Tenn., accepts call to Mt. Zion Ch., Cleveland, O.
MOTE, Henry W., Oregon, to Pacific Grove, Cal.
MUDIE, Howard, formerly of Mantorville, Minn., accepts call to Kent. Ct., for six months.
PECKOVER, Horace, Kingston, Jamaica, to Zion Ch., Toronto, Ont.
POETON, Josiah, Moody Inst., Chicago, Ill., to Taylor, Neb. Accepts.
PRESSEY, Edwin S., Elmwood, Ill., to St. Anthony Park Ch., St. Paul, Minn. Accepts.
RADER, Wm., to permanent pastorate of Third Ch., San Francisco, Cal. Accepts.
ROBINS, Anson H., to remain another year at Iroquois, S. D. Accepts.
SARLES, Jesse E., Yale Divinity Sch., to Necedah, Wis. Accepts, and has begun work.
SAVAGE, John W., Chassell, Mich., to De Pere, Wis. Accepts.
SMITH, Edwin S., Glen Ellyn, Ill., to Angola, Ind.
SMITH, Wm., Averyville Ch., Peoria, Ill., to Marshall.
TAYLOR, Chas. I., Grand Blanc, Mich., to Barker Memorial Branch, Grand Rapids. Accepts.
THOMPSON, Hiram F., Sullivan, O., to Lexington. Accepts.
THORP, Chas. N., to remain for a year as asst. pastor at Rutland, Vt. Accepts.
WASHBURN, Francis M., Mankato, Minn., to Telluride, Col. Accepts.
WEAGE, Edward D, Tulare, Cal., to Paso Robles. Accepts.
WHITING, Elbridge C., formerly of Fifth Ave. Ch., Minneapolis, Minn., to Tewksbury, Mass.

Ordinations and Installations.

COBURN, David E., o. Otisfield, Me., Oct. 1. Parts by Rev. Messrs. A. G. Fitz, A. P. McDonald, W. B. Hague, G. M. Woodwell.
CONLEY, Isaiah B., o.p. Springfield, Me., Oct. 8. Sermon, Rev. D. P. Hatch; other parts, Rev. Messrs. S. L. Bowler, S. D. Towne, Dr. Graves.
GRANT, John H., o. and i. Center Ch., Meriden, Ct., Oct. 8. Sermon, Prof. J. E. Genung; other parts, Rev. Asher Anderson, Prof. L. O. Brastow, D. D., Drs G. W. Phillips and J. W. Cooper.
PITKIN, Horace T., o. for foreign mission service, Pilgrim Ch., Cleveland, O., Oct. 9. Sermon, Dr. Jas. Brand; other parts, Rev. H. P. Beach and Drs. Judson Smith, A. H. Plumb, H. A. Schauffler.

Resignations.

BICKFORD, Augustus A., Westford, Mass., to take effect Oct. 25.
DANIELSON, Joseph, Southington, Ct., to take effect April 1.
HIBBARD, Augustine G., Goshen, Ct.
HOULDING, Horace W., Seattle, Wn., resigns the position of State evangelist, to engage in missionary work in China.
LADD, Wm. B., Prophetstown, Ill., to take effect Dec. 1.
MACKINTOSH, Rocliffe, Washington, Ind., to avail himself of a favorable opening in England.
McCROSKEY, John, St. John and Endicott, Wn.
WILLIAMS, Horace R., Richmond, Mich.

Dismissions.

KEPHART, Wm. H., Plymouth Ch., Binghamton, N. Y., Oct. 3.
TILTON, Geo. H., Lancaster, N. H., Sept. 29.

Churches Organized.

ALTONA, Okl., rec. 27 Sept., 27 members.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Northeast Ch., 28 Sept., 37 members.
INDIAN CREEK, near Red Cloud, Neb., 5 Oct., 24 members. Yoked with Red Cloud under Rev. O. E. Tichnor.

Miscellaneous.

CAVERNO, Chas., pastor at Boulder, Col., has been nominated by the Republican State Convention for regent of the State University.
GROUT, Lewis, and wife, of W. Brattleboro, Vt., the first 15 years of whose wedded life was spent in the Zulu Mission, S. Africa, celebrated their golden anniversary Oct 8. Among the numerous gifts were $100 in gold from friends in Brattleboro.
HAYNES, Artemas J., is taking a special course at Harvard University. His address is 40 Irving Street, Cambridge.
JACKSON, Frank D., St. Petersburg, Fla., is invited to supply for three months at Sutton, Neb., with a view to settlement.
MILLS, Chas. P., pastor of North Ch., Newburyport, Mass., will be a candidate for the legislature from the 22d district, which includes Tewksbury, Rowley and Ipswich.
OSBORNE, Cyrus A., Beloit, Wis., has been invited to supply at Lake Geneva until May 1.
PERKINS, Jas. C., of India, after a sojourn in California, during which he made numerous and effective missionary addresses, is on his way to Oberlin, O., where he hopes to locate his family, himself returning to his field later.
PERKINS, Sidney K., and wife, at a house warming in the new parsonage of First Ch., Springfield, Mass., were surprised by a gift of money as an expression of love from their people.
RICE, Geo. H., has accepted an invitation to supply for three months at Springfield and Selma, Minn.
SMITH, Sam'l G., has returned to People's Ch., St. Paul, Minn., after a four months' absence abroad, during which he studied social problems in London, especially the housing of the poor.
SUTHERLAND, John W., of Webster Groves, Mo., has been obliged to suspend work for several weeks on account of illness, but expects to return to his post soon.
WIRT, David, father of Supt. L. L. Wirt of the C. S. S and P. S., after a year spent in visiting his old home and the principal cities in the East, has returned to San Francisco.

It is in our power to have flowers around us during the most dreary days of winter. To do this we should plant now a few bulbs which will amply repay us for the little trouble it will cost. Any one interested in this pastime would do well to drop a line to Messrs. Joseph Breck & Sons of Boston, Mass., the well-known seedsmen, who have on hand probably as large and varied a selection of flowering bulbs as any house in America. A simple request to them will bring to the writer a catalogue with cultural directions and full description of their various bulbs and winter flowering plants that cannot fail to interest any one desirous of beautifying a winter home or making ready the garden for its early spring blossoms.

Strength to the Weak.

Nourishing, and an assistant to renewed appetite.

Somatose

A Perfect Food, Tonic and Restorative.

It is a powder made from the most nourishing elements of meat, prepared for the nutriment and stimulus of weak systems. May be taken dry, or in milk, water, etc.

At druggists, in 2 oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.

Also the following combinations, Somatose-Biscuit, Somatose-Cocoa, Somatose-Chocolate—each containing 10 per cent. Somatose. Very convenient and palatable preparations.

Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

•• TAKE A COMBINATION BOX OF THE ••

LARKIN SOAPS On Thirty Days Trial. From Factory to Family.

And Get a "CHAUTAUQUA"

Oil Heater Or Seth Thomas Mantel Clock Free.

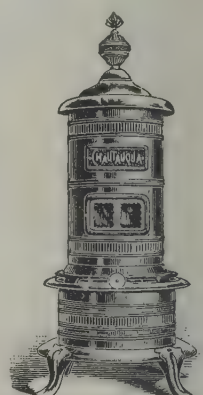
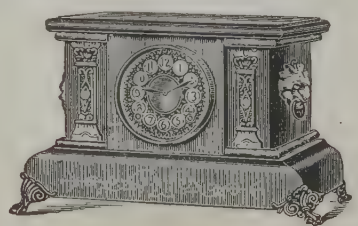
IT is wise economy to use good soap. We sell our soaps entirely on their merits, with our guarantee of purity. Thousands of families use them, and have for many years, in every locality, many in your vicinity.

The "Chautauqua" Oil Heater heats a large room in coldest weather. Very large Central Draft Brass Burner, Brass Oil Fount, richly nickel-plated. Removable top, can be used for cooking. Holds three quarts, which burns 12 hours. Constructed entirely of steel plate, polished brass, Russia iron and aluminum. Absolutely nothing to break.



Seth Thomas Mantel Clock, Eight-Day. Cathedral Bell. Strikes Hours and Half Hours.

Brass Movement. Beautiful, Adamantine Enamel Case, patented process. Very highly polished, the eye cannot distinguish it from Black and Variegated Marble. Artistic bronze gold pilasters and trimmings. Length, 16¾ in.; width, 6½ in.; height, 11 in. Dial 5 in. in diameter, is gilt (white if preferred) with black Arabic numerals. Guaranteed a reliable timekeeper by the most celebrated makers in America.



Cash with order is not asked, but if you remit in advance, you will receive extra a nice present for the lady of the house, and shipment day after order is received.

The money refunded without argument or comment if the Box or the Premium does not prove all expected.

We guarantee the safe delivery of all goods.

Subscribers to this Paper may Use the Goods 30 Days before Bill is Due.

OUR GREAT COMBINATION BOX.

100 BARS "SWEET HOME" SOAP. Enough to last an average family one full year. For all laundry and household purposes it has no superior.	$5.00	1-4 DOZ. LARKIN'S TAR SOAP. Infallible preventive of dandruff. Unequalled for washing the hair.	.30
10 BARS WHITE WOOLEN SOAP. A perfect soap for flannels.	.70	1-4 DOZ. SULPHUR SOAP	.30
12 PKGS. BORAXINE SOAP POWDER (full lbs.) An unequalled laundry luxury.	1.20	1 BOTTLE, 1 oz., MODJESKA PERFUME. Delicate, refined, popular, lasting.	.30
1-4 DOZ. MODJESKA COMPLEXION SOAP. Exquisite for ladies and children. A matchless beautifier.	.60	1 JAR, 2 ozs., MODJESKA COLD CREAM. Soothing. Cures chapped skin.	.25
1-4 DOZ. OLD ENGLISH CASTILE SOAP	.30	1 BOTTLE MODJESKA TOOTH POWDER. Preserves the teeth, hardens the gums, sweetens the breath.	.25
1-4 DOZ. CREME OATMEAL TOILET SOAP	.25	1 PACKET SPANISH ROSE SACHET	.20
1-4 DOZ. ELITE GLYCERINE TOILET SOAP	.25	1 STICK NAPOLEON SHAVING SOAP	.10
		THE CONTENTS, Bought at Retail, Cost	$10.00
		HEATER or CLOCK, Worth at Retail	10.00
All for $10.00.		(You get the Premium you select Gratis.)	$20.00

After trial you — the consumer — pay the usual retail value of the Soaps only. All middlemen's profits accrue to you in a valuable premium. The manufacturer alone adds Value; every middleman adds Cost. The Larkin plan saves you half the cost — saves you half the regular retail prices. Thousands of readers of this paper know these facts.

Write your order like this TO-DAY, while you think of it, or cut this out and sign it:

"You may ship me, subject to thirty days trial, One Combination Box of 'Sweet Home' Soap with extras, etc., and the ..... upon your own conditions, viz.:

"If, after thirty days trial, I find all the soaps, etc., of unexcelled quality and the Premium selected entirely satisfactory to me and as represented, I will remit you $10.00; if not, I will notify you goods are subject to your order and you must remove them, making no charge for what I have used."

Name.....

Occupation..... Street No......

P. O...... State.....

Booklet Handsomely Illustrating other Premiums sent on request.

Estab. 1875. Incor. 1892. THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

NOTE.—The Larkin Soap Company have used the columns of The Congregationalist for two or three years past in advertising their "Combination Box of Soap" sent in connection with an oil heater, desk or chair. The publisher of this paper has written personally to a number of subscribers who have responded to the advertisement and purchased the soap. Without exception they state that they are perfectly satisfied with the soaps and with the business methods of the Larkin Co. The letters speak in praise both of the soap and of the premiums that accompany it.—The Congregationalist.

NOTE.—We have examined the soaps and premiums offered by the Larkin Co. They are all they say. A man or woman is hard to please who is not satisfied with such a return for their money.—The Watchman.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED AT TOLEDO.

TWO LAMENTED OFFICIALS.

The committee, of which Rev. S E. Herrick, D.D., was chairman, to prepare a minute to be placed upon our records in reference to the death of N. G. Clark, D.D., LL. D, late foreign secretary, and of E. K. Alden, D. D, late home secretary, offered the following resolutions, which were adopted by a rising vote:

With profound thanks to Almighty God, the Father of lights, we record our appreciation of the gifts bestowed by Him upon our late beloved foreign secretary, Dr. Clark, and through him upon the officers, members and missions of this Board, which he served so successfully through the lifetime of a generation:

In his own personal hold upon the verities of our holy religion;

In his stalwart and apostolic faith in the gospel's universal triumph;

In his clear and philosophic apprehension of human nature in the identity of its fundamental needs, and yet in all the diversity of its local and racial peculiarities;

In his statesmanlike grasp of national conditions, and the problems involved in the purpose of universal evangelization;

In the sucerb and intrepid courage with which, nevertheless, he confronted his work, and so wrested from triumphs yet unachieved an ever-present joy; and, finally,

In his charity, which grew more tender and trustful and comprehensive with the expanding horizon of his knowledge and experience; the unearthly radiance of which, in the closing days of his earthly life, has left with those who witnessed it their best conception of the life to come.

With sentiments no less grateful and affectionate we review the grace of God, who "divideth to every man, severally, as he will," as it was illustrated in the character and work of our late home secretary, Dr. Alden.

For the clearness, intensity and sincerity of his personal convictions, as inseparable from his nature as the currents of unmixed Puritan blood inherited through six generations of Old Colony ancestry;

For the tender enthusiasm which kindled and flamed in look and speech and action at the very suggestion of his Master's name or work, and which so often thrilled us all in our great convocations;

For the genial warmth of his friendship which every missionary knew, and for the zeal and interest in the work of Christian missions with which he inspired our churches, East and West;

For the joyous alacrity with which he assumed his work at the call of the churches; the unquestioned fidelity with which he continued it throughout, and the equal grace with which he demitted it when he felt that the time had come;

And for the whole rounded life, endeared to so many of us in private relations, and passing, in one painless instant, through the gates of song and prayer into "the inheritance of the saints in light."

We record our thanks to Almighty God.

THE POSITION TAKEN ON TURKEY.

The full text of the resolutions presented by Pres. James B. Angell and adopted is as follows. The first set related to the missionaries:

Resolved, That we have viewed with admiration and profound thanksgiving the steadfastness and courage and faith with which our missionaries in Turkey have remained at their posts and stood by their work through all these perils, sharing the fortunes of their people, ministering to their sufferings and bringing the consolations of the gospel to them in their dire extremity.

Resolved, That we give to these missionaries the solemn and deliberate pledge of the American Board to stand by them in the maintenance of their work with our constant sympathy and prayers and gifts till the whole land is won for the kingdom of Christ.

The second set dealt with the larger question at issue in relation to the rights of American citizens and the duty of the Government in protecting them:

Whereas, American citizens, with the full consent of the Turkish Government, have gone to Turkey, established schools, colleges and hospitals, set up printing presses, published books, engaged in the manufacture of clothing and otherwise provided for the relief of the needy and the instruction of the ignorant, and have thus introduced into the provinces of the Turkish empire the blessings of Christian civilization, and

Whereas, Under the treaty of 1830, as construed by the practice and with the full assent of both governments for over sixty years, American citizens engaged in Turkey in "any subject or object of residence or intercourse whatever" have the right not to be "in any way vexed or molested," not to be "disturbed in their affairs," and when accused of offenses to "be tried by their minister or consul."

And, Whereas, in violation of these rights, property of the value of nearly $200,000 belonging to American citizens residing in Turkey has been destroyed, their houses have been burned and themselves attacked, imprisoned and in some cases driven from their homes, and,

Whereas, The Government of the United States has demanded redress for these wrongs and the punishment of the offenders, but neither redress has been made nor punishment inflicted, and,

Whereas, These numerous and repeated violations of treaty rights indicate a purpose to destroy the whole fabric of Christian civilization which has been erected with so much toil, sacrifice and cost; therefore,

Resolved, That we urge respectfully the President of the United States of America to insist upon the issue by the Turkish Government of the proper "exequatur" that our consuls may securely occupy, under the flag of our country, the posts which our Government assigns to them, and in the interests of justice and in accordance with treaty rights administer with authority the duties of their office.

Resolved, Further, that we urge the President of the United States of America to demand of the Turkish authorities at once and peremptorily indemnity for the wrongs inflicted on American reimbursement for the destruction of their property and the punishment of those persons who have been guilty of these crimes. We believe that the adoption of such an American policy will receive the loyal support of the American people.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the president of this Board to present these resolutions to the President of the United States.

The commission appointed to visit the President of the United States is composed of Pres. James B. Angell of Ann Arbor University, Hon. William E. Dodge of New York, Hon. Henry D. Hyde of Boston.

FULL OF KNOTS; that's the way the muscles feel when you catch cold in them. Pond's Extract will untie all such knots and relieve the pain.

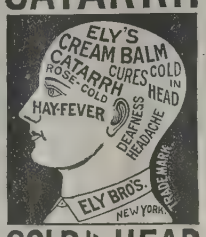
THE foliage of the Deerfield Valley is now painted with tints of the most gorgeous hue. Take the Fitchburg Railroad's popular Hoosac Tunnel excursion of Oct. 17 and enjoy the sight.

Your cough, like a dog's bark, is a sign that there is something foreign around which shouldn't be there. You can quiet the noise, but the danger may be there just the same. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil is not a cough specific; it does not merely allay the symptoms but it does give such strength to the body that it is able to throw off the disease.

You know the old proverb of "the ounce of prevention?" Don't neglect your cough.

Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes.

CATARRH



COLD IN HEAD

NASAL CATARRH is a LOCAL DISEASE and is the result of colds and sudden climatic changes. This remedy does not contain mercury or any other injurious drug.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Opens and cleans the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals and Protects the Membrane from Colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Is quickly absorbed. Gives relief at once. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; samples 10c. by mail.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Does Your Hair Fall Out?

Is it getting thin—lessening in volume? If so, I can help you. If totally bald do not write. Select family patronage for ten years. Send self-addressed stamped envelope to Miss RACHEL T. WYATT, Centerville, Mass.

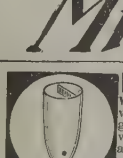
Washing windows is another one of the things that Pearline (use without soap) does best. With that, the glass is never cloudy—is always clear and bright. Washing it is less trouble, of course—but that is the case with everything that is washed with Pearline.

And about the sashes and the frames; remember that Pearline, when it takes the dirt off, leaves the paint on. Haven't you noticed that certain imitations are not so particular about this? 497

MILLIONS NOW USE Pearline



DEAF-NESS & head noises relieved by Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums—helps where medicine fails; stops the progress of deafness; concentrates sound waves to one point upon Natural Drum, also takes the place of Natural Drums when wholly or partially destroyed; invisible, comfortable, safe—no wire or strings to irritate. For full information write or call for 144-page book on Deafness and Testimonials, FREE. WILSON EAR DRUM CO., Offices { 835 Trust Bdg., Louisville, Ky. 1122 Broadway, (Room 351), New York.

BLINDNESS PREVENTED

The Absorption Treatment a Success. Hundreds successfully treated for all diseases of the eyes or lids without knife or risk at their homes and at our Sanitarium, the largest and most successful institution in America. "Don't wait to be blind." Pamphlet Free.

BEMIS EYE SANITARIUM, Glen Falls, N. Y.

"IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED," TRY SAPOLIO

MAKES FOOD FINER

ROYAL

ABSOLUTELY PURE

BAKING POWDER

AND MORE WHOLESOME

The Cyclist's Neccssity.

POND'S

WILL CURE CUTS, BURNS, BRUISES, WOUNDS, SPRAINS, SUNBURN, CHAFINGS, INSECT BITES, ALL PAIN, AND INFLAMMATIONS. . . . . .

USED INTERNALLY AND EXTERNALLY.

GENUINE IN OUR BOTTLES ONLY, BUFF WRAPPERS, SEE OUR NAME, POND'S EXTRACT CO., NEW YORK, 76 FIFTH AVENUE.

EXTRACT

USE POND'S EXTRACT OINTMENT FOR PILES.

Sent by mail on receipt of 50 cents.

PERFECT EASE

and freedom of movement are enjoyed by wearers of the Ferris Waist, making the waist for misses especially suitable for young girls' needs. For gymnastics, for bicycling, walking, working, it is especially adapted. Supports skirts and stockings from shoulders instead of waist.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE

CORSET WAIST

is made in sizes and styles to suit all figures. For ladies, long and short waist, high and low bust. Children's, 25 cts. to 50 cts. Misses', 50 cts. to $1.00. Ladies', $1.00 to $2.00.

FOR SALE BY ALL RETAILERS.

Volume LXXXI Number 43

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 22 October 1896

PROF. JOSHUA JAMES BLAISDELL.

Born Feb. 8, 1827; died Oct. 10, 1896.

IF what the young are to be and to do is to be worth anything in realizing the salvation of mankind, the spiritual force which makes them worth anything must come through Christ exalted in their thought upon all the background of supernatural things, in which he is the supernatural foreground; this luminous foreground differentiated in the marvelous life of the Son of God, his sacrificial death, his resurrection in divine majesty, his intercession for his people, his universal providence, his absolute spiritual nearness, his final judgment, his everlasting kingdom. And what is that but the substance of a creed? It is great facts taken into intelligently apprehensive souls that make great lives. A mighty generation is a generation with faith in mighty things. The coming church will be irresistible if we can give it a faith in a tremendous and awful world that overhangs and makes pregnant the battlefields on which it is to fight.—From an address by Professor Blaisdell, entitled The Church the Guardian of the Religious Belief of the Young.

CURRENT THOUGHT.

ABROAD.

Great Britain's duty in Turkey is thus defined in the British Weekly: "Is it really imagined that a public confession of impotence is the best means to avert war? If the Powers of Europe see that by joining together they can coerce us, are they likely to stop at compelling us to leave the sultan alone to work his murderous will? Is it not quite certain that we shall have to drink a deep and bitter cup of humiliation before all is done? The spirit of the nation is not dead, and the nation would rather perish than make certain concessions. If it is plain that war there must be sooner or later, it would be infinitely better for us to face that war in a noble cause and fight against fearful odds than be compelled to take the sword at last, humiliated because of our great betrayal and exposed to the just judgment of God for our cowardice."

The Examiner publishes a letter from an American Baptist missionary in Mexico, in which he says: "The rich are very rich and the poor are very poor, and the latter class embraces nearly all the artisan and working classes of the country. It is hard to understand the blind fatality of my countrymen who want a free coinage of silver. If they are successful in engrafting the Mexican financial system, so far as silver is concerned, upon the American people, they certainly will rue the day they accomplish it. Do not misunderstand me; Mexico is 'looking up'; she is coming forward among the nations; she is feeling everywhere the pulsations of a new life. But it is not because she has free silver, since she has always had it, but because she has an enlightened and progressive government, with a magnificent man at its head, and guarantees to every man who comes here to invest his capital in the infant industries of the country that he and his industries shall be protected. This gives prosperity to the capitalist and more labor to the working man."

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc., published under this heading at ten cents a line.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

JAMES W. ELWELL, President.
REV. W. C. STITT, Secretary.
W. C. STURGES, Treasurer.

FOR HONEST MONEY.

MR. CAPEN'S ARTICLE,

The National Crisis OF 1896.

This article, which was published in The Congregationalist of Sept. 24 and which has been so widely commended, we shall be glad to furnish and in such quantity as may be desired, to pastors and others who will agree to distribute it to voters.

FREE OF CHARGE

Address

THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

Enameline

The Modern STOVE POLISH.

DUSTLESS, ODORLESS,
BRILLIANT, LABOR SAVING.
Try it on your Cycle Chain.
J. L. PRESCOTT & CO., New York.

PIANO BARGAINS.

To anyone interested, we will send a list of slightly used and second-hand pianos with description, and special prices. Every piano in our stock not entirely new has been marked at a special reduced price. Square pianos suitable for practice purposes $75. and upwards. Uprights $150. and upward. $15. to $25. down and $5. to $10. per month. We include stool and cover, and prepay railway freights.

You may save $50 to $150 by taking advantage of this sale.

Ivers & Pond Piano Co.,
114 Boylston Street, Boston.

The Congregationalist . . SERVICES . .

THIRTY-THREE SERVICES READY.

100 Copies, 60 Cents, postpaid.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST,
1 Somerset Street, Boston.

IMPROVED
Cathedral Tubular Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS (Harrington and other patents.)
U. S. Tubular Bell Co. Sole Mfrs., Methuen, Mass.

The St. Denis,

BROADWAY AND ELEVENTH STREET,
Opposite Grace Church, NEW YORK.

EUROPEAN PLAN.

"There is an atmosphere of home comfort and hospitable treatment at the St. Denis which is rarely met with in a public house, and which insensibly draws you there as often as you turn your face toward New York."

Railroads and Excursions.

THE OVERLAND LIMITED.

FASTEST TRAIN IN THE WEST
RUNNING
EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR
VIA THE

UNION PACIFIC
THE OVERLAND ROUTE
WORLD'S PICTORIAL LINE

TO UTAH.
29 hours from Missouri River.
44 hours from Chicago.

TO CALIFORNIA.
2 1-2 days from Missouri River.
3 days from Chicago or St. Louis.

THE ONLY TRAIN
in the West carrying Buffet Smoking and Library Cars.

Send for Advertising Matter. | E. L. LOMAX, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt., Omaha, Neb.

GAZE'S UNIVERSAL TOURS.

52D YEAR.

NILE TOURS — Illustrated program of our NILE TOURS, Season 1896-97, sent on application. Sole agts. for the Thewfikieh Nile Nav. Co.

ORIENT, EGYPT AND PALESTINE — OUR ORIENTAL TOURS, visiting GIBRALTAR, ITALY, EGYPT, HOLY LAND, etc., leaves New York JANUARY 16, FEBRUARY 13 and APRIL 3.

SO. FRANCE AND ITALY — OUR regular South France and Italy parties, visiting Southern EUROPE and ENGLAND (a delightful two months' tour), leave New York monthly. All above tours under personal escort, and every expense included. Illustrated programs free. Mention Tour wanted.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED

INDEPENDENT TICKETS EVERYWHERE — As Official Passenger Agents for all Transportation Lines, we furnish tickets at lowest rates everywhere—Europe, the Orient, and Round the World; BERMUDA, NASSAU, MEXICO, WEST INDIES, etc.

WRITE FOR TOURIST GAZETTE AND SAVE MONEY.

Post Free Upon Application.

H. GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,
113 Broadway, New York, or
W. H. EAVES, New England Agent,
201 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

JAPAN-AMERICA LINE.

New Route to the Orient.

Great Northern Railway

Duluth—St. Paul—Minneapolis
TO Seattle, Washington.

Nipon Yusen Kaisha

TO HAWAII—JAPAN—CHINA
Australia and India.

Native agents of the Company at foreign ports speak English and are in a position to render valuable service to tourists, students, temporary residents, and shippers.

Through rates and bills of lading to all Oriental ports. Special rates for Missionaries. For freight, express-parcel, and passage rates, sailing dates, and other information apply to railway or steamship agent, or address

F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn.

EUROPE AND THE ORIENT.

TWELFTH SEASON.

SELECT PARTY will leave New York January 5, 1897, by express steamer "Columbia," 106 days' tour through ITALY, GREECE, SYRIA (DAMASCUS), PALESTINE, EGYPT, the NILE (to first cataract), the Riviera (Nice), SWITZERLAND, FRANCE and ENGLAND. Strictly first-class; exceptional advantages. For particulars of winter and summer tours address MRS. M. A. CROSLEY, 502 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, or Norwich, Ct.

ROUND THE WORLD, HOLY LAND, EUROPE.—A select party leaves New York Nov. 5 and 'Frisco Nov. 12 for trip Around the World, limited to eight persons. Parties leave Feb. 6 and 27 for Holy Land; May 8, June 12 July 3, for Europe, $260 and up. F. C. CLARK, 111 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

See that the letters S. H. & M. are stamped on the back of every yard you buy from the reel

NONE OTHER GENUINE

If your dealer will not supply you, we will.

"HOME DRESSMAKING," a new book by Miss Emma M. Hooper, of the Ladies' Home Journal, telling how to put on Bias Velveteen Skirt Binding and other valuable points, sent for 25 cents postage paid.

S. H. & M. Co., P.O. Box 699, N.Y.City.

Ladies' Fashionable Headgear

We are now showing in our Trimmed Millinery Parlors, on the second floor, a large number of Hats and Bonnets, no two alike, made up of fine imported materials, at prices ranging from

$6.00 to $10.00

Which are equal in every way—materials, style and workmanship—to any Hats to be had elsewhere at from ten to eighteen dollars.

Come, see and be convinced.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,

The Leading Millinery House,

90 to 98 Tremont St., Boston.

Arnold's Knit Night Drawers

Knit cotton fabric; excellent quality

50 cents and upwards, according to size.

Fleece lined garments, 75 cents upwards.

Arnold's Lounging Robes, with full line of knit goods, described in complete free catalogue of Arnold's Goods.

NOVELTY KNITTING CO.
325 Broadway, Albany, N.Y.

SOMATOSE a perfect food, tonic and restorative for the invalid or convalescent. Send for free pamphlets.

SCHIEFFELIN & CO., New York.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Paragraphs 585
- Religion and Politics 586
- Professor Blaisdell of Beloit 586
- Welcome, A. M. A.! 586
- Princeton's 150th Birthday 587
- The Uplifting of the Indian 587
- Modern Signs of the Holy Spirit's Power 587
- The Versatility of Authors 604
- Current History 588
- In Brief 589

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
- New York 590
- The Interior 591
- Australia 606

CURRENT THOUGHT 582

CONTRIBUTIONS:
- The Revelations and Admonitions of the Campaign. H. A. B. 592
- The Autumnal Assembly of British Congregationalists. Our English Editor 593
- Charity Chance. Chap. XV. Walter Raymond 594
- Washington's Tribute to Clara Barton and Bishop Keane. Lillian Camp Whittlesey 596
- A Question of Comity and More. Rev. R. M. Tunnell 606

THE HOME:
- October—a poem. Isaac Ogden Rankin 597
- Mrs. William McKinley 597
- Perfect Peace. Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster. 597
- A Tramp in Dickens Land. Rev. Charles R. Seymour 598
- Closet and Altar 598
- Afield with Young Naturalists. Our Native Nuts. Mrs. S. J. Bucklin 599
- At the Food Fair 599
- A Larger Home Life—a selection 599
- Tangles 600
- Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 601
- Corner Scrap-Book 601

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for Nov. 1 602

Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for Nov. 1-6 607
- Notes 615

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 603

LITERATURE 604

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
- The Boston Young Men's Congregational Club 609
- Cleveland Fellowship 609
- Good Bits from Western Michigan 610
- From the Hawkeye State 610
- Northern California Association 610
- The Association of Oregon 610

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Our Strength and Our Limitations—a selection 603
- An Old-Fashioned Remedy—a selection 603
- Massachusetts Endeavorers in Worcester 606
- Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 607
- Gleanings 608
- Notices 609
- Noteworthy Forthcoming Meetings 615
- Business Outlook 616
- Temperance 616
- Education 618
- Marriages and Deaths 618
- Biographical 619

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday,
At 1 Somerset Street, corner of Beacon Street.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.

On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 11½ inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.
READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Her Writings, in a New Riverside Edition from beautiful New Plates. Thoroughly edited and rearranged with a Biographical Sketch and Notes. With Portraits, Views of Mrs. Stowe's Homes and other Illustrations on engraved Title-pages. In 16 vols., 12mo, handsomely bound, cloth, gilt top, $1.50 each.

Three volumes have already appeared; the following are now ready:

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN, AND THE KEY (2 vols.).
HOUSEHOLD PAPERS AND STORIES.

Uncle Tom's Cabin has a Biographical Sketch of Mrs. Stowe, an Introductory Paper by Mr. CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, Mrs. Stowe's Introduction, giving the history of the wonderful story, and a Bibliography of its editions and the numerous languages in which it has appeared.

Letters of Victor Hugo.

Edited by PAUL MEURICE. In two volumes, 8vo, carefully printed, and bound in handsome library style. First Series, with a fine portrait, $3.00. [The Second Series will appear in a few months.]

A work of remarkable interest, including Hugo's unpublished letters to his father, wife, children and to many famous persons, including a notable series of fifty letters to Sainte Beuve.

Friar Jerome's Beautiful Book.

By THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH. Artistically printed in black and red, and bound in antique leather, handsomely stamped. 16mo, $1 50. Edition de Luxe, bound in red parchment and gold, forming a remarkably beautiful volume. $5 00, net.

The rubrication and artistic printing and binding of this book make it very rich and attractive.

Talks About Autographs.

By Dr. GEORGE BIRKBECK HILL, editor of "Boswell's Life of Johnson." With portraits and facsimiles. Square 8vo, bound in antique leather, $3 50; in buckram, paper label, $3.50.

Dr. Hill has opened an exceedingly interesting field of literary exploration, and has produced an unusually attractive volume. Fifty famous persons are embraced in his delightful "talks," and the book is brought out in uncommonly handsome style.

A Quiet Road.

A tasteful book of unusually good poems, by LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, author of "A Handful of Lavender." 16mo, $1.00.

The Spiritual Sense of Dante's Divina Commedia.

By WILLIAM T. HARRIS, LL. D., United States Commissioner of Education. New Edition. 12mo, $1 25.

As the work of such a scholar and thinker as Dr. Harris, this book commends itself strongly to all students of Dante, and hardly less to all thoughtful, serious-minded readers.

Sold by Booksellers. Sent, postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston.

11 EAST 17TH STREET, NEW YORK.

WORLD'S FOOD FAIR
and HOME CONGRESS,
Mechanics' Building, Boston,
Daily Until Saturday, November 7.
10 A. M. to 10 P. M.

Two Hundred Dealers in Food Products Distribute Samples to the People.

Most distinguished men and women in the land participate in Home Congress. Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer of Philadelphia lectures every afternoon on "Therapeutics of Diet."

Five "Centurion" Bicycles given away.

Four hundred Souvenir Spoons given away every day to first four hundred women purchasing tickets of admission.

Bazane's magnificent $10,000 water color of Niagara Falls on free exhibition.

A subway filled with attractions for the multitude.

Salem Cadet, Latricain's Brigade and Boyle O'Reilley Bands, also the Fadettes, St. Augustine's Band, Knowlton & Allen's Singing Orchestra, etc. Nothing like it since the Peace Jubilee.

ADMISSION 25 CENTS.

POULTNEY BIGELOW'S

First Paper on

WHITE MAN'S AFRICA

Giving a novel view of Jameson's raid, from material placed in the author's hand by an English physician and a Boer official, thus presenting both sides of this remarkable episode.

The Second Instalment of

DU MAURIER'S NEW NOVEL

"THE MARTIAN"

Short Stories by
THOMAS A. JANVIER
OCTAVE THANET
Mrs. E. A. ALEXANDER
JOHN KENDRICK BANGS
VICTORIA CLEMENT

A timely and important study of American political tendencies by Professor FRANCIS N. THORPE. Professor WOODROW WILSON'S sixth paper on "Washington." "Literary Landmarks of Florence," by LAURENCE HUTTON. "The Cuckoos and the Out-witted Bird," by the late WILLIAM HAMILTON GIBSON.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE

FOR NOVEMBER — HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers, New York

YOU CAN MAKE 1000 DOLLARS

Or, you can make $500, $250, $100, $50, or whatever you wish. Somebody MUST have all this money: $11,500 in all. Will you have some of it? You can, just as well as not. Address

The Ladies' Home Journal

Philadelphia

The Forward Movement

IN

Sunday School Work

The HOME Department

Originated by the officers of our society and perfected by experience of several years. Our motto is

A Home Department connected with every Congregational Sunday School.

We will send blanks and circulars and furnish lesson helps at reduced rates to any school agreeing to make an earnest effort to organize

FREE

A HOME DEPARTMENT.

Send for information and free sample blanks.

For 25 cents we will mail a copy of Dr. Hazard's "Home Department, Its History and Methods."

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,

Congregational House, Boston.

THE NEW BOOK.

SACRED SONGS No. 1.

By IRA D. SANKEY, JAMES McGRANAHAN, and GEO. C. STEBBINS.

Will be ready for use by Mr. D. L. MOODY, at the Series of Meetings to be held at Cooper Union, New York, November 9th.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 is of same size and style as Gospel Hymns No. 6.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 has an unusually large number of new and attractive songs by the authors and others.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 is furnished cheaper than any of the previous issues. In boards, 30 cents by mail; $25 per 100 by express.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,

76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Educational.

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY. Oldest and best known in U. S. Established, 1855. 3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES. 4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-paged Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & CO.

MAINE, BANGOR.

BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY. Choice between two courses of study, Classical and English Biblical, in Junior year; one course in Middle and Senior years. Optionals in Hebrew and Cognates, and in Greek. Entrance examination on Wednesday, Sept. 2, 9 A. M. Apply to Prof. C. A. Beckwith, or Prof. G. W. Gilmore, Bangor, Me.

MASSACHUSETTS, BRADFORD.

CARLETON SCHOOL for Young Men and Boys. College preparatory and general course of study. Individual teaching. Gymnasium bowling alley, etc. Circulars. I. N. CARLETON, Ph. D.

NEW LONDON, N. H.

COLBY ACADEMY. $200 to $250 a Year. Coeducational. 44th Year. Send for Catalogue. Rev. GEO. W. GILE, President.

MASSACHUSETTS, SOUTH BYFIELD.

DUMMER ACADEMY (Home School). Founded 1763. Thorough training for College and Technical Schools. PERLEY L. HORNE, A. M.

MASSACHUSETTS, BOSTON.

College of Physicians and Surgeons. Men and women. Rules of Assoc. Am. Med. Colleges 17th year opens Sept 16. Part tuition for clinical service. 20,000 med. calls in '95. Near Boston City Hospital. AUGUSTUS P. CLARK, A.M., M.D., Dean. (Send for Catalogue.) 517 Shawmut Ave., Boston, Mass.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

Organ. Any New England Congregational Church, with limited resources, and needing a Cabinet organ—seven octave, plain, but of good tone and in good order—will do well to address (inclosing stamp) E. B. P., P. O. Box 2374, Boston, Mass.

Housekeeper. A situation as housekeeper, companion or mothers' assistant is desired by a refined, middle-aged lady. References exchanged. Address A. B. C., 155 Warren Avenue, Boston, Mass.

A Problem Solved.

Pastors, leaders of young people's societies, and active workers generally, in the churches, are perplexed to know where to find a book of hymns and tunes which combines seriousness and popularity in the best sense—one composed of hymns without doggerel and music bright and melodic without jingle.

LAUDES DOMINI FOR THE PRAYER MEETING

is the book.

Cheap only in price, and now used in many of the largest and most successful church prayer-meetings.

It contains 579 hymns and 350 tunes, bound in full cloth, and costs only 50 cents by the hundred.

Send 50 cents for a sample copy—money refunded if the book is returned.

THE CENTURY CO., Union Square, New York.

OUR $7.50 GUITARS.

A man gave up drinking coffee, saying he had sufficient grounds for so doing. The grounds on which we base our confidence in recommending the "Bay State" instruments are substantial. Expert judges pronounce them to be the finest instruments manufactured. They are handsome in appearance. They are sound in workmanship. Above all, they are honest in price. We have in stock cheaper Guitars, and others costing ten times as much, but for a substantial, serviceable instrument, at a low price, no other instrument manufactured can compare with it

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

JOHN C. HAYNES & CO.,

453-463 Washington Street - Boston.

OLD BOOKS BOUGHT.

LIBRARIES AND SMALL PARCELS OF BOOKS PURCHASED.

Save the expense and delay of Auction Sales.

N. J. BARTLETT & CO., 28 Cornhill, Boston

"300 ORDERS IN 3 WEEKS;" "10 orders in every 12 calls;" "$5 to $10 profit every day in the year." Terms free; outfit 30c.; money refunded. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub., Boston.

CHURCH ORGANS

Hook & Hastings Co.

Boston, Mass.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 22 October 1896 Number 43

CHURCH CLUB AGENTS
SHOULD BEGIN WORK
NOW.
Send for Terms and Sample Copies.

✠ TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS. ✠
6 Months for $1.00
3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

IT is pleasant to note the interest everywhere felt in the rebuilding of Mt. Holyoke College. Said a little girl, as she watched the progress of the fire reducing to ashes the historic edifice: "The money in my bank must go toward a new building. I can do without a sled this winter, but those girls can't do without a college." She is a good type of the numerous small givers, whose contributions are the fruit of sacrifice and are no less necessary than the large gifts of Dr. Pearsons. It naturally will fall to the alumnæ to pull the laboring oar in the movement for a complete modern plant which shall provide for the 400 students the best opportunities of a college of the first grade. A spirit of ardent hopefulness is characterizing the meetings of the alumnæ associations now being held in different parts of the country. That at Portland, for instance, last week Wednesday was one of the best ever held. The trustees, moreover, are grappling vigorously with their problems. There is a little delay in adjusting the insurance, but it is probable that most, if not all, of the $157,000 expected will in due time be received. This, however, is only a fraction of the sum necessary to rehabilitate the institution and to provide an endowment large enough to maintain it. Mrs. Helen French Gulliver of Somerville, a former principal, makes the admirable suggestion that Founders' Day, Nov. 8, be a time for special thank offerings. Husbands and children may then honor their wives and mothers of Mt. Holyoke training, while the women who have gone out from its shelter into various parts of the world may respond with some gift, no matter how small. A strong and concerted effort speedily put forth by all the friends of the institution will relieve this pioneer among women's colleges from all its embarrassments and place it on the highway to even larger usefulness than it has yet known.

If the enthusiasm aroused at national missionary meetings spent itself on the spot, there might be a question as to whether such rallies justify the time and expense involved in holding them. But as a rule the most faithful attendants on the great anniversaries of our societies are the most eager to carry home to others the uplift of spirit there experienced. How much, for instance, of the value and power of the American Board meeting at Toledo was transferred to two neighboring cities! Cleveland felt the conditions, not only in the pulpit utterances of the following Sunday, but particularly on the occasion of the ordination of Mr. Pitkin, to which we referred last week. At Detroit there was an even more determined effort to perpetuate the influence of the Toledo meeting. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton arranged for a field day in all the Congregational churches Oct. 11, and Drs. Webb, Daniels, Farnsworth and Hitchcock, Rev. James Smith of India and Rev. J. H. Roberts of China were drafted for service. These brethren were heard at the different Congregational churches in the morning, and in the evening a union meeting packed the Opera House and many were unable to find standing room. Rarely has the city of Detroit been so stirred by the thought of foreign missions and made aware of the strength and glory of that particular form of it to which our Congregational churches throughout the land are pledged.

It is a wise caution which the Boston Advertiser gives the Republican party in this campaign against identifying the cause of its candidates with unqualified approval of the present social order. It is one thing to draw back from a party which has formally denounced the Supreme Court of the United States and threatened its violent overturn, and quite another to maintain that the decisions of the court are above criticism. It is not the defense of the income tax to which we object in the Chicago platform —that is a matter of expediency and policy— it is the proposal to override the constitution to reach what may in itself be a desirable end. It is one thing to defend the authority of the courts within proper limits and another to maintain that this authority has never been abused. The great majority of the independent supporters of Mr. McKinley are convinced that the alternative before them is between a better and a worse. They do not expect the coming of a millennium after his inauguration. But the choice is between a party whose declared principles lead downward toward national dishonor and commercial anarchy and one which promises, at least, to hold what civilization has gained. When our present standing is assured we shall be ready to join heartily in the consideration of those social needs and ameliorations whose progress seems to us to have been impeded by the raising of false issues in this campaign.

Our Iowa correspondent states on page 610 the manner in which Dr. C. O. Brown, who stands suspended from the fellowship of the Bay Conference of California, was voted into membership in the Dubuque Association. Of a possible representation of about 160, thirty-nine votes were cast. Of the twenty-two in favor of receiving Dr. Brown, sixteen were cast by pastors and delegates from three churches. The association deserves to be condemned for its action, not only because it is plainly in violation of its own constitution, but because it assumes to restore a minister to good standing in face of his suspension by a sister organization of equal authority. In all probability this action will not be recognized much beyond the bounds of the Dubuque Association, and it can work only harm to the brother who is in trouble. Beyond all this we regret such a gross breach of Congregational propriety, because it injures our denomination in the eyes of those belonging to other branches of the Christian Church and tends to discredit the efficacy of Congregationalism as a form of church government. But it seems to us that it would be wise for all concerned to wait for the calmer judgment which we are confident will in time lead the Dubuque Association to reasonable conformity to Congregational principles and practices.

The devotion of our English brethren to their national assembly is one of the most commendable phases of British Congregationalism. Instead of a single gathering once in three years, as is our custom, they sustain two meetings a year, the influence of which is far-reaching. England is such a small and compact country that what would be out of the question here is feasible there. We doubt, moreover, whether local ministerial associations and clubs make as great a demand upon time and strength as such organizations do on this side of the water. At any rate, we are always disposed to congratulate our English brethren on the size and spirit of their semi-annual gatherings. The autumnal one, attended by more than a thousand delegates, at Leicester, is graphically described in this paper by our English editor. Chairman Morlais Jones's address on the Church Without a Pulpit was an exceptionally graceful and effective utterance, and the sermon by Dr. Forsyth of Cambridge, of whom our own Pilgrims formed so pleasant an impression, represents, in its emphasis on positive evangelical truth, the direction of the best theological thought of the day.

Faithfulness in dealing with the incompetent is a crying need of our day. We have recently described the deposition of a Scotch divinity school professor proved to be incompetent, and it is now timely to call attention to another aspect of the same problem, referred to by a speaker at the recent convocation of Chicago University, who said:

> There are numbers of men who are now in the ministry, and others who are now studying for the ministry, who have simply gone into it because it seemed to invite the most possibilities for general usefulness. There are men not a few who have no positive convictions concerning the will of God in their choice of the ministry, and their work is poor and unsatisfactory by just so much. The responsibility of our theological teachers in this direction cannot be exaggerated. How many a young man might have been saved to much usefulness in other walks of life if his teachers had lovingly gone to him and said, "You had better not tarry here; we do not believe you will ever make a preacher."

RELIGION AND POLITICS.

Some politicians are always before elections extremely sensitive to the interference of the church in political affairs. No one doubts that such interference is often unwise. It is always unwise for any church to attempt to coerce its members to vote for a particular candidate. Ministers make mistakes sometimes, supposing that they are advocating principles when they are electioneering for men. But politicians surpass them in foolishness when they attempt to keep religion out of politics. The two cannot be separated, at least in this country, without destroying both of them. Religion is the only bond that can hold a nation together or give it power to resist outward foes. Archæologists digging for the histories of the great kingdoms of antiquity find their glory in the images of their gods and in their temples; and in the neglect of these is written the story of national decay. Empires and republics are today rewriting the same kind of history. What bond is so strong to hold Russia together as the Greek Church, with the czar at its head? But for Moslemism the Turkish empire would have been dismembered ages ago. It is threatened now because within its territory another religion is being quickened into life. In the history of nations underneath all political movements abides this potent fact.

What is the strongest tie which makes the United States one people? If politics alone had decided the matter the Southern States would be a nation by itself. The Western States would be organizing another. Nor would the division stop there. To the short and selfish view great sectional interests antagonize one another. Their mutual opposition is just now being emphasized, but it has long been growing. To confidence in one God whose providence guards our whole land; to a common religious faith which exalts political duty North, South, East and West, knowing no dividing lines; to great religious organizations covering the whole country, quickening millions to practical, united religious work and keeping alive their consciences we are chiefly indebted for our continued unity as a nation. What would have become of the Declaration of Independence if religion had been kept out of politics during the birth of our republic? Where would the Union be now if the churches and religious newspapers had been neutral during the Civil War of '61–'65? Does not our national history offer some solemn lessons which there is peculiar reason for us now to be heeding?

It may be uninteresting to many to listen to sermons—and no doubt many sermons are as uninteresting to them as will be most of the political speeches now being delivered, after the election is over—but without public worship religion will die, and who doubts that with religion dead politics will not be worth living for? It may not be possible to prove that Sunday has such sanctions as the Jewish Sabbath had, or that the New Testament teaches that it is binding on us to keep Sunday as a religous day, but those who are doing their best to make it like other days or are doing nothing to make it different from other days, are injuring religion, weakening conscience and thereby lessening public confidence, breaking strands of the bond which alone can hold the different sections of our country in union.

Our greatest need today is more religion in politics, religion which means that citizens are under obligation to one God and Father to be true to one another, to set the welfare of all the people above what they may believe to be their own personal gain, to make the nation honorable among all nations and strong to serve the world. Religion can do more to bring prosperity than sound money or free silver or the right kind of a tariff. Religion accepted will insure sound money and just dealing and public confidence and prosperity, and it will find its way more and more into politics the more it is accepted by the people. The minister who tries to keep it out of politics will make even a greater mistake than he would by attempting to apply its principles to elections without knowledge of politics and with partisan prejudice, though such a mistake discredits religion and injures the influence of the church in the community. The layman who is not interested in religion for his own sake ought to seek it as the inspiration of his life because he loves his country, or even in order to have a country fit to live in. The politician has reason to thank God that religion is in politics, for if it were not his occupation would be gone.

PROFESSOR BLAISDELL OF BELOIT.

In the death of Rev. Joshua James Blaisdell of Beloit College, which we are obliged to record this week, the work of Christian education as well as that of the Christian forces of the churches has met with no common loss. Perhaps his name is not so familiar even to our own denomination as that of some others, but if so it is because his published writings are few, and he had little taste for great ecclesiastical or society gatherings, although he was always an honored and influential participant in the Wisconsin State convention. His name was familiar to great numbers who have known the almost inspired power which went out from his influence in the chosen profession which was the joy of his life. In his class at Dartmouth, where he graduated at the age of nineteen, he had no superior in scholarship, his only equal being his intimate friend, Rev. Charles A. Aiken, long time professor at Princeton. After three years he abandoned his aspirations for law and entered Andover Seminary with two of his college classmates. From 1853 he was for six years pastor of a Presbyterian Church in Cincinnati. In 1859 he became professor of rhetoric and English literature at Beloit College. In 1864 he was transferred to the chair of mental and moral philosophy, which he occupied at the time of his death. It was in his position as teacher that he did his great life work, whose marvelous power has rarely been equaled in its influence over young men.

We have reason to believe that Dr. Blaisdell's conservatism held him to the decrinal system prevalent at Andover in his student days, which he accepted from conviction, but which was practically hidden under his breadth of evangelical faith and love. In the seminary, a roommate says he exhibited the same characteristic which has been manifested during his after life—an evident spiritual discernment transcending the results of the logical discussions in which he was a master. He had the same purity, the same delicacy, the same refinement, the same intense Christian earnestness, and the same loving nature which have been so fully developed in his work at Beloit.

In this work every power of his nature was engaged. His mental ability, scholarship and culture commanded the respect of his pupils of nearly forty classes; but far beyond this was the remarkable power which won their affection and molded their future. He was their friend. He entered into their lives. It was the power of a great heart in a spiritual life, wisely devoted to the highest interests of these young men. Wherever the graduates of Beloit have gone the tidings of this departure will bring sadness.

A classmate, once his roommate, tells us that at the fiftieth college anniversary, held this last June, Dr. Blaisdell was called upon to offer prayer at the class meeting. "That prayer," we are told, "was wonderful. It was so full of joyful faith and hope; it so lifted us up out of the advancing years; it so brought us into the eternal presence; it so revealed to us the transforming life of Christ, that it seemed to open the invisible world. And yet it was so simple, so childlike." Such was he at the end of fifty years from the time he left college and such in its spirit was the secret of his power growing stronger even to the end.

WELCOME, A. M. A.!

Boston was headquarters of the anti-slavery movement. Nowhere were enacted more exciting scenes of that drama than here. It is fitting that the great anti slavery society which has survived that period of fierce conflict should celebrate its jubilee in this city. Boston welcomes the American Missionary Association, as its supporters and friends gather to look back over the work of half a century. The governor of the commonwealth and the mayor of the city speak the sentiment of the people in extending to it their hospitality. The meetings of this week will be of profound interest to many who have witnessed the great changes of public opinion concerning the Negro, in which the influence of this society has been conspicuous. It is remarkable also that a large proportion of its officers have been connected with it during most of the time since the close of the Civil War, some even before that date. Naturally the history of the great interests for which the A. M. A. stands will be vividly set forth with effective local surroundings.

It will not be forgotten, however, that the glory of this society is its survival and enlargement after the cause which gave it birth was won. The chief work of the A. M. A. has been giving to the Negro made free the power to use his freedom. The Government made him a citizen. The A. M. A. set itself to the great task to fit him for citizenship. Its schools and colleges are spread far and wide over the Southern States. It holds large amounts of money in trust for their support. It has stimulated many other organizations to follow its example. It has added to its work the task of civilizing and Christianizing the Indian and the Chinaman in our country, and it has interesting schools and churches among the mountain whites of Kentucky and Tennessee.

Its great opportunity is still in the future, to lead in assimilating these dark-skinned races into the American nation. To do this in Christ's name requires the wisest statesmanship, the highest culture and the most thorough consecration. It is an inviting field for young men and women to enter who seek to serve God and their fellowmen. Upon them must soon rest the burdens of carrying on this work. We trust, therefore, that this jubilee meeting may be distinguished by as steadfast a vision of the future as of the past, and by some new departure in interesting young Christians in the work and bringing them to feel its responsibilities. We hope, too, that the second half-century of the society's history will be illuminated by a growing spirit of unity between Christians north and south, east and west, in a purpose to treat the Negro, the Indian and the Chinaman as brethren, and to help them to be worthy of and to possess the privileges of Christian citizenship in a free country whose aim must be to do justice to all men. May this jubilee meeting give to Boston a new dignity in the history of the A. M. A.

PRINCETON'S ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY.

A century and a half of college work may be measured in the growth and changes of the institution itself, or by the influence of its teachers and sons upon the national life. In either respect the history of the institution hitherto known as Nassau Hall, Princeton College, the College of New Jersey, but henceforth to assume the legal title of Princeton University, is memorable.

Founded by a union of New England men in the pastorate of the towns of eastern New Jersey and the graduates of Tennant's famous "Log College," it stood for the liberal wing of that Presbyterianism which was becoming dominant in the central and southern colonies. To it belongs the honor of having been the pioneer of the modern American undenominational colleges. Its charter expressly provided that "no person shall be debarred of any of the privileges of the said college on account of any speculative principles of religion; but those of every religious profession have equal privilege and advantage of education in the said college." This position it has ever since maintained. Though associated in the popular mind with Presbyterianism, it is only because a majority of its self-perpetuating board of trustees has always been Presbyterian, and its presidents have been clergymen of Congregational or Presbyterian ordination. Many Episcopalians and several Roman Catholics have been members of its faculty, and its students are drawn from all quarters.

Of the earlier presidents of the college Dickinson, Burr, Jonathan Edwards and Witherspoon are most famous, while the growth under the recent administrations of McCosh and Patton is familiar to all. During the Revolution, when New Jersey was the battleground of the contending armies, the number of students sank very low, but degrees were granted to graduates each year. At present the number of students runs well over a thousand.

Almost more even than its New England forerunners, Princeton has been the fruitful mother of colleges. Her sons have been in the front of new educational enterprises from the first in the whole territory South and West. Her president, Witherspoon, was one of the leaders in the Continental Congress, and foremost in the debate that led to the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Her central building, at the time of its erection the largest structure in North America, was a fort from which the army of Washington dislodged the Hessians after the battle of Princeton. In its central hall Congress sat for four months after the Revolution, and the portrait of Washington, purchased with his own gift of fifty guineas, still hangs on its wall in the frame from which the figure of King George was torn by an American cannon ball.

The enthusiasm of the anniversary has borne fruit not merely in the celebration which is in progress in Princeton as we go to press, but also in large gifts for endowment, aggregating already $10,000 for every year of the life of the college. With increased resources, an enthusiastic body of alumni and the wide aims and high aspirations of its present management, the promise of its future is for an ever widening influence in American life.

THE UPLIFTING OF THE INDIAN.

The Lake Mohonk Indian Conference has become an important part of the history of our country. Its fourteenth annual meeting last week was not less significant than those of former years. During its existence a public school system for Indians has been organized and so effectively administered that the large majority of those of school age are enrolled as pupils. The spoils system has been practically overthrown, and nearly all the Government employés connected with the Indians are now appointed on the basis of fitness for their work. More than 50,000 individual allotments of land have been made since the allotment system was first put in operation nearly ten years ago. Multitudes of Indian families are settled on homesteads and, having been provided by the Government with materials for building, tools and seeds, are prospering as farmers. Many also are scattered through the land engaged in various other industries. Considerably more than half of the Indians in the United States are self-supporting; many thousands have become voters and pay taxes as citizens. Nearly all these changes have been brought about since the inauguration of the Lake Mohonk Conference, and in securing them it has been a very influential factor. It has gathered annually representatives of the Government, of missions to the Indians, of schools, of various organizations such as the Indian Rights Association, of Indians and their friends; and every year three days have been spent in discussions of the best ways, by labor and legislation, by teaching and preaching and guiding the Indian in his domestic and business affairs, to bring him to manhood and citizenship. The noble and kindly host of the Lake Mohonk House, Mr. Albert K. Smiley, has been the inspirer and guide of these meetings, and those who have participated in them have been invited guests by his own selection. To his rare wisdom and loyal devotion to the Indian race the success of these assemblies is largely due. Their work is unique in American history. Men and women of widely diverse views have here calmly studied their differences in an atmosphere so friendly and pervaded by a purpose so unselfish that at every meeting a platform has been adopted with substantial unanimity pointing to the work of the ensuing year.

That there is still abundant work for this conference is made evident by the platform adopted last week, the most important features of which were as follows: To abolish the tribal system as soon as possible; to dispense with Indian agents where Indians are on allotments; to protect Indians against land grabbers, gamblers and liquor sellers; to retain good agents, and the present superintendent of Indian education under the next Administration; to encourage the incorporation of Indian schools into the State school systems; to promote the passage of the pending Curtis Bill, which will enable the Dawes Commission to bring the Indians in the Indian Territory into the full rights of citizenship; to bring the natives of Alaska under the protection of organized territorial law; and to urge the churches to more vigorous work through their societies to Christianize the Indians.

This last is now more than ever important. Since religious denominations have declined to receive Government aid for their schools, the necessity of maintaining Christian influences to hold to their responsibilities to God and their fellowmen the Indians who are being educated by the Government has become still more imperative, if we would not lose what has been already won. The friends of these aborigines have been multiplied in the last fourteen years, and the time is now not far distant when they will cease to be distinguished as a race from other American citizens.

MODERN SIGNS OF THE HOLY SPIRIT'S POWER.

They do not vary much from those familiar to the student of Christian history hitherto. But they certainly seem more than ordinarily conspicuous. If our age be specially characterized by widespread and defiant iniquities—which surely it is easier to claim than to prove—it is equally true that the signs of God's special presence by his Spirit are not less evident. The power of the Spirit is as marked as ever in the conversion of individual souls, and more than usually apparent in those great movements in society, as well as within the church itself, which, whether they seem to be ebbs or flows, ultimately prove to have borne farther forward the standard of the cross.

Within the past few years, for instance, we have been led to grapple more vigorously with problems which had seemed insoluble, such as that of bringing the gospel into closer relations with the homes and lives of the very poor or degraded. The attitude of the churches towards great masses of the population has changed for the better, because we have been guided from above to perceive that it is thoroughly practicable to make the gospel a more potent factor in human life. The church has changed in some respects almost as much as the conditions surrounding it, and this is not less a proof of the Holy Spirit's power.

Moreover, although organic Christian union remains a dream, the Spirit's influence has manifested itself in nothing else more strikingly of late than in the closer mutual approximation and more hearty mutual appreciation of Christians of different forms of faith. We are far more alive to the points which we hold in common, as contrasted with those upon which we differ, than we were not more than five years ago. We work together along many lines of effort with a heartiness formerly unknown and surely inspired from above. He who fails to recognize the signs of the Holy Spirit's presence among us today must be dull indeed.

CURRENT HISTORY.

The Birth and Death of Pain.

The most eminent American surgeons and physicians, and not a few representatives of the same noble profession from abroad, gathered at the Massachusetts General Hospital in the city of Boston, Oct. 16, to celebrate appropriately the fiftieth anniversary of the first public demonstration of surgical anæsthesia. Grandsons of two of the surgeons who first tested the theory of the young dentist, Dr. William T. G. Morton, issued the invitations to this remarkable celebration. One of the three surviving witnesses of the original test read a description of the memorable scene, and some of the most eminent practitioners in this country described the profoundly valuable results which have come to humanity since surgical operations became painless. Among these benefits are not only the diminution or extinction of the suffering of the patient, but also an addition to his chances of recovery or preservation of life, for, as Dr. Cheever pointed out in his paper:

> The surgeon then can do better work; he can be more careful; he can pause and consider; he can choose his steps; he can be deliberate, if not dexterous. He can even summon the aid of the pathologist and his microscope, who in ten minutes while the patient sleeps can decide the nature, the innocence or malignity, of the tumor he is removing. It is also just to believe that the moral fiber of the surgeon is less strained; judicial callousness is no longer called for; he need not steel his heart for his victim does not feel. For surgery and for diagnosis anæsthesia has done even more. It has enlarged its domain by rendering justifiable and even promising severe and delicate operations.

One aspect of this great discovery, profoundly interesting to all who speculate as to the function of pain in the divine economy, was dwelt upon by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia in his poem:

> What mighty forces pledged the dust to life!
> What awful will decreed its silent strife!
> Till through vast ages rose on hill and plain
> Life's saddest voice, the birthright wail of pain.
> The keener sense and ever-growing mind
> Served but to add a torment twice refined,
> As life, more tender as it grew more sweet,
> The cruel links of sorrow found complete
> When yearning love to conscious pity grown
> Felt the mad pain thrills that were not its own.
>
> What will implacable, beyond our ken,
> Set this stern fiat for the tribes of men?
> This none shall 'scape, who share our human fates:
> One stern democracy of anguish waits
> By poor men's cots—within the rich man's gates.
> What purpose hath it? Nay, thy quest is vain;
> Earth hath no answer.
>
> But heaven had an answer.
>
> A solemn hour for such as gravely pause
> To note the process of creation's laws!
> Ah, surely, he whose dark, unfathomed mind
> With prescient thought the scheme of life designed,
> Who bade his highest creature slowly rise,
> Spurred by sad deeds and lured by many a prize,
> Saw, with a God's pure joy, his ripening plan,
> His highest mercy brought by man to man.

Biennial Elections in Massachusetts.

The voters of Massachusetts at the coming election will vote on amendments to the constitution, which, if adopted, will provide that, beginning with the election of 1898, all future State elections shall occur every two years instead of annually, and that all executive officials and legislators shall serve for two years. Ought these amendments to be adopted? We think they should be. The principle has been tested by forty-three of our sister States and found to work advantageously. Seven of Massachusetts's recent governors, and her present acting governor, believe that the suggested amendments are certain to add to the efficiency of the executive department of government. The legislators of recent legislatures are practically unanimous in the belief that the public will gain if legislators are given longer tenure of office. For ourselves we believe that this testimony is disinterested, unselfish and not born of desire to fatten at the public crib. There are not a few able men who oppose the adoption of these amendments, but the preponderance of opinion from men expert in civic matters is with those who may vote for them.

Domestic Politics.

Archbishop Ireland's letter on the real issue and its seriousness has called forth assent and dissent from some of the Roman Catholic bishops and priests, the majority of those who have spoken favoring his position. That his views are indorsed but his tactics disapproved by Pope Leo XIII. is an interesting rumor from Rome. Just now, however, we suspect the doughty Minnesota prelate is more concerned with the outcome of the fight between the liberals and ultramontanes over the Catholic University at Washington than he is over the approval or disapproval by the authorities at Rome of his course as a vigilant citizen of the republic.

The National Civil Service Reform League has put forth a formal denunciation of the Chicago platform and Mr. Bryan, because of their avowed hostility to the principle for which civil service reformers have labored so strenuously and successfully. The fact that the managers of Mr. Bryan's campaign in New York State have been endeavoring to force Federal employés in New York to contribute to their treasury has been called to the attention of the authorities in Washington, and they will probably be prosecuted, as the Administration, by its summary removal of district attorneys who insist on becoming partisans and advancing Mr. Bryan's political interests, is showing its intention to enforce Federal laws at the same time that it makes known its lack of sympathy for the Chicago platform and candidates. Secretary Carlisle is to stump Kentucky for Palmer and Buckner.

The decisions of the tribunals in New York and Massachusetts have favored the gold factions in their fight for the right to the word "Democratic" as the designation of their ticket on the official ballots, but in Colorado it is the gold Republicans who have been kept out by court decrees. The work of fusion between Populists and Democrats goes on with some degree of nominal success. But how effective it will be on Nov. 3 men differ much in prophesying. The tour of Messrs. Palmer and Buckner through the South is producing disintegrating effects there that may surprise the country two weeks hence. Mr. Bryan continues to speak to enormous crowds. Voice and body seem to be matchless in their endurance, but what shall be said of divisive speeches after the tenor of this, delivered at Grand Rapids, Mich.?

> On one side you find the capitalistic class, and on the other side you find the struggling masses. They (the struggling masses) do in time of peace produce the wealth and pay the taxes of the country, and in time of war they are the only people who save the nation. And yet these struggling masses are despised and spit upon in time of peace, and the idle holders of idle capital, instead of letting them make the laws when there is peace, make the laws, and when there is war they appeal to the struggling masses to offer up their lives to save their property.

Governor Altgeld of Illinois, in his speech at Cooper Union last week, struck the same note, which is the predominant one of their campaign now.

The suggestion of the Republican National Committee that Oct. 31 be made a day for the display of the national flag on the homes and places of business of those who oppose Mr. Bryan is being enthusiastically indorsed, and Mr. Bryan and the National Democratic Committee bid their followers do likewise, naturally and rightly feeling that the American flag is too national an emblem to be made the undisputed symbol of one party.

The United States and Turkey.

The advent of the Bancroft at Smyrna and some sensational statements sent from Washington, neither affirmed nor denied in toto by the State Department officials, have stimulated public interest at home and abroad in the strained relations between the United States and Turkey. For we believe that they are strained, notwithstanding Turkey's concession that the wives and children of Armenian citizens of the United States may leave Turkey and join the heads of their households here. That was a minor count in our bill of complaint, the chief of which remain unanswered. Apparently the Administration means to have the Bancroft enter the Dardanelles and anchor off Constantinople. If Russia's consent to this has been won Turkey will not be likely to protest even formally. If Russia's consent has not been won and Turkey does fire upon the Bancroft then three cruisers of our navy, now off Smyrna, stand ready to obey orders. Mr. Terrell is credited with having won the Administration to belief in his ability to secure from the Porte, by the use of diplomacy, permission for the Bancroft to enter. Mr. Terrell may do this, but what will he pay as the price for it? Public opinion in this country will support the Administration in any resolute policy it may adopt, whether Turkey alone or Turkey and Russia be opposed to us. We are not seeking to grab territory or intermeddle with European politics, or anything that is mercenary. We are only asking for that which every self respecting government must ask, and we intend to have it. One hundred and sixty-seven Armenian refugees, via Marseilles, where Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset succored them, arrived in New York Harbor on Monday. Some of them failed to secure admission immediately, and all of them need opportunity to toil for their daily bread. The new Turkish minister to the United States, Mustapha Bey, arrived in this country last week and is in Washington now. He visited this country in 1885 and remained for two years, hence may know us somewhat better than some of his predecessors. He expresses feelings of admiration for us as a people, and a desire to foster amicable relations.

The Foreign Policy of the United States.

The Daily Witness of Montreal "for more reasons than one" says that "it hails the advent of the United States into the turmoil of nations." It believes that we "hold the key of the Oriental situation and are responsible for its use." Similar statements have appeared in the London press during the past week, and clergymen no less distinguished than Dr. George F. Pentecost of London and Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst of New York city have recently expressed the hope that Great Britain might find in the United States an immediate and effective ally in solving the Eastern problem.

For reasons that scarcely need to be recalled the United States thus far has kept out of "the turmoil of nations," nor do we see any reason why she should attempt to cut Europe's Gordian knot in Turkey.

But it is conceivable how, in enforcing a strictly American policy, she might as a secondary (to her) result precipitate the dissolution of the Turkish empire, and thus reopen, but by no means settle, the Eastern question. To demand the payment of indemnities, the admission of consuls and the recognition of the validity of American passports is one thing, and greatly to be desired—yea, is imperative—and to instruct a Turkish sultan as to how he is to treat his subjects is quite another thing. Some day an Anglo-American alliance may become necessary as a measure of self-preservation, but meantime Great Britain has much to do to atone for her own blindness and willfulness in the past, and she must bring forth fruits meet for repentance.

Turning to the westward, however, an other state of affairs exists. It seems inevitable that sooner or later we must deal with Spain, since she will not deal justly with Cuba. The dispute over Venezuela is not settled yet, and Sir Edward Clarke, the Tory barrister, is quoted as describing the likelihood of conflict between Great Britain and the United States as greater than ever. As Russian influence waxes in the Pacific and Eastern Asia becomes the scene of a great duel between Russia and Great Britain, shall we be able to remain neutral? Never was there greater need of able men at the helm. Precedents of gravest import are soon to be, or may now be being, established. Those who vote on Nov. 3 should keep this point of view in mind.

The Situation at Constantinople.

No overt acts of violence or marked changes of place in the pieces on the diplomatic chessboard can be reported from Constantinople. Russia is reported to be mobilizing her land and sea forces near and on the Black Sea, and the garrisons in Poland, Taurida and the Caucasus are said to have received orders to be ready for immediate transportation to the ports on the Euxine. Italy has filed a somewhat peremptory demand for indemnity due because of the murder of a young Italian in the recent Constantinople massacre. This much is to be said for the Powers—they have reiterated in a joint note their belief that the sultan was directly responsible for the recent massacre, and have refused to comply with the Porte's recent request that Turkish officials be permitted to search for suspects on non-Turkish vessels.

Whether Great Britain and Russia have come to terms is a question on which little light has yet been thrown. Agitation in Great Britain continues, but in a lower pitch and with less strenuousness since Lord Rosebery spoke. Sir Vernon Harcourt has not resigned any office or done anything to warrant the belief that he intends to adopt Lord Rosebery's peculiar tactics. Mr. Gladstone, in the October Nineteenth Century, re-enters the arena to remark impressively that if it has come to pass that "England may give for herself the most solemn pledges in the most binding shape, but now claims the right of referring it to some other person or persons, state or states, not consulted or concerned in her act, to determine whether she shall endeavor to the utmost of her ability to fulfill them (the pledges)," then he would respectfully propose that "the old word 'honor' be effaced from our dictionaries and dropped from our language," which is his way of saying what so many other high-toned Englishmen are feeling, namely, that English honor is at stake and may be forever sullied if resolute action does not supersede politic diplomacy.

NOTES.

A sudden flaming up of hostility in the British and German press shows how little love is lost between peoples that have much in common.

We exported goods and raw products worth $85,098,594 last month, an excess over imports of $34 272,889. No wonder gold has poured in on us from abroad.

Six of the leading physicians of New York city have sent an open letter to the physicians of the country appealing to them to vote against Mr. Bryan.

Dr. Benson's remains, with great pomp, were buried in Canterbury Cathedral last week, and, strange to say, it is the first time in 350 years that the corpse of an archbishop of Canterbury has been buried in that cathedral.

Thousands of tons of wheat have been shipped from San Francisco recently in vessels bound for India, where the wheat crop is very short and famine looms ahead. Wheat that has averaged seventy-eight cents per bushel during the period July 1, 1892, to June 30, 1895, sold at eighty-six cents last week in New York and Chicago.

This is a time of great anxiety among the Syrian Christians. The Druses maintain their resistance against the Turks and offer to submit only on the following terms: No Kurds or Circassians shall be admitted into the police force which is to be formed; the kaimakams and mudirs shall be chosen from among the local Arabs; and exemption from taxes for a period of four years must be granted.

It must not be overlooked that two Alabama white men, farmers, were found guilty of murder by participating in a lynching, and sentenced last week to life imprisonment. This is a better record than New York or Minnesota can show. The Port Jervis, N. Y, lynchers have never been prosecuted, and Minnesota does not seem disposed to discover or prosecute those of her citizens who recently indulged in lynching.

What do the Armenian revolutionary societies desire? This is an important fact to be taken into account in considering the situation in Turkey. In a letter sent to the embassies in Constantinople previous to the raid on the Ottoman Bank they said:

In spite of all the calumnies which our enemies have maliciously spread against us, we have always asked and do now ask only for our indispensable rights: To appoint for Armenia a European high commissioner, who shall be elected by the six great Powers; the valis, mutaserriffs and kaimakams to be nominated by the high commissioner; under the command of European officers shall be organized local militia; reforms in the courthouses after the European methods; perfect freedom for the press, religion and education.

IN BRIEF.

The grateful memories of Professor Blaisdell quickened throughout the land on hearing of his death last week are the best witness of the value of an educated and consecrated mind and heart. Rev. Dr. Morgan of Jamaica Plain, Mass., a Beloit graduate, said of him last Sunday morning, "From the whole Mississippi Valley it would be difficult to select a man whose loss would be more sorely felt." President Eaton writes, "While we know how greatly he was loved, yet the expressions of grief and loss from all directions deeply move us." Hundreds of pupils whose characters he has helped to form will continue his influence in the world.

Rev. J. H. Jowett, Dr. Dale's successor at Carr's Lane, Birmingham, made his first address, as a citizen, in the Town Hall at the recent meeting held to protest against the Armenian massacres, and the impression he made was that Dr. Dale's mantle as a citizen as well as a preacher had fallen on worthy shoulders.

In answer to Mr. Moody's appeal apples are beginning to pour into Boston for the use of the poor, who thereby become sharers in the abundant harvest of the year. The Associated Charities are in charge of the distribution, which will be made as wide as possible. This is a better use of the surplus crop than the cider mill affords.

In the rejoicing over the clearing of the debt, which has made the meeting of the American Board a peculiarly happy one this year, the part played in attaining this result by the ministers and missionaries should not be forgotten. The Pastors' Fund amounted to nearly $9,000, and $569.64 came from missionaries in foreign lands.

Our recent editorial urging the recognition of Prison Sunday, Oct. 25, has brought us a number of inquiries as to where information may be obtained regarding philanthropic and Christian effort in behalf of prisoners. Mr. Warren F. Spalding, the secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association, 15 Pemberton Square, Boston, will be glad to furnish such literature.

The Sabbath Protective League of Massachusetts continues to make itself heard and felt. It has filed a protest with Adjutant-General Dalton against the State militia being compelled to travel on the Lord's Day, and it also has placed in the hands of the proper authorities a protest against the recent orders which exclude evangelists from preaching on the Sabbath day at Revere Beach, Salem Willows and in the Franklin and Marine Parks in Boston.

Prof. Flinders Petrie, in addressing the British Association recently, did well to call attention to the fact that thought precedes words and is superior to them, and that in this day and generation we are in danger of being "drunken with writing, just as some ages ago men were drunken with speech. We have committed our all to it; we try to make it serve ends for which it cannot be fitted; and we let it override the growth of our mind and the common use of our senses."

The Minneapolis Times, which recently disparaged the work of Christian missionaries in foreign lands, now asserts of the preachers of the gospel at home that "no preacher was ever a good financier, and no good financier was ever a preacher for very long. As soon as a preacher realizes that he is a financier he goes into some other business in which his newly discovered faculties can have a wider field for exercise." The thrifty methods adopted by clergymen, by which they live decently, rear and educate large families of children and often retire with comfort, and all no salaries which average less than $1,000 a year, are so mysterious and almost miraculous to the man of the world that it ill behooves any one to impugn the financial skill of those who wear the clerical cloth and tie.

Hereafter Canada's Thanksgiving Day is to be on the same date as ours—the last Thursday in November. How little the Pilgrim Fathers dreamed of any such event when, in 1621, they began to celebrate God's goodness to them. The Puritans and Pilgrims are not forgotten these days. Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, in his recent oration at Galesburg, Ill., speaking of Abraham Lincoln, said: "But the Puritan ancestry, whose strength and strain had been lost in the Kentucky wilderness of slave-owners and the Indiana forest of slave-holding sympathizers, marvelously reproduced in this homely descendant the traits which carried the Pilgrims from Scrooby to Holland, and from Holland to Plymouth Rock, to worship God according to the dictates of their consciences and found a government of just and equal laws on the bleak shores of New England."

For thirty years a special week in the autumn has been observed quite widely as a season of special prayer for young men. The international committee of the Y. M. C. A. appoints it, and has this year suggested the week Nov. 8–14. It comes at an opportune time, when the excitement of the election will be a thing of the past, and when the earnest grapple with Christian work for the winter ought at least to be inaugurated. We trust that in our churches generally there will be reference to this concert of prayer. Pastors on Sunday, Nov. 8, may include in their petitions a special one for the young men of their flock, and the subject ought not to escape notice at the midweek gathering of the church. Some one has said that the devil believes in special work for young men. Certainly the church cannot afford to neglect both special work and special prayer in their behalf.

The Art Commission of Boston has advised the trustees of the Public Library that they would better decline the offer of Mr. McKim to give to the library MacMonnies's bronze statue of a Bacchante. It is a work of rare artistic merit, but not suited, they think, for the site selected for it by Mr. McKim, namely, in the courtyard of the library. The comment of the Transcript upon this act strikes us as just and notable. It says: "This great community does not exist for or by art and artists. It is only a New England Athens. All the young artists educated in France will unite in denouncing the action of the Art Commission as a piece of Philistinism. That much may be taken for granted. But with respect to questions of this delicate nature the judgment of the artists is inevitably technical, professional and one-sided. But in this instance it is opposed to a native sentiment which is not only justifiable and respectable, but is much finer and more delicate. It is not a subject for reproach that we are essentially different from the French."

Rev. Dr. John Watson prefaced his readings in Brooklyn, N. Y., by saying to those who had speculated as to how his nom de plume, Ian Maclaren, is pronounced, "I would say that if you want to pronounce it like an Englishman you will say I-an, if like a Scotchman, Ee-an and if like a Highlander, Ee on." He then proceeded to say,

> It is impossible for me to be present in this place and to address so large an audience of Brooklyn people without remembering what is, to us, the historic glory of this town—the town where Henry Ward Beecher preached [applause], the town from which he exerted his great influence over the whole English-speaking world. He was a patriot, raised above mere party or even national politics, and the prophet of the rights of man and the liberty of the slave. As a citizen of Liverpool by adoption, I would like to testify, though it was before my day in that city, to the great service he gave when he came and spoke to our citizens, who had made, for the most part, a great mistake in their misunderstanding of the conflict in your country.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate reprints all Mr. Dawson's recent interview with Ian Maclaren, which we printed Sept. 21, and The Christian Advocate reprints most of our "admirable" report of Ian Maclaren's lectures at Yale. We are glad through a wider dissemination of Dr. Watson's views to serve the public, Methodist as well as Congregational.

Boston has been honored the past week by a visit from J. M. Barrie and wife and Dr. W. Robertson Nicoll, editor of the British Weekly. With headquarters at the Hotel Brunswick they have made a number of excursions to points of interest hereabouts—Salem, Concord, Cambridge and Randolph being among the places where their tastes naturally led them. The attraction at Randolph was Miss Mary E. Wilkins, for whom English and Scotch literary men cherish so high a regard. Before coming to Boston this trio of travelers spent a Sunday with Mr. George W. Cable in Northampton, and the Smith College young women were particularly favored in being able to hear characteristic addresses from both Dr. Nicoll and Mr. Barrie. It is needless to say that while they were in Boston they were the recipients of constant attention, and both seem almost overwhelmed by the kind and amount of hospitality which they have received since landing in New York. The date of their sailing for home is Nov. 7, between which time and now they expect to make quite an extended tour through the country. Everywhere they go they leave the impression of culture and refinement, of simple, democratic manners and of characters unspoiled by the fame which each in his separate line has attained. Boston will have an even warmer welcome for them on the occasion of their next visit, which we trust will not be so tantalizingly short.

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM NEW YORK.

The Genial Scotsman.

The event of the week has been the addresses of "Ian Maclaren," first in Brooklyn's Academy of Music, then in our Carnegie Hall, both of which capacious auditoriums were filled with admiring hearers, and this despite the pouring rain that flooded the streets on the night of the latter meeting. No man could have asked for more intelligent and appreciative audiences, nor have had a more enthusiastic welcome. His theme was Traits of Scottish Character and Life. It was illustrated largely from the personages in his books, the naturalness, truth and world wide reality of which he vigorously defended. "Dr. MacLure" did not live in Drumtochty only; he had his home all over the world. "Sir Andra," whom the critics had pronounced the most unreal of his characters, purely a creature of the imagination, and his kind treatment of the servant lass impossible, he said was the one only character of absolute fact in all his stories, and in view of its reception by the critics he had determined to eschew fact hereafter and stick wholly to fiction!

All had read Maclaren's books, and every allusion to an incident or comment on a character "took" instantly, and the applause was too spontaneous and sincere not to move deeply the speaker's heart and tenderly mellow the tones of a voice naturally sweet, musical, sympathetic, easily molding itself to every varying emotion from the miner key of truest pathos to the play of sparkling humor, each in its place as natural to the speaker as his breath. His hearers were agreeably disappointed to find in his ordinary speech so little of the Scottish brogue that makes the language of many of his countrymen hard to understand. And when, as in reading from his books, he did use the broad Scotch dialect, he put into it a musical charm that is seldom associated therewith in the minds of even the best educated.

One gift, that of readily winning and holding the hearts of his hearers, the lecturer shares to a good degree with his countryman, the late Dr. Wm. M. Taylor. In almost childlike simplicity, frankness, unfeigned sympathy, the two had much in common, and even in certain tones, that fascinating smile and playful twinkle of the eye at sight of "a good thing," Maclaren constantly reminded Dr. Taylor's near friends of happy hours earth is to know no more.

Appeals Against National Dishonor.

Dr. R. S. Storrs, whose steady conservatism in political matters, as well as his distinguished position in the evangelical ministry of the country, gives unique force to his utterances on public affairs, in his last Sunday's discourse came out with one of the strongest denunciations of the free silver dishonesty yet heard in any pulpit—or out of it. The proposition to diminish by nearly one half the value of the dollar with which private and public debts, even the soldiers' pensions, are to be paid he branded as "simply appalling"; "opposed face to face to the divine command, 'Thou shalt not steal'; 'Pay what thou owest,' not something less." He could see "no limit to the mass of deficit and dishonor yet to come if this be allowed—the law may go on and for silver substitute copper, lead, tin, pewter, leather, clay tablets, or mere unstamped paper." "The law might as well say that seven inches shall constitute a foot, that the bushel shall be made smaller, that the yard and rod and acre shall be reduced and every measure of value be made less."

The fearful consequences of such national dishonesty he set forth in terms of the divine law and with the clearness and free characteristic of the Pilgrim Church's preacher. "No one ever did anything against the law of God without being crushed by the very law that he was violating." "There would arise appalling paralysis of business and commerce, catastrophe, bankruptcy, disaster, . . . results of apprehension, of terror and of general disorder of which there is no example in the history of mankind."

Dr. A. J. Lyman of the South Church, in the same spirit and with no little of Dr. Storrs's force and felicity of language, also denounced the same project of "national repudiation and dishonor." His sermon, from the text "He hath made of one blood all nations of men," dwelt upon "the international genius of Christianity," and one of his strongest points against the new doctrine was its sectionalism, subjecting the welfare of the country at large to the personal interests of the few and arraying section against section and class against class.

Congregational Work.

The board of editors and the managers of the business department of the proposed Congregational Work met in the Bible House on Thursday finally to arrange matters pertaining to its forthcoming. The first (January) number may be expected early in December, and it is hoped that the friends of the various forms of Congregational work it represents will see to its introduction in accordance with its motto, "Into Every Family" of our churches. At ten cents a copy this should not be an arduous task.

The Clerical Union.

The Clerical Union on Monday listened with deep interest to reports from the late meeting of the American Board. After a few words from Drs. Bradford and Creegan Rev. George E. Albrecht of Japan enlightened the members, as few living men could, upon the condition and prospects of that land, and Dr. H. A. Stimson made a profoundly stirring address upon the work at large.

Personals.

The pulpit of the Broadway Tabernacle Church was filled on the two Sundays last past by Dr. Pratt of Norwich, Ct., and President Raymond of Union College. Next Sabbath the church is to hear Rev. Mr. Albrecht of Japan. HUNTINGTON.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Professor Blaisdell.

The close relations between Beloit College and Chicago call for a few words concerning the death of Prof. J. J. Blaisdell, one of the most popular and gifted members of the college faculty. For some months he has suffered from something like nervous exhaustion, in consequence of overwork, and had gone to the sanitarium at Kenosha for treatment. Here when suffering from similar attacks he had previously found relief. But the trouble was more radical than had been supposed. Sleeplessness, dyspepsia and depression united to unsettle the brain, and led to a tragic death by his own hand. A better man than he, one more self-denying or more consecrated, rarely leaves this world. Probably no man was more highly esteemed or more influential in Wisconsin. His mental gifts were of the first order. Although he has published little, he was a writer of singular charm and a teacher of unusual magnetism. The students loved him while they honored him. They readily yielded to his molding influence. The churches were always glad to see him in their pulpits. Whenever he was willing to speak his audience was willing to listen. College, church, city and State, in his removal from us, have suffered a loss which many a year will not repair. Upon his family the loss is heaviest and to them hearts go out in the truest sympathy.

The funeral services on Tuesday in the First Church were very impressive. Many were present from abroad. The body had lain in state in the morning and was borne to the church by a detail of Grand Army comrades from the post of which the deceased was a member. From the church he was carried to the cemetery, a distance of half a mile, by members of the Senior Class in the college. The services were simple, tender and triumphant in their nature. Dr. Collie of Delavan, a graduate in the first class Beloit sent out, spoke sympathetically and lovingly of the departed teacher and friend, and dwelt especially upon the victory which faith had brought him, even in his sad death. Dr. Leavitt, pastor of the church, portrayed his Christian character. President Eaton and Rev. H. W. Carter led in prayer. There were other addresses by Drs. Royce and Bradley. Favorite hymns were sung. Nearly the whole town, as well as all the students, were in the procession which followed the remains to the cemetery. Here, after brief services, they stood silent and sorrowful as the casket was lowered into the grave, feeling, as do all who knew this good man, that a prince in Israel has gone from us.

Amenities in Politics.

Sunday the friends of Mrs. Helen Gougar broke into the audience-room of the People's Institute, claiming that they had hired it in order that she might discuss the political situation and speak for free silver. Unfortunately for their claims, members of the Christian Church were present to assert their right to the building under a lease which covered it for every Sunday till May. The manager of the building was present and confirmed their statement. While they were discussing the matter on the sidewalk one man, bolder than the others, found entrance to the cellar and contrived to open the doors from the inside, so that the crowd could easily rush in and take possession of the room. Mrs. Gougar was thus enabled to speak and crowd the Christians out. She was bitter on ministers and all others who favor a sound currency and believe in paying their debts in gold.

One of the features of the present campaign is the curbstone meeting. One cannot go into the center of the city without seeing from five to ten of these gatherings, composed in almost all cases of men evidently out of employment, listening to those who are striving to enlighten them upon the issues of the day. The result of the registration Tuesday surpasses all anticipations. More than two hundred and ninety-three thousand people appeared at the registration places, a larger number than have ever registered in a single day in the city's history. Probably half as many more will register next Tuesday.

A Good Woman Gone.

Although long anticipated, the death of Mrs. Flora Carpenter, wife of the late I. N. Camp, inflicts another serious loss upon the Union Park Church and upon the benevolent circles of the city. Mrs. Camp was one of those rare women who seem to take an interest in all that concerns the kingdom of God. To all the objects of benevolence brought before the church she gave freely. She was especially interested in the home missionary work of the church, and was rarely absent from any of the meetings of the Ladies' Benevolent Society. Last Sunday she was in her wonted place and listened to a memorial discourse for her late husband. Tuesday she was able to receive callers and to ride out. Wednesday morning, at 6 o'clock, she fell asleep without a struggle and probably without pain. Feeble though she has been, her home has been a center of generous hospitality, and, by reason of the charming manners of its hostess, a delightful home to visit. A daughter and two sons, all married, and a host of friends are left to mourn her loss. Funeral services were held at the house Friday afternoon, Dr. Noble officiating.

As Seen from the West.

South Hadley should look upon the loss by fire of her main building as a providential call to supply its place as speedily as possible with a building far better adapted to the purposes to which it was set apart than the one which has been destroyed. Most of the Western graduates, to whom the old building was dear by reason of its associations, would favor re-erection on the old site, and so far as may be, on the old foundations. They believe that for $200,000 better accommodations can be secured for 400 young ladies under a single roof than in seven or eight cottages. It would certainly cost less to provide for them. While chapel, gymnasium and library might well be separate structures, and while kitchen, dining-room and laundry, if connected with the main building, should be fire proof, it would seem as if the first effort ought to be to put up an edifice which by its size and convenience would impress every visitor with the greatness of the institution which it represents. Still Western friends are willing to leave the decision of these matters to those who have them in charge.

What we started to write was that the losses to which South Hadley has been subjected are her appeal to the New England constituency from which she has hitherto received her main support. Although a generous friend who lives in the West has promised all told $100,000 to the institution, he feels that the larger portion of its endowments, as well as of the cost of its buildings and equipment, must be obtained at the East. In his judgment now is the time to emphasize the appeal for these endowments and buildings. There should be no delay. The $75,000 required to secure the $25,000 he has promised may be secured, he believes, by Jan. 1; then the institution will have the interest from the $200,000 it so greatly needs. It is the suggestion of Dr. Pearsons that a Sunday be set aside in the near future upon which in every church in New England the pastor or the preacher for that day be asked to give a history of the school founded by Mary Lyon, ask for a collection toward the completion of the endowment, and at the same time bring to the minds of wealthy hearers the demand for further buildings, larger endowments and more generous equipments if this Christian school is to remain one of the best in existence. New England has always responded promptly to appeals from the West. Why should she not now care for her own? Why should she not rise as if animated by a common impulse and on a single day and by a single gift put South Hadley on her feet?

We gladly second Dr. Pearsons's suggestion. We believe this unanimity of action can be brought about. Perhaps ministerial associations could take the matter in charge. Perhaps it would better be left to the trustees of South Hadley to select the Sunday, and through a circular, giving in brief the history of the institution which they serve and naming further sources of information, appeal to the churches of New England for the aid now required. We trust something will be done, and done soon, to render Dr. Pearsons's suggestion effective. The doctor has been in the college endowment business eight years. Not a single institution to which he has promised his aid has failed to obtain it. In some way he succeeds in imparting his own marvelous enthusiasm for the cause of Christian education to others, and in awakening in them a deeper interest than they ever before felt in the institutions whose needs he has pointed out. Perhaps the interest thus aroused in others is as valuable a gift as his money to the seminaries and colleges of which he has been a benefactor.

The Power of One Y. P. S. C. E.

Personal knowledge enables the writer to speak of the society of Christian Endeavor in the Union Park Church, Chicago. Here it has just completed ten years of life. It began with eighteen members and now has 189 on its roll in addition to associate and honorary members. Through its fourteen or fifteen committees it does an amount of aggressive Christian work which a few years ago not many churches would have thought it possible to undertake. From reports made at its recent annual banquet we learn that it raised for expenses and gifts to benevolent objects more than $1,000 and at the same time made regular contributions to church expenses. It is in fact a church itself. Were the Union Park Church to be blotted out, save as it is represented in the Endeavor Society, it would still be a strong church. Undoubtedly the same is true of the societies in the First Church, the Plymouth and, proportionately to the size of the organizations, in California Avenue, Warren Avenue, Lincoln Park and a dozen other churches in or near the city.

Chicago, Oct. 17. FRANKLIN.

The Revelations and Admonitions of the Campaign.

An Editorial Study of National Drifts and Tendencies.

There is no danger that the dramatic and spectacular phases of the present campaign will be overlooked. There is a danger that the underlying currents and counter currents, the hidden factors and conditions, will not be accurately diagnosed and understood. Important as it may be in the judgment of most of us to elect Mr. McKinley, it is equally desirable, even in the heat of the fight, to keep asking ourselves what is the meaning of the campaign from the point of view of the divine purposes. This, at least, is the deepest conviction left on my mind after a rapid circuit through a dozen of the great and pivotal States of the Union.

An Englishman needs to come to America and an Easterner needs to go West in order to grasp the reason for any doubt at all as to the issue of this campaign. The presumptive evidence has been from the start entirely against any measure of uncertainty. The country six months ago appeared to be wearied of the Democratic administration of the last four years. The Republicans, after selecting a popular and irreproachable standard bearer, entered upon the most energetic canvass they have ever waged. They have had ample financial resources for all the legitimate expenses of the campaign. The ablest orators have been enlisted. Nearly all the colleges in the land, and in fact the conservative forces of the nation, almost without exception, seem, for the moment at least, to have allied themselves with the Republican cause. Best of all the Republicans possess the argument that ought to appeal to honest, patriotic citizens who are supposably loath to repudiate their obligations and equally averse to entering upon a path which leads no one knows whither. The Democrats have had to face a bolt of apparently much greater proportions than that of the disaffected silver element hitherto in the Republican ranks.

Why, then, asks the distant English student of our affairs and the New Englander wedded to his traditional affiliations, should there be a moment of anxiety respecting the verdict of Nov. 3? Is it because we cherish an inherent distrust of Democracy? Is it because we fear that this country has become too heterogeneous and diverse in its interests and resources to continue longer as one self-governing republic? Do we see, lurking in the shadowy future, a proletariat, a commune, and, possibly, the grim specter of revolution?

These questions are put not in the spirit of an alarmist. But that is a provincial attitude which is either consciously or unconsciously indifferent to influences at work throughout the length and breadth of this great land, which influences perhaps one does not appreciate at anything like their true import until he journeys a thousand miles south or west from the borders of New England.

Such a change in environment reveals first of all the fact that we have in this country East as well as West, North as well as South, but far more proportionally in the West and South, a very appreciable number of crude, untrained, unthinking people. They are insensitive to moral obligations and ideals. They are the material on which demagogues ply their arts. Whether or not they were born on American soil they have hardly become imbued at all with distinctively American ideas. They are slow to respond to religious influences and indeed many of them have never been long enough within the range of such influences to have profited thereby. This class of persons constitute a special and tremendous problem for American Christianity. How is it going to moralize and spiritualize this element of our population? The vote of each of them counts for as much as that of Richard S. Storrs or of Charles Eliot Norton.

To be differentiated from such folk, but still to be reckoned with as an uncertain element in our political structure, is the restless, disappointed class, which knows, or thinks it knows, what it wants, but is too often incapable of nice discrimination respecting methods. The Western country is full of this class of persons. Their land booms have collapsed; their rosy dreams of immense fortunes have vanished. Perhaps they are the victims of some one else's avarice. Very few of them are content with their wages. Some of them have been in strike after strike, and the scars of their bitter and usually losing fight with the employers still remain. They are not patient enough to wait for the slow evolution of better things. They are eager for speedy and sweeping reform and radical readjustments.

Is there any justification for this spirit of unrest? It would be strange, indeed, if the methods by which the industry of this country has been carried on for the last quarter of a century had not been the occasion, if not the cause, of injustices and abuses. The unrestricted play of the competitive system appears to breed, even if it does not foster, trusts and monopolies. Certainly the recent rises in the price of coal have not helped the Republican cause with the laboring classes, who, by the way, do not take at all kindly Mark Hanna's prominence in the campaign. Said a hard-working, thrifty man in Northern Michigan to an acquaintance of mine the other day: "Talk as you please. Present industrial conditions have made me a beggar. A few years ago my partner and I were worth $150,000. Now we don't know whether we own the clothes we wear." It is not against the honest and honorable conduct of business that protest is made, but against rash speculation, against stock watering, against special privileges secured from legislative bodies by lobbying and bribery. The very progress of civilization itself, too, bringing in its train new implements and inventions, makes the immediate problem of bread and butter a still more difficult one to thousands. "What would bankers think," asked Dr. Hillis in his sermon in Chicago a fortnight ago, "what would lawyers think, if a single invention deprived at a blow thousands of them of daily employment?"

Wealth itself is, to some extent, responsible also for this spirit of discontent. The ostentation, the display, the extravagance, the hot race for social pre eminence which have marked the life of our great cities in recent years have emphasized the inequalities between man and man. A Vanderbilt wedding, for instance, with its prodigal scale of expenditure; an elaborate dinner, costing twenty-five dollars a plate; great estates and palaces, whose owners live in almost regal splendor—such things as these do not help forward Democratic government in this country. They give the impression that rich people have "money to burn," and the poor man asks, "If money is to be burned, why can't I have a hand in the bonfire?"

We are not to forget, either, that the sociological agitations of the past few years are bearing fruit. Our pulpits have been exalting the brotherhood of man. Our collegians have been establishing social settlements. Mr. Howells has been writing of Altruria. The impression that what once belonged exclusively to the few ought to be available to the many is finding its way to the laboring man's cottage. These ideas are in the atmosphere wherever we go, and they seem to be prophetic of change and readjustment.

Out of this national restlessness and turmoil do we see emerging anything that looks like stability? Let us go back a moment to the far-reaching purpose of almighty God. Would he not teach the American people by this campaign a few old, plain and simple truths? This nation needs to learn afresh Carlyle's doctrine of work, that no man can ever get something for nothing; that no man, be he rich or poor, ought to want to escape his share of honest daily labor with his hands or his brain. Moreover, our people must be made to understand that whatever equalizations may come in the evolution of society the rewards of labor can hardly help being proportioned to the quality and amount of the work expended.

Perhaps God intends also by this campaign to bring about greater sympathy between man and man, to draw all classes closer together and not to permit the gulfs to widen between the unfortunate and the favored, between the East and the West, between the North and the South. If we give patient heed, as we have been obliged to do in this campaign, to the expression of real or fancied grievances, if, in imagination, we exchange places with the man we criticise or who criticises us, we speed forward the day when we can truly say, "We be one people," as well as that still brighter day,

> When man to man the world o'er
> Shall brothers be for a' that.

And perhaps the most necessary and important lesson of all is that each one of us shall gain a fresh conception of what human life is and what it is for. I heard a brilliant sermon in Chicago, the other day, whose literary quality would have made it impressive had not the discourse proceeded on the assumption that a man's life consisteth in the abundance of the things he possesseth. That materialistic notion, in one form and another, has rooted itself in the popular thought to an alarming degree. It is not Christ's doctrine of human life and it must go down before the more faithful proclamation of his message in its entirety. It is, to be sure, of great consequence that we should have honest money, but the bulk of the people in this land have yet to learn what money is for, what it will do for them, what it will not do for them and what they may do with it.

To conclude, then, that the only thing at issue and worth straining every nerve for is the election of Mr. McKinley and to fail to take to heart the deeper lessons of this campaign is folly indeed. This nation will be saved from disruption by pure and undefiled religion and by that alone, as it controls and actuates the individual and crystallizes into wiser laws and a Christianized society. H. A. B.

THE AUTUMNAL ASSEMBLY OF BRITISH CONGREGATIONALISTS.

BY OUR ENGLISH EDITOR.

Not for many years have the autumnal meetings of the Congregational Union of England and Wales been so well attended and maintained so high a level of interest as those held Sept. 28–Oct. 2 in the thriving town of Leicester. Some 1,100 ministers and delegates were present from all parts of England and Wales, and the townsfolk also flocked to the gatherings.

One of the items always anticipated with considerable interest is the "union sermon." When, in 1877, Leicester was last visited this was delivered by Dr. Alexander McLaren, than whom Dr. Joseph Parker has just declared there is in the English-speaking pulpit no greater preacher. This year the honor fell upon Dr. P. T. Forsyth, who ministers to an influential congregation at Cambridge, many of his hearers being professors and students in the university. Taking for his text the words "Holy Father" [John 17: 11], he dwelt on the fatherhood of God as expressed by the cross in its relation to holiness. He said we could not put too much into that fatherhood, but we might put too little. It is more than the spiritualization of natural fatherhood; it is love suffering hate and redeeming it.

One of the most striking points in the sermon, which occupied nearly an hour in delivery, was that God had not laid great stress upon the price which the reconciliation cost. The New Testament had its fine reserve, but reserve was not denial. What engrossed Christ upon the cross was not man's need of him and his action upon men, but God's need of him and his action upon the holiness of God. The grace of God would be ungracious if he always dwelt upon the cost. He leaves men to find out in great measure what forgiveness cost; the doer of a great deed has the least to say about it. Christ came here to do something, not to say something. Dr. Forsyth's discourse will take a high place among the many fine utterances made on this occasion. Its thoroughgoing evangelicalism is an indication of the trend of modern preaching in England.

The Church Without a Pulpit was the title of the chairman's address, and Mr. Morlais Jones eloquently vindicated the place and power of preaching. It was a fine example of Welsh oratory and a veritable prose poem. "Although the workmen of London read the labor newspapers," said Mr. Jones, "they assemble in their thousands in Battersea Park, where John Burns has his pulpit. So the gospel is never complete until the message is 'shining in the preacher's face and palpitating in his voice.'" In the characteristic passage, which evoked enthusiasm, the president said: "The man is never in the printed page. The book is only the ghost of the message. I revel in books, feast upon books, love the feel of books, thank God for books, but I want more than books. I want the living man; I want the preacher."

Speaking of the preacher's work in bringing about the redemption of earth, and having referred in scathing terms to the Armenian massacres, Mr. Jones declared that when we heard nine months ago of the possibility of war between England and the United States we were stupefied. It would have been civil war, war between mother and daughter, and would have done more to discredit the gospel than all the skeptical and infidel books that have been written for a century. For a moment it was the darkness of total eclipse, and we were not out of the shadow of the eclipse yet. He wished the two great nations, "the nations God has appointed to be the teachers and leaders of the race in all that is highest," would show that their allegiance to the Prince of Peace is no hollow mockery, and that war between them could never be. Amid ringing applause Mr. Jones declared: "We can never again imbrue our hands in one another's blood. Hideous war, ugly fiend, the arbitrament of fools, be gone! Thou shalt tempt us no more forever!" It was evident from the way this passage, delivered with considerable energy, was received that it accurately interpreted the feelings of the crowded assembly. The address took an hour and twenty five minutes to deliver, and was an illustration of the truth that the man who keeps away from the crowd not infrequently has a message for the crowd.

As the appointed representative of Congregationalism in Scotland Dr. John Hunter, Glasgow, stated that people are leaving the Free Churches of that land for Episcopacy, because in the former the standard of worship is deplorably low. This remark elicited a hearty "Hear! hear!" from Dr. Barrett, who on the following morning, when he read a paper on Congregational Worship, himself had an opportunity of enforcing his well known views on the conduct of public worship. Having stated that spirit is before form, the Norwich pastor urged the adoption of some form of liturgical service as likely to develop the devotional element in worship. There are, said Dr. Barrett, two classes of Congregationalists, those to whom richness of ritual would be a hindrance and those who would worship more joyously and spiritually with sweet and lovely forms, which would remind them, not of the holiness of beauty, but of the beauty of holiness. These opposite schools ought to meet each other with tenderness, charity and scrupulous respect. Sacrifice ought not to be all on one side. It was a curious anomaly that the very churches most fiercely intolerant of sacerdotalism were often the most unwilling for any voice to be heard in public prayer save that of the minister. He would not exclude free prayer —he did not believe that Congregational churches would live for fifty years without it—but he urged the adoption of some form of intercessory prayers and the recital of the beatitudes. Dr. Berry indorsed Dr. Barrett's remarks and advocated, among other things, the wearing of a gown in the pulpit.

The foreign missionary valedictory meeting was impressive and inspiriting. So crowded was the large hall that an overflow gathering had to be held elsewhere. Nearly 5,000 people were present at both meetings. Great enthusiasm was aroused by brief addresses from several of the twenty-six outgoing missionaries, who told with charming simplicity and fine feeling either, in the case of returning missionaries, the story of their work or, in the case of new missionaries, the method of their call and their hopes. The valedictory prayer was offered by Dr. Goodrich, Manchester, and the address by Dr. Berry. He was in one of his most eloquent moods, and told the missionaries that they were fortunate in the time of their going, as the churches in England were attaining a simpler and ampler faith in the saving grace of Christ, and were feeling the first throbs and movements of a new and grander evangelical revival. They were recovering, if they had not recovered, a new confidence and certainty in Christ and his gospel. During the last twenty years they had been in conflict with doubt and unbelief, with sorrows and questionings, but now it was his profound belief that materialism as a philosophy had been conquered by a reinterpretation of Jesus. This remark was received with much applause.

As a consequence, proceeded Dr. Berry, the Free Churches have recovered their missionary convictions and are recovering their missionary interest. The ethnic heresy is dead. It is not new ethical teaching that is needed, not a teacher, but a Saviour. People are not dying for new ideas or ideals either in the Orient or in the Occident, but are dying for want of him who alone has the power to forgive sins and to give life. "God be with you till we meet again," was sung with much pathos and evident feeling by the audience, which then dispersed inspired and hopeful.

A conference on the education question showed that this battle is not yet over. Fear was expressed by the speakers that "the dead might rise again." In the able hands of Dr. Guinness Rogers a resolution relating to the Armenian massacres was effectively dealt with. He said that the extent of the present wickedness paralyzed the power of expression, and they could not help being moved to the righteous indignation which the writers of the imprecatory Psalms evidently felt. He confessed that he could not understand the ambassadors of the Powers standing by while a miserable caricature, not of a monarch but of a man, grinned at them and did his devilish work. The cabinets of Europe must recognize that they had to reckon not with Bismarckian organs, but with the Christian conscience of England; and surely that assembly of all others might stand up before the world and in God's name protest, and, looking up to God, ask that their protest should not be in vain and that this deviltry should end. The demand should be for the rule of the Turk to cease forever. When the resolution was put the whole assembly sprang to their feet and in this spontaneous way expressed their passionate indignation. Miss Frances E. Willard was announced to speak at the young people's meeting, and most keen was the disappointment when Mr. Woods read a letter stating that she could not be present as she and Lady Henry Somerset were at Marseilles assisting the Armenian refugees. "It would be impossible," wrote Miss Willard, "to intimate even the tenderness we feel towards these patient, grateful, heartbroken Christian refugees. God help us!"

The meetings as a whole take rank with the most successful ever held by the union. As seen at Leicester, British Congregationalism is healthy and hopeful.

Charity Chance.*

A Serial Story by Walter Raymond.

XV.

AS NURSERY GOVERNESS.

A LONG room covered from floor to ceiling with a yellow, varnished, washable paper, except in one corner, where delinquent finger nails had picked bare patches before Charity came. How the wall glistened behind the solitary gas-jet jutting out above the mantelpiece! The flame was naked, the children having long ago smashed the globe, which had not been replaced. And it had to be kept low, being liable to flare and run wild when turned up. But everything in the place was bare except the spiritless little fire, fast sinking to dust and ashes behind the bars of an iron fireguard. Maria, the housemaid, had forgotten to bring up more coal.

It was late at night. The children were long ago in bed and asleep, and Charity had been sitting up at work. Her supper, sent upstairs on a tray, remained untouched upon the little inkstained table by her side, just where Maria had banged it down some hours before, when she flounced in and flounced out, slamming the door behind her as a protest against waiting upon anybody who got no more wages than herself. That was the knell of parting day. Nobody ever came near Charity after that.

Dispirited and exhausted she leaned back in her chair. The light glared upon her face. From the opposite wall a map of the world in hemispheres stared down at her, shining and binocular. She lifted a pile of papers from her lap and placed them on the table.

"How poor it all is!" she cried, and burst into tears.

The ugliness of the place was as remote from her mind as the antipodes. It was the last moan of a struggling swimmer who, overcome with fatigue, consents to sink. The whole course of her miserable existence since she entered the service of Mrs. Cornelius Porter passed through her mind.

She had now been a nursery governess for months and was accustomed to her duties. At first, to her inexperience, the thing was hopeless. But from the day of her arrival she grappled with her difficulties with the grim fierceness of despair. It seemed to her that if she failed to fill that place there was no other for her in the world. And a quite extravagant success rewarded her efforts. Before the second week was out Mrs. Cornelius Porter, a middle aged matron, well nourished and of the finest Britannia metal, intimated to Miss Chance that with a little closer attention to the darning she was likely to give every satisfaction.

They were a prosaic race, these Porters, and their days were all alike.

They breakfasted at half-past seven in order that Mr. Porter might catch a train. Upon this point Mrs. Porter waxed sentimental to the verge of poetry. If the children were not there they would never see their father, and that was so sad. Daily at this hour, expectant and somewhat overawed, they were ranged around the table. At a quarter before eight Mr. Porter appeared, late, hurried and inclined to be irritable. He glanced hastily at the great gilt timepiece upon the mantelshelf.

"NOW DO YOU REALLY LIKE CLASSICAL MUSIC, MISS CHANCE."

"Eight minutes and a half," he muttered, morosely, "if the clock is right."

"The clock is always right," retorted his wife; and it was a dogma for which she would have died.

"Always?"

"Always!"

He swallowed his boiling coffee, bolted his roll, flashed across the little domestic heaven like a meteor and was gone.

A nervous, sallow little man with a long black beard who returned at eight in the evening. That was all Charity knew, for only once had she been privileged to speak to him.

"You will take supper with us tonight, Miss Chance," exclaimed Mrs. Porter on the afternoon of Charity's arrival, "and see Mr. Porter. Afterward, perhaps you will play us something. We are both anxious about the children's music. You noticed music essential, I have no doubt. O! and I hope you don't mind making your own bed. Any other little thing I will mention as it arises."

The girl was nervous and uneasy, and the ordeal of playing haunted her through a silent, melancholy meal. It was to be a test of her ability, and, feeling it to be such, when the time came she played with care. The familiar sonata was like company to her in the strange place, but she rose from the piano dissatisfied and in doubt.

"Now do you really like classical music, Miss Chance?" asked Mr. Porter, in that confidential tone which invites and deserves a candid reply.

Charity pledged her word to it.

"Well, I don't know," he reflected. "I like something a little gay. What's the use of music except to take you out of yourself after a day's work and 'liven you up a bit? Now classical music always makes me feel unwell."

"We have a little music on Sunday afternoons, Miss Chance," put in Mrs. Porter, in fulfillment of her promise to mention little things that might arise. "Mr. Porter is at home, and it is nice for the children to come down. Now you would like to go upstairs."

Charity did not see much of Mr. Porter on those occasions. She played hymn tunes by the hour whilst the children sang. But the head of the house, hidden in a silk handkerchief, reposed on a red sofa cushion and restfully slept.

Charity had never seen people like these. Sometimes their destitution in the perception of everything that made life beautiful to her was more pitiful than the sight of poverty. The atmosphere of the house oppressed her like a nightmare. The children overwhelmed her with a weight of care under which she could scarcely breathe. They broke everything. They hurt themselves and each other. They quarreled and cried. They were more mischievous than goblins without the mirth. And when she had struggled with all her might the good will of Mrs. Porter came like a last straw added to her load.

With the desire to be kind that most respectable matron became inquisitive.

"And how many years did you live with Miss Graham?" "And where is your own home, Miss Chance?" were amongst the friendly inquiries with which poor Charity was plied.

For some time the discomforts of her new position had no power to wound her deeply. She hardened herself against everything with the great thought that Prentice had promised to write. As the days passed and nothing came she became more wildly expectant. She studied the table of "inward mails" and listened for the postman's knock. Surely it would come now. Other letters delivered at Babblecombe were sent on, but the one so madly desired was not amongst them. She became a prey to all the fears and doubts that love can conjure out of longing and disappointment. He had changed toward her, found out her story and changed before she went to him. How else should one so emotional, so sensitive to the slightest word, remain unmoved by her deep humiliation? She might write to him under cover to Messrs. Pickering & Co., his publishers. She fetched his book to find the address upon the title-page. Then she grew proud again. He had parted from her with no word of love or help or kindness. He was angry with her boldness in rushing to him so eagerly, and disgust upon the instant changed so sensitive a man. Or perhaps prudence had made him silent. He was poor, had not means to marry, and in a calmer moment became wise. With that thought again she loved him tenderly. He would never change, and her heart was his through all eternity.

*Copyrighted, 1896, by Walter Raymond.

At last the hope of hearing from him waned. Then, in the after supper solitude, she fell to taking up the threads of her old life. But the strands were all raveled and tangled. Nothing remained unbroken but the slender story she had tried to weave in the leisure of her girlish happiness, and that lay at the bottom of the great black trunk, untouched by fate or fortune. She thought of it and brought it to the light.

Now she read with other eyes and saw with deeper insight. What she had written was but idle fancy-work beside the gorgeous fabric woven in the loom of human life. It was a village tragedy, and the story held and fascinated her as at first. But when she wrote she had not understood. Passion and shame had come, crushing self-abasement had fallen upon her since then. A hurricane had swept away the rose clad walls that sheltered whilst they shut her in from the world. And she stood alone—nothing, unless she could be something of herself. A hope, familiar of old in the dappled sunlight of her hillside bower, revived within her. She would make something of that story. In growing excitement she rose and paced the narrow little schoolroom. Her brain was in a ferment, her soul on fire. Yes, she, the nameless, base-born foundling, would win herself a name.

Not a moment must be lost. She drew a chair to the table and sat down before the sheets, all faultlessly copied in the days when time was plentiful and she had little to do.

The opening chapter was poor indeed. But she would improve that. Her fingers burned to begin at once. She fetched the ink and, pen in hand, set to work to read. All night through she went on, scoring, interlining and blotting out until only here and there the girlish penmanship, like the pale face of a prisoner condemned to death, peered through the prison bars of her ruthless alterations.

She laid aside the pen and burst into tears to see what she had done. So this, like all the rest, was nothing. It would be far easier to begin afresh. With a heavy heart she put it all away until another night. But, from that time forth, the expectation of these silent hours triumphed over the drudgery of the day, and she was never lonely and never without hope.

She worked with such eagerness that the story grew apace. It held her imagination with a force so vivid and irresistible that her real life passed like a dream and this phantasy assumed the boldness of reality. It was interwoven with her deepest emotions; not that she confided to the page the secrets of her heart, but the romance of it glowed with her passion for Prentice, and the tenderness was a recollection of her love for the little cripple, and to the misery her own pride and shame gave bitterness.

Last night, with a thrill of joy, she finished. Tonight she had read it from beginning to end. Now she turned round to her dusty little fire, and in spite of herself the words sobbed up from the bottom of her heart, "How poor it all is!"

In her enthusiasm she had hoped so much. It was to redeem her from drudgery, to make her worthy of Prentice, to prove the little cripple's kindness not all in vain. She had resolved to send it to Prentice's publisher. But what avail to send it anywhere? No one would look at it. It was poorer than before, and with this hopeless difference that then she altered without hesitation and now, for the life of her, she did not know what more to do.

Nothing more could be done, and she cast the papers from her in disgust. Suddenly the door opened; the portly figure of Mrs. Cornelius Porter, magnificent in a brocaded evening wrap, sailed into the room.

"You are sitting up very late, Miss Chance," she said, severely. "I saw the light in your window as we came in, and Maria tells me you always sit up half the night. It is quite impossible you should do your daily duty unless you retire at a reasonable hour and take proper rest. I must request that by eleven, so long as you remain in this house—not later than eleven—your gas shall always be turned out."

There was an assumption of superiority in the tone which Charity had never before noticed. Vulgar the woman had always been, but good-natured enough and even kind. Now she stood there large and arrogant. The very glance which she threw down upon the girl was an insult.

"I had something to do for myself and no other time to do it," returned Charity, coldly. "But now it is finished."

The answer sounded rebellious and did not please Mrs. Porter.

"I think I ought to tell you, Miss Chance," she went on, with the satisfaction which a small soul lodged in a comfortable body takes in the contemplation of its own virtue, "that I have heard a great deal about you today. A gentleman who visits Babblemouth regularly on business has told us all. He says you were the talk of the town. He even saw you himself at Swindon Station."

"He is mistaken," interrupted the astonished girl. "I have never in my life been to Swindon."

"At Swindon Station," repeated Mrs. Porter, with louder firmness. "In what class of company I should be ashamed to say. You can read for yourself in yesterday's paper. Then no further comment of mine will be required. I need not add that you can scarcely expect to retain a home in a respectable family."

With this withering sarcasm, Mrs. Cornelius Porter left Charity to her perplexity. There was more of Cornelius than Porter in the dignity of her bearing as she passed out of the schoolroom door.

"Swindon Station," the girl kept repeating. "What does she mean by Swindon Station?"

If an apparition had broken in upon her midnight vigil, she could not have been more bewildered. An awful suspicion crossed her mind that an evening's entertainment must have resulted in the incoherency of Mrs. Porter. The thought was so horrible that for the moment Charity forgot she was again a waif. Anything to get away from such people and such a place. In desperation she got up, packed the rewritten story, poor as it was, and addressed it.

She left it ready upon the table. In the morning she rose earlier than usual and ran out with it to the post. Her heart sank within her as the packet fell with a thud into the letter-box.

But Mrs. Porter's words, "You can read for yourself in yesterday's paper," kept ringing in her ears as she hurried back to the house. She would go into the dining-room and see what that meant. The fire was as yet unlighted. She was fortunate enough to rescue the newspaper from the scuttle of Maria, and she glanced at the headlines as she carried it upstairs.

The Prentice Case.

Breathless she stopped beside the landing-window to read. It was a suit brought against the poet by his wife.

"Married! Impossible! A lie begotten of envy to besmirch the reputation of a man of genius."

With this cry of passionate and indignant denial she threw down the paper in angry refusal to learn evil of one she loved. It was like listening to a tale behind his back. Then that was why she had not heard. How could he write under the weight of this great trouble? How deeply this must cut his pride! Yet she must read to learn how much he suffered—to hear his refutation and delight in his triumph.

She picked up the newspaper and carried it to her schoolroom. There was still time to spare before the day began, and she glanced down the long columns and eagerly turned to read. But as she went on she grew sick at heart. The print became dim before her eyes. It was a tale of heartless desertion, and in spite of herself the woman's misery forced itself upon her sympathies.

"But they were unhappy, unsuited to each other," she cried, in contradiction to herself. "It was pitiable, but they were wise to part."

Then Prentice came into the witness-box bantering with counsel. He treated the matter lightly and was witty merely for effect. He who had talked so sadly of human woe, as if the weight of all humanity oppressed his soul, went through the tragedy of his own making grinning like a comedian. The words of Miss Graham came back to her—that underneath the folly of genius was soul or passion or a great heart. And this man had none of these. Her illusion was dispelled. She could not look at this and longer believe in him.

And for him she had forfeited an affection which had enriched her life. Then his love was all the world, but now, in the moment of her disenchantment, how she longed for the tenderness of her one friend—the friend who had given everything—the benefactress who, deceived and disappointed, turned away her face in shame. She wanted to make amends. If she might only say, "You were right, but I knew no better then," and feel just once, in understanding and sympathy, the pressure of the little cripple's cheek against her hair, she could take heart against the world's vulgarity. There came to her an impulse to go back—just for one day—to give her gratitude expression and implore forgiveness—

The shutting of a door at the other end of the passage broke in upon her thoughts. In a few weeks she would be homeless. It would look like beggary even to write to Babblemouth at this moment. And she was only Charity Chance, after all. She hastily laid aside the paper. She had loitered too long.

It was now the early spring, and Charity once more found herself face to face with the problem of how to earn her bread. She was to leave in the summer. "That will be the most convenient, and give both parties time to look around," explained Mrs. Porter, thinking only of herself. "And anything that I can say as to your competency, Miss Chance, I shall be very pleased, I am sure." At once the girl began to scan and answer advertisements. But the time was too far off, and no one ever applied to Mrs. Porter.

Now that the manuscript was gone, her evenings were lonely indeed. The little group of phantoms vanished from her hearth. The story faded into the forgotten past. She had no hope that any one would print it, but to write had been a relief, and out of the ferment of her emotions a new fable began to take shape in her imagination. Then, again, she forgot her troubles in work.

Yet her mind was alert with expectation. She looked for no great tidings; nevertheless, as days grew into weeks and no answer came, she became conscious of the depth of her disappointment. She began to fear.

One evening, having laid down the supper tray, Maria loitered.

"There's a letter, Miss Chance, came last week. It was left in the kitchen. I meant to bring it up, and then I forgot it. I hope it isn't any difference, I'm sure."

Fully determined to demean herself no further, Maria withdrew in haste.

The publisher's device was upon the envelope. So there was to be a verdict, after all. Now that the time was come, although she had no hope, her agitation was so intense that her trembling fingers could hardly break the seal.

Glancing over the letter her eye caught in snatches the whole pith of the matter.

"Prepared to undertake the publication of the same . . . with an author's first work it is not possible to offer . . . royalty of ten per cent., upon which we would pay a small sum—say £20—upon account."

A commonplace communication, sure enough, yet one which read with all the wealth and wonder of an Arabian romance. Twenty pounds! She had rewritten the book in six weeks. She would finish the new one by June. Twenty and twenty make forty, and then her stipend. She would walk out into the world worth fifty pounds. Then she would take a room, and write, and write.

But the latter portion of the letter was still unread.

"Should you accept these terms, please reply without delay, as we should like to print at once, to publish in our series during May."

And a week had elapsed! They might refuse to stand to their offer now. At once she wrote a letter of acceptance loaded with apologies. They replied with a printed contract. Then proofs showered down upon her. Revises followed like the April rain. At last came that early copy of the first book, a joy like the gladness of a new spring. She turned it over in her hand, and a thrill of pride leapt within her bosom. She, the nameless waif, was about to justify her being.

(To be concluded.)

WASHINGTON'S TRIBUTE TO CLARA BARTON AND BISHOP KEANE.

BY LILLIAN CAMP WHITTLESEY.

Washington feels the tension of these days preceding the election as no other city can. Here men as well as women have no franchise, so while all the rest of the country is in a fever of excitement, we sit still and shiver helplessly, waiting a verdict that will affect us vitally, for all interests here are connected directly or indirectly with the Government. Though debarred from showing any lively and practical interest in politics, two large and recent gatherings show that Washington people have an enthusiasm for philanthropy and Christian education coupled with good citizenship.

The reception to Miss Clara Barton and the testimonial mass meeting to Bishop Keane occurred on the same evening, Oct. 8, the day set apart by some of the Chicago clergy as a day of fasting and prayer for the country. On Sunday morning it did not seem incongruous to have a general invitation to Miss Barton's reception follow the usual notice of the prayer meeting, and it was most fitting to adjourn a missionary concert, which included prayer for our own as well as other lands, to the Shoreham, where the reception was in progress. Flags and palms decorated the hallways and parlor and a band at the foot of the stairs played patriotic airs of all nations. Delegations from the Loyal Legion, the Grand Army, the W. C. T. U., the Legion of Loyal Women, the Federation of Women's Clubs, the Daughters of the Revolution, etc., together with the citizens generally, were glad of the privilege to welcome home this noble woman whom so many people in this and other lands have cause to bless. Though always accessible in her own home, which is the headquarters of the Red Cross in America, Miss Barton rarely appears in public, and her consent to this testimonial was appreciated.

Miss Barton is of medium hight, and has strong features, framed in bands of iron-gray hair. She wore a rich gown of plain black velvet, with some choice lace. Upon her bodice were fastened some of the badges of the societies represented at the reception and one or two of the beautiful jewels with which she has been from time to time presented. The weight of nearly seventy years, the woes of countless hundreds, her own battle with illness, have brought to her a gracious gentleness of manner. Her voice is low and pleasant, and she immediately puts one at ease in her presence. Yet it was with almost a feeling of awe that I looked into those steady eyes and thought of the scenes they had witnessed. She smiled so frequently and looked so happy that every one said, "How well Miss Barton is looking," but a second glance showed the lines and hollows wrought by the sympathy and exertions of the past eight months. Mrs. Logan stood near her, and Dr. Hubbell and Mr. Wistar, who accompanied her to Turkey, were in the receiving line. Two hours of handshaking were followed by a banquet, where the tables were laid in the form of a double red cross, with long streamers of red down the center. Miss Barton, of course, had the place of honor, with the Secretary of the Navy and Commodore Ross on either side. After the feast letters were read from the Secretary of State, Postmaster General Wilson, the Japanese minister and others, and several addresses were made.

Mrs. Logan is always prominent in any event that links her to the days when her illustrious husband did such fine service for his country. She is a large woman of striking presence, and always wears her white hair in a high pompadour roll. She is a good speaker. Miss Barton seemed deeply moved by all the kind words, and when the time came for her to speak she briefly acknowledged them and the fact that such an honor had been extended in her own home.

The other meeting voiced Washington's regret at the retirement of Bishop Keane. As priest in the Catholic church, then as rector of the new Catholic University, he has been popular, and his summary deposition from the latter office by the pope has caused much feeling. It was rumored that his own liberal views, together with jealousy on the part of the conservative wing of the Romish Church, were the reasons for this surprising action. But the presence and words of the president of the Georgetown College seems to refute one of these ideas. Romanists and Protestants, churchmen and laymen filled the platform and all available space in the hall, and one laudatory address followed another till it seemed as though wherever he might be—he was not there—the bishop's ears must have been as purple as the robe he so often wears.

The address of President Rankin of Howard University was followed with close attention, for it was a matter of interest what so prominent a Congregationalist might say of so eminent a Catholic. There was no uncertain sound in the earnest words of President Rankin. He spoke of the philanthropy of Bishop Keane, of his ardent efforts in the cause of temperance and his defense of our common schools. He referred to his intense Americanism and his endeavor to bring Catholicism into harmonious relations with American institutions. The president's remarks upon the Catholic Church were received with outbursts of applause. Referring to the fact that exception is taken to the Catholic type of instruction and consolation given in some institutions, he said:

> If government be driven from assisting eleemosynary institutions because the daily devotions, or the consolations to the sick and dying are Christian, of whatever type, in order to be consistent, it must forego Christian services in its own halls of legislation, in the army and navy; it must bury its dead heroes without a word of prayer. I believe it should extend the ægis of its protection over Christianity as such, whatever the type, as England does, treating Christianity as a part of the common law of the land.

At the close of the address he said: "I have great faith in the Roman Catholic Church. America is the new world and all things American take on the new world type, why not Christ's kingdom? President Whitman of Columbian University spoke of Bishop Keane as an educator, of his high scholarship and lofty thought. The whole demonstration was a most remarkable affair and a high tribute to Bishop Keane. The many speeches from priests, college presidents, scientists, business men and others closed with the adoption of complimentary resolutions.

The Home

OCTOBER.

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN.

My pulses throb today
With the wild impulse of October's wine.
On craggy mountain summits far away
I see the warm sun shine.

The soft wind pipes and sings,
Making sweet music through the forest aisles.
Life and desire and joy its coming brings,
And grief and care beguiles.

The river laughs and leaps
Down shining granite ledges wet with spray
To the wide emerald pool that ever sleeps,
Lulled by its song all day.

I see the forests wait
In gorgeous robes of crimson and of green,
Strewing their secret ways with royal state,
Expectant of their queen.

Ah! why should eyes that see
The splendor of thy liveries on the hill
With baffled longing watch and wait for thee,
And miss thy presence still?

Ah! why should hearts that yearn,
Thrilled with the magic of thy festal wine,
See all around the festal fires that burn,
And miss thy form divine—

Crowned with the ruby crown,
Bearing the golden scepter in her hand,
With queenly eyes of beauty looking down
Upon a subject land?

For they who follow bring
Lean, empty hands and meager, pining eyes,
Harsh winds that mourn or shout, but cannot sing,
'Neath gray and frosty skies.

Yet, if our feeble sight
May never see thy form with vision clear,
Still crown thy changing days with keen delight,
Sweet mistress of the year!

MRS. WILLIAM McKINLEY.

In view of the interest which attaches itself, pending election, to the wives of the presidential candidates, we summarize this week a few facts concerning Mrs. McKinley, condensed from an admirable sketch of her in Harper's Bazar of Oct. 3.

Her maiden name was Ida Saxton and she was well-born, her maternal ancestors being Germans, and her father's progenitors having fought in the wars of 1812 and the Revolution. She was graduated from Brook Hall Seminary, Media, Pa., in 1869 and supplemented the course of study with a period of foreign travel. Reared in the Presbyterian faith Miss Saxton transferred her relationship to the Methodists for reasons that involve a bit of delightful romance. She was a teacher in her own Sunday school at a time when Major McKinley was superintendent of the Methodist school, and in going back and forth to their respective duties their paths often crossed. One day, when they lingered in talk, the Major said: "I am tired of these partings here, you going one way and I another. I think that hereafter we should both go the same way together." The ready reply, "I think so, too," led the way to a happy marriage, the twenty-fifth anniversary of which was appropriately celebrated last January, in the same house where they began housekeeping.

Into their ideal home soon came a series of crushing bereavements which so far shattered Mrs. McKinley's health that she never fully recovered. For months life hung in the balance and for twenty years she has not walked without assistance. Within four years death visited the family circle no less than seven times, removing, among others, two precious little children, both girls. But the gold of character was refined by these repeated trials and they made conspicuous a beautiful devotion on the part of her husband with which only the most stringent official duties, as congressman or governor, were allowed to interfere.

In tracing some of the factors which have contributed to Mr. McKinley's success in public life the writer in the Bazar lays weight, and justly, upon the influences which have grown out of this home atmosphere, purified by love and sacrifice. Freed from the distractions of society, his wife has been his constant adviser and confidante. His aged mother, now in her eighty-eighth year, is also a member of the household and an interested spectator of many of the politico-social functions now going on in the modest home at Canton. Fortunately, Mrs. McKinley's health is far better than in former years, and she is able to appear with her husband on these occasions. All who come in contact with her note her composure, her natural ease and dignity and especially her great fondness for children.

Such are some of the elements of femininity that encompass the life of the Republican nominee for the presidency, and it is gratifying to find that the hidden springs in his home are fed from the highest sources of Christian faith and service.

PERFECT PEACE.

BY MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Amid all our perturbations and agitations the old promise holds good in the experience of those who live daily by the word of our God, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Many are the temptations which come to us from without and from within to discount the promises and to take with reservations of our own the literal words of the Lord as given us in the Bible. But when we have the gift of the childlike heart, the utter unquestioning confidence of the little ones at our knees, we do not ask doubtingly or explain anything by human reason; we simply reach out the hand and take the bounty offered, and the name of that bounty is perfect peace. "My peace," said our dear Lord, "I give unto you. Not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

One of the commonest causes of lack of peace in this world is insufficiency of income. The householder whose expenses, without fault of his own, have increased, while his salary or his profits have lessened in the same proportion, finds the cup at his lips very bitter, and is apt to think scornfully of those who can be acquiescent in such a state of affairs. Often he not only works harder and retrenches more, which is all right, but also frets and worries and wears himself out, which is all wrong. The gift of perfect peace is not intended by the Lord to accompany only riches and ease and plenty. It is meant for the woman with a houseful of small children to support, for the man who is growing old and infirm, for the citizen whose taxes are a weary burden, for the farmer with the menace of the mortgage that may be foreclosed. In every circumstance, in every conjunction of adverse conditions, there is one rule: Pray without ceasing, do your very best and wait God's leadings in perfect peace. With the sea before them and the Egyptians at their back, the word of the Almighty Jehovah to Moses was, "Say unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." God is always strong enough to supplement our weakness, and "when he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble?"

Another very natural provocation to restless anxiety is in our proper ambition and thoughtful forecast for our children. Many a Christian lies awake at night wearily meditating on the future of sons and daughters for whom he would give his life, so dearly he loves them. How will they turn out, what provision can he make for them, will they marry to advantage, or wreck their prospects by some undesirable connection, will their choice of a profession be wise, will this be, or shall that occur, and the parent grows wan and ages early in a solicitude which actually incapacitates him for enjoying the children while he has them under his care. I have seen the mother of a lovely little boy of five greatly disturbed over his probable career at college, certainly a dozen years off. We all know how deep the grief and sorrow may be over a false step made by a child, not a criminal step, but simply an error of judgment. In every such case, if the right relation be maintained between the Master above and the disciple below, there will be a cessation of strife and fear and a realization of peace. "Thy peace shall be like a river."

Living with the uncongenial is another fruitful occasion of annoyance and querulous unrest. Shall serenity be ours when we dwell in the house with a kinswoman or a neighbor whose "ways" are incessantly irritating, whose point of view is as opposite to ours as pole to pole, whose presence ruffles us, and whose contrariness (it is always hers, not ever ours) is something beyond description? Yes, if we take the daily discipline as our Father's gift we shall find sweetness in the most thorny rose, and day by day peace will be our portion.

So, too, in sorrow. "There should be no greater comfort to Christian persons than to be made like unto Christ, by suffering patiently adversities, troubles and sicknesses. For he himself went not up to joy, but first he suffered pain; he entered not into his glory before he was crucified. So truly our way to eternal joy is to suffer here with Christ."

If this be our creed, can we ever fail to have peace?

When obstacles and trials seem Like prison walls to be,
I do the little I can do,
And leave the rest to Thee.

"Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you."

If gleiu' aye is blest,
Happy ye maun be!
If takin's friendship's test,
Grace be gie'n to me,
Your gifts in friendship's name
To tak' and feel nae shame!
—D. M. Henderson.

The most trivial tasks can be accomplished in a noble, gentle, regal spirit, which overrides and puts aside all petty, paltry feelings, and which elevates all little things.—Dean Stanley.

A TRAMP IN DICKENS LAND.

BY REV. CHARLES R. SEYMOUR.

In setting out for the bridge over the Medway it is hard to resist The Bull Inn, situated in Rochester's main thoroughfare, for most people know that upstairs in this ancient hostelry is a large oblong room where the Pickwick Club met. It is in this room that the doughty chief is represented in a somewhat famous painting standing in a chair addressing a picturesque group of associates. Here it was that Mr. Tupman and Mr. Jingle attended the ball, the latter wearing Mr. Winkle's coat. But, the morning being cool, the pedestrian does not stop for inside views. He pushes on over the bridge into Strood and takes a brisk pace through a long street of small shops and up a considerable rise to a fork in the road. Not to lose time he inquires of two women sitting on a curbing the direct way to Gad's Hill. As they hesitate, he turns to accost another woman coming at a rapid pace downward. Her reply is most cordial: "Gow straight on as straight as ever ye can gow." And on the traveler goes to find after a half-hour that he is wrong.

There is gain with the loss, however, for a tramp is met who volubly sets his new made acquaintance right and volunteers a fund of information about the entire region. Then, by an adroit change of theme, he asks for a "trifle." An extra mile, a turn or two and the proper road is reached. And what a road—hard, smooth and white without dust! There happens to be a sidewalk, but the road is preferred. Green hawthorn hedgerows are on either hand. Meadows well sprinkled with elms and grain fields stretch away to the horizon. Skylarks rise into the blue, giving their songs the effect of sweet diminuendos. Under the circumstances walking is keen enjoyment and rapid without effort.

Two miles from Rochester on high land stands the brick house which was the home of Charles Dickens. Opposite is the Sir John Falstaff Inn, a little beyond which are two ancient cedars. While we linger in disappointment with the unsatisfactory front of the Dickens house, due to the contracted yard with trees, a stranger issues by a path and conveys the information that the interior cannot be visited, but that the farmer's wife may give hints as to a better view. She is sought out and her invitation to "go up the lane" is instantly obeyed. From a point fifty yards to the rear the poetry of the situation is revealed. There stands in clearness the long, two-storied, red brick house with a gable roof. Dormer windows afford light for third floor rooms. Chimneys with pots rise near either end. On the right, closely joined to the house, is a conservatory in glass. One easily imagines the novelist taking comfort from his back windows. There is a garden, of course, then a tennis or bowling lawn, where James T. Fields tells us that Dickens, Wilkie Collins and himself lay on the grass after dinner. Beyond this is a stretch of pasture, further off are grain fields, the distant view ending with a line of hills. A long look, a deep impression and we turn and press towards Gravesend.

The way now leads downward. Highly cultivated lands fall away to the sea level in marshes bordered yonder by the Thames. The beauties of Kentish scenery lie all around. Here a manor-house, there, half a mile distant, a castle ruin, and hard by that a strip of woodland, grace the landscape. We halt by a stone post and read, "26 miles to London Bridge, 3 miles to Rochester." Although the broad river with its shipping lures us we turn to the left towards Cobham Park, for we must keep in close touch with the great writer today. Soon the road borders the estate owned by Earl Darnley. The scenes of woodland, pasture and meadow are varied and picturesque to loveliness. Cattle graze in the foreground, farther on wheatfields wave in the breeze and in the distance a herd of deer is espied. Two famous rows of limes guarding an avenue remind us of having read that one day Mr. Dickens standing here told his friend that the avenue was never crossed except "to bear the dead body of the lord of the hall to its last resting place." From near this point the hall is in view, large and apparently of red brick, with towers. Naturally the mind dwells upon the homelikeness, luxury and solid comfort of this palace, secluded and yet surrounded with beauty. How shattered the vision when, two days later, we learned that Lady Mary Bligh, daughter of the Earl of Darnley, had committed suicide on Sunday, the day previous, by drowning in the pond within the grounds!

Leather Bottle Inn is as quaint as its name—a little story and a half plastered house immediately on the village street of Cobham, with a swinging sign, upon which is a portrait of the rotund Pickwick. A narrow hallway leads past the inevitable bar, and on the left a door opens into the large Pickwick room used as a restaurant. Blackened beams cross the low ceiling, the walls are literally covered with portraits of the novelist, the characters he has drawn and newspaper comments on his appearance as reader in London and elsewhere. Lunch is eaten here with unusual relish, and photographs are purchased of the loquacious proprietor, who affects a Pickwickian eloquence in his display of chair, sofas and bedrooms associated with his hero. His manner is excusable, for here Dickens often halted, here his characters were at home. Was it not from the Leather Bottle Inn that Mr. Tupman wrote Mr. Pickwick after the adventure with Miss Wardle?

The little church across the way must be visited, as it contains important brasses. The funeral of a child stops us in the burial ground surrounding the edifice, and we join at a respectful distance with the grief-stricken father and mother, who, with two or three peasant friends, listen to what, from the manner of its rendering, seems to us a rather cold ceremonial.

The way home is shortened by a meadow path, one of the special delights of old England. Over a stile, down a hop garden, around a wheat field and through the clover bordering a calmly flowing brook, on into the hard, smooth road again, and we are, in good time, back in sight of the famous Norman keep, which, with eyes blackened by ages, still guards the old, old town of Rochester. This is, indeed, Dickens land. In all parts of this country—to Cobham Park, to Rochester, down to Maidstone and on to Canterbury—he would go on foot, fifteen and often twenty miles a day. And whichever particular journey he made, we may readily think of him as coming at length back again to Rochester and to this same castle, which he loved to visit with his friends, and which he often declared to be "the finest ruin in England."

Closet and Altar

When prayer brings no solace to your weary heart try praise.

How many weeks will any of us be able to live without coming to some spot where it will be felt as a rational comfort to believe that all our way, step by step, trial by trial, success, failure, loss, removal, was ordered for us by him who sees the end from the beginning?—Bishop Huntington.

A brave, resolute, Christian life is not always smooth sailing, but the inward power becomes an overmatch for head winds. Sometimes the gales of adversity sweep away a Christian's possessions, but there is an undisturbed treasure down in the hold—a glorious consciousness that One is with him that the world can neither give nor take away.—Dr. Cuyler.

If I in harvest fields,
Where strong ones reap,
May find one golden sheaf
For love to keep,
May speak one quiet word
When all is still,
Help some fainting heart
To bear thy will,
Or sing one high, clear song,
On which may soar
Some glad soul heavenward,
I ask no more.

—Julia C. R. Dorr.

True, we can never be at peace until we have performed the highest duty of all—till we have arisen and gone to our Father; but the performance of smaller duties, yes, even of the smallest, will do more to give us temporary repose, will act as more healthful anodynes, than the greatest joys that can come to us from any other quarter. —George Macdonald.

All the perplexity and painful distress, the dark difficulties that may dominate one's whole existence, would disappear if we would only learn that in Christ Jesus our eating and drinking, our sleeping and clothing of the body, are as much spiritual matters as falling upon our knees in prayer, or reading God's holy Word, or partaking of the holy communion at the table of the Lord. In Christ Jesus life is one, and there ought to be no division between things secular and things spiritual, things bodily and things heavenly; they must be one, absolutely one.—Webb-Peploe.

O God, who dost brood over thy children like some loving mother, when trust does tremble and hope is small, with thy tender hand lead us and when we desire to know thy ways guide us as far as we can go, and teach us all that thy children can know. In the days when the body is weak and faith burns dim, what can we do but call upon thee? In time of gladness we go to thee with our joy but when we are sad, thou drawest near, for then our poor wings are but weak. In daily, hourly life, when about to go astray, touch us with thy bidden finger and bring us back again. When our work becomes too heavy, and the upbearing of the tools too much for the poor workman, then, O Lord, let us be quickened by thy closeness. And when that which is heavenly in us, conscious that its origin is in thee, strives to raise itself from these fetters of flesh, do thou, Lord God, draw us gently, mightily toward thyself. Amen.

AFIELD WITH YOUNG NATURALISTS.

OUR NATIVE NUTS.

BY MRS. S. J. BUCKLIN.

I am October!
The wooded waysides with a regal grace
The color of the purple asters bear,
The hills stand calm, each in its gold-lit place;
The wild grapes lend a perfume to the air;
And sumac fires are lit as beacons set
Amid the solitudes, for autumn's cheer;
The sunsets, rushing into rainbows, let
Their colors linger till the stars draw near.

When the bluebird chirps his "cheer-ee" farewell, when forests are ablaze with gorgeous tints, when "the sound of dropping nuts is heard, though all the trees are still," it is time for us, young naturalists, to go a chestnuting. As we stroll through woodland paths, wading in crisp leaves, let us talk of our native trees that bear nuts. Perhaps, when you were in the woods in the spring or summer, you noticed the catkins or flowers dangling from oak, chestnut and hickory branches. These catkins bear the flowers that produce the nuts or acorns.

The common variety of the American chestnut is a stately spreading tree whose fruit is familiar to young naturalists. They have climbed the trees, beaten the branches, searched among the dry leaves and gathered the nuts by the bushel, but they may not know that the large, sweet chestnut seen on street stands and in fruit stores grows in Spain and Italy. An Italian friend tells me that the nuts are extensively used for food. They are gathered and spread out on perforated frames in drying houses, exposed to the heat of fire until they are hard and dry. They are then placed in bags and beaten until the shells become like chaff, which is blown away from the kernel with large bellows. The kernels are taken to a mill and ground into flour which makes a sweet bread something like our brown bread. This meal is imported and can be bought in Italian groceries.

The name chestnut is said to have come from the town of Castanea, a city in Thessaly, famous for the growth of these nuts. A tree growing on Mt. Etna is mentioned that measured 204 feet in circumference at the trunk. I remember a tree in New Jersey whose trunk was so large that three persons by taking hold of hands and stretching their arms could barely reach around it. In bearing years it produced bushels of nuts. One day some young friends shook off more than a bushel. The dinner bell rang before all were gathered and about half a bushel were left on the ground. When the young people returned after dinner for the nuts not one could be found. A flock of turkeys had just finished the last of them.

Chestnuts delight in light, dry soil and dislike damp, foggy atmosphere. They blossom in July, bearing long, handsome catkins from which prickly burrs are formed, containing from two to three shiny brown nuts attached by soft, hair-like stems. The question arises, Why is the chestnut so carefully guarded in the thick, prickly burr? The Creator makes everything for some purpose and the design of the chestnut is to perpetuate the growth of this valuable tree. What enemies would destroy the chestnut before it reached maturity if it were not protected by its spiny burr? The first hard frost opens the burrs and the wind shakes the branches and sends the chestnuts down among the leaves. Now the work of extermination begins. Squirrels and fowls, animals and man seek the sweet nut for food. The nuts that escape these keen-eyed seekers are the ones that perpetuate the chestnut trees.

The horse chestnut belongs to an entirely different botanical order. Its nut is poisonous to man and eaten only by deer. It is a beautiful ornamental tree, said to be a native of Asia, but acclimated to our northern climate. A provision of the Creator is shown by the way the leaf buds are protected from extreme cold. The tiny buds are carefully packed in a soft cotton-like substance, closely covered with tough leaf scales, and these are coated with a sticky material, looking like varnish, which makes the scales waterproof. The large, shiny brown buds show on the trees all winter and early in spring rise into pyramids of reddish-white blossoms among the fresh green of the large leaves.

Another important tree is the oak, whose nuts are eaten by animals rather than man, but I recall certain trees that grew near a schoolhouse where the boys and girls used to find a sweet acorn that we thought quite delicious. The oak is of great value for timber and fuel and its bark is extensively used in tanning.

The hickory is otherwise known as the walnut or shagbark. The butternut, pignut, black walnut and pecan are members of the same family. The shagbark, so called from its coarse, rough bark, bears a rich, edible nut of great market value. In some parts of New England a shagbark grove is quite a source of income to the possessor. These trees grew abundantly in the town where I was born. It was one of my childish delights to gather the nuts from a large tree back of our house. One day I saw my father with his gun stepping lightly from one tree to another and looking eagerly up into the branches. Soon followed a report, and he had brought to the ground a fine large American eagle, which was stuffed and placed in the Boston Natural History rooms.

I can only mention the pignut, whose shell is harder than that of the shagbark and the edible kernel has a slightly bitter flavor. Hickory wood is exceedingly tough and hard and is excellent for lumber or fuel. The black walnut has wood of a deep violet color of great value for building purposes and cabinetwork. The butternut grows freely in certain parts of New England and bears an oily nut with a very hard shell. The kernel is delicious, but the shell is hard to crack.

AT THE FOOD FAIR.

The large attendance, despite bad weather, at the home congresses held in connection with the Food Fair now in session in Boston amply demonstrates the general interest in the scientific side of cookery. Dr. W. T. Harris in his lecture made a strong point against the enormous and almost criminal waste of food products here in America. The oft-repeated statement that the French nation could be supported on what we throw away is no extravagance of speech. In these days, when the study of economic problems is attracting wide interest, it is well to call the attention of intelligent women to this source of leakage, for any steps in the way of reform must emanate, primarily, from the home.

Last week the therapeutics of diet were discussed in a series of lectures by Mrs. Rorer, who occupies the chair of dietetics in the Woman's Medical College in Philadelphia, in which the whole subject of body building was discussed in most practical fashion. She exploded the old theory that a certain kind of food is good for a certain part of the body, as fish for the brain, and maintained that whatever nourishes the system as a whole is good for the separate organs. She attributed the great mortality among infants to a deficiency of bone-building matter, recommended fatty foods for nervous temperaments and deprecated the use of too much salt. She also laid emphasis on the fact that what we see and hear, as well as what we eat and drink, affects the well-being of the body. Lean meat, eggs and milk contain proper constituents for bone structure and oil is good for fuel for the system. Beans are excellent for the laboring man but poor food for brain workers. The moral side of the subject was illustrated in the statement that a properly fed person is never a criminal.

A LARGER HOME LIFE.

In discussing certain defects in American home life a writer in Lend a Hand earnestly remarks:

I have an idea that we can make a great deal more of home than we do, and that we must learn to do so. This cannot be done by insisting that women give up their ambitions and scour and scrub more, or rock cradles and fry doughnuts. The point is to get a bigger idea of what a home is, and so be able to live a great deal more of our life at home and in home. I should like to call back the children and devise ways for doing for them much more than we leave for outsiders to do. Complaint is made by some of our best thinkers that we are sliding into socialism. Why not? Our individual life is nearly dissolved into a great public commonalty. As for religion, if we have any, why shall we send the children to priest or pastor? If we are educated, why cannot a large amount of our intellectual life be lived in a family way? I cannot comprehend the reason that sends a boy away from home to learn to read while his parents read the dailies and the monthlies. The dull dreariness of this business is hard to describe. There is not a farm, and there is hardly a cottage, in the United States that does not cover more material for education than the best schoolhouse ever erected. There is geology, chemistry, entomology, botany, physics, all here. Can it be realized? Or must it all lie idle, while the boys and girls are sent off to get what can be picked up at public resorts?

I do not doubt the value of the schools; I only wonder why we must dull and deaden our homes so completely, and overlook all the rich material every home has so abundantly. Why we may not be mutual investigators is the puzzle. Why may not parents and children study nature together? There is no botany like applied botany. What a fool a schoolgirl is with her botany under her arm, and no application of it to the practical work of making the plants grow in the garden. Applied geology not only explains soils, rocks, streams, land, but it expounds land culture and how to utilize rocks and soils. Applied biology in general makes the farm boy master of the bugs and moths and of the mischievous plants that hinder culture. There really is no life so eminently delicious as where a home is a school. A school does not mean a place where one teaches, but a place where all study. No one should ever get to the end of study. A wise father goes through life with his children hunting after the facts and truths that are written on every leaf and bedded in every spadeful of soil. The real home can easily have cabinets or museums, laboratories for studying chemistry and physics, forges for working at problems in mechanics. It is not expensive to have such houses—not nearly as expensive as it is to farm out your children in all directions and pay for it, and then have spoiled children. Work first for fine homes, and after that for good schools, churches and public institutions.

In a further discussion of this important subject the writer adds:

The real position of the American home as a training school for the young is after all the most important matter. A recent writer, discussing the ethical influence of schools, looking about for some supplementary help, says: "The home, which has hitherto been the fundamental agency for fostering morality in the young, is just now in sore need of repair. We can no longer depend upon it alone for moral guardianship. It must be supplemented, possibly reconstructed." This is plain speaking, and it means more than a loose charge that our homes are not doing their full duty. Another able writer says: "Self seeking is the main principle of life in a vast number of our homes. If to the children in these latter homes are added the thousands who exist with scarcely a trace of home life we shall be forced to admit that there would be a moral crisis if the public school were not doing its beneficent work." In fact, the friends of the school cry out for homes to make good what the schools fail to accomplish, and the friends of home life beg the schools to supplement the failure of homes to create character. The real difficulty, however, is that our homes began years ago to rely upon outside influences to do what can never be done by any power but home influence. This let out of duty to others increased, until the family power was broken, home enfeebled, and at last our homes are mere addenda to society. The girls come home to eat and to dress for society. The boys come home to eat and work and get away as soon as possible. Home must be rebuilt with power. It must be once more understood that the burden of education belongs to parents. The school and society are adjuncts of home, or ought to be. The church should not be ahead of home, but behind it. The child's views, sentiments, loves, should be shaped at home. Socialistic drifts never were wise, and never will be. There is always a tendency to exaggerate the value of great organisms. The school just now is desperately struggling with the problem of a possible ethical training in connection with intellectual. It hardly sees the way to accomplish this without making social prigs of the pupils. But it can do a great deal to aid true fathers and mothers. It ought not to undertake paternal methods.

Tangles.

[For the leisure hour recreation of old and young. Any reader who can contribute odd and curious enigmas, etc., of a novel and interesting kind is invited to do so, addressing the Puzzle Editor of The Congregationalist.]

90. RIVERS.

1. This river was named for a son of the soil;
2. The next one he daubed on his face.
3. This color it showed when he finished his toil;
4. That river he often would chase.
5. The next is a brave who was dusky in hue;
6. Disturbance he made in the camp;
7. This river he carried, and skillfully threw;
8. The other he used as a lamp.
9. The first one had called him a "rascal," indeed,
10. Whose "freshness" this river might teach;
11. The next he would give him, with vigor and speed,
12. Unless he was cautious in "speech."
13. This river was blown, as a call to the fray;
14. They met on the next, smooth and brown;
15. Which, bare of all herbage, hung over, they say
16. The river where fish tumbles down.
17. Their courage this river at no time would lower
18. Yet well may he next feel a quiver,
19. To see how their foothold bends out from the shore
20. And mangles them both in this river.

M. C. S.

91. THE BOAT RACE.

(A number of boats are here sunken, but not out of sight. How many are there and what?)

The day was bright, with a fresh breeze from the north. The boats were tacking back and forth, keeping as near the line as possible, and waiting for the starting signal. The starter, seeing all eyes were on him, called, "After first firing I give two minutes, and you start from the second gun." Only three boats were entered for the race—the Wasp, the India and the Cid—and as they sped over the line followed by the steam launch, in which were the judges and ladies, it was an animated scene. The beautiful fin-keel boats tipped in the stiff breeze until the water poured over the gunwales as they tacked across the lake. At one moment there seemed a chance of colliding—eyes on the launch watched anxiously—but the ladies were assured that there was no danger, and "no risk if the fellows mind what they are about." It was a perfect lark for all, and the wetter they got the better they liked it.

The launch gained the turning buoy first, and, taking position well out of the way of the boats, remained motionless to watch them turn and square away for the home stretch before the wind. As the India came about the spectators could see that one of her crew was in trouble. He was tugging at a rope, and they could hear his calls, "Hello—I say—ach!—this thing hurts," holding up his hand, which was indeed cut terribly. "Hang on—do—lad," roared the captain, "if you let go I'll drop you overboard," and the poor boy obeyed.

It was a charming sight, as the strings looping the spinnakers broke away, to watch the silken folds shake out and fill, bearing the boats lightly along like the fluttering wings of a butterfly. The Wasp and Cid followed in quick succession, but the India held her advantage, turning the finishing buoy in front of the Dew Drop Inn a certain winner by five minutes. And then the captain found time to say: "You must not care if I speak loud or yell at you. I expect every man to do what he is told without a question. I can't have the boat yaw, losing way all the time, and I shall oppose taking any man as crew who cannot obey orders." Then removing his mackintosh the victorious captain went ashore to take the cup won in this friendly contest.

I. M. C.

92. METAPHONES.

(Change of sound without change of spelling).

I.

In the field they ONE the hay;
In the barn 'twas TWO away.

II.

In the sky the clouds sink PRIMAL,
O'er our homes they seem to FINAL.

III.

Should you ONE this puzzle through,
Then surely 'twould be TWO.

PHILO.

93. PARADOXICAL DATES.

1801
1686

The above not very important dates in history are interesting to the puzzle lover from the fact that the several figures, added as they stand, give a sum not half so great as the remainder may be if the same are subtracted with no alteration in their present arrangement. Do you see it?

MABEL P.

94. CHARADE.

I washed the clothes one summer day,
And put them in the ONE, that they Might quickly TWO. Amongst the clothes,
Were TOTAL pairs of children's hose.

E. R. B.

ANSWERS.

86. 1. Eighty feet. 2. The time was 32 minutes 43.6 seconds past 6.

87. February.

88. "Sweet are the pleasures that to verse belong,
And doubly sweet a brotherhood in song."

89. Trifling, rifling, I fling, fling.

Nillor, Middletown Springs, Vt., solved 83, 85; P. D. T., Salem, Mass., 83, 84, 85; Fannie C. Hatch, Marshfield, Mass., 83, 84, 85; Mabel Allen, Brooklyn, N. Y., 83; Mary E. Thomas, Forest Grove, Ore., 77, 78, 79, 80.

Nillor's suggestion that the senders of really perfect answers to No. 75 be designated is a good one, but unfortunately it cannot be carried out, as the sheets of solutions have not been preserved. Tangles may profit by the hint in future. We may add, however, that if our recollection is not at fault, the Middletown Springs list was one of the complete ones, and was ranked either as second or third in neatness.

If the bicycle fever continues to spread marriage will become a thing of the past. The women will all be spinsters.—Youth's Companion.

No Matter

how low the price, baking powders that vary in strength are expensive.

They raise pretty well once or twice, and then, losing their strength, fail, and so waste good butter, flour, eggs, sugar, time and temper.

Cleveland's baking powder never varies. It does the work just right every time, and that is why housekeepers prefer it.

Cleveland's, Pure and Sure.

IMPERIAL MILLS CO'S 196 DULUTH IMPERIAL PATENT DULUTH, MINN.

25 Ounces of Bread

can be made from 16 ounces of Flour if it comes from a barrel with this brand on it—and the best bread ever baked. Will keep moist days longer than any other bread. Don't take our word for it, but buy a barrel (or sack) and try it. Look out for the name—Duluth Imperial Flour.

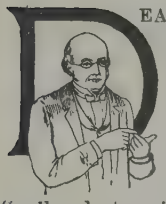
If your grocer doesn't keep it, and won't supply you, don't get another flour—get another grocer; or send us a postal, and we'll tell you where to get it.

DULUTH IMPERIAL MILL CO., Duluth, Minn.

The Conversation Corner.



DEAR CORNERERS: Missing the old Captain for several weeks, I have had the suspicion that he might be on some political mission in the West—perhaps accompanying the "Generals" in their "railroad stumping tour," an account of which I have just read—but here he is, evidently just home from a Pacific cruise.

PETERSHAM, SYDNEY, N. S. W., AUS.

Dear Mr. Martin: After reading some of the "Corners" in The Congregationalist I thought I should like to write sometimes to the "Corner." The Congregational Union of N. S. W. Exam. was held on the 25th of July. I was a candidate for this. We are staying at Woodford on the Blue Mts. just now. It is a beautiful place, and although it is winter we are enjoying delightful weather. We sometimes see mountain parrots and paroquets. They are lovely. ELFRIDA A.

Dear Mr. Martin: I would very much like to be a Cornerer for The Congregationalist. I have read the letters in your Corner. We have a very fine view here in the Blue Mts. The people round here say there are wallabys here, but I have not seen any, but my brother saw three. A wallaby is a kind of kangaroo. There are a great many laughing jackasses which are large birds that laugh. We get some very beautiful blossoms up here called wattle. CARLETON A.

We welcome these first members—not from the Pacific, for we have well-known members in Japan, nor from Australia, for two sisters have written us from Queens land, but—from New South Wales. I fear we know very little of their country, except that it is a prosperous British colony in the continent island of Australia. These letters tell us four things of interest that they have—winter in the summer time, wallabies, laughing jackasses, and wattle flowers. If they have a camera and can catch those two animals together, I wish they would send us a photograph of them for the Corner. You know the laughing jackass is not a donkey at all, but a kind of kingfisher. I wonder if Carleton has ever seen an emu, or whether the aboriginal people live near them—but they may know no more of them personally than we do of the American buffalo or the American Indian. One thing—they do not have the bother of electing a president—the "Crown" sends them out a governor, ready made. I do not understand that "N. S. W. Exam."

SEATTLE, WN.

Dear Mr. Martin: My papa has just been reading to me about the wreck of the Glendon in the last Congregationalist (Sept. 17). Last month we spent a week at the ocean beach in Chelais County, near Gray's Harbor. There is a wreck of a schooner there something like the Glendon, only it had but two masts and they have been cut down. It did not have a restaurant in it, but we had a lunch of cookies in the old cabin. The wreck is high on the beach, and the sand on the shore is so hard that people drive on it, and you could ride your wheel on it for fifteen miles. We bathed every day in the ocean, and papa says the water is colder than in the Atlantic. One day several warships passed on their way to Puget's Sound. Do you know what they are doing here now? HAROLD S.

I suppose you remember—for the matter was up in the Corner once—that Gray's Harbor was named for Capt. Robert Gray, a Boston navigator who discovered the Columbia River in 1791, giving it the name of his ship. How I would have enjoyed being there with Harold and taking a thirty-mile run on that hard beach! Probably those warships are up there in connection with the effort to save the seals from being killed. But today, when I had a call from an Armenian who told me the story of his aged father, a "native pastor" in Turkey, kept for months in prison and threatened with exile, I felt that the proper place for our warships would be in the Bosporus, until the "Great Assassin of Europe" would stop burning American property and killing his own innocent subjects.

NORTH ANDOVER, MASS.

Dear Mr. Martin: In the Corner of Sept. 24, Ethel S., of Riverside, Cal., inquires for the botanical name of a flower, called there "Baby blue-eyes." It is Nemophila. There are several different species. 1. Nemophila maculata, corolla white with a violet spot at the top of each lobe. 2. Nemophila insignis, corolla bright blue. 3. Nemophila Menziesii, corolla from light blue to white and sprinkled with dots toward the center. 4. Nemophila aurita, corolla violet. The leaves to all are similar, being lyrately pinnatifid-lobed, or divided. I hope this may be of some use to your young correspondent. MRS. D.

It certainly will be if she can understand all those hard words, as she will do when she studies botany. Such scientific terms are necessary to give exact descriptions. What an expressive word Nemophila is for a flower—a lover of the forest! We all may be nemophilous at this autumn time, when, as I read in a beautiful bit of verse which happens to lie before me in The Congregationalist of Oct. 8:

> Each trembling, burnished emerald leaf
> Is changed to rarest gold.

A Connecticut lady writes to ask why 'in this hour of Mt. Holyoke's extremity her children and great-grandchildren among the Cornerers should not be asked to secure shares for a fund to construct or furnish a new building." The "why not" seems very plain to me: I do not believe that the daughters, and especially the fortunate sons-in-law, of Mt. Holyoke Seminary and Mt. Holyoke College will transfer the privilege of rebuilding the grand old school to their children or grandchildren, although I know that the latter are numbered by thousands among our members all over the land and in the isles of the sea!

. . . Since writing the above I have heard, through a private letter, that a little girl in Holyoke, six years old, who watched the burning of the Mt. Holyoke building, said that she would like to give her money for a new college; she had been saving it for a sled, but she guessed she could get along without it, because they needed a college so much. She prayed that night: "Dear Jesus, don't let any of the girls get burned and give them a place to sleep, so they won't have to stay outdoors all night." Blessings on the little girl—she is going to be a benefactress in spite of me! Perhaps her example will inspire the daughters (and sons-in-law) to do without a sled or something, so that Mary Lyon's college "won't have to stay outdoors" very long.

Mr. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

Vice-Presidents. A gentleman writes to add to the names of the vice-presidents mentioned (Sept. 24) as having died while in office those of George Clinton, Madison's associate, who died in 1812; Elbridge Gerry, Madison's associate in his second term, who died in 1814; and Henry Wilson, Grant's associate in his second term, who died in 1875. On account of the increasing solicitude as to what might happen in case of the death of both the president and vice-president, Congress passed in 1886 a bill for the regulation of the presidential succession. The order, which you will do well to preserve for reference, is this: The Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of War, the Attorney General, the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior. This insures relief from all question as to the eligibility of the pro tempore president of the Senate, according to the previous plan. It is certainly more fair, because it provides for the succession of men of the same party as those last elected by the people, which was not always the case under the old arrangement.

Remarks. If you go over the list of successful and defeated candidates published Oct. 8, you will be surprised to find how few of them are living. Harrison and Morton of the last administration are the only living ex-president and vice-president. Are any others living, who were candidates of the two great parties, except Whitelaw Reid, Harrison's associate in 1892? The reason for the few names left is plain. Although by the Constitution the president must be thirty-five years old, as a matter of fact the average age of our presidents when inaugurated has been about fifty-five. Mr. Bryan, the present Democratic candidate, who is only thirty-six, is by far the youngest candidate ever before the people.

Present Candidates. All our lists and facts on this topic thus far have been matters of history. Now we are within two weeks of an election that has occasioned more discussion than any other since that of 1860, which ushered in the War of the Rebellion. Like that, it is not a contest of men or of parties, but of opposing principles. I am sure you will all be interested to have an exact list of the candidates.

Republican. Nominated at St. Louis, June 16. For president, William McKinley of Ohio; for vice-president, Garrett A. Hobart of New Jersey.

Democratic. Nominated at Chicago, July 7. For president, William J. Bryan of Nebraska; for vice-president, Arthur Sewall of Maine.

Populist. Nominated at St. Louis, July 22. For President, William J. Bryan; for vice-president, Thomas Watson of Georgia.

National Democrats. Nominated at Indianapolis, Sept. 2. For president, John A. Palmer of Illinois; for vice-president, Simon B. Buckner of Kentucky.

Prohibition. Nominated at Pittsburg, May 27. For president, Joshua Levering of Maryland; for vice-president, Hale Johnson of Illinois.

National Party. Nominated at Pittsburg, May 28. For president, Charles E. Bentley of Nebraska; for vice-president, James H. Southgate of South Carolina.

Remarks. The "National party" is composed of bolters from the Prohibitionists, who, in addition to prohibition, favor free coinage and other political issues. The nomination of the National Democrats is a protest against the Chicago platform, especially in the matter of free coinage. This nomination is sustained by the President and his cabinet. The real contest is between Mr. McKinley and Mr. Bryan and the respective platforms on which they stand. That of the Republicans favors their old policy of protective tariff and of reciprocity and the preservation of the present gold standard. That of the Democrats favors a tariff for revenue only, the income tax, and especially demands the free and unlimited coinage of silver without the aid of any other nation. Other planks in the platform, notably those opposing national interference in local affairs (as in the case of the Chicago riots) and the Civil Service reform, are severely criticised by the Republicans and conservative Democrats. The question at the front is for or against free silver coinage, and on that the people will vote and decide the policy of the nation. Let Cornerers all go for the honest side!

L. M. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR NOV. 1. 1 Kings 5: 1–12.

BUILDING THE TEMPLE.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

These verses, taken alone, are but a statement of dry facts. They are insufficient for a spiritual lesson. The selection is wisely made to include the entire fifth and sixth chapters. Indeed, chapter eight should be added, making a single lesson, though of so great importance that it may profitably occupy two Sundays. The story of the building of the first temple to Jehovah thus becomes the basis for teaching what is now acceptable worship of God by his people. We are therefore led to consider:

1. Solomon's purpose. His kingdom was composed of elements that were never really united before David's time. That great statesman foresaw that the only bond which could hold the many tribes together must be a religious bond. He sought to make Jerusalem the capital city for them all by bringing into it the ark of God. They must have one object, one way, one place for worship. That would unify the nation, make the people loyal to one another and to their king and give them a sufficient motive for patriotism. David was unable to carry out this purpose. His wars, the necessary preliminary to the building of the nation, absorbed his energies. But he kept his aim in view, gathered abundant treasures for carrying it out, prepared for a temple a pattern which came to him by the Spirit of God, and bequeathed his purpose to his son and successor. Solomon was to build a temple at Jerusalem for all the people of Israel.

Religion is the bond of union of every nation which has continued long independent, the only power which could resist the disintegrating influences within and attacks from without. The Greek Church is the power which holds Russia united. Moslemism has enabled Turkey to continue for ages, till the uprising of other religions within her borders is at last likely to tear her in pieces. The Jews, even without a country, have maintained for 2,000 years an existence as a separate people because they have remained loyal to their religious faith. The American people are threatened by class and sectional divisions. Every one who has mingled much with the citizens throughout the whole country and has attended their popular assemblies must have been impressed by the readiness with which sectional jealousies arise and the tenacity of their life. The West has great interests quite apart from those of the East; the South looks with suspicion on the North. But for the bond of a common Christian faith the United States would soon be only a thing of the past. Religious organizations covering the whole country and bringing the people into contact with one another in Christian labor and love are necessary to the continuance of our Government. The Christian Endeavor Society is an illustration of movements to which the nation owes much for its continued strength and stability.

2. Solomon's plans. The scale of the work proposed gave to the nation an enlarged sense of its dignity and power. The sixth chapter may profitably be studied as picturing the grandeur of the temple. To have erected a mean and cheap building would have defeated Solomon's purpose, and have made the people feel that they and their aims and their influence among the nations were small. That is a false argument which points to costly church buildings as signs of selfishness and which insists that the most of the money spent on them ought to have been used in converting the heathen. Our meeting houses ought to be our finest buildings, testifying to the people's estimate of their value of the presence of God, of which these houses are the visible sign. But they ought not to be costlier than can be paid for. A church building that stands in the community for an unfulfilled promise to pay dishonors God and proclaims the dishonesty of his people.

Solomon engaged the entire nation in the work. All the communities of Israel and a large proportion of its families must have been represented in the army which gathered timber for the temple [chap. 5: 13–16]. They were seven and a half years engaged in erecting the building. The whole nation became interested in it for a time long enough to characterize it as the chief work of an entire generation. The worship of God belongs to all the people. It is of the utmost importance to their highest interests that they should be encouraged to that worship, and in it all class distinctions should be put out of sight. Nor should differences of opinion or of methods of worship ever be allowed to obscure the fact that the same God and Father is sought by all his children.

Solomon sought help in his work from other nations. The temple was not less sacred because a king who held another religion sold him the timber for it and undertook its transportation, and the king of Tyre took a genuine interest in the work. The worship of God is not made less acceptable to him because men not of our religion help to promote it, give money and labor for it. It is made less acceptable through such aid only when we become less true to our principles in order to secure it.

3. What Solomon accomplished. He made Jerusalem the Holy City by planting the temple in it. He created a passionate love among all Israelites for their capital which outlived even their religious faith. That love held them together against the power of far mightier nations even when they had repudiated the reason for their existence. When the kingdom had been dismembered and the greater portion of the people had been carried into far distant lands, they hung their harps on the willow trees and wept while they remembered Zion.

Solomon made worship the central thing by building the temple at Jerusalem, and, uniting it with his palace, he gave divine sanction to government and law. No other sanction is great enough to keep men, in the vicissitudes which must befall a nation, from becoming discontented, or will keep discontented men from rising against their own government, repudiating their courts of justice, trampling on their laws and bringing destruction on themselves.

4. What the temple signifies to us. The Jewish system of worship long since passed away. There are sects which attempt to revive Judaism by claiming authority for their priests and declaring the sanctity of official systems, and by consecrating church buildings and cemeteries. But the principles and spirit of Christianity are opposed to these things. No building now is the house of God as the temple once was. The type of the temple is not the church building, but the followers of Christ, who, as living stones, are builded together into a spiritual temple. Wherever they gather in his name they are a temple. No other thing has the right to bear that title. No place is sacred except where God is known. His presence manifested in his people sanctifies every place.

The business of the Christian, then, is to make his body, his home, his church, his town, his nation, a temple of God. When that work is fully accomplished "the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven, from God," will fill the earth; and the seer's vision will be realized—"I saw no temple therein; for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple thereof. . . . For the glory of God did lighten it and the Lamb is the light thereof."

Belief is power. Only so far as a man believes strongly, mightily, can he act cheerfully or do anything that is worth the doing. —Robertson.

There's a way to make it lasting, although frequent use necessitates frequent polishing. The brightest wheels are made so by

SILVER ELECTRO-SILICON POLISH

It never wears, it never scratches, that's why the brilliancy is lasting. Two or three applications of Electro-Silicon to a piece of chamois and you have an always-ready polisher for your tool bag.

Send us your address and we'll send you enough for a month's polishing without cost. Grocers sell it.

The Electro Silicon Company, New York.

Van Camp's Boston Baked Pork and Beans
Prepared with tomato sauce. Ever ready, palatable hot or cold.
Choicest beans, juicy meat. Three sizes.
Send 6c for sample can.
VAN CAMP PACKING CO., Indianapolis, Ind.
Send for booklet; postal card will do.
TOMATO SAUCE

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

OUR OWN WORK.

A New Distress in Turkey. The latest letters from our missionaries in Harpoot report that at no time since last November has there been such grave foreboding and widespread anxiety as at present. Rumors of disturbances in Constantinople and elsewhere have excited the Turks and alarmed the Armenians. The collection of taxes this fall is a fresh cause of distress among our Christian towns and villages. "During the more than thirty-eight years of my missionary life, I have seen nothing like it," writes a correspondent. "A good many people come to me every day for advice and sympathy. They are cursed and beaten, their women are insulted and they are obliged to feed the collectors and their horses without remuneration." By law the taxes may be paid in installments, but now the government is demanding the amount for the whole year, as well as all arrears. In vain were the efforts of Mr. Fontana, the British consul, to intercede with the Turkish officials, and equally fruitless has been petition after petition to the Government requesting that there may be a brief delay until the grain on the threshing floors can be sold. Some of the collectors say that there is to be another scene of plunder and massacre, and the government wishes to make sure of its position.

The fate of the Arabkir prisoners, charged with bringing on the terrible massacre in that city, has been decided. Fifty-five were released, twenty-seven sentenced to three years' imprisonment, twelve to confinement for life and eleven were doomed to be hung. Those who received the capital sentence were accused of killing two Koords, who, it is claimed, were cut in pieces and burned. These Koords, so far as we can learn, are imaginary beings. No names or residences were given and the testimony regarding them was discordant, but they were a convenient means of proving that the Armenians brought on the massacre by incensing the Koords. This procedure, together with the fact that no Turk has been punished for the series of crimes perpetrated last fall, illustrates the course of Turkish justice. The present prospect is that the suffering of the poor people the coming winter will be scarcely less than last year. In spite of gloomy conditions Euphrates College at Harpoot opened last month with an attendance of 600.

Long Service in India. Few missionaries are permitted to work for half a century in India, but on Sept. 20 Rev. S. B. Fairbank, D. D., rounded out fifty years of service in connection with the American Marathi Mission. So far as is known there are only two Protestant missionaries in India who have labored for a longer period. This veteran American Board missionary has been engaged in various kinds of missionary service. While in Bombay, besides his preaching he was responsible for the management of the Mission Press, which was at that time [1850–57] the largest and best in the city, and in this connection he did much literary work. But the Wadale district, where he began a new work in 1857, especially bears witness to Dr. Fairbank's energy and versatility. Here during thirty years his main work was organizing and superintending preaching and schools in villages which now have a goodly number of churches and a large Christian community. The Wadale district has been one of the most fruitful mission fields in all India. But Dr. Fairbank's usefulness has not stopped there. Incidentally he has interested himself in agricultural matters, invented and improved an inexpensive plow, and sought by object lessons to introduce improved methods of farming among the conservative Deccan farmers. This active worker has also done much for the music of India by the preparation of a music manual, by composing and translating hymns and by teaching singing. For recreation merely he pursued the study of some branches of natural science, becoming such an authority along certain lines that he has been asked to prepare several articles for the Government Gazetteer. Dr. Fairbank, though now nearly seventy-four years old, is still in vigorous mental and physical health. He has only been three times to the United States during fifty years, and he hopes to end his days in India. His sons, Henry and Edward, are working in the same mission.

THE WORLD AROUND.

The Great Northwest. We know too little about the vast home missionary field of the Presbyterian Church north of us, where preaching services are conducted in seven languages at 1 007 points. In Quebec the effort is to keep hold of the Protestants and to prevent their assimilation with the Roman Catholic Church; in Ontario the mission work is among the lumber men in the Ottawa Valley and in the new settlements of Muskoka and Algoma; but the most needy field lies west of Lake Superior, extending from the great lakes to the Pacific Ocean—a country larger than Central Europe. Here it is that the chief battle for Canadian Christianity is being fought. During the last year a typical mission has been opened in a new settlement in the lower Kootenay country in Southern British Columbia near the American boundary line—a region of gold and silver mines. In April the home missionary found a town of 1,500 people with no religious services, although the saloon with all its accessories was present in full and vigorous life. He literally pitched his tent and went to work with the help of a few young men who had been members, or whose parents had been members, of the Presbyterian Church in their early homes. By August a little church was built and stands as an uplifting force in the critical, plastic days of this growing town. About 120 miles north lies Caribee, where a visiting missionary found over 3,000 people without a single minister of any Protestant church. A man is already on the way to this field. We realize that this is uphill work, which means a struggle, not only against indifference and materialism but against vice of all sorts, when we read that in one village with a population of 750 the only church is flanked by fifteen saloons, open day and night for seven days in the week. We can sympathize with our Canadian brethren, for the conditions of mission work in the Northwest are much the same as in our own rapidly growing Western States.

A French Protestant Mission. The Société Evangélique of Paris is to be congratulated upon having come to the end of its financial year with a surplus in the treasury. Receipts for the twelve months were 470,000 francs against an expenditure of 367,000 francs. The appeal for men has met with a satisfactory response from a practical mechanic, an engineer, an artist, a business man and an ordained minister. Naturally the discussion of the society's responsibility in Madagascar is given prominence in the annual report. The two delegates sent out to visit the Malagasy churches as soon as the war was ended have received a cordial reception from the queen, the French officials, the foreign missionaries and native Christians, but the Paris Mission does not at present contemplate any very extensive action in Madagascar beyond the dispatch of French physicians, deaconesses and possibly the erection of a high school. Societies already on the field will receive its hearty cooperation. The work among the Basuto calls for a vast deal of faith, courage and perseverance. Here is a people not merely ignorant and indifferent, but positively hostile towards the introduction of Christianity. The chiefs form the center of a solid resistance which increases rather than diminishes. French Protestants have already learned a lesson of patience in the Zambezi field which now offers a cheering contrast to Basutoland. It was only after twelve long years that missionary effort bore fruit in the revival of 1895 which promises to be permanent. On the Upper and Lower Zambezi, through the whole extent of the Barotse kingdom, the gospel has made its way. M. Coillard, the veteran pioneer of this mission, is now in England.

PEN AND SCISSORS.

It is a sign of the times that Professor Bertrand of Paris has organized a mission whose chief aim is to save and help priests who have become dissatisfied with the Church of Rome.

The Devil's Foreign Missions was the startling but suggestive title of a paper concerning the liquor trade in West Africa read at a recent meeting of student volunteers at an English college.

An interesting new enterprise started by Heli Chatelaine for the Angola people in West Africa is an attractive illustrated newspaper published in the Mbundu tongue. The opening number urges the Angola to seek to better their condition by means of Christianity, education, economy and work.

Some interesting figures in regard to volunteers for the China Inland Mission were presented at the thirty-first annual conference, recently held in Toronto. In Canada and the United States alone during this year sixty-nine workers have volunteered to go to the interior of China, of whom twenty-four have been accepted. During the past eight years 596 offers have been received and 149 accepted, of whom 101 are now on the field. So rapidly has the mission extended its operations that ten of the interior provinces of China have been entered, and the present staff of missionaries numbers nearly 700. The total annual receipts were $208,449.

OUR STRENGTH AND OUR LIMITATIONS.

They seek to inflame the vanity of the American people by telling them that we are great and strong enough to maintain any monetary system we like and to keep up the value of our money without regard to all the world abroad, while our own history teaches us that a century ago the American people were strong enough to shake off the yoke of Great Britain, but not strong enough to save their continental money from declining in value to nothing; that in recent times the American people were strong enough to subdue a gigantic rebellion, but not strong enough to keep an indefinite issue of greenbacks at par, and that this republic may be able to conquer the world, but it will not be able to make twice two five, or to make itself richer by watering its currency.—Hon. Carl Schurz.

AN OLD-FASHIONED REMEDY.

Prof. W. M. Daniels of Princeton, speaking recently to the farmers of Mercer County, N. J., said:

Since 1893 this country has been passing through a period of extremely hard times. I feel bound to say that the remedy for hard times, instead of seeming to me a thing complex, is a thing that is very simple in principle. Suppose, for example, at the close of this calendar year that you have balanced your account and find that your total expenditures have exceeded your income; your bank account stands at a lower figure on Dec. 31 than it did on Jan. 1. How are you going to prevent your loss from growing? What is the remedy? The remedy is naturally to spend less and, if possible, to earn more than you have before. There is no mystery about that. There is no question about this in the case of any individual. Work more and spend less.

I remember hearing a story told of Horace Greeley. He was asked what the South ought to do to produce prosperity, and he answered that "it ought to raise more cotton and less hell." Barring the coarseness of that reply there was a great deal of common sense underneath it. Work more and spend less. It is an old-fashioned remedy, a hard remedy; you can't guarantee that it will produce prosperity tomorrow or next month or next year, but it is the only way, I believe, by which we can ultimately arrive at a prosperous condition.

Literature

THE VERSATILITY OF AUTHORS.

Recent comments upon the deaths of William Morris and George Du Maurier, two men eminent in modern English literature, remind one of the fact that each was something else than a successful author. Each was an artist also, and Morris was a practical printer and publisher as well. Each won distinction in art as well as in literature, and Morris furthermore was in a real sense a leader of one school of English Socialism.

Moreover, when the list of contemporary English and American writers is examined, many others are discovered to be, or to have been, successful, not to say also distinguished, in some department of work outside of authorship proper. For example, "Ian Maclaren" is, and S. R. Crockett has been until lately, an eminent minister. Conan Doyle is a physician, and Sir Walter Besant is, or has been, a member of Parliament. While on our own side of the ocean such names occur readily as those of F. J. Stimson the lawyer, Robert Grant the judge, Henry Cabot Lodge the politician, Theodore Roosevelt the ranchman, reformer and police commissioner of New York city, Joseph and Elizabeth R. Pennell and Frederic Remington, the artists, and F. Hopkinson Smith, who in addition to being an artist and an author is also a trained engineer.

It is a question, however, whether this so conspicuous versatility is the cause or is the effect of authorship or is merely coincidental with it. Undoubtedly in many instances the desire to write is the outgrowth of success in some other line. The sportsman or the explorer feels impelled to describe his adventures and advise those who may follow in his track. The artist desires to explain and enforce in words the significance of his pictures. The statesman endeavors to impress more widely the political principles which govern his career, and the clergyman seeks to broaden the range of the application of spiritual truth and to interest in a fresh way those whom customary spiritual methods may have failed to impress.

But, whatever the reason of it, the fact is that a very considerable proportion of living authors are men or women who have proved their ability by succeeding in more than one department of work. This is not to be overlooked. One sometimes hears literary people alluded to patronizingly, or even slightingly, by those who pride themselves upon being hardheaded men of affairs. In point of fact, not many of the latter have given the world more trustworthy evidence of practical ability than the former have offered it.

BOOK REVIEWS.

HISTORY.

Constitutional History of the United States, from their Declaration of Independence to the close of their Civil War, by George Ticknor Curtis. In two volumes, Vol. II., edited by Joseph C. Clayton. The first part of this standard work was originally published in 1854, and again with some slight revision reissued in 1889, when it was reviewed by us in The Congregationalist of Feb. 13, 1890. It was from the first the intention of the author to bring down the history of the interpretation of the constitution to the date of writing—a purpose postponed again and again in the exciting times preceding and following the Civil War Unfortunately the plan was postponed too long for completeness, and several of the later chapters are only sketched out and not written. Thirteen chapters, however, were found to be comparatively complete and carry the discussion down to and including the presidential election of 1876 and the electoral commission.

In this later period of the history Mr. Curtis's bias, as already shown in his life of President Buchanan, clearly appears. He was a lawyer, a strict constructionist and a Democrat, and his feeling toward the war measures and the reconstruction acts is that of an idolater who sees gross liberties taken at the very altar of his favorite shrine. He argues, for example, that the Civil War might have been avoided, and his account of the processes of the time of reconstruction takes small account of the urgent practical necessities of the time.

The review of the earlier periods, with its account of the rise and settlement of the first constitutional questions which arose in the practical working of the new government, is the coolest and most valuable part of the book, but the whole is the work of a trained lawyer and debater, and a valuable if not equal addition to the earlier part. Mr. Clayton has done his part as editor well. There is an excellent index. The documents and tables of the appendix are well chosen, and there is a good portrait of the author. [Harper & Bros. $3.00.]

Guide to the Study of American History, by Edward Channing, Ph. D., and Albert Bushnell Hart, Ph. D., assistant professors of history in Harvard University. This is in the strict sense a guide to the study of American history. It is divided into three parts—Methods and Materials, Topics and References in Colonial History and in United States History. It is full of information and suggestion for the student who wishes to pursue the subject, or any part of it, on his own account, and for the teacher who desires to be helpful to his pupils. Within its own chosen field it is thoroughly practical and helpful, and will greatly lighten the labors of students. [Ginn & Co. $2.15.]

Bill Nye's History of England, illustrated by W. M. Goodes and A. M. Richards. The death of the author prevented the completion of the text of this comic history of England, but the pictures had already been prepared and are appended, going on and on like the last steps of a runner who is unable to stop himself when the race is at an end. The fun of the book is good and well sustained, and the pictures are amusing. [J. B. Lippincott Co. $1.25.]

STORIES.

Sir Walter Besant is just at present perhaps the most widely popular of modern novelists, and his latest book, The Master Craftsman, is a good example of his power. The plot is slight though ingenious, the scene is alternately Wapping and London proper, the characters introduced are few, yet one's interest in the tale never flags. The development of a boat builder (albeit a master craftsman) into a successful politician and man of the world whom a beautiful and titled lady rejoices to marry is marvelously portrayed. At the same time we are shown the hardly less remarkable transformation of a London society man into a country craftsman, content to marry a poor, uneducated girl whose beauty and love satisfy the whole ambition of his life. The influence of heredity upon character is brought out in strong contrast to the comparatively slight formative power of circumstances. The book is manly and wholesome in tone, and will be generally liked. [Frederick A. Stokes Co. $1.50.]

Cinder-Path Tales, by William Lindsey. These are clever and readable stories of sporting events told from the point of view of an athletic trainer. They show how large a part these contests of skill and pluck have in the life of our colleges. It is a fresh point of view and is admirably utilized by the author. There is a glimpse of the darker side of under-graduate life here and there, but the necessity of self-denial and self-control which is the best moral use of the whole athletic system speaks loudly in the pages of the book. [Copeland & Day. $1.00.]

The Herb-Moon, by John Oliver Hobbes, is rightly described in its sub-title as "a fantasia." Its title is an English localism for a long engagement. It is full of bright and often humorous description but we feel that much of the time we are not on very solid ground. The story begins in a pitiful atmosphere of poverty and misunderstanding, but brightens steadily to the end, which is in the enjoyable style of the older school of story-writers, who did not care to leave their readers sorrowful. The binding of the book is noticeably odd and tasteful. [Frederick A. Stokes Co. $1.25.]

POETRY.

The Poems of Celia Thaxter. This beautiful edition is called the Appledore edition, and the name brings up to memory the childhood home of the singer as well as the rocky islands where so many of her songs were sung. Her work is too familiar and too dear to lovers of poetry and of nature to need more than that we call attention to the beautiful and fitting dress in which it is again sent out to the world. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.50.]

A Cycle of Sonnets, edited by Mabel Loomis Todd. Mrs. Todd has been a busy editor of minor verse of late. In this volume, prefaced by the pathetic history of the writer of the poems, she has given us a lover's voicing of his passion. The sonnet is well adapted to the expression of thoughtful love, as Shakespeare and Mrs. Browning have shown, but it is exacting, and more than less formal verse forms shows the least relapse into prose. That these sonnets are held so high is a tribute to the poetic power and emotion of the author. That they ever attain the highest charm and distinction of the best poetry, we fear that it would be too much to claim. [Roberts Bros. $1.25.]

Songs Without Answer, by Irene Putnam. The dedication of this book is delightfully melodious, but the balance of the verse hardly carries out its promise. There is pleasant singing of personal emotion, but nothing that goes very deep or high; and there are pleasant studies of nature. Such power as the author shows hardly seems to be fully grasped and utilized. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.00.]

W. V. Her Book and Various Verses, by William Canton. The prose in which portions of this book are written is highly poetical, more so, in fact, than some of the verse, and expresses the love of fatherhood delightfully. The verse is somewhat uneven, but at its best exceedingly fresh and spontaneous. Any one who can appreciate an introduction to a wholesome, jolly English baby and to glimpses of English outdoor nature will find much to enjoy in this book. [Stone & Kimball. $1.25.]

SCIENCE.

What Is Electricity? by Prof. John Trowbridge, S. D., of Harvard, belongs to the International Scientific Series. It is an attempt to answer in language familiar to popular audiences the question of its title. Many of the chapters have been tested in popular lectures or have appeared in the magazines, but the unity of the book does not suffer. The subject is of such immediate and universal interest, and the curiosity of the public has been so awakened by recent startling and important discoveries in the territory covered by the book, that it is sure of a wide audience. [D. Appleton & Co. $1.50.]

Another book on the same subject is The Story of Electricity, by John Monro. It might be called a primer of the subject it treats, and its helpfulness is greatly increased by the hundred illustrations which it contains. Originally written in England it has been adapted for American circulation by changes to conform to American usage and judicious enlargements, and it seems admirably adapted for its purpose as a brief manual of information on its topic. [D. Appleton & Co. 40 cents.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

Talks on Writing English, by Arlo Bates. This is an interesting discussion of a subject which most writers make exceedingly dry in the handling. It is not a school or college text book, though it would be of the greatest use to all young people who have literary ambitions. Its counsels of industry in practice, and its right insistence that he who writes undertakes to use one of the most difficult and subtle of the arts and must prepare himself accordingly, deserve the attention of the horde of careless scribblers whose work fills the newspapers and burdens the shelves of the booksellers. The frequent illustrations employed by the author are happy and practical, and the whole book is a valuable contribution to a difficult and important subject. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.50]

The Prose Fancies of Richard Le Gallienne are original, poetic and charming. The papers vary a good deal in subject and somewhat in merit, A Seventh Story Heaven being one of the best, with its deliciously simple feast of the poet and his love. The Burial of Romeo and Juliet could not be improved, and has none of the grewsomeness which creeps into the other papers that treat of death. The Arbitrary Classification of Sex is an amusing statement of the change half a century has made in the relations of men and women, ending with the remark, "Moreover, quite the nicest women one knows ride bicycles—in the rational costume." Dreamy and fanciful as the book may seem in parts, it yet gives abundant evidence of a deep thoughtfulness often expressed in suggestive and quotable passages. [Herbert S. Stone & Co. $1.25.]

NOTES.

—— Don Quixote appeared first in 1503 and 1,324 editions of it have been printed. Since 1820 twenty-two editions have appeared in this country.

—— The library of the late Prof. Ernst Curtius has been purchased by Mr. J. M. Sears of Boston and is to be given to Yale University.

—— An unpublished manuscript by Bossuet, entitled Etat d 'Oraison, The State of Prayer, has just been discovered in the library of the Priests' College of St. Sulpice.

—— The University of Berlin offers a prize this year for the best essay on the influences which entered into the poetry of Robert Burns, with respect to both form and contents.

—— The Alexander Memorial Hall at Princeton College is to have among its adornments three panels in mosaic illustrating subjects taken from Homer. They are from designs by J. A. Holzer.

—— Some idea of the value of the current reviews may be gained from the statement of The Critic that $140,000 was paid for the North American, a sum based upon its earnings for the last seven years.

—— The number of paper factories in the United States has decreased twenty per cent. during the past fifteen years, but the annual product has increased forty per cent., and the capacity of our paper mills at present is 300,000 tons a year.

—— Mr. Edward Eggleston's recent silence is explained by his work in the preparation of a new History of Life in the United States, upon which he has been engaged for the past sixteen years. The first volume, called The Beginners of a Nation, is soon to appear.

—— The Academie Française has just received an additional legacy of 100,000 francs, of which the interest is to be used in prizes offered for the best "moral works." The academy already has a considerable number of similar legacies, and it has been suggested fittingly that, if they could be combined, the largeness of the prize then offered would lead to the production of works much superior to those now written for the small premiums now awarded

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Little, Brown & Co. Boston.

MEMOIRS OF MGR. DE SALAMON. Preface and notes by Abbé Bridier. pp 337. $2.00.

"QUO VADIS." By Henryk Sienkiewicz. pp. 541. $2.00.

THE END OF THE BEGINNING. pp. 326. $1 25.

FRANÇOIS THE WAIF. By George Sand. pp. 243. $1 25.

THE DEVIL'S POOL. By George Sand. pp. 197. $1 25.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

A YEAR IN THE FIELDS. Selected from the writings of John Burroughs. pp. 220. $1.50.

THE STORY OF AARON. By Joel Chandler Harris. pp. 198. $2.00.

A LITTLE GIRL OF LONG AGO. By Eliza Orne White. pp. 151. $1.00.

JUDITH AND HOLOFERNES. By Thomas Bailey Aldrich. pp. 78. $1.25.

CHRISTIANITY AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS. By Lyman Abbott. pp. 370. $1 25.

KINDERGARTEN PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE. By Kate D. Wiggin and Nora A. Smith. pp. 205. $1.00.

A PRIMER OF AMERICAN LITERATURE. By C. F. Richardson. pp. 136. 35 cents.

Cong. S. S. & Pub. Society. Boston.

THE ROCKANOCK STAGE. By George Huntington. pp. 551. $1 50.

THE POOLES' MILLIONS. By Julia McNair Wright. pp. 371. $1.50.

W. A Wilde & Co. Boston.

THE FAST MAIL. By William Drysdale. pp. 328. $1.50.

THE ORCUTT GIRLS. By Charlotte M. Vaile. pp. 316. $1.50.

Lee & Shepard. Boston.

ON THE STAFF. By Oliver Optic. pp. 474. $1.50.

D. C. Heath & Co. Boston.

PRAKTISCHE AUFANGSGRUNDE. By Herminie Stüven. pp. 193.

Silver, Burdett & Co. Boston.

SONGS OF THE NATION. Compiled and edited by C. W. Johnson. pp. 160.

Century Co. New York.

BREAK O'DAY. By George W. Edwards. pp. 163. $1.00.

TRACINGS. By E. Scott O'Connor. pp. 69. $1.00.

THE SWORD MAKER'S SON. By W. O. Stoddard. pp. 300. $1.50.

"Gold." By Annie Linden. pp. 258. $1.25.

THE PRIZE CUP. By J. T. Trowbridge. pp. 234. $1.50.

SINDBAD, SMITH & CO. By Albert Stearns. pp. 270. $1.50.

THE METROPOLITANS. By Jeanie Drake. pp. 270. $1 25.

THE WONDERFUL WHEEL. By Mary T. Earle. pp. 150. $1 25.

DADDY JAKE THE RUNAWAY. By Joel Chandler Harris. pp. 200 $1 25.

RHYMES OF THE STATES. By Garrett Newkirk. pp. 96. $1.00.

A SHADOW SHOW. By P. S. Newell. pp. 72. $1.00.

GOBOLINKS. By Ruth McEnery Stuart and Albert Bigelow Paine. pp. 73. $1.00.

PAPER DOLL POEMS. By Pauline King. pp. 66. 75 cents.

THE CENTURY BOOK OF FAMOUS AMERICANS. By Elbridge S. Brooks. pp. 250. $1.50.

T. Y. Crowell & Co. New York.

HALF A DOZEN GIRLS. By Anna C. Ray. pp. 369. $1.00.

THE TIN KITCHEN. By Rev. J. Hatton Weeks. pp. 92. 75 cents.

A SHORT CRUISE. By James Otis. pp. 101. 50 cents.

RUBAIYAT OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Rendered into English verse by Edward Fitzgerald. pp. 288. $1.00.

THINGS TO LIVE FOR. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D. pp. 271. $1.00.

J. COLE. By Emma Gellibrand. pp. 86. $1.00.

POEMS OF ROBERT BROWNING. Edited with introductions and notes by Charlotte Porter and Helen A. Clarke. 2 vols. pp. 218, 295. $3.00.

THE BOY TRAMPS. By J. MacDonald Oxley. pp. 361. $1.50.

RUSTIC LIFE IN FRANCE. By André Theuriet. pp. 286. $2.50.

AROUND THE CAMP FIRE. By Charles G. D. Roberts. pp. 349. $1.50.

Harper & Bros. New York.

THE GRAY MAN. By S. R. Crockett. pp. 406. $1.50.

AMYAS EGERTON, CAVALIER. By Maurice H. Hervey. pp. 354. $1.50.

ASPECTS OF FICTION. By Brander Matthews. pp. 234. $1.50.

IRAS, A MYSTERY. By Theo. Douglass. pp. 251. $1.00.

REMINISCENCES OF AN OCTOGENARIAN. By Charles H. Haswell. pp. 581. $3 00.

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

IN OLE VIRGINIA. By Thomas Nelson Page. pp. 275. $2 50.

TO TELL THE KING THE SKY IS FALLING. By Sheila E. Braine. pp. 171. $1.75.

THE EDGE OF THE ORIENT. By Robert H. Russell. pp. 288. $2 00.

COLONIAL DAYS IN OLD NEW-YORK. By Alice M. Earle. pp. 312. $1 25.

THE OUT OF DOOR LIBRARY. Angling. By Leroy M. Yale and others. pp. 305. $1.50.

THE SPRIGHTLY ROMANCE OF MARSAC. By Molly Elliot Seawell. pp. 194. $1.25.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

EUROPEAN ARCHITECTURE. By Russell Sturgis, Ph. D., F. A. I. A. pp. 578. $4 00.

GASTON DE LATOUR. By Walter Pater. pp. 206. $1 50.

SELECTIONS FROM CHAUCER'S CANTERBURY TALES. Edited by Hiram Corson, LL.D. pp. 277. 90 cents.

THE MODERN READER'S BIBLE. The Judges. Edited by Richard G. Moulton, Ph. D. pp. 260. 50 cents.

Eaton & Mains. New York.

ILLUSTRATIVE NOTES ON THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS FOR 1897. By J. L. Hurlbut and R. R. Doherty. pp. 376. $1.25.

KATHARINE'S EXPERIMENT. By Felicia B. Clark. pp. 279. $1.25.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

LITTLE JOURNEYS TO THE HOMES OF AMERICAN AUTHORS. pp. 388. $1.75.

MOTHER MOLLY. By Frances M. Peard. pp. 260. $1.00.

THE HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT OF MODERN EUROPE. By C. M. Andrews. Vol. I. pp. 448. $2.50.

Dodd, Mead & Co. New York.

A WINDOW IN THRUMS. By J. M. Barrie. Illustrated by Clifton Johnson. pp 272. $2.00.

THE GREEN GRAVES OF BALGOWRIE. By Jane H. Findlater. pp. 341. $1.25.

A KNIGHT OF THE NETS. By Amelia E. Barr. pp. 314. $1.25.

Henry Holt & Co. New York.

THE ISLAND OF CUBA. By Andrew S. Rowan and M. M. Ramsey. pp. 279. $1.25.

Thomas Whittaker. New York.

GENTLE JESUS. By Helen E. Jackson. pp. 223. $1.25.

Baker & Taylor Co. New York.

A DAILY THOUGHT FOR A DAILY ENDEAVOR. Compiled by Eleanor A. Sutphen and Eliza P. Sutphen. pp. 377. $1.25.

E. P. Dutton & Co. New York.

GOOD CHEER FOR A YEAR. Selections from the writings of Rt. Rev. Phillips Brooks, D. D., by W. M. L Joy. pp. 372. $1.25.

SHORT STORIES FOR SHORT PEOPLE. By Alicia Aspinwall. pp. 254. $1.50.

Jerseyman Print. Morristown.

BALLADS OF NEW JERSEY IN THE REVOLUTION. By Charles D. Platt. pp. 168. $1.50.

Commissioner of Education. Washington.

REPORT FOR THE YEAR 1893-94. Vol. 2.

PAPER COVERS.

William Miller. Boston.

THE MYSTERY OF THE WINE CUP AND A FREE CIVILIZATION. pp 392. 60 cents.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

LITTLE JOURNEYS TO THE HOMES OF AMERICAN AUTHORS. Longfellow. By George William Curtis. 5 cents.

Harper & Bros New York.

A PRIMER OF COLLEGE FOOT BALL. By W. H. Lewis. pp. 205. 75 cents.

S. R. Badgley. Cleveland.

AN ARCHITECTURAL SOUVENIR.

J. J. Hood. Philadelphia.

CHRISTMAS JEWELS. A service by E. E. Hewitt and others. 5 cents.

MAGAZINES.

October. MONTHLY BULLETIN OF BOOKS ADDED TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.—MCCLURE'S.—BOOK NEWS.—FORUM.—NEW ENGLAND HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL REGISTER.—PREACHER'S.—PANSY.—GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.—MUSIC.—BIBLICAL WORLD.—AMERICAN MAGAZINE OF CIVICS.—KINDERGARTEN NEWS.—PRESBYTERIAN AND REFORMED REVIEW.—SCHOOL REVIEW.—LEND A HAND.

LETTER FROM AUSTRALIA.

A Missionary Centenary.

Very interesting meetings have been held in connection with the centenary of the London Missionary Society. The meeting held on Aug. 10 in Sydney commemorated the departure of the Duff (the first L. M. S. mission ship) on Aug. 10, 1796. The L. M. S. has now 300 European missionaries in the field and 1,500 ordained native pastors. During the centennium it has spent £6,600,000, of which £1,000,000 has been contributed by native converts. At the meeting on Aug. 10 the governor, Viscount Hampden, presided, and an address was given by Bishop Saumarez Smith, the primate. Representatives of all the leading Protestant missionary societies which have agencies in Australia were present. Special interest attaches to the primate's presence, for it is doubtful whether the head of the Anglican church in any other part of the world would appear on the L. M. S. platform. He spoke wise words, but better than any words of this capable and truly Christian man is the broad fraternal spirit which shines through his actions.

Temperance Parties.

The primate took a part in a deputation of representatives from different denominations which waited on the New South Wales Government to urge the introduction of a local option bill. There is a section of the teetotal party, led by the Good Templars, who antagonize local option. They do so on the ground that it is useless in itself, and that it obscures and retards the real remedy for the drink curse, which is total prohibition. This internecine stripe in the ranks of the temperance reformers is very gratifying to those whose pecuniary welfare is identified with the promotion of the drink traffic.

The Orange and the Green.

It is very pleasant to chronicle acts of fraternization such as that witnessed in connection with the L. M. S. celebration, but the impartial historian has to include in his record items which do not give him pleasure. Such are the riots which took place in connection with the July 12 celebrations in Victoria. The wearing of orange badges gave offense to the Roman Catholics of Brunswick, a suburb of Melbourne, and an infuriated mob of Irishmen tore the offending articles from men's coats and ladies' dresses. Also sundry heads were broken. All this took place on Sunday, possibly on the ground "the better the day the better the deed." It is a small consolation to Protestants that the Romanists were the aggressors.

An Incorruptible Administrator.

From the colony of Victoria comes a pleasant story. Some years ago, amidst a great flourish of trumpets, an irrigation colony was founded. It got into difficulties, from causes into which it is not necessary to enter, and the Victorian Government has been investigating its affairs. One of the promoters, under cross-examination, was very frank in his revelations. He wanted to get 250,000 acres, sell 50,000 acres, and divide the rest between himself and his associates. He proposed to secure the complicity of the minister by giving him a slice of the land—"the sort of thing," he said, "often done in America." To his great disappointment he found Hon. Alfred Deakin, the gentleman in question, "as steadfast as the Rock of Ages, and as clear and pure and crystal as a block of ice." From which picturesque language of a promoter it is to be gathered that some people admire virtue who do not practice it.

A Sign of the Times.

The New South Wales Anglican Synod is in session just now. A great deal of business relating to the Anglican Church and its institutions has been disposed of, but one motion outside the usual routine was dealt with. This was a motion expressing sympathy with those shop assistants whose employers keep them at work during unreasonably long hours, house them badly and surround them with unsanitary conditions. A member of synod moved "the previous question," on the ground that it was no part of the synod's business to pass "abstract resolutions." Eventually the motion was carried unanimously. The motion, coming as it did after an agitation on early closing in the daily press, is an illustration of how voices from the outer world penetrate ecclesiastical gatherings, and may be taken as a sign of the times.

Sydney, N. S. W. W. A.

MASSACHUSETTS ENDEAVORERS IN WORCESTER.

The Bay State Endeavorers swarmed again this year to a great industrial city, and the "heart of the commonwealth" overflowed last Thursday and Friday with good cheer to the gathered delegations. Clouded skies are no longer a menace to the brave-hearted youths who have weathered our recent State and national gatherings, but fair skies were none the less welcome because unexpectedly cleared as if providentially favoring the visitors.

The Worcester Local Union members, over 2,000 strong, were imbued with the spirit of their conspicuous motto, "Serve the Lord with gladness," for the great and small work of preparation and entertainment was accomplished patiently and with apparent joy.

Not less than 1,200 manufactories support a population whose tendencies have made this place renowned as a city of churches, over eighty in all, two-thirds of which show special interest in Christian Endeavor. Educational advantages are represented by Clark University and the Polytechnic Institute and other superior institutions. So the conditions offer large fields and abundant returns to inspired workers for Christ.

The Massachusetts Union at this eleventh convention also celebrates its eighth anniversary of organization as the consolidation of its forerunners, the Eastern and Western State Unions. After that step an enlarged work followed year by year in the appointment of district secretaries and superintendents of mission, temperance, Sunday school and junior work. With increasing work has come a growing membership, reaching today a large figure, almost 50,000, to which nearly 15,000 Juniors should be added. That 1,753 Endeavorers have joined the churches, 1,072 associate members become active, and 417 Juniors joined older societies are gratifying indications which the secretary, Miss A. G. Tillson, recorded for the year.

An entire session was occupied in the important business of getting started right, and the entertaining societies took this opportunity of assuring their visitors of a welcome through the mayor, Hon. A. B. R. Sprague, and Dr. A. Z. Conrad as a representative of the churches. Rev. F. E. Hamilton responded as heartily, and the president of the State Union, Rev. F. L. Goodspeed, raised the standard of Christian Endeavor before its zealous adherents in a masterly address on the three cardinal traits of Christian Endeavor—aspiration, ministration and inspiration. At stated intervals the well-drilled chorus of 400 sang their greetings, and the elaborate decorations showed a welcome all the time.

Unflagging attention was the response to the intense earnestness with which the entire program was followed out in a broad line of helpfulness for the inward and outward life of young Christians. Such addresses as: The Power of Youth, by Dr. Wallace Nutting of Providence, R. I.; Christian Endeavor Magnetics—Socials, Conventions and Services; The Power of an Audacious Faith, by Rev. Oliver Huckel; The Source of an Enduring Enthusiasm, by Rev. B. A. Greene; and Our Affinities—the Preaching Service and the Church Prayer Meeting, allowed no hearer to leave the hall without causes for new determinations in his personal life. Then the field of labor was opened to view through such subjects as Christian Endeavor in the Work of Missions, the Sunday School, the Public Press and Temperance, American Citizenship—forcibly presented at this opportune time by Dr. C. C. Hall of Brooklyn—and Armenia, an ardent appeal and thrilling tale of most recent occurrences in Constantinople, by Rev. F. D. Greene. It was extended by the telling words of Rev. Messrs. W. L. Tenney, S. B. Meeser and Dr. W. E. Barton on The Imperialism of Public Sentiment and of Rev. J. A. MacColl and Pres. M. E. Gates on The Imperialism of Christ's Command. It is needless to say that with the announcement of that list of speakers and topics Mechanics Hall groaned with the burden of magnificent audiences, and hundreds were turned away who were less fortunate than the early comers.

The Juniors and their superintendents were responsible, as always, for more than a house full during their afternoon. Their processional and elaborate exercises occasioned almost continuous applause, and the impression that they have joined the ranks of their elder brothers and sisters for good was constantly emphasized. Miss N. G. Jerome is the superintendent of the Junior work, and with her enlarged corps of efficient assistants she looks forward with great enthusiasm to another year.

The devotional services preceding every session were an uplift, the evangelistic efforts in different parts of the city were opportunities for growth in service, the district conferences, the open parliament and the "chip basket" were helpful periods for studying methods. After touching many public questions by the hand of "resolutions" and deciding that Rev. E. P. Farnham, of Salem, should act as president for the year and in Lynn next fall, the nearly 4 000 delegates began to pack up, thinking all the while that Worcester was in earnest when it invited them here and that Lynn will have to provide a still larger convention hall than we have ever had before. For Massachusetts Endeavorism is on the up-grade and what its altitude will be next year can only be predicted. H. H. S.

A QUESTION OF COMITY AND MORE.

BY REV. R. M. TUNNELL, MANHATTAN, KAN.

Some time ago The Congregationalist published an editorial paragraph finding fault with the Presbyterians who have founded a college in, or near, Salt Lake City, to be a rival of the Congregational college established in that city several years ago. The paragraph was no doubt suggested by articles in Christian Education, the organ of the Congregational Education Society. I am fully persuaded that the complaint of the want of fairness of those Presbyterians in Utah is well founded. I wish to point out what I consider a far more unjustifiable and mischievous violation of Christian comity and an invasion of the rights of the Congregational churches of Kansas, not by brethren of another faith and order, but by the Congregational Education Society itself.

There are 183 Congregational churches in Kansas with a resident membership of 11,485.

These churches have one college, Washburn, founded thirty-three years ago, and one living academy. That Kansas colleges and academies must look to New England for endowment for many years to come is conclusively evidenced by the fact that our 183 churches gave only $1,334 during the year 1895 for education.

Kansas churches have put themselves on record at a meeting of their General Association as emphatically opposed to the founding or support of more than one college in the State. The Congregational Education Society some twenty-three years ago declared itself as favoring the policy of founding one, and only one, college in each State.

Washburn College, in this the most prosperous year of its history, has enrolled only a few more than 200 students. It could, with its present buildings, equipment and teaching staff, easily take care of three times that number, and such an increase would bring the college to the end of the year clear of the alarming deficit that must annually be provided for by its board of trustees. As additional light on the educational situation it ought to be known that there are more than thirty colleges and universities in the State, enough, such as they are, for ten times our population and wealth.

In the face of these facts a new college was founded last year in Wichita, and it has actively entered New England to solicit funds to pay its debts, finish its building and endow it. The Congregational Education Society, without waiting to inquire whether this new college is approved by the General Association of Congregational Churches of Kansas, has pledged to it $3,000 for the current collegiate year. The name of this new claimant on the bounty of the New England churches is Fairmount College. It is situated at Wichita, within thirty miles of three other living Christian colleges and in sight of the empty, but magnificent, buildings of Garfield University and Wichita University and the foundation stones of John Bright University, a graveyard of universities.

The veteran friends of Christian education, who long ago published to the world their creed of "One Congregational college for Kansas," appeal to the benevolent men and women of New England first for aid for their one struggling college, Washburn; and, if this appeal cannot be responded to, we beg that they will not set up a rival to divide the already insufficient patronage of our college.

A serious question of comity is here presented. Mr. Tunnell claims that the Education Society, without consultation with the churches of Kansas, is aiding to establish in that State a second Congregational college, in addition to the one now under their care. It should be said, however, in order to make the situation plain, that the General Association of the State has indorsed the institution referred to, as an academy or institute, and Mr. Tunnell himself, when he had charge of it a little more than two years ago, published a letter in which he said that "there is no better point in Kansas for a first-class college," and that "a first-rate college would have no rival in the territory tributary to our city." Our Western brethren have different ways of looking at these things. We are informed by the secretaries of the Education Society that the only action on record relative to its policy in this matter is the following by-law: "No such application [for aid to a college] can be approved by the society so long as it has upon its list another college in the State." It must be distinctly understood that we do not propose to discuss, nor to open our columns to the discussion of, the merits of Fairmount College. The points at issue, so far as we are concerned, are simply these: whether the Education Society ought to plant colleges where the churches of the State do not wish, or have not expressed any wish, to have colleges, and whether the society is wise in attempting to plant more than one college in any State. We believe that no second college ought to be planted or aided by the society in any State, at least till definitely requested to do so by the churches of that State. And we have long been convinced that schemes to plant small colleges with gifts from the East in order to increase the local values of land have done much mischief to the cause of higher education in the West.—EDS.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, OCT. 16.

Mrs. Kellogg, secretary of the Woman's Home Missionary Association, presided, and selected 1 Chron. 5: 20, as giving direction to the thought of the hour: "For they cried to God in battle, and he was entreated of them; because they put their trust in him." Among the subjects for prayer Mt. Holyoke College was mentioned and its recent fiery trial, Mrs. Gulliver leading the petitions in its behalf.

Mrs. Judson Smith gave some echoes of the meeting of the American Board, especially the woman's meeting.

It was an interesting coincidence that the calendar topics for the week, selected and arranged a year ago, all had reference to Harpoot and the work and workers there, and that the topic for Wednesday, the day of Dr. Wheeler's funeral, was Euphrates College, the institution of which he was so many years president and which so filled his heart to the very end of his life. Mrs. J. K. Browne of that station, who remains with her children in this country while Mr. Browne has returned to Harpoot, gave extracts from recent letters and many interesting items from her associates. It is the custom in every mission station to speak of "the mission circle," but at Harpoot, just now, with so many of the missionaries in this country, they call themselves "the semi-circle." The girls' department of the college, in charge of Miss Daniels, is going bravely on in a double dwelling house, where the accommodations are limited. Miss Bush went to Arabkir and Malatia with the Red Cross agents and has done much relief work. Miss Seymour has also visited several outstations. To a missionary's recent question, "What news?" a native answered, "Nothing but fear," and Dr. Barnum says, "We are where we were before, in the secret place of the Most High." A native pastor who was in prison some distance from Harpoot was earnestly prayed for, at the request of his sister-in-law, in one of Mrs. Barnum's women's meetings, and it was afterwards learned that his release was accomplished at that very time. Mrs. Thompson led the prayer for all these workers and their work.

Mrs. Capron spoke of the deepening of spiritual life, and said that there was nothing mysterious in it nor any mysticism about it. God is not calling us out of the world but he is testing his own. Miss Shattuck and Miss Bush have had remarkable experiences. These are not so much days for enthusiasm as for obedience, straightforward obedience. She had sometimes learned as much from the prayers of her sisters as from any books. The tests often come in unexpected ways. We do not give the Lord time enough.

The sudden death of Mrs. William Gallagher, president of Hampshire County Branch, was tenderly mentioned. Mrs. Schneider had that morning discovered, in an Armenian restaurant in Boston, a Bible whose inscription showed that it was presented in 1866 by Dr. and Mrs. Wheeler to Mrs. Kate P. Williams. It is still doing good service after thirty years.

Attention was called to the annual meeting of the Woman's Board, to be held in Manchester, N. H., Nov. 4, 5, where many missionaries are expected, representing the work in Africa, Turkey, India, China and Japan. Miss Child will give an account of her missionary tour, and Secretary Barton of the American Board will speak.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. H. A. BRIDGMAN.

Topic, Nov. 1-6. The Blessedness of Entire Surrender to God. John 15: 1-10.

"Unconditional surrender" was the word which flashed from General Grant's headquarters to the rebels under siege. "Unconditional surrender" is the message of the Bible from the time when Abraham was called to leave his home land and go forth as a pilgrim and a sojourner to the time when the Galilean fishermen left all and followed the new and wonderful teacher. Christianity is meant to be everything or nothing. Christ is the most exacting of masters. He deprecates any sudden, spasmodic, emotional commitment to him. He urges sitting down and counting the cost and after that the surrender of everything else. So we are to test our loyalty by asking if any other affection or interest of our life stands between him and us, and we must be willing to sacrifice even that unto him.

As to the blessedness of this entire consecration, any one who has seen it exemplified in our heroic missionaries, for instance, or in some life here at home which has been made pure and beautiful by long and complete devotion to Christ, needs no further witness. It is the amphibious Christians, as some one has called them, those who stand with one foot in the world and the other in the kingdom, that have the least satisfaction in their religious life. Indeed, a complete absorption in the world is almost preferable. God never opens the riches of his love to those who have not come to choose them above every earthly good. But when once admitted to that secret place it is then that one finds for the first time real joy and peace.

So much for the ideal side of our subject, but to attain this fullness of surrender is hard. We think we reach it at consecration meetings or in the solitude of our closets, but when we come out we find the busy world still has a big hold upon us. Our only safety is in a frequent and sincere reconsecration of ourselves, and in claiming and expecting each time more of the divine power. This is a prayer that we may well offer daily:

Thou hidden love of God, whose hight,
Whose depth unfathomed no man knows;
I see from far thy beauteous light,
Inly I sigh for thy repose;
My heart is pain'd, nor can it be
At rest till it find rest in thee.

Is there a thing beneath the sun
That strives with thee my heart to share?
Ah! tear it thence, and reign alone,
The Lord of every motion there.
Then shall my heart from earth be free,
When it hath found repose in thee.

Parallel verses: Matt. 8: 19, 20; Luke 14: 25-27; 18: 23; 22: 33; John 6: 67, 68; Rom. 8: 35; Phil. 1: 21.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, Oct. 25-31 Modern Signs of the Holy Spirit's Power. Joel 2: 28-32; 1 Cor. 12: 1-13.

In making the work to be done for God appear practicable; in convincing men of the truth; in bringing Christians into unity of spirit.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

An eminent divine with a peculiarly penetrating voice has lately sojourned at a fashionable summer resort. He is an early riser, and every morning his calls to the bell boy and his greeting to his neighbors were heard through the halls, driving away sleep. The other morning he received an affectionate epistle from his daughter, saying, "Please read Prov. 27: 14." The old gentleman, who enjoys heartily telling this incident, turned to his well-worn Bible and read a verse that was new to him. It was this: "He that blesseth his friend with a loud voice, rising early in the morning, it shall be counted a curse to him." It is worthy of wider application.

Gleanings From Our Mail Bag.

MR. PUDDEFOOT REPLIES TO HIS CRITIC.

I should like to say a few words and if possible answer the questions of Mr. Charles A. J. Marsh in The Congregationalist of Sept. 3. Mr. Marsh quotes from Hon. J. G. Blaine's statement in 1878: "If, as the most reliable statistics affirm, there are nearly $7,000,000,000 of coin or bullion in the world very equally divided between gold and silver, it is impossible to strike silver out of existence as money, without results which will prove depressing to millions and utterly disastrous to thousands."

Mr. Marsh asks, "Was Mr. Blaine an ignorant man?" No, but silver as money has not been stricken out of existence. Silver is good money today, but it cannot be used as the unit of value. Mr. Marsh wants to know the mints in which all this silver is. I cannot inform him of the exact amount at each mint, but the United States Government has in coin and bullion about $600,000,000; of this large amount about $60,000,000 are in circulation. In 1870 we had a population of 38,000,000 with a total money supply of $722,868,461, or a per capita supply of $18.73, but none of this was coin except a few millions of gold on the Pacific coast. In 1895 we have 70,000,000 of people and a total money supply of $2,398,200,534, or a per capita supply of $34.32, of which over one-half is gold and silver in about equal proportions. So that instead of a contraction there has been a steady expansion of coin, and in regard to silver the government has coined more silver dollars in the last few years by many millions than it had in all our history. In 1873 the world produced 4,650,000 ounces of gold and 63,267,000 ounces of silver. In the United States we produced, in 1873, of gold 1,741,500 ounces and of silver 27,651,000, making the world's production of silver at a ratio of 13 61 to gold. In 1893 the world's production of gold was 7,609 000 ounces, the silver 166,092,000 ounces. In the United States we produced 1,739,300 ounces of gold and 60,000,000 ounces of silver, making the ratio of the world's production of silver 21.83. Now it is evident that silver increasing at this rate cannot be made the unit of value in any one country. It is a fact that when the Government bought 2,000,000 ounces a month silver declined in value and when this was increased to over four millions a month it still declined.

Mr. Warren L. Noyes says I misrepresented the silverites. I only took them at their own words, sixteen to one. They want sixteen ounces of silver to be valued as much as one ounce of gold, when it takes nearly thirty-two ounces to buy the ounce of gold. Now there is one thing the Government cannot do, that is, create values. Government can state the value of a piece of silver or gold but cannot alter its value. All history proves this international law is not so strong as natural law, and the law of supply and demand is a natural law. There is plenty of money in the country to do a far larger business than we are now doing, for nearly all business is carried on by checks, which are better than coin so long as we have confidence in the check, that is, that if at any time we wish gold for it that the gold will be forthcoming. Now a gold dollar may be melted, cut to pieces, ground to powder, and yet its purchasing power remains undiminished the world over, but once cut up or melt your silver dollar and you can get but half its value in any commodity. Now if the silver man is honest he must be willing to put into a silver dollar a dollar's worth of silver, just as we put in a dollar's worth of gold into a gold dollar.

So far as the fall in prices is concerned, that ought to be a matter of rejoicing, or why does the farmer's wife go to town on bargain day, and why does the farmer use a combined mower and reaper if not to produce a result at a less cost? What has man been trying to do through the ages but to lessen the cost of production? To make the earth yield her increase he will send as far as Egypt for mummies of kings and cats in order to fertilize his fields and then, when a bountiful harvest is the result, inevitably the price must fall. We understand well enough that great crops lessen prices. Why not understand that a large increase of silver ore must lessen its price? Mr. Marsh seems to make merry over my idea of free silver. Well, if it is not to be free, how am I to get any of it any easier than I do now, and if I can get it easier by what alchemy is it to be made more valuable when I do get it? No, no, friends! Be sure there is only one way and that is by hard work. Don't be led astray by the "dollar of the daddies"; they had no silver dollars, for silver was worth too much and found its way to the smelting pot as fast as men could get it.

FREE COINAGE NO PANACEA.

The article in The Congregationalist of Sept. 2, entitled Silverites Misrepresented, contained several statements that disclose an ignorance of certain facts with which every voter should be familiar if he wishes to vote intelligently at the coming election. While the writer is correct in saying "that no party advocates the substitution of silver for gold as a standard of value," the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1 would inevitably bring the country to a silver standard, a result which I think the free silver leaders wish to bring about. The talk about bimetallism on the stump is designed to throw dust in the eyes. They know that bimetallism cannot be successfully established in the manner proposed.

In regard to the double standard of value, the history of coinage in this country shows the impossibility of maintaining two standards any length of time. The law of 1792 established the double standard, and as long as the relative value of the two metals remained at the ratio of 15 to 1 it worked all right, but in a short time gold increased in value, and as a result went out of circulation, and silver became the actual standard of value and so remained until 1834, when the ratio was changed to 16 to 1, with the result that silver, being undervalued in the law, disappeared from circulation and gold became the standard of value and has so remained ever since. All this wild talk about the demonetization of silver in 1873, and the attempt to trace all our troubles to that act, is deprived of all sense and meaning in the light of the real facts in the case.

The law of 1873 establishing a gold standard was simply a recognition of a condition that had existed since 1834. An interesting fact in this connection is that Senators Stewart and Jones both made strong arguments in favor of the gold standard at the time the law was passed. It seems a little odd to hear people lamenting the demonetization of silver when we have $600,000,000 in circulation at the present time, either as coin or silver certificates.

To attribute the hard times, fall in prices, etc., to the demonetization of silver is a mistake. These things can be more logically accounted for in other ways. There is not much doubt but that the present business depression is caused by this agitation of the silver question. Bad as the present condition is, it would in all probability be infinitely worse if the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1 should become an accomplished fact. C. G. B.

A PLEA FOR THE OLD BIBLE.

In a recent issue of The Congregationalist Prof. Irving F. Wood of Smith College has an article entitled The Adult Class and the New Bible. I have looked eagerly in later issues for comments on the article by some older and abler man who believes in the old Bible. None appearing, I beg for space in which to speak a word for a large class of young ministers, who have passed through the fiery trials of higher criticism of seminary life, and live to hold to and preach the old Bible.

After three years of life and study and experience outside the halls of criticism, the conviction has deepened upon me that there is no "new Bible" save the one the newly converted man finds when he opens the old mother's Bible. That is new to him—precepts, promises, prophecies, grace and love—all new from cover to cover. He learns for the first time that there is a "thus saith the Lord" running through the book from start to finish. Would any one have this Bible—a God-speaking book in every page—robbed of its power over the soul and made a doubtful book? And yet this is one of the most serious charges against the "new Bible." A young man full of zeal for God and love of the Bible, when led into the fog of criticism, making a "new Bible," feels his zeal cooling and his love dying.

The atmosphere of higher criticism is not healthful to the faith that works by love. It is not a matter of speculation or guesses that the German, English or American schools of critics have had, and still have, a paralyzing effect upon the faith of many a man who enters our seminaries. It has the same effect that the reduction of temperature has upon some animals—makes them sluggish and lifeless. Who among this generation of theological students has not witnessed this deadening effect of criticism upon the spiritual life of seminary friends. It is not a "new Bible" we want, but the old God-filled Bible. Not a Bible of which we are not quite sure whether this or that passage is the word of the Lord or no, but a Bible in which there is not a book, nor a chapter, nor a sentence which did not proceed out of the mind of God and hence profitable, according to 2 Tim. 3: 16. We need a Bible about which we can say positively when we read from the pulpit, whether we read in Genesis, or Daniel, or Jonah, or the Gospel of John, or Hebrews, "Thus saith the Lord Almighty."

A large number of young men in the ministry, and others just entering upon those sacred duties, feel profoundly that it is not the bible of the German school of critics, neither is it Dr. Driver's bible, nor Dr. Briggs's bible, etc.—fallible books, properly written without capitalization—they want to study and preach. They want the good old Bible of Spurgeon, of Miss Havergal, of F. B. Meyer, of C. H. M., of Joseph Cook, of Dwight L. Moody. And they regret exceedingly that this latter Bible was not even introduced to them in the seminary in the course of study, while on every hand they had somebody's "new bible" thrust upon their attention or given them for study.

We hear much and read much, these days, about the ministry being full, crowded, in fact. Hundreds of preachers without pastorates! Why is this, with the whole heathen world crying with a mightier Macedonian cry than Paul heard? One of the reasons for this alarming condition is, preachers have a Bible that is without authority. The hundreds of men without pastorates have no gospel for the heathen and no gospel for the small, weak churches at home. They have a gospel for revenue only. And all this simply because they have no Bible which commands them as the audible, mighty voice of God to "go preach," no Bible that stirs their souls to their very depths, so that with fear and trembling they say, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel."

Old Bible preachers do not want any "new Bible" taught their adult Sunday school classes. They are too anxious to keep all skeptical rot away from their people.

C. W. Greene.

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, Oct. 26, at 10 A. M. Address by William Lloyd Garrison. Subject, The Ethics of Taxation.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING, under the auspices of the Woman's Board of Missions, in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 o'clock A. M.

WORCESTER SOUTH CONFERENCE, Sutton, Oct. 28.

WORCESTER CENTRAL CONFERENCE, Piedmont Church, Worcester, Oct. 27.

WORCESTER NORTH CONFERENCE, Hubbardston, Oct. 27.

THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION will hold its seventeenth annual meeting at Berkeley Temple, Boston, on Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 10.30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Among the speakers will be Miss Miriam B. Means, Mrs. J. D. Kingsbury, Mrs. M. I. Fuller, Miss Nathalie Lord, Miss Lilla V. Davis, Mrs. J. W. Danielson, Mrs. C. L. Goodell and Rev. W. G. Puddefoot. An inexpensive lunch will be served. A full attendance is desired.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS will hold its twenty-ninth annual meeting in the Franklin Street Church, Manchester, N. H., on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 4, 5. Morning sessions at 10; afternoon sessions at 2. Addresses are expected from missionaries from Africa, Turkey, India, China, Japan. Reports of the home and foreign departments of the work will be given, also an account of the visit of the home secretary to mission fields. It is hoped that reduction of fares over New England railroads will be secured, of which notice will be given later.

ABBIE B. CHILD, Home Secretary.

FALL STATE MEETINGS.

Idaho,	Boise,	Oct.
New Mexico,	Albuquerque,	Oct.
Utah,	Ogden,	Nov. 9.
Alabama,	Shelby,	Wednesday, Nov. 11.
Connecticut Conf.,	Winsted,	Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Benevolent Societies.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY is represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No. 9 Congregational House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin B. Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room No. 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. Annual membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Contributions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS, Congregational House, No. 1 Somerset Street, Boston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles E. Swett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in New York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Congregational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; Miss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible House, New York. Missions in the United States, evangelistic and educational, at the South and in the West among the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Congregational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street.; Cleveland office, Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may be sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY —Church and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D. D., Secretary; Treasurer, 59 Bible House, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Including work of former New West Commission.) Aids four hundred students for the ministry, eight home missionary colleges, twenty academies in the West and South, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New Mexico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congregational House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

CONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.— Contributions used only for missionary work. Rev. George M. Boynton, D. D., Secretary; W. A. Duncan, Ph. D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treasurer, Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.— Treasurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, Boston Address applications to Rev. A. H. Quint, D. D., Congregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little timely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign missionaries and ministers and their families, the committee of the National Council asks from each church one splendid offering for its permanent invested fund. It also invites generous individual gifts. For fuller information see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year-Book, 1893, page 62. Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, New Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B. Forbes, Hartford, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trustees of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States" (a body corporate chartered under the laws of the State of Connecticut) [here insert the bequest], to be used for the purpose of Ministerial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States at its session held in Chicago in October, 1886.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, established by the Massachusetts General Association, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies. Careful attention is given to applications from without the State. Room 22A, Congregational House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

THE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized 1827. Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. Open day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. Daily prayer meeting, 11 A. M., Bible study, 3 P. M. Sunday services, usual hours. Meetings every evening except Saturday. Branch mission, Vineyard Haven. Is a Congregational society and appeals to all Congregational churches for support. Send donations of money to B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Congregational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort bags, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, 287 Hanover St. Bequests should read: "I give and bequeath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum of $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and purposes of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT ON THIS WEEK'S NEWS.

At least four among the most important Congregational churches have called pastors within the last few days. In all these cases strong men, trained in our own denomination, have been invited to fill places requiring great wisdom and devotion—men who have shown their fitness for such places by years of faithful service. Dr. George C. Adams of St. Louis possesses exceptional gifts for harmonizing the elements in the First Church, San Francisco. Its existence has been seriously imperiled of late, but it can, we believe, be restored to its former prosperity and historic place. Union Church, Boston, fronting downtown conditions, looks to Rev. S. L. Loomis, who has not only embodied the fruits of long study in his book, Modern Cities, but as Dr. Meredith's assistant in Brooklyn and as a pastor in Newark has coped successfully with such conditions. Union Church, Worcester, seeks Dr. Tuttle. In addition to a fruitful experience in general pastoral work he has that special knowledge of young men that is gained in a college pastorate. Mr. Ramsdell's youthful enthusiasm and energy have borne good fruit at Gardner, and Pilgrim Church, Cambridgeport, is ready to avail itself of such capacities. It were greatly to be desired that all our churches would choose as wisely.

One use of adversity is to show us our impotence without God. A revived California church, venturing to call a pastor in these troublous times, defines its position as "without debt or missionary aid, not self supporting, but leaning on the Everlasting Arms." Such frank acknowledgment of dependence nerves the human arm to do its utmost, while leaving the outcome with the Almighty.

The report of the Oregon Association shows that foreign missions had a fair share of attention. Yet that State is not represented in the corporate membership of the American Board, its contributions being too small to entitle it to such representation. Will not Oregon give more than $300 to foreign missions the coming year?

We have to record an instance in Oregon in which Free Masons seem to have outdone a religious denomination in fraternal courtesies to a Congregational church.

Such good connections as were made at a recent change of pastorates in Michigan leaves no long, tedious months or years of uncertain expectancy or failing enthusiasm.

One could hardly ask a better record than that of the church in Iowa City in which, during the last nine years, no communion has passed without accessions.

Many ministers would like to know the secret of that Iowa pastor's continued power to satisfy his flock after thirty years' service. Perhaps his willingness to relinquish his hold upon them serves only to strengthen it.

What wonder that optimism "predominated" with such good reports at the California State meeting.

An illustration of the power of the church to mold the life of a community is furnished in a Chicago item.

Evidently the new church in New York city is to be a stanch supporter of missions.

A Baltimore church has the right idea in reaching classes who need its help.

THE BOSTON YOUNG MEN'S CONGREGATIONAL CLUB.

Feeling the lack of fellowship and knowledge of each other, and desirous of developing denominational esprit de corps, a group of young men in the churches of greater Boston have organized the Young Men's Congregational Club. Notwithstanding the existence of several clubs of Boston Congregationalists, they believe that there is room for another which will give younger men an opportunity to become members, and encourage them in promoting their own and the denomination's we fare. A constitution has been prepared and adopted after thorough discussion. The following officials have been elected: president, Morris A. Hall, Brookline; vice-presidents, George B. Graff, Newton, and George P. Morris, Boston; secretary, Henry H. Stickney, Chelsea; treasurer, E. A. Lamson, Roxbury; and Louis L. G. de Rochemont, Chelsea, auditor. The chairman of the social committee is Mr. H. T. Abbe of Dorchester, and the chairman of the membership committee is Mr. W. Fred Berry of the Congregational Bookstore, 1 Somerset Street, who, in behalf of the committee, will welcome applications for membership. The first meeting of the club will be held Nov. 11.

This, so far as we know, is the first club of its kind in our denomination, but the young Baptists of Boston have had a similar organization for several years, and it has flourished and greatly benefited all concerned. If the club can keep its membership within reasonable limits so that fellowship can actually develop through real personal knowledge of the several individuals; if physical food can be made secondary to mental and spiritual provender; if the talent within the club can be developed and relied upon, and imported speakers be the exception and not the rule, the club will do a work much needed. Needless to say we wish it "Godspeed."

CLEVELAND FELLOWSHIP.

The opening of a new church year brings unusual activity in the Cleveland Congregational churches and occasions for renewed expression of the fellowship which is uniting us more closely every year.

The installation of Rev. E. S. Rothrock, Sept. 29, was of rare interest, and the two hours' keen and kindly examination, in which all the members of the council joined, was intellectually and spiritually stimulating. After a year and a half of faithful work, Park Church installs him with great affection. Though four other denominations have located in the immediate vicinity since this Congregational church was organized, it is doing thorough work for the community.

The following Monday the monthly Ministers' Meeting was made an all day gathering in the new and beautiful Trinity Church. Pastors brought their wives; the Trinity ladies served an excellent dinner for a small fee, inviting many of their own members also to dine with the guests. The morning and afternoon sessions were full of spiritual power. Rev. E. S. Rothrock reviewed Andrew Murray's Spiritual Life, and other subjects were Church Finances, Woman's Work in the Church, and The Power of the Church over Society and over Souls.

Irving Street Church has just celebrated its forty-fifth anniversary. It existed many years as a Bible Christian church, but became Congregational in 1884. About four years ago it seriously considered removing from its present location, which is now occupied largely by Jews and Roman Catholics, but a council advised its remaining, although scarcely any of its members now live in the vicinity. Under the present energetic young pastor, Rev. J. A. Davidson, who graduated from Oberlin Seminary in 1895, the church has become independent of the H. M. S., has taken on new life and hope in all its departments, and is ministering most effectively to its own community. The anniversary celebration extended through several days, former pastors were present and the church takes fresh courage for its work.

Union Church has celebrated its tenth anniversary with a week of fellowship meetings, inviting all its sister churches. In the ten years it has grown from eleven members to over 200, and has erected an attractive frame building, which is now too small for its growing congregation and Sunday school. Rev. E. E. Scovill, now in Chillicothe, was pastor for eight years and did effective work. Rev. C. H. Lemmon, the present pastor, is building wisely on the foundations so well laid, and the church maintains an aggressive evangelistic spirit and is a great power for righteousness in its community. It is not yet independent of the H. M. S., but is a striking illustration of the wisdom of generous home missionary aid to struggling enterprises in growing suburban neighborhoods of great cities. I. W. M.

GOOD BITS FROM WESTERN MICHIGAN.

A season of remarkable fertility draws to a close and the husbandmen are harvesting more grain and fruit than was ever known in the peninsula State. In Grand Rapids alone over $1,000,000 have been paid in cash to the farmers for peaches. Prices have been low, but the abundance of every product goes far to make up the difference.

Michigan farmers are not asking for "repudiation" and are liable to meet that accusation against them with an emphatic protest in November. Our ministers and people are nearly a unit for sound money, and the idea that Michigan is a doubtful State on this issue is ridiculous to those who live here. But political interest absorbs our attention. In spite of good advice from "the wise and prudent," the issue creeps into sermons and prayer meetings, and mass meetings and torchlight processions are better attended than the midweek conference.

Notwithstanding the unrest of four years, our churches have prospered, and their constituents have mutually bravely borne their burdens. Just now quite a few fields are vacant and a larger number of pastors are seeking settlement.

In the midst of political conflict the temperance question has not been forgotten, and the Anti-Saloon League, in which men of all belief may combine, has been formed, the State convention at Lansing being an occasion of great interest and apt to have far-reaching results in the way of aggressive and united efforts to gradually abolish the saloon. In this effort our ministers are taking a worthy part.

Olivet College opens with an increased number of students and a strengthened faculty and looks forward to the best year of its history. President Rodger of Benzonia conducted an interesting summer school and is making vigorous efforts to put that college upon its feet after a discouraging history. Superintendent Warren goes up and down the State, cheering the home missionaries with his unfailing optimism and wise counsel. Up to the present time there has been a slight decrease in the gifts for home missions, but this is more than matched by a large decrease in expenditures, and but for the failure of a bank which held over $1,100 of our home missionary deposits the work would be in better shape than ever before. D. F. B

FROM THE HAWKEYE STATE.

Iowa's semi-centennial celebration at Burlington, lasting eight days, was an imposing and inspiring gathering. Dr. H. W. Thomas, once a pastor at Burlington, preached an appropriate sermon Sunday, and able addresses were given each day by leading men and women of Iowa. The achievements in moral and educational lines were made particularly prominent, though the material prosperity of the State was not overlooked. Iowa is justly proud of what she has accomplished in a half-century.

In the death of Rev. Harvey Adams the famous Iowa Band has lost its oldest member. He was a man of power, and for more than forty years wielded a great influence in the State. For several years he has lived in retirement at New Hampton. His presence in that church was a benediction to both pastor and people. Three of the band—Drs. A. B. Robbins, Ephraim Adams and William Salter—still remain with us and are active in every good work.

Good Dr. A. L. Frisbie has just celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his pastorate in Des Moines with exercises full of interest. The people of Plymouth Church showed their appreciation of the work of Dr. Frisbie and his estimable wife by substantial gifts. When the pastor began his work there the church had a membership of only 169; now the enrollment is over 600. It has made its power felt, not only in the capital city but throughout the State. A goodly number of the neighboring pastors were present at the celebration to extend their hearty congratulations.

Dr. E. S. Hill recently preached a sermon commemorative of his thirty years in the pastorate. Those who know him intimately do not wonder that he abides with the same people so long. A brief quotation from the sermon reveals the spirit of the man: "I might say in Paul's words, 'It is my heart to live and die with you'; and it is in my mind to die somewhere else if that is best for you. I have no charges to make against this church and no complaint against the community. When the time comes for the younger man who is coming to come, I hope to go without a bitter thought."

Not all our pastorates are so long, and the value of a pastorate cannot always be estimated by its length. Rev. E. A. Berry has taken up the work at Cedar Rapids and is pushing it with vigor. Rev. Mahlon Willett at Decorah and Rev. O. H. Holmes at Cresco have won the hearts of the people, and the outlook in those fields is bright. Rev. F. J. Douglass has closed a successful pastorate at Ames, and Rev. H Paul Douglass has been called to succeed him. Rev. N. F Douglass has just begun work at Eagle Grove. The Douglass clan is numerous and the churches are all the stronger thereby.

The cause of education has not suffered so much by the hard times as some other things. The people feel that an education is not a luxury, but a necessity. The English-German College at Wilton and Tabor College are moving forward. Iowa College has a Freshman Class of 119, the largest in the history of the institution. The work in all departments is pushed with vigor. In this connection it is worthy of mention that one board of education has decided to burn corn as fuel the coming winter. It is claimed that corn at ten cents a bushel is cheaper fuel than coal at the present price

To say that the last session of the Dubuque Association was a stormy one would be to state the case very mildly. The request of the Bay Conference that the Dubuque Association rescind its former action concerning the case of Dr. C. O Brown was read. A motion was made that the request be laid upon the table. Some felt that this would be the best thing to do if it would put an end to the whole matter. One of the venerable fathers of the association took the position that the Dubuque Association had done wrong in its former action and that the proper thing to do was to rectify the wrong. After a long and acrimonious debate the motion to lay the request upon the table prevailed by a decisive majority. Dr. C. O Brown was present and at once presented a written request to be received into membership. Then the storm broke out afresh. Several of those who voted for the other motion were not in favor of receiving Dr. Brown into membership. Twenty-two voted in favor of the motion to receive him, and seventeen against it. This association allows each church four delegates besides the pastor. It has thirty-two churches and twenty-five ministers on its roll. A full representation of the association would give it over 160 votes. Thirty-nine votes only were cast. Of the twenty-two votes cast for receiving Dr. Brown into membership, sixteen came from the two Dubuque churches and the church at Strawberry point, of which Dr. Brown's son is pastor. The matter did not stop at this. When it came to correcting the minutes the point was made that the vote to receive Dr. Brown into membership was illegal because the constitution requires a candidate for membership to be a "regularly ordained minister, living within the bounds of the association and presenting credentials of good standing." A motion was made to strike out that portion of the minutes relating to Dr. Brown's election. The moderator refused to put the motion. The mover then appealed to the house and the moderator refused to put the appeal.

A good deal has been said in Iowa about the "small" conference on the Pacific coast that suspended Dr. Brown. The above record shows how small was the vote which assumed to restore him to standing in the ministry.

W. W. G.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION.

During the first week in October this association gathered in Sacramento—its fortieth session. The first meeting was held in this same place in 1857, and altogether at seven different times this city has been the meeting place. Only four of those present at the inception of Congregationalism were with us on this occasion, one of them, Rev. T. H. Warren, having called to order every meeting of the body.

The opening sermon was by Rev. William Rader on The Deepening of the Spiritual Life, a clear presentation of the means at hand. Then organization was effected by the choice of Rev. G. B. Hatch as moderator and Judge Sawyer of San Francisco as assistant. Rev. H. E. Banham and Rev. William Butler acted as scribes.

The program presented such subjects as Truths Needing Emphasis Today, Effective Methods of Christian Service, The State of Religion in the Churches and Our Resources of Power for Christian Service. They were handled in a masterly manner and an optimistic spirit predominated. Institutional methods so long as rightly used were commended, and especial interest was attracted by an experience of getting men to work through the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip. A new feature here was the method of reports from the churches. A narrative was prepared, including considerable detail. The twelve months have been full of interest, but finances have, of course, been in some instances difficult of management.

Due recognition was given to our noble band of women and an afternoon hour full of interest was enjoyed with them. The president, Mrs Williams, made unmistakably plain the relationship of the union to the churches. The Woman's Board of the Pacific, Mrs. Jewett, president, gave us an Oriental Symposium with costumes, and introduced Miss Perkins of India. At other sessions the C. S. S. and P. S., the C. C. B. S., the A. M. A. and the American Board were heard from. Then followed Rev. C. R. Brown, Boston's late gift to Oakland, who captivated all hearts by his first words before his California friends.

An evening was devoted to home missions. Superintendent Harrison reported 310 conversions and 746 additions to the missionary churches. Then Rev. W. C. Day from the "Mines of Calaveras," Rev. G. A. Jasper from the "Redwoods of Humboldt," and Rev. H. H. Cole from the "Mountains of Trinity" gave graphic descriptions of work wonderfully blessed. Mr. Cole aroused especial interest as he related how Weaverville—one of his parishes—after a score or more years of dependence, had, in the twelve months of his labors, relinquished $300 aid and assumed self-support, and had shared with the community in contributing over $1,200 for a "temperance spa."

A children's hour was conducted by Rev. E. S. Williams, and at a social hour toasts were given on Pomona College and Belmont School, Pacific Seminary, and of the unbounded hospitality of Dr. Hoyt and his flock.

OCCIDENT.

THE ASSOCIATION OF OREGON.

Forty-three out of the fifty-six churches in the State were represented by 123 pastors and delegates at the forty eighth annual meeting in Hassalo Street Church, Portland, Sept. 29, 30. Rev. C. H. Curtis is the pastor. Rev. J. L. Hershner of Hood River was elected moderator and Rev. R. C. Brooks of Eugene, clerk.

The narrative of the churches, by Rev. Daniel Staver, the registrar, placed before the association the results of the previous year in a graphic manner. Good work has been accomplished throughout our borders. Reports from forty-two churches were given.

Superintendent Clapp's report of home missions made hearts burn at the story of self-denial and moral heroism of many missionary workers. An earnest plea was made for greater self-sacrifice by church members in behalf of those less favored. The report of Superintendent Rowley of the Sunday School Society was also a stirring one. It had been his business and that of his helpers to pioneer the way into frontier settlements, largely in the mountainous regions of the State, particularly in Lane, Douglas and Klamath Counties, and 102 Sunday schools had been organized. The association sermon, by Rev. H. L Bates, was distinctively of a high order in its way. His subject was Fall in With God's Plan; text, "Thy kingdom come."

Two new pastors were introduced—Rev. R. C. Brooks, son of Rev. Dr. W. M. Brooks, late president of Tabor College, Iowa, recently called to the church at Eugene, and Rev. A. W. Ackerman, late of Sheffield, Ill., who has just come to the First Church, Portland. In these new men it is already evident that the working, aggressive force of Christianity in the Congregational order has been greatly strengthened.

Among the papers presented which aroused vigorous discussion were the following: The Opportunity of the Church in Solving Present Day Problems, by Rev. J. W. Cowan, D. D., of Oregon City; Denominational Comity or Competition—Which? by Rev. F. W. Parker, Pendleton; The Attitude of the Ministry Towards Temperance Reforms, by Rev. R. C. Brooks. The temperance discussion resulted in the passage of a resolution instructing the standing committee on temperance to make a careful study of the issues involved and report a specific plan of action, to the end that all moral forces in the community might be united against the common enemy.

No hours in these meetings are more inspiring than those given to the Woman's Home Missionary Union and the Oregon Branch of the Woman's Board of the Pacific. At the first an appreciative tribute was given to the memory of the late Mrs. G. H. Atkinson, then a paper was read by Rev. H. A. Schauffler of Cleveland, O, on A Great and New Work for Congregational Women. In the past year $542 were raised. The principal address at the Woman's Board meeting was given by Rev. J E. Walker on The Work in China, where he has been in mission work since 1872. He is a native Oregonian, born in 1844, and the son of Rev. and Mrs. Elkanah Walker, missionaries of the American Board in 1838. The branch raised $305 last year. The claims of the C. C. B. S. were faithfully presented by Rev. H. H. Wikoff, coast secretary.

Among the resolutions adopted was one pledging greater activity in supporting Pacific University at Forest Grove, now entering upon its forty-fourth year. This institution, without a superior on this coast, is the distinctive outgrowth of the early missionary labors here. The amount needed—$100,000—to make Dr. Pearson's offer of $50,000 available has not yet been raised, but the matter is being vigorously pressed and success will surely follow.

A plan for the creation of a Ministerial Relief Fund was adopted. The trustees of the Oregon H. M. S. will be the corporate body. The association for 1897 will be held with the Riverside Church, Hood River.

G. H. H.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Andover.

The Society of Inquiry held its annual reception to new members Oct. 14, at the house of Professor Taylor. Addresses were made and Professor Churchill gave enjoyable readings.——The class in exegesis with Professor Moore and Dr. Torrey will study certain portions of the text of the Old Testament. ——The Seniors have elected Mr. B. G. Mattson president and Mr. A. V. Bliss secretary.

Hartford.

A beginners' and an advanced class in German have been formed under Prof. Otto Schlutter.——The first meeting of the missionary club was held last Wednesday.——The general exercises were omitted last week.——The officers of the Junior Class are E. TreFethren, president, J. H. Gaylord, secretary and treasurer.

Yale.

The Leonard Bacon Club held its opening debate last week Wednesday in Marquand Chapel. The subject was: Resolved that the Minister Is Justified in Acting as a Party Man in Politics.——Rev. B. M. Wright of the Senior Class has been installed pastor of the Congregational church at Orange.——Among last week's lectures was that of Dr. Wilhelm Doerpfeld of Athens on The Theater of Dionysius.——Messrs. Lynch and Short of the Senior and Messrs Fraser and Ferris of the Junior Class will attend the A. M. A. meeting in Boston. ——The opening address of the annual course by the Missionary Association was given last week on Monday by Rev. G. A. Hood of the C. C. B. S.——Messrs. Wallace, Baker, Faukhouser, Ashjian and Riley of last year's Graduating Class have returned for further study.

Oberlin.

Professor Bosworth is engaged for the month to address the men's meeting of the Y. M. C. A. at Cleveland Sunday afternoons.——Prof. G. F. Wright represents Oberlin at the Princeton celebration this week.——Rev. Elizabeth T. Howland, for nearly three years pastor of the church at Napoli, is in attendance at the seminary. She comes warmly commended by her church and association as having been more than usually successful in her pastorate. ——The Finney Society, a literary club maintained by the students of the English course, has resumed its regular meetings. The men of the Slavic Department are organizing a similar club.

Chicago.

Professor Taylor was at the Wisconsin State Association.——Professor Paeth gives an enthusiastic report of our German work in the Dakotas.——Professor Mackenzie addressed the working men's meeting at Chicago Commons, last week Tuesday, on How America Appears to a Briton.——Last Thursday afternoon Rev. B. Fay Mills spoke before the students on the Armenian Atrocities. A collection of $46 was taken ——Friday evening the annual reception was given to the Junior Class. Speeches were made and Professor Paeth recited four German poems of his own.——Saturday afternoon the Inter-Seminary Economic Club, which meets fortnightly, resumed its work with the subject Social Extension of Christianity.——Sunday Professor Chamberlain, with instrumental and vocal musicians, helped inaugurate pleasant Sunday afternoons at Chicago Commons. He gave an address on The Social Function of Music.

Pacific.

Rev. G. B. Hatch of Berkeley has organized in his Sunday school a Bible Club for students in the University of California, and several of the seminary professors lecture one or more Sundays to them during the year.——The Students' Missionary Society has begun the year with large attendance at its meetings.——The students have begun their year's work in the various churches as visitors, teachers, prayer meeting and C. E. workers.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

MASS.—Andover Conference met Oct. 13 in Dracut. The church is among the oldest in the conference but it has never before entertained the body. Much interest was felt in the matter of admitting the rival delegates from the two bodies claiming to represent the First Church, Lowell, but as the conference is expressly forbidden by its constitution to exercise judicial power, it was voted to enroll the delegates of the body worshiping in the meeting house of the First Congregational Society; and the following report of the committee on credentials, after deliberation, was also passed: "In addition your committee find a list of delegates consisting of pastor, Sunday school superintendent and five delegates from the First Trinitarian Congregational Church of Lowell, and we recommend that this pastor, Sunday school superintendent and these delegates be admitted to act with and as members of this conference at this Dracut meeting." This action, of course, leaves the body worshiping in the meeting house with the First Congregational Society on the roll of the conference as before, and apparently recognizes, for the time being, the First Trinitarian Congregational Church, under the pastoral care of Rev. Mr. Kenngott, as a distinct body. The two conference subjects discussed were The Church's Relation to Culture and The Prayer Meeting.

The Essex South Conference met Oct. 14 at Lynn. The topics: The Next Thing to Do—in Preaching, Evening Service, Prayer Meeting, Church Finance, were presented in a series of suggestive addresses. The C. C. B. S. was represented by Secretary Hood, and the A. M. A. by Rev. Mr. Clarke of Tennessee, an effective preacher and singer and once a slave. Rev. F. D. Greene, secretary of the American Relief Commission, spoke in an instructive and thrilling way in behalf of the Armenians. A telegram was unanimously approved calling on President Cleveland forthwith to exact redress for property of American citizens destroyed in Turkey, and a generous collection was taken.

Suffolk North Conference, meeting in Somerville, Oct. 14, had as the leading subject Revival in Our Churches, with the sub-topics: Blessings of Revival (1) in deepening the life of believers, (2) in richer fellowship, (3) in fuller benevolence, (4) in reconciliation of sinners to God; Revivals Biblical; and How Secure Revivals through Church and Pastor.

The meeting of the Suffolk West Conference at Newtonville, Oct. 14, was marked by large attendance and strong addresses. The topics were: Four Factors in the Religious Culture of Children—The Public School Teacher, The Sunday School Teacher, The Preacher, The Home; Wants—More First Class Young Men to Enter Our Ministry, Power in the Midweek Meeting and A Spiritual Dynamic. The conference congratulated the church on the convenience and beauty of its new edifice.

ME.—Penobscot Conference held its semi-annual sessions at Burlington. Topics were: The Church, Its Foundation, History, Mission, and Its Relation to Home and Foreign Missions and to Sunday School and Young People's Societies, Its Place in the Community, What Does It Stand For? Rev. B. B. Merrill preached the sermon.

Piscataquis Conference met at Monson. The subjects were: What Have the People a Right to Expect from the Pastor—In Preaching, in Pastoral Work, in Midweek Meeting, Sunday School and C. E. Work. At the women's meeting 12 short papers from mission fields were given.

R. I.—The autumnal meeting of the Rhode Island Conference was held in the Plymouth Church, Providence. Twenty eight churches were represented, Rev S. H. Woodrow had the threefold distinction of being moderator, the pastor of the church and chairman of committee of arrangements. The morning topics were: The Work We Ought to Do, and How We Can Do It? Responsive discussion followed the speakers. The afternoon theme was: The Church, from the Standpoints of Its Business, Its Social, Its Educational, Its Moral and Spiritual Aspects. Four laymen were the leaders, each with finely prepared addresses. The evening address on A Moral Crusade, by Rev. J. C. Alvord, was a fine closing. The fraternal greetings of the Free Baptists of the State were pleasantly presented.

O.—Grand River Association met at Rock Creek Oct. 6, 7. Rev. W. H. Morton preached a stirring sermon. The themes were: The Value of the Church Service, The Open Secret of Church Success, The American Bible Society, The Sunday School Society, The Person and Work of Christ.

ILL.—Chicago Association held its semi-annual meeting Oct. 13 with the California Avenue Church, Dr. D. F. Fox, pastor. The attendance was large. The program was well arranged and well carried out. The topics were: The Preaching Needed for the Times, The Baptism of Spiritual Power, The Teacher and the Scholar in Sunday School Work, The Resources of Power for Christian Service as seen in the Devotional Life, in Personal Character, in the Word of God and in the Gift of the Spirit, and Missions. Speaking on the last topic, Rev. J. H. Roberts of China, Rev. G. D. Marsh of Bulgaria and Rev. Mr. Smith of India begged the churches to rally to the support of the work and render further curtailing impossible. The evening service took the form of a symposium on The Mission of the Church in Molding the Life of the Community.

MO.—The St. Louis Association met Oct. 15, at Hyde Park Church. It was a helpful meeting, calculated to develop spiritual power. Dr. Adams, who in 15 years has seen so many pastors come and go in St. Louis, attended the Association for the last time before leaving for California. Warm words of fellowship and appreciation were spoken on all sides. Hearty thanks were voted to Mr. Dugald Crawford of Pilgrim Church for his kindness to Hyde Park Church in its recent financial distress.

S. D.—Yankton Association held its fall meeting in Wakonda. An able sermon was preached by Rev. W. J. Marsh. Papers were read on Church Music, and Aids to Devotion in Worship. The claims of home and foreign missions and Yankton College also received earnest attention.

CLUBS.

MASS.—At the meeting of the Essex Club in Salem, Oct. 12, Dr. A. A. Berle of Brighton gave a well-considered and lively address on Themes Fit for the Pulpit, with sharp reflections on the present political and financial situation. A vigorous discussion ensued.

The Cambridge Club at its meeting last week considered Crime and Punishment. The speakers were J. W. Bailey, Esq., of the prison commission, Mrs. E. C. Johnson of Sherborn Reformatory and J. H. Scott, Esq., of Concord Reformatory. Present day and past methods of dealing with inmates of these institutions were outlined and discussed.

A good attendance marked the Newton Club's first meeting for the season, Oct. 19. The subject, Training and Development of Our Youth, was treated in admirable addresses by Miss S. L. Arnold, supervisor of Boston schools, who spoke on The Moral Training, and Rev. W. H. Davis, D. D., who spoke on The Spiritual Training. The report of the outlook committee by Dr. F. N. Peloubet gave interesting statistics as to the result of an examination on the facts of Christ's life used as a test in all the Newton Sunday schools. Of all the answers, 84 per cent. were quite right and 39 per cent. perfect.

The first meeting of the Worcester Club this season was held Oct. 12. The addresses were given by Dr. J. C. Berry, for 20 years a medical missionary in Japan in connection with the Doshisha University, who described the development of Japan and its missions, and Rev. W. W. Jordan on Constructive Elements in the Work of Missions. It is proposed to raise the membership limit of the club from 200 to 250.

R. I.—The Club of Providence and vicinity held its annual meeting Oct. 12. The address of the evening was by Rev. T. D. Anderson, D D., of Providence upon How Shall the Moral Culture of Our Schools and Colleges be Made More Effective? His words were choice in thought and in rhetorical beauty. The annual report showed a present membership of 286, with a balance of over $900 in the treasury. The election of officers placed as president J. F. Huntsman, Esq., and as secretary Howard W. Preston.

N. Y.—The New York Club at its meeting, Oct. 19, heard a discussion of The Currency Problem. The debate was opened by J. B. Walker, Esq., and President Schurman of Cornell, the former speaking for silver. The general attitude of the club as thoroughly in favor of the gold standard was apparent throughout.

O.—The Cleveland Club, by changing the date of its opening meeting, secured Secretary Judson Smith and Dr. A. H. Plumb as speakers on their way home from Toledo. The occasion was of rare profit with an inspiring message of courage as to the missionary outlook. Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Stanford and Miss Cozad of the Japan mission were also welcomed as guests.

MO.—The St. Louis Club held its fall meeting Oct. 15. The Civic Federation of St. Louis was discussed by the secretary, Mr. Walter Vrooman, by Rabbi Leon Harrison and Hon. R. G. Frost. It is interesting to note that Congregationalist, Jew and Roman Catholic were speaking together, and that men of all shades of political opinion and religious belief unite to purify the politics and better the government of the city.

NEW ENGLAND.

Boston.

The Ministers' Meeting in Pilgrim Hall last Monday was addressed by Rev. James H. Ross. His subject was From a Log College to Princeton University. He reviewed the history of the institution from its founding to the present time, speaking briefly of its more noted presidents and distinguished graduates.

Union. After the Friday evening meeting last week the church voted to call Rev. S. L. Loomis of Newark, N. J., to become pastor. He preached in this pulpit a Sunday in September with great satisfaction. He has been in Newark about six years.

Massachusetts.

AUBURNDALE.—An impressive service was that at the funeral of the veteran missionary to Turkey, Rev. Crosby H. Wheeler, D. D., Oct. 14. It was conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. C. M. Southgate. A sketch of Dr. Wheeler's life and work was given by Dr. J. L. Barton, secretary of the American Board, and prayer was offered by Dr. E. E. Strong. There were present members of the Allen and Barnum families, Dr. Wheeler's associates in missionary work for nearly 40 years. About 25 Armenians also attended, many of them former pupils of Dr. Wheeler. They were addressed eloquently in Armenian by Mr. Hachadoor Bannaian, formerly a teacher in the preparatory department of Euphrates College and now laboring among his countrymen in Worcester.

WORCESTER.—Union has extended a unanimous call to Rev. J. E. Tuttle, D. D., pastor of the College Church, Amherst. The new edifice will be completed by Jan. 1.——Pilgrim. Following the recommendations of the pastor, the church has arranged to open the gymnasium with classes for men and women under the direction of a competent instructor.——Hope. The Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip has taken up the work of circulating the colportage library books published by Mr. Moody, giving special attention to the men in the fire department. They will also hold cottage prayer meetings about the parish during the winter.——Park. The pastor, Rev. I. L. Willcox, preached a sermon, Oct. 11, appropriate to the fifth anniversary of his installation. During this time the church has built its new edifice at an expense of $28,000, increased in membership from 130 to 220 and the running expenses have grown from $2,000 to $4,000 a year, also $1,300 have been given in benevolence and over $20,000 have been raised for all purposes The pastor urged the enlargement of the Roll of Honor, which consists of those who pledge $1 a month in addition to pew rents to meet current expenses.

SPRINGFIELD.—First. The annual meeting was recently held. Marked improvement was reported. The membership is 959, while the offerings for the year amounted to $8,000. A feature of the year's work has been the large Sunday evening congregation, built up almost wholly through strong preaching. The salaried superintendent, Mr. Dixon, read a report advocating a thoroughly graded and up-to-date Bible school. This report created so much interest that it was repeated at the Sunday morning service.

HATFIELD.—After a pastorate of 20 years Rev. R. M. Woods has been given a leave of absence until April 1, to take a trip to India. He will visit his father-in-law, Dr. S. B. Fairbank of the Mara. thi mission, and his brothers-in-law, Rev. Messrs. Henry and Edward Fairbank, and other friends. Among the tokens of appreciation, Mr. Woods received from his people $160 at a reception given Oct. 16 by the young people.

PITTSFIELD.—First. An assistant pastor, Rev. R. F. Calkins, was ordained and installed last Monday evening. He has been at work several weeks already, as the successor of Mr. G. H. Viney. Mr. Calkins has traveled abroad a few years, occupied a chair in Iowa College two years and taught at Yale for two years. He studied for the ministry in connection with his college course. His father, Dr. Wolcott Calkins, preached the sermon.

The pastors of western Massachusetts are about all back and at work again refreshed by vacations.—— Dr. W. V. W. Davis of the First Church, Pittsfield, was at his cottage by the sea, Martha's Vineyard, and while he was away Rev. P. T. Farwell of Wellesley Hills supplied his pulpit. Mr. Farwell has many friends in this place who enjoy his occasional visits. ——Dr. L. S. Rowland of Lee spent his vacation on the Maine coast, in and about Portland.——A number of churches through the country are enjoying the pastorates of recent comers—Rev. Messrs. L. D. Bliss at Great Barrington, C. S. Rich at Stockbridge, W. L. Tenney at North Adams—and pleasant reports are heard of them all.

Maine.

SOUTH PORTLAND.—Bethany, organized two years ago, is one of the most promising new fields in the State. Its membership of 44 is constantly increasing. A commodious edifice, to cost over $4,500, is nearing completion. The church, after giving to the limit of its possibility, called a council of the Cumberland County churches Oct. 7 to seek advice and financial aid. The council voted to ask each church in the conference to appoint a money raising committee to aid in securing $1,500 for the completion of the exterior and the vestry, where services will be held during the coming winter. Rev. C. E. Andrews, who takes this work in connection with his pastorate of the Free Church, Deering, has contributed chiefly to its marked success.

AUGUSTA.—Mrs. Emmons Blaine has placed in the church a memorial window for her late husband. It was designed by herself, the subject being the Twenty-fourth Psalm, the first, third and fourth verses of which surround the design. Excellent music has been furnished since Jan. 1 by a volunteer quartet choir, whose efforts are highly appreciated by the congregation.

PORTLAND.—Second Parish. At its annual meeting, Oct. 8, the Ladies' Circle reported the large sum of $1,239 raised during the year.——Williston. The Young Ladies' Mizpah Band held a social and missionary meeting Oct. 9. The city of Peking was illustrated in outline, and its various parts occupied by young ladies dressed charmingly in Chinese costumes.

WESTBROOK.—Warren has just celebrated its 27th anniversary. An increase of 16 was reported in membership the past year. The Ladies' Aid Society has been a valuable auxiliary in the fund for painting the edifice. There are two flourishing branch Sunday schools.

AUBURN.—The resignation of Rev. L. J. Thomas was received with sincere regret by the congregation over whom he has had charge for 11 years—a term longer than any other resident minister. He feels compelled to seek change and rest, and goes to Vinalhaven on the Maine coast.

BUXTON.—Rev. C. H. Gates retires after a faithful pastorate. He has had a long and useful ministry, being ordained in 1851 and laboring for a few years in Iowa before coming East. He has held two pastorates here.

LEWISTON.—Pine Street. There is good interest in all branches of work. The Sunday school is large and the pastor is organizing a class of young men.

ELLSWORTH FALLS.—The contract for the new building has been signed and work is begun on the cellar. The dimensions are to be 40 by 70 feet.

New Hampshire.

HENNIKER.—The church and community recently received a sad shock by the confession of the pastor, Rev. F. L. Allen, of conduct on his part which, though not criminal, was highly unbecoming a minister. The church took prompt action in excommunicating him, and will speedily call a council to dissolve the pastoral relation. Mr. Allen has been pastor for the last 12 years, and by his many commendable qualities had greatly endeared himself to a large majority of his parishioners as well as to others. For this reason this occurrence is much more to be regretted.

DUBLIN.—The resumption of religious services during the past season has awakened such interest that endeavors are being made for their continuance indefinitely. Rev. Lysander Dickerman, D. D., has supplied acceptably for 10 Sundays and left for his home, but others have continued services thus far and the outlook is promising. Members of C. E. Societies in neighboring towns have charge of the afternoon meetings. A Sunday school will doubtless be organized, and all the lines of church work taken up. A C. E. Society has already been formed.

ACWORTH.—A beautiful harvest service was held Oct. 11. The audience-room was tastefully decorated with fruits, vegetables and autumn leaves, and the choir furnished a special program. The Sunday school had an unusually large attendance. In the afternoon 10 members of the choir went, with the pastor, to hold a harvest service at East Acworth in connection with the Sunday school recently formed there. The interior of the schoolhouse was made specially attractive.

WAKEFIELD.—The work of the church has moved forward steadily and successfully under the lead of the new pastor, Rev. G. M. Hamilton. He begins his second year auspiciously and with hopeful courage. After meeting all financial obligations in the shape of current expenses, $73 have been contributed for benevolence. Change of method has increased the Sunday school attendance.

MANCHESTER.—First. At a recent meeting of the Sunday Evening Service Club a vote to continue the work so auspiciously begun last winter was passed and the necessary arrangements made to provide special music and other attractive requisites to render the services as successful as possible.

WINCHESTER.—A good work is in progress under the efficient and inspiring leadership of Evangelist Gillam and Mr. C. L. Estey, the gospel singer, both of Boston. Over 125 persons have signed cards or risen for prayers.

HINSDALE.—The pastor, Rev. W. E. Renshaw, has recently given at Sunday evening services discourses on Classification of the Books of the Bible, Bible Geography and Bible Chronology.

SALISBURY.—The meeting house, which has been thoroughly repaired, was rededicated Oct. 4. The sermon was by Rev. J. H. Bliss and the prayer by Rev. T. S. Lewis.

NEWPORT.—An addition to the vestry has made room for a parlor, which Mrs. Dexter Richards is furnishing in an attractive manner.

The church in Rollinsford receives $2,000 as a bequest from the late Sarah Yeaton of Portsmouth.

Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE.—Beneficent. Special features in the Sunday evening services in the musical part of the program and in the responsive readings are increasing the attendance. The foreign department of the Sunday school was continued with no lessening of interest all summer.——Central. The annual meeting of the society was held Tuesday, Oct. 13, and the statement for the year was entirely satisfactory.——Union. The fiscal year has just closed with a clean balance sheet. The membership is the largest in the history of the church. The main floor is practically all occupied by pew holders. About $1,700 were raised in premiums. Dr. Wallace Nutting has begun a series of six evening sermons on The Common Schools, The Courts, Criminals, Legislative Bodies, The Poor, and The Sick, with applications to local circumstances.

PAWTUCKET.—Weeden Street. The 10th anniversary of the Sunday school occurred Oct. 4. It was celebrated by a special service, in which former officers, superintendents in particular, were heard. The church property is soon to be formally presented to the society by its present owners. The annual roll-call of the church occurred Oct. 5. Not one-half of the present membership could find room in their present quarters if all came at once.——Park Place. The State W. C. T. U. has just held a three-days' session with this church, large and enthusiastic congregations being present.

WOONSOCKET.—Globe raised a $400 debt in a few minutes at the Sunday service Oct. 4. The business stress has delayed the planned repairs until next year. The work among the Armenians has become financially self-supporting under Mr. De Kasparion. Since the rubber works opened they have returned to the city, and the pastor, Rev. J. C. Alvord, and his helpers find the best work is done by their visits and services held in the homes of the Armenians.

CENTRAL FALLS.—That this is the 30th year of the pastorate of Rev. J. H. Lyon is a specially interesting fact in this church history. A new manual has been published, which shows the revised method of receiving members—the church now requiring no subscription to a formal creed statement, but emphasizing the covenant bond of membership.

WOOD RIVER JUNCTION.—The membership is now 16 and the Sunday school enrolls 44. The new building is waiting for its dedication, which will not take place until the last dollar is paid.

WESTERLY.—Pawcatuck. The congregations are large. The Y. P. S. C. E. has been strengthening itself by a wholesome process of reorganization.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN.—The Ministers' Meeting, Oct. 19, was addressed by Rev. H. L. Hutchins on Illustrated Preaching.——Center. The Sunday afternoon vesper services were highly appreciated last year and have been resumed at four o'clock. Music of a high order is rendered and is in harmony with the address by Dr. Newman Smyth.——Lebanon Mission, carried on by this church, is under the care of Mr. G. E. Ladd of Yale Divinity School, who acts as the pastor's assistant.——Howard Avenue. The pastor, Dr. W. J. Mutch, is preaching a series of sermons on The New Day and What It Brings to Light.

SIMSBURY.—The new audience room was dedicated Oct. 11. The organ was given by Mrs. Charles Wood in memory of her niece, Miss A. W. Eno. The prayer of dedication was offered by Rev. J. L. Tomlinson, and Rev. J. B. McLean, grandson of Rev. Allan McLean, who for more than 50 years was the pastor of this church, made an impressive historical address. Rev. D. Stuart Dodge also spoke, and Rev. C. E. Stowe, the pastor, preached a brief sermon.

BETHANY.—Rev. H. W. Johnson, who came here from Yale Divinity School, has just closed a year of earnest work. During the summer he preached every Sunday afternoon at a schoolhouse some distance out of town. A Young People's Magazine Club is of great benefit. The pulpit is now being regularly supplied by C. S. Macfarland of Yale.

HARTFORD.—First. Dr. C. M. Lamson, in an impressive sermon Founders' Day, presented the work of the church since its organization 263 years ago. In concluding his discourse he paid a loving tribute to Dr. G. L. Walker, pastor emeritus, who was to have preached, but was prevented by the recent shock which he suffered. Dr. Walker has been removed to his home in this city and is slowly improving, although still unable to speak or move much.

NEW BRITAIN.—South. A meeting of the church was held last week to take action on the matter of free pews for the coming year. After free discussion, with no opposing voice, a ballot resulted in a large majority for the free pews. The meeting adjourned for one month, at which time the matter will be definitely settled.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

NEW YORK.—Manhattan. At a business meeting, Oct. 9, a manual was adopted. The Creed of the Council of 1883 was chosen, but new members will be received on their acceptance of the Apostles' Creed. Exit from membership will be made practicable and easy. There will be a church council composed of representatives of all the different organizations connected with the church, including the board of trustees. This council will confer together for the general good and advise the church accordingly. Oct. 23 is the date when the legal organization of the church will be completed. The collection taken for home missions at the first service, Sept. 27, amounted to over $75. Last week Sunday Dr. H. A. Stimson, the pastor, gave a masterly presentation of the work of the American Board and an offering of nearly $200 was made for foreign missions.

CORONA.—Union. Rev. A. J. Smith of New Brunswick has concluded a series of revival services. The church has been awakened and many have begun a new life. An all day conference on the Holy Spirit was specially helpful. Rev. W. J. Peck is pastor.

New Jersey.

BOUND BROOK.—The general interest in the church continues under its new pastor, Rev. J. O. Jones. Cottage prayer meetings are held weekly and much enjoyed. The young people have formed a reading club and will follow the Northfield course in Bible history. The pastor, a former student at Northfield, is the leader, and will use the stereopticon. Increased interest is manifested in the Sunday school. The primary department is being equipped with modern aids to study.

THE SOUTH.

Maryland.

BALTIMORE.—Fourth. On last week Thursday evening a large audience gathered at the opening of the public reading-rooms connected with the church. Addresses were made by ministers and laymen of various denominations and general interest was shown. The roll already embraces a large membership of the workmen in various factories of the vicinity.

Georgia.

There has been manifest progress in the work during the last season. Several new churches have been organized and some ministers have been received from the Methodists. Superintendent McDaniel has recently returned from a visit among the churches of the Waycross District, and finds the conditions much improved in that section.

Florida.

Four churches have recently been organized in western Florida.—— The recent storm, which wrecked so many houses and church buildings, did no damage to any Congregational edifice.—— Dr. S. D. Paine, after a long absence abroad, has returned to his church at Sanford.

Alabama.

CALERA.—Remarkable results have attended the special efforts in recent weeks. Forty-six persons have been added to the church. Rev. J. L. Busby is pastor.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

CLEVELAND.—Pilgrim is rejoicing in a succession of special occasions which are arousing strong missionary enthusiasm. The Sunday morning following Mr. Pitkin's ordination Rev. H. P. Beach gave a vivid description from personal experience of the customs of the people and the difficulties which Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin will meet in the North China field. ——Trinity begins its second year of institutional work with enthusiasm. It maintains classes in vocal and instrumental music, china painting and physical culture, and has a reading-room open daily, a daily kindergarten, and a lecture course. Its Men's League has held open meetings for the discussion of the currency question, inviting prominent men to speak on each side. By a novel entertainment and supper the Ladies' Aid Society cleared $400 and pays off the debt on the organ.——Mt. Zion welcomed its new pastor, Rev. J. H. Moorland from Nashville, Tenn., with a largely attended reception and addresses from officers of the church and pastors of neighboring churches.

STEUBENVILLE.—This church, Dr. Joel Swartz pastor, recently had a profitable talent ingathering. Dimes amounting to $8.60 had been previously distributed. At the ingathering the sum realized was $130. Reports of the methods of increasing the amounts were interesting.

ROCKPORT.—The church rejoices in results of three weeks of special services, in which the pastor, Rev. C. W. Rice, was assisted by Evangelist A. T. Reed. The spiritual life of the church has been greatly quickened, and about 75 cards were signed.

The First Church, Painesville, declines to accept the resignation of its pastor, Rev. P. W. Sinks.

Illinois.

CHICAGO.—California Avenue. This church now has a membership of over 500, chiefly working people, but self-respecting and prosperous. With help at the outset from the Union Park Church, the City Missionary Society and the C. C. B. S., it has a convenient, commodious and attractive house of worship nearly paid for, a thriving Sunday school and a C. E. Society, and is taking its place among the strong churches of the city. The ease with which it entertained Chicago Association last week and the heartiness of the hospitality extended were among the most delightful experiences of the day.

Indiana.

ANDERSON.—Hope entertained the pastors and delegates of several churches, Oct. 13, who met to consider the formation of a new association. Two sessions were held with informal exercises. It was decided to appeal to the Central Association for letters to organize. The new body will include the "gas belt" region north and east of Indianapolis. Twelve churches were represented.

DUNKIRK.—The new building is completed far enough to allow the congregation to worship in the lecture-room, and except furnishing is ready for dedication. The trustees hope to avoid indebtedness. The house cost about $11,000.

Michigan.

DETROIT.—The seven churches and two missions of the city have all started upon their winter's work with vigor and hopefulness. Last week Sunday was observed as foreign missionary day. Each pulpit was supplied in the morning by a representative of the American Board. In the evening a grand platform meeting was held in the opera house. Drs. Webb, Daniels, Hitchcock, Farnsworth and others took part. The congregations were good in the morning and the opera house was crowded to its utmost in the evening. The churches, pastors and visiting friends alike are satisfied with the occasion and confidently expect the fruitage of increased missionary spirit and beneficence from this missionary day.

CLARE.—Rev. S. A. Long has closed a successful pastorate of three and a half years with this church, aiding it to come to self-support. The property has been much improved and a debt of $300 wiped out. Mr. Long accepts a call to the church at Richmond, and carries with him the best wishes and some tokens of the esteem of the community.

EATON RAPIDS.—This church has recently changed pastors without a day's break in the pastorate. Rev. W. R. Yonker, having received and accepted a call prior to Rev. E. W. Miller's leaving, was ready to step in and take up the work as Mr. Miller laid it down. Mr. Miller's pastorate was eminently successful and Mr. Yonker's is bright with promise.

GREENVILLE.—Much activity may be seen in and around this church. It is a center of great spiritual and moral force. The pastor, during October and November, will regale his evening congregations with practical lectures on eminent men.

Wisconsin.

APPLETON.—First. The Sunday Evening Club, now nearing the end of the fifth year of its existence, opens its fourth annual entertainment course with a lecture by Ian Maclaren. The sale of tickets to the course is limited only by the seating capacity of the church. This club is apparently as vigorous and efficient in its work as at any time.

THE WEST.

Iowa.

HUMBOLDT.—Beginning Sept. 27 a week of special services was held in recognition of the 25th anniversary of organization. Rev. E. C. Moulton, a former pastor, being unable to attend, the present pastor, Rev. R. L. Marsh, preached, after which the program was carried out without a break. The anniversary address, on The Power of the Church, was by Rev. C. P. Boardman. The closing sermon, by Pres. G. A. Gates, on The Call of the Twentieth Century, was given in the opera house, every seat being filled. Perfect weather, excellent music, a bountiful free supper and cordial sociability aided in making the celebration a success. The expenses were more than met by freewill offerings.

IOWA CITY.—The annual meeting on Oct. 6 disclosed a hopeful condition in all departments. The difficult work of the Bohemian Sunday school is carried on by a few faithful members. Benevolences have been well sustained despite hard times. There have been accessions at every communion for the past nine years.

HAMPTON.—The corner stone of the new $12,000 house of worship was laid Oct. 7 with appropriate exercises. A feature of the occasion was the participation of local clergymen of other denominations.

CLARION.—Nine members of a disbanded United Brethren church have just been received to fellowship and more are expected. Pastor and people are encouraged by the new church building, to be completed in November.

LAKE VIEW.—At the closing service of Rev. T. J. Woodcock with this church strong resolutions were adopted commending the departing pastor. Mr. Woodcock will complete an interrupted course in Chicago Seminary. His wife also will study.

Minnesota.

WINONA.—First Scandinavian. The trustees of First Church have decided to deed their Lakeside chapel to the C. C. B. S. in trust for this enterprise. Subscriptions of money and labor have been raised for the purpose of doubling the seating capacity of the chapel and putting a foundation with basement under the whole building, at a cost of about $800. A Scandinavian church organized here several years ago disbanded. The new movement is a strong one.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Bethany. Much progress has been made since the coming of Rev. J. W. Heyward. Several members of an extinct Baptist church have identified themselves with the congregation. Revival services are being held by the evangelistic band.——Lyndale. The Record, a weekly organ for the announcement of religious news, is published. The church is reducing its debt.

MEDFORD.—Rev. Edmund Gale, the pastor, has closed his work, and for the future will make his home in Montana. Before coming here he had two pastorates in the neighboring town of Faribault, aggregating about 18 years, the second of which he resigned upon reaching the age of 70. He is universally esteemed in the State.

ADA.—The church reaches self-support with the coming of the new pastor, Mr. W. A. Whitcomb of Chicago Seminary. The ordination service was the occasion for the expression of interstate fellowship, the members being about equally divided between North Dakota and Minnesota.

MADISON.—After several pastorless months the church is gladdened by the coming of Rev. David Donovan, a former minister, who has accepted a call for a year.

Nebraska.

LINCOLN.—First. The joint meeting of the Nebraska Branch of W. B. M. I. and the W. H. M. U. of Nebraska was held Oct. 13-15. The addresses and papers were of high order. Rev. Dr. M. P. Parmelee of Trebizond spoke on the Armenian work, and was followed by Chancellor McLean of the Nebraska University in an address of singular beauty and power entitled World-Wide Christianity. Incisive and suggestive papers were read on Do Foreign Missions Pay? What Ratio? and Those Women. Miss Nellie Wainwright of Japan spoke twice. Other topics were: Spiritual Enterprise, The Missionary Meeting a Developing Power, Educational Work in Utah and Experiences at Our End of the Line. The session closed with a children's rally. Lunch was provided both days by the women of the various city churches.——Rev. E. B. Fairfield, pastor-elect of the church at Mansfield, O., has been spending a few days here, where he formerly resided as chancellor of the State University. A pleasant reception was given him by the university faculty at the home of Chancellor McLean, Oct. 14, and on the following evening he gave an address before the Palladian Society, commemorating its 25th anniversary.

Rev. E. E. Preston is entering heartily upon the work in his wide field, comprising the churches of Hemingford, Reno and Hyannis. He has received a warm welcome.——In a Bohemian community in Webster County a Bible reader from Dr. Schauffler's school has found a warm welcome and a promising opening for work.

North Dakota.

CRARY.—This church, organized only last May, dedicated a house of worship Oct. 11. Crary is a small village in the northern part of the State, on the line of the Great Northern Railroad. A little more than a year ago Supt. E. H. Stickney organized the Sunday school, of which the church is an outgrowth. Rev. U. G. Rich of Michigan City has supplied the pulpit for a year and prepared the way for organization. The edifice, one of the best in the State for such a town, has been erected largely through the gifts and energy of the people on the ground, the C. C. B. S. giving only $500. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Supt. H. C. Simmons and the prayer offered by Superintendent Stickney. It was a glorious day for the town, and the interest manifested by the people, their love for the church and its promising outlook were such as to encourage all who believe in these little frontier churches.

GRAND FORKS.—Rev. I. B. Tracy and wife have recently given several informal receptions at their home which have been well attended and are bringing the congregation into closer fellowship with them.

South Dakota.

MISSION HILL.—Friends and parishioners celebrated royally the 80th birthday of the pastor, Rev. D. B. Nichols, D. D., Oct. 8. After the reading of numerous letters of congratulation, dinner served in the church was followed by appreciative speeches by representatives of the church and of Yankton College, as well as by neighboring pastors. Father Nichols has done yeoman service for 16 years in the double field of Bon Homme and Mission Hill, and has endeared himself to all by his youthful zeal, consecrated devotion and efficient labor.

ELK POINT.—Rev. H. T. Shepherd closed his labors Sept. 30. The church is being supplied during October by Prof. E. B. Cushing of Yankton College.

The people of South Dakota are being thoroughly aroused upon the question of retaining the prohibitory amendment to the constitution. Colonel Bain has spoken in several of the largest towns, Mr. A. M Haswell, secretary of the National Christian Citizenship League, has already made more than 100 addresses, schoolhouse meetings are everywhere held, and the pastors of Huron are taking part in the campaign on this issue.

Colorado.

GREELEY.—Park. The annual meeting was held Sept. 24. A large gathering of members and friends listened with interest to reports of the year's work. Forty-seven accessions since the last annual meeting were reported. A deficit of $35 will be increased by the possible shrinkage of unpaid pledges, due to the price of potatoes falling below the cost of raising. The benevolences were an increase on the previous year The church raised about $3,000 for all purposes. Rev. W. W. Dumm has begun his fifth year with this church. The willing, hopeful and happy spirit which characterizes the members makes the outlook a bright one.

Idaho.

WALLACE AND WARDNER.—The new work in these fields has grown until a pastor is greatly needed. At present they are depending on transient supplies.

Arizona.

TUCSON.—First. Rev. S. M. Freeland, upon closing his service at Oakland, Cal., came here. This church was once Presbyterian, but was turned over to the Congregationalists, who bought the building, the C. C. B. S. furnishing $3,000. Rev. L. A. Pettibone, who ministered here last year, has died, and Mr. Freeland expects to serve the church until another pastor can be secured. He is ready to give any information needed to induce a suitable man to come. The Christian forces in this city and region need strengthening, but two helpful elements are the Territorial University with 12 or 13 instructors and 120 students, and a Presbyterian Indian school.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

BENECIA.—Interest has revived since the coming of Rev. Samuel Weyler. He has started an academy which promises to be a leading school in the county. Desirous to help as many as possible he devotes his evenings to a night school. Under his influence there is renewed interest in the public library and many wisely planned debates attract to the reading-room a large number of business men. In his pulpit ministrations he is equally happy and attractive and the church now has the largest constant attendance in its history.

SAN FRANCISCO.—First. Dr. G. C. Adams led the people in the October communion service, the first in this church for some months Preaching in the evening upon The Tornado Last May in St. Louis, he drew several striking lessons. Leaving for the East soon after, he telegraphed in time for the next Sunday his acceptance of the call to this church.

OAKLAND.—First Drs. Mooar, McLean and Freeland were present Oct. 4 to welcome Rev. C. R. Brown to his new work. His sermons were highly satisfactory and the flock greatly delighted.

Seventy-seven ministers within the State are said to have received aid to the amount of nearly $20,000 from the Education Society.

Oregon.

ST. HELEN.—Forty two years ago the Methodists organized a church and erected a building. Long ago it fell into disuse and services ceased to be held. For some time Rev. C. E. Philbrook, pastor of the Congregational church at Scappoose, five miles distant, has preached in the building. But when it was proposed to organize a Congregational church the Methodists renewed their interest, formed a class and occupied the edifice. A Congregational church has been organized and has 23 members. The Free Masons have fitted up their lodge room and offered it to the Congregationalists for worship till they can build a house of their own.

Washington.

CHENEY.—The year has been a fruitful one. Eighteen persons have joined the church, a Junior C. E. has been organized and the weekly offering system adopted. The Ladies' Aid has paid $130 toward church expenses, and the debt has been reduced by $100. All departments are in good condition.

WALLA WALLA.—First has voted $300 toward the support of an additional missionary pastor in this county. Rev. C. T. Whittlesey of Blaine has been called to this work, in which professors of Whitman College will aid.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

ADAMS, Geo. C., Compton Hill, St. Louis, Mo., to First Ch., San Francisco, Cal. Accepts.
ANDRESS, John H., Doane Coll., to Long Pine, Neb. Accepts.
BARRETT, Mandus, Shell Rock, Io., to Gowrie and Farnhamville. Accepts.
BROWN, Herbert S., to the permanent pastorate at Danielson, Ct., where he has been supplying.
BRUCE, Chas. R., Plankinton, S. D., declines call to Highmore.
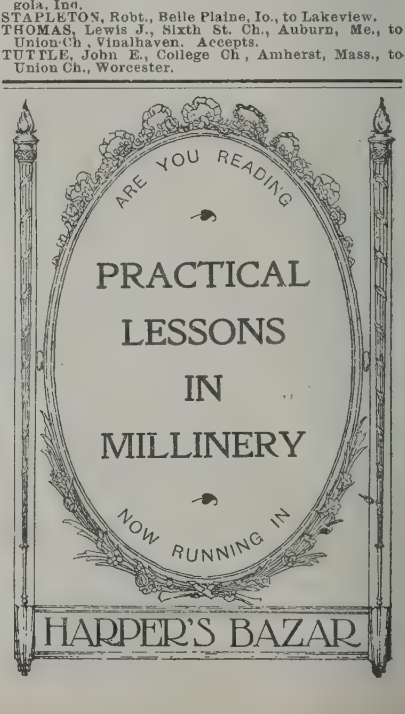
BUTLER, Jas. E., Beecher, Ill., to Sheridan, Mich. Accepts.
CHURCHILL, Rev. Mr. (Christian), to Perkins, Okl. Accepts.
DAVIES, Jas., Bremen, Ind., to Plankinton, S. D. Accepts.
DONOVAN, David, Paynesville, Minn., to Madison for a year. Accepts.
DOUGLASS, H. Paul, formerly of Manson, Io., accepts call to Ames and Gilbert.
FIELD, Fred. A., Redondo Beach, Cal., to Olivet, Los Angeles. Accepts
FREELAND, Sam'l M., lately supplying First Ch., Oakland, Cal., to Tucson, Ariz. Accepts.
HEATHCOTE, Arthur S., formerly of London Univ., Eng., recently of Oberlin, O., to Kewanee, Ill. Accepts.
HIBBARD, Augustine G., Goshen, Ct., to First Ch., Woodstock. Accepts.
HULL, John H., Grace Ch., Cleveland, O., to Lakeside, O., for a year.
LOOMIS, Sam'l L., Belleville Ave. Ch., Newark, N. J., to Union Ch., Boston.
MARTIN, A. T., Oberlin Sem., to Wolverine and Rondo, Mich.
MCALLISTER, Jas., Fremont Ave. Ch., Minneapolis, Minn., to Alpena, Mich.
MEGATHLIN, Henry G., Harwich, Mass., to Broadway Ch., Fall River. Accepts.
MOTE, Henry W., Oregon, accepts call to Pacific Grove, Cal.
NEWMAN, Rev. Mr. (Baptist), to Ritzville, Wn.
NIELD, J. A. (Meth.), Scott City, Kan., to Stockton. Accepts.
OVERTON, Dan'l H., Greene Ave. Pres. Ch., Brooklyn, N. Y., not called to Patchogue.
PRESTON, Bryant C., Springfield, Ill., as associate pastor at Whitewater, Wis., for one year. Accepts
PURDUE, Roland W., Alto Pass, Ill., to Woodstock. Accepts.
RANSDELL, Frank E., Gardner, Mass., to Pilgrim Ch., Cambridgeport.
RICHIE, David H., to permanent pastorate at Mondovie, Wis. Accepts.
SMITH, Edwin S., Glen Ellyn, Ill., accepts call to Angola, Ind.
STAPLETON, Robt., Belle Plaine, Io., to Lakeview.
THOMAS, Lewis J., Sixth St. Ch., Auburn, Me., to Union Ch., Vinalhaven. Accepts.
TUTTLE, John E., College Ch., Amherst, Mass., to Union Ch., Worcester.



VERNON, A. W., Union Sem., to Hiawatha, Kan.
WHITCOMB, Wm. A., Chicago Sem., to Ada, Minn. Accepts.
WHITTLESEY, Chas. T., Blaine, Wn., to Eureka and missions in the vicinity of Walla Walla.
WOOD, Jas. A., Hartford Sem., to Pres. Ch., Ridgefield, Ill. Accepts.

Ordinations and Installations.

ADAMS, Hubert G., o. Garretson, S. D., Oct. 13. Sermon, Rev. D. B. Scott; other parts, Rev. Messrs. W. H. Thrall, G. S. Evans, D. E. Evans, Prof. E. B. Cushing.
CALKINS, Raymond F., o. and i. as asst. pastor of First Ch., Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 20. Sermon, Rev. Wolcott Calkins, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Newton Hall, Drs. J. M. Whiton and W. V. W. Davis.
CONRAD, W. O., i. Rollstone Ch., Fitchburg, Mass., Oct. 13. Sermon, Dr. A. Z. Conrad; other parts, Rev. Messrs. C. S. Brooks, G. R. Hewitt, C. S. Haynes, Drs. Arthur Little and G. R. W. Scott.
THOMPSON, W. Sherman, i. Cliftondale, Mass., Oct. 13. Sermon, Rev. A. W. Moore, D. D.; other parts, Rev. A. E. Cross, Drs. Smith Baker and A. W. Archibald.
TILTON, Geo. H., rec. p. North Ch., Woburn, Mass., Oct. 13. Sermon, Rev. D. A. Newton; other parts, Rev. Messrs. F. S. Adams, Doremus Scudder, Chas. Anderson, Daniel March, D. D.
WHITCOMB, Wm. A., o. Ada, Minn., Oct. 14. Sermon, Rev. J. H. Morley; other parts, Rev. Messrs. O. M. Smith, H. C. Simmons, Francis Wrigley, E. H. Stickney.
WRIGHT, Benj. M., i. Orange, Ct., Oct. 14. Sermon, Rev. T. T. Munger, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. W. W. McLane, N. J. Squires, H. W. Hunt, W. F. Markwick, D. D

Resignations.

ABRAHAM, Sarkis A., Green's Landing, Me., to lecture in behalf of Armenia.
BLISH, Wm. H., Pawnee, Okl.
BRAY, Henry E., W. Rutland, Vt.
ELLIOTT, Wm. A., Algonquin, Ill., to take effect Nov. 1.
ESTABROOK, Frank P., Pavilion Ch., Biddeford, Me., to take effect Jan. 1.
HILLS, Wm. S., Wymore, Neb.
KAUFMAN, Wm. H., Hull, Io.
KINZER, Addison D., Perry, Io., to take effect Nov. 1.
PRATT, Magee, Berlin, Ct.
RICHARDSON Jno. B., Hiawatha, Kan.
STRONG, Dwight A., Madison, O., on account of impaired health. He expects to resume work in the spring. His address is unchanged.
THOMAS, Thos. D., South Ch., Red Oak, Io., to enter the employ of the Am. S. S. Union.
WALLACE, David, N. Troy, Vt., to study in Hartford Sem.
WILCOX, Frank G., Mason City, Io., to enter the evangelistic field. Resignation will take effect on or before Jan. 1.
WISE, D. Wellesley, Ahtanum, Wn.

Churches Organized.

CHICAGO, Ill., Mayflower Ch., rec. 1 Oct., 152 members.
FRIEDENSFELD, Dickey Co., N. D., German Ch., 8 Oct., 13 members.
MARIGOLD, Dickey Co., N. D., Hoffnungsfeld German Ch., 7 Oct., 22 members.
OZARK, Ala., 26 Sept., 12 members.

Miscellaneous.

CADY, Wm. J., of Lake Geneva, Wis., has been granted leave of absence until May, on account of ill-health; and Rev. C. A. Osborne, of Beloit, who last year assisted Dr. Twitchell in the Dwight Place Ch., New Haven, has been engaged to supply Mr. Cady's place.
COMFORT, J. W., formerly pastor of the Christian College Ch., Irvington, Ind., and teacher of homiletics in the Butler Bible School, has withdrawn from his ecclesiastical connections to become a Congregationalist.
CURTIS, W. R., and wife, returned to S. Granville, N. Y., Oct. 10, after a vacation trip during which they visited friends in Mt. Tabor, Chester, Rutland and Londonderry, Vt. Mr. Curtis labored at the last-named place five years.
DALE, W. Dutton, a Maine Congregational minister, took deacon's orders in the Episcopal Church, Portland, Oct. 11.
DENNISON, Robt. C., who has been supplying Compton Hill Ch., St. Louis, Mo., in the absence of Dr. G. C. Adams in San Francisco, will probably continue to fill the pulpit until a regular pastor has been secured.
GREENE, Sam'l, and wife, Oct. 6 celebrated the 35th anniversary of their wedding by entertaining at their home the pastors of Seattle, Wn.
GRIFFIN, John S., born in Castleton, Vt., 1807, ordained in 1839, in which year he went to Oregon, attended the recent meeting of the Oregon Association and took an active interest in every session.
HENDRICK, H. E., who has been supplying at Sheridan, Wyo., will close his work Nov. 29, to resume sociological study at Chicago University.
HETZLER, Henry, with his family, will spend the winter in Gorin, Mo., returning April 1 to Eureka, S. D.
MACAYEAL, Howard S., of Plymouth Ch., Omaha, Neb., is to preach Sunday evenings at the Parkvale Mission.
NEWELL, Horatio B., of the Niigata Mission, Japan, is spending a year's leave of absence in Cleveland, the home of Mrs. Newell. He has spoken recently at Euclid Ave. and Pilgrim Chs., and his clear setting forth of the religious and political situation in Japan has substantially increased the missionary information and interest of these churches.
PILLSBURY, John P., late of Newport, N. H., on account of seriously impaired health has gone to Colorado. During the few months spent on his farm in Hollis, N. H., his health has failed to improve.
SARKIS, Elias J., has been tendered a farewell reception at the home of one of his parishioners in De Smet, S. D. Appreciative speeches, the expression of good wishes and the gift of a pitcher and cup as a token of esteem were gratifying features.
SEVERANCE, C. M., recently a missionary of the American Board in Kyoto, Japan, has settled in Cleveland, where he is temporarily engaged in successful business during the week, and is in demand for pulpit supplies on Sundays. He has recently supplied at Olivet, Franklin Ave., Archwood Ave., Grace and other churches.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

A San Francisco committee makes a practice of distributing good literature every Sunday evening to the persons on the public square. Just before its own meeting the society holds an outdoor evangelistic service.

For October the topic of the World's Prayer Chain is, Our missionaries on the field, both home and foreign, remembering especially those laboring in hard, discouraging and perilous fields and the volunteers who are making ready to go to the front.

A promise of hearty co-operation was the prompt answer to a cable from President Clark recently in which he stated that the Scotch Endeavorers at the Glasgow convention suggested the second week in November for universal prayer for Armenia. Societies everywhere, and churches too, can join in this world-wide petition.

The Maritime Union has had its headquarters in Halifax, which has given a special impetus to growth in Nova Scotia. At the last convention it was decided that it would be in the interest of progress in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island for each Province to have its own union and annual convention. A convention of the Maritime Union as a whole will, however, be held once in three years.

The hospitality shown the delegates to the Virginia convention is indicated by the fact that carriages were provided to take them from the station to headquarters, and from there to their lodgings. After one of the morning sessions the delegates took a drive to Monticello in connection with their consideration of the topic of good citizenship. A new step from which much is hoped was the appointment of a county secretary.

The eleventh annual convention of the Vermont C. E. Union was held at Rutland, Sept. 28-30. Prominent among the speakers were Misses Rebecca Krikorian and Margaret Leitch. The secretary's report showed 357 societies, a gain of twenty-two last year. Over $1,600 were given to missions. Three new chapels in the State are results of C. E. activity, and a training school for junior superintendents has been established. The meeting showed a healthy interest through the State. Mr. W. R. Kinsman, Rutland, is the new president and Rev. F. F. Lewis, Hardwick, the secretary.

A HOUSEHOLD NAME.—Royal Baking Powder and the secret of its success. "Royal Baking Powder" is a household word pretty much the civilized world over, and the article itself has become a necessity in thousands upon thousands of families in nearly every civilized country. Much of the success of this splendid preparation is due to judicious advertising, but in greater degree its success is due to the fact that it is exactly what it is represented to be. One of its great recommendations is its high leavening power. That, of course, appeals to every housewife. It secures a light baking with the least amount of attention and trouble. It can be counted upon. But it has a virtue beyond that—its virtue of virtues lies in the fact that it is "absolutely pure." Royal Baking Powder contains nothing deleterious. It can be used with perfect confidence, and with the certainty that, so far as it is concerned, the baking will be thoroughly wholesome. It has been subjected to the most searching analyses, and pronounced free from impurities or chemical ingredients that are harmful to the system. By adhering honestly and conscientiously to their formula, the manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have established for it a reputation that has made it, as it were, a great staple. It is a boon to the housewife and the cook, and a reproach to all that would adulterate food products in any manner, shape, or form. In short, it is a perfect baking powder, in that it combines the highest leavening power attainable with purity in the highest degree.

NOTEWORTHY FORTHCOMING MEETINGS.

Woman's Home Missionary Association, Annual Meeting, Boston, Oct. 28.
The Woman's Board of Missions Meeting, Manchester, N. H., Nov. 4, 5.
International Convention of Christian Workers, Louisville, Ky., Nov. 5-11.
National W. C. T. U. Convention, St. Louis, Mo., Nov 13-18.

Humor

In the blood is often neglected till the foul matter has become so powerful as to cause terrible scrofulous sores, awful suffering, and finally, as the system becomes drained of all strength, death. Some neglect that tired feeling, pains in the back, weakness, languor, dyspepsia, d stress, till and kidney or liver disease becomes firmly fixed upon them and there is no hope of recovery. Be wise in time: Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure, when in the power of medicine, scrofula, salt rheum, boils, pimples, dyspepsia, headache, biliousness, catarrh, rheumatism, that tired feeling.

General Debility

HOOD'S
Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills act easily, promptly and effectively. 25 cents.

BOSTON
Macullar Parker Company
BEST CLOTHING FOR MEN
BEST CLOTHING FOR BOYS
MADE IN CLEAN WORKSHOPS
ON THE PREMISES
Macullar Parker Company
PROVIDENCE

THEN AND NOW.

B. C. 2700.

"That is an enormous pyramid you are building," said the visitor at Egypt's court; "but it seems a purposeless kind of a structure. What is it for?"
"When the top stone is laid," replied Cheops, quietly, "you will see the point."

A. D. 1896.

"That is a very pretty Dressing Case," said the visitor to our warerooms recently, "but I really don't see why you make so much fuss about it."
"If you will use one of these Dressing Cases for one month," said the salesman, quietly, "you will see the point."

It isn't a comfort easily imagined or described. You need to see it in actual operation. But use it one month and you would not do without it at twice its cost. It will justify all we say.

It is one of our special patterns, made to accompany Brass Beds. Finely built in every part, it will last a lifetime. The mirror is an immense plate of glass nearly 4 feet in hight. The broad toilet shelf is 54 inches in width and 2 feet deep. Such Toilet Cases can only be found in our salesroom.

New General Catalogue for 1896-97. Square octavo, 256 pp., 300 illustrations. Sent to any address on receipt of five 2-cent stamps for postage.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,
48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

It is true that merchants are placing orders, but the majority of these are subject to cancellation if free silver wins at the polls next month. There is unquestionably some quiet hoarding of gold going on, and a certain financial firm is offering to sell "calls" or privileges on gold to those who desire to insure themselves against the effect of a free silver victory. Another feature of the financial situation is the fact that a large percentage of the mortgages now being executed contain the "gold clause," that is, payable in gold.

Perhaps the most marked feature of the week has been the continued and heavy advance in the price of wheat. The Cudahy pool in Chicago is being very opportunely helped in its operations in wheat by damaged crops in other sections of the world and to the heavy exports of American wheat to India and Australia. Wheat has now had an advance of over twenty cents per bushel, yet the enthusiasts are claiming that the rise is by no means over. Dollar wheat seems too good a thing to expect just yet, and on general principles after so good and steady a rise there should soon come the inevitable reaction.

In wool the feeling is strong, and holders are willing to hold stocks for the higher prices they expect later. Woolen and cotton mills are operating cautiously, and several cotton mills in Fall River will probably close down this week.

In the iron and steel industries orders are being received in a desultory manner, although if makers would accept the going quotations for next year's delivery orders would be rather large. Southern pig iron is twenty-five cents higher, and it is expected that in two or three weeks all the iron markets will be in better shape. In the stock market prices have ruled irregular, with a downward tendency.

TEMPERANCE.

— The Transvaal Volksraad has passed a law prohibiting the sale of liquor to natives after Jan. 1.

— The latest report of the British customs department shows that Britons are drinking more wine and tea than formerly and less rum and coffee.

— "The chief bane of British Central Africa is that accursed spirit, whisky. It is whisky which is at the bottom of much of our ill health; it is whisky which is answerable for many of our deaths," says Sir H. H. Johnston, British commissioner of Central Africa.

— The State excise commissioner of New York has rendered a decision holding that all "clubs" which sell liquors to their members are amenable to the provisions of the Raines Law, and must apply for, and secure, licenses before they can legally continue to supply liquor as a part of their refreshments.

— The returns from the towns recently voting on the liquor license question in Connecticut show that ninety-seven towns voted for no license and seventy-one towns for license. All the seventeen townships in the State containing cities and almost all the boroughs and factory towns voted for license.

— Queen Victoria has consented to receive the petition signed in forty-four languages by 7,000,000 of her women subjects, scattered throughout the world, who pray for increased protection against the evils of the liquor traffic and the opium trade. This enormous polyglot petition has been gathered by the World's W. C. T. U.

— The annual report of the Massachusetts State Board of Registration in Pharmacy, recently filed, says:

While there has been progress in the educational and skillful conduct of drug stores as a class, and every city and many towns have what may be considered a strictly reputable and absolutely reliable pharmacy, there are also many so-called drug stores that are unreliable, hazardous, a source of much that is evil, demoralizing and a menace in any community. Many stores of this class were, and some are now, owned and controlled by ex-saloon keepers and others, who employ a registered pharmacist who has an interest on paper only, or at best a nominal investment, thereby increasing the number of drug stores beyond any legitimate demand, and in too many cases forcing a resort to illegitimate pharmacy.

— The Charleston, S. C., correspondent of the New York Evening Post, describing the recent defeat of Senator Tillman's candidate for his colleague in the United States Senate, and picturing the beneficial results it will have, says:

One of the results of this contest is the renewed agitation as to the dispensary liquor system, which, under the scandals surrounding it and the official corruption within it, seems to be trembling in the balance. The huge undertaking on the part of the State to conduct the liquor traffic by public funds and public officials, on the sole pretense of giving pure liquor at home to the liquor drinkers, and which has been proclaimed as the great leading reform in this State, is suddenly revealed to the whole State as a huge political

Continued on page 617.

Are you Low-Spirited?
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
Worry is worse than work—makes a man sick quicker. Worry comes largely from nervousness. Horsford's Acid Phosphate clears the brain and strengthens the nerves.

Beautiful eyes grow dull and dim
As the swift years steal away.
Beautiful, willowy forms so slim
Lose fairness with every day.
But she still is queen and hath charms to spare
Who wears youth's coronal — beautiful hair.

Preserve Your Hair

and you preserve your youth. "A woman is as old as she looks," says the world. No woman looks as old as she is if her hair has preserved its normal beauty. You can keep hair from falling out, restoring its normal color, or restore the normal color to gray or faded hair, by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor.

Carpets. Carpets.

JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & CO.

HAVE OPENED THEIR

WHOLESALE ROOMS

To the Retail Trade for the next thirty days, showing a large stock of

WILTONS, BRUSSELS, AXMINSTERS, VELVETS, TAPESTRIES, and INGRAIN CARPETS

At lower prices than ever before. Our wholesale trade has been very light; therefore we are left with a large stock that must be reduced. We will give the retail purchaser the advantage in every way.

JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & CO.,
163 to 169 Washington Street, Near Cornhill, Boston.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley

and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. CATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

WESTERN MORTGAGES
DEFAULTED AND OTHERWISE,
Bought for Cash.
CHAS. E. GIBSON, 45 Milk St. Boston, Mass.

£ THAT STERLING MARK always means
Cheque Bank Cheques,
which are drawn in Sterling only and accepted as gold in every country of the world. Circular explains why they are so good.
Agency of
UNITED STATES CHEQUE BANK, L'd,
FREDERICK W. PERRY, Manager,
40 and 42 Wall St., N. Y.

Continued from page 616.

machine conducted by the State's money, with an army of paid retainers, and fat spoils of plunder wielded in the interests of the State official whisky ring—a machine revealed also as the engine of crime as well as of politics, corrupt and corrupting, with bribes and "rebates," now another name for the people's money.

The head of the dispensary system of the State has just resigned.

—— A book recently published in Germany, The Woman Is to Blame being its title, has attracted much attention and been the subject of much discussion, for its author, Sibylle von Waldheim, has not spared her sex or nation. In short, it is a plea for the return of "the golden age of our grandmothers" The German housewife of today, among many other shortcomings, is deficient in ability to cook a wholesome and appetizing meal. "Who knows how to cook nowadays?" asks the author. "Who thinks the art worth learning? And yet nothing that legislation could do would lessen the drunkenness of our country so much as a thorough understanding of the art of cooking on the part of our wives." The British women temperance leaders, led by Lady Henry Somerset, realize the truth there is in this contention and have just organized a special department of their W. C. T. U., which will endeavor to spread abroad where most needed the elementary principles and methods of wholesome cooking of food.

—— The Ohio Anti Saloon League, under the energetic and untiring leadership of State Superintendent Rev. Howard H. Russell, is doing wise and effective work throughout the State in strengthening and uniting public sentiment against the saloon, enforcing existing laws, circulating effective temperance literature and preparing for the nomination and election to the next legislature of men pledged to a strong local option bill. For the past two weeks an influential series of district meetings has been held. The work of the league is so effective and persistent, and it is so strongly uniting the churches of the State and supported so loyally by many of the leading business men of Ohio, that it is arousing the Liquor League to greater effort than ever before. The next legislative election is already scheduled to be a sharp contest on the direct issue of the Local Option Law, which has failed to pass the last two legislatures, though the last legislature had a majority definitely pledged before election to support it.

The man who speaks as if it gave him no trouble is the man who has taken the most trouble to learn how to do it.—Dr. John A. Broadus.

A GOOD child is usually healthy, and both conditions are developed by use of proper food. The Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is the best infant's food; so easily prepared that improper feeding is inexcusable and unnecessary.

NO CASE HOPELESS.—The most obstinate and unyielding coughs are quickly broken up, and permanently cured by Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam. It soothes irritation, clears the throat and lungs, and heals the inflamed organs. No case is hopeless, if you take this wonderful medicine.

ROYAL BLUE LINE TOURS.—After the heat of political campaign, take rest and recreation on Royal Blue Line Washington Excursion, leaving Boston Tuesday evening, Nov. 3 Stop at Riggs House; $27 covers all expenses for eight days. Personally conducted; send for circular. A. J. Simmons, N. E. A., 211 Washington St., Boston.

BEST ON THE MARKET.—Chelsea, Mass., Sept. 27, 1896. "I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and have used it in my family for several years as a blood purifier and tonic, and I can truthfully say that I regard it as the best medicine of its kind on the market." T. W. Marks, 16 Cottage Street.

HOOD'S PILLS are perfectly harmless, always reliable and beneficial.

We know that Cod-liver Oil is a fat-forming food because takers of it gain rapidly in weight under its use and the whole body receives vital force. When prepared as in Scott's Emulsion, it is quickly and easily changed into the tissues of the body. As your doctor would say, "it is easily assimilated." Perhaps you are suffering from fat starvation. You take fat enough with your food, but it either isn't the right kind, or it isn't digested. You need fat prepared for you, as in Scott's Emulsion.

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes, of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS In the World.
PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN).
Send for Price and Catalogue.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

BELLS
Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER

Praises in High Terms the Grandest of Medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Those Who Are Weak, Tired, Nervous, Out of Health and Suffering, Will Take Renewed Hope and Be Cured by Using This Wonderful Medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Men of highest prominence in this country like Lieut.-Governor Thomas of Vermont (Montpelier, Vt.,) Congressman Andrew Williams of Plattsburg, N. Y., Senator Geo. W. Randall of Waterbury, Vt., Ex-Speaker of House of Representatives, Chas. J. Noyes of Boston, Mass., Hon. Henry Robinson, Mayor of Concord, N. H., Judge Edwin C. White of Hyde Park, Vt., Secretary of the Senate, Hon. Frederick W. Baldwin of Barton, Vt., and many other eminent public men throughout the United States are using, indorsing and publicly recommending the people to use this most wonderful medical discovery of the age, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

Representative women of our land also are enthusiastic in praise of its marvelous power to cure, among them being Vice.-Pres. of the Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society, Mrs. S. Louise Barton of Boston, Mass., who was cured by this grand medicine.

Now comes a letter from one of the most widely known women in America, Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, who is loved and honored by everybody, and who thus speaks to the people out of her deep regard for humanity and her earnest desire to see the weak, tired, feeble, nervous and suffering restored again to health and strength.

She has personally witnessed the really wonderful effects of Dr. Greene's Nervura in curing several of her friends, and for the good of others, for those who are out of health, she writes to the people what she knows and has herself witnessed of the remarkable beneficial and health-giving effects of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

Mrs. Beecher says: "I have given some of Dr. Greene's Nervura to several friends who I thought would be benefited by it. They speak highly of it, and feel they have been much benefited by its use.

"These people are very responsible witnesses as to the beneficial character of the medicine, and I am ready to vouch for the honesty of their approval of Dr. Greene's Nervura.

"If needed in my own case I certainly should use it."

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the best medicine and surest restorer of health the world has ever known.

All who are nervous, weak, tired, exhausted in nerve power and physical strength; who are sleepless, wake tired and unrefreshed, without strength and energy for the day's work; who have poor blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, backache, dyspepsia, indigestion, gas, bloating, faint feelings, loss of appetite, constipation, kidney or liver complaint, should immediately use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will make you well. It gives a splendid complexion, making the cheeks glow and the eyes sparkle with health. No remedy was ever so successful in causing people to gain flesh. By strengthening the digestive functions, promoting assimilation and enriching the blood, it causes the person to gradually increase in weight until the thin and slender parts assume a rounded and beautiful contour.

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the prescription of the most successful physician in curing nervous and chronic diseases, hence it must of necessity be perfectly adapted to cure just these complaints. Its discoverer, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST., BOSTON.

Genuine "1847" Rogers Bros.

spoons, forks, etc., have a world-wide reputation for long wear. Leaflet, showing new patterns, mailed free to anyone mentioning this publication.

On large articles our trade-mark is: MERIDEN B. COMPANY

Meriden Britannia Co.
MERIDEN, Conn.,
208 Fifth Ave., New York City.
Manufacturers of "Silver Plate that Wears."

Fruit Fork. Sold by leading dealers.

BRECK'S FLOWER FOOD
makes Health, Growth, Bloom and Color. A year's supply for 30 plants mailed for 40c. Concentrated, odorless, and safe. "Success with House Plants," 32 pages mailed free. Please mention this publication.
JOSEPH BRECK & SONS,
Everything for Farm, Garden and Lawn.
Boston, Mass.

Potted Plants

It's a trying time for delicate plants when they are transferred from the fresh air, dew and the natural stimulants of the soil to the window garden of the house.

At this season of the year an application of ESSEX Flower Food will stimulate the plant to quick foliage and early flowering.

Don't starve your plants. Ask your dealer for the ten cent package that feeds 10 plants one year—failing to get it, don't experiment with another kind, send eight 2c. stamps to the ESSEX Flower Food.

RUSSIA CEMENT CO.
Gloucester, Mass.

A GOOD WATER SUPPLY

For GENERAL FARM USE, COUNTRY RESIDENCES, IRRIGATION, Etc.

IS INSURED BY A PROPERLY ERECTED

ECLIPSE WINDMILL —OR—
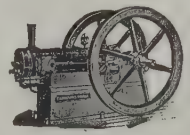
GASOLENE ENGINE.

Eclipse Wooden AND Fairbanks Steel Windmills & Towers.

TANKS.
Send for Catalogues.



FAIRBANKS-MORSE
GASOLENE ENGINES.
2 TO 75 H. P.
For Pumping or Power. Send for Catalogues.

We have every facility for putting in complete WATER SUPPLY AND POWER OUTFITS, and will submit estimates upon application.

CHARLES J. JAGER COMPANY,
174 HIGH ST., BOSTON, MASS.

EDUCATION.

— Harvard University has enrolled 3,590 students this year.

— Whitman College has opened under favorable circumstances with over 100 students in all. Eells Academy of Colville opened Oct. 6 with encouraging prospects. The building is making satisfactory progress and will be ready for next term. The normal school at Cheney, Wn., opened with 300 students.

Marriages.

The charge for marriage notices is twenty-five cents.

BELCHER—SMITH—In Bedford, Oct. 7, by Rev. Edwin Smith, Arthur Fuller Belcher of Portland, Me., and Annie Manson, daughter of the officiating clergyman.

COATES—HALL—In Penn, Ind., Sept. 30, Rev. E. M. Coates of Canton, S. D., and Edith M. Hall, for a number of years professor of Latin at Yankton College.

MERRICK—LATIMER—In Oneonta, N. Y., Oct. 14, Rev. Frank Wilbur Merrick of West Roxbury and Grace Bell Latimer.

Deaths.

The charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each additional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The money should be sent with the notice.

THOMPSON—In Woburn, Oct. 17, Rev. Leander Thompson.

GEORGE FRANKLIN HUBBARD.

In Winona, Minn., Sept. 25, Mr. G. F. Hubbard died of complicated heart disease, aged 76 years. He was born in Swanton, Vt., in 1820, went to Boston at the age of nineteen, engaged in business, and for many years was a prosperous dry goods merchant on Hanover Street. In early manhood he united with the old Winter Street Congregational Church, was active in its work and devoted to its interests. His home has been in Winona since 1876, and through all his long residence here he has been one of the stanch and faithful members of the Congregational church and lived a quiet, sincere Christian life. His wife (Adaline Sims Hubbard) alone survives him, the only children, two young sons, in 1875 having died of malignant diphtheria in Chelsea, Mass.

MRS. AUGUSTA S. NOYES.

By the sudden and unexpected death in Paris, Aug. 4, of Mrs. Augusta S. Noyes of Brookline, her relatives and friends have met with a loss which will be severely felt, not only by them, but by many others who, with a large number of charitable and benevolent institutions, have hitherto shared from her benefactions.

Mrs. Noyes was born in Grafton, Mass., in 1819, and was the daughter of Rev. John Miles, who for many years was the pastor of the Congregational church in that town. In her early years Mrs. Noyes dedicated herself to the service of the Lord, and all through her long life was his consistent and faithful servant. During her married life of twenty five years in Morristown, N. J., she as well as her husband, Isaac Reed Noyes (who was the senior elder of the Second Presbyterian Church in that city), by their sympathy for the unfortunate and their "almsdeeds which they did," endeared themselves to a large circle of those of whom the Saviour said, "Ye have always with you." Truly they followed in the footsteps of him who, when on earth, "went about doing good."

The writer has known Mrs. Noyes over forty years and desires to give his testimony to her loving devotion and faithful service to the Saviour, whom she dearly loved and conscientiously endeavored to follow; her well-worn Bible and Prayer-Book evidence her constant communication with the Word and him who spake it. She bore her severe illness in Paris with great fortitude and patience, without a murmur, and as her spirit took its flight to "him who gave it" no words seemed more appropriate than those which were uttered in the solemn silence of that bedchamber at the hotel: "Blessed are the dead, who die in the Lord, from henceforth, yea saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Brookline, Oct. 12. H. E. A.

CLUBBING RATES.

For the convenience of our subscribers we have made arrangements with the publishers of some leading periodicals by which we can furnish them, in connection with The Congregationalist, at a special rate. The postage is prepaid in all cases. Subscribers may order as many of the publications named as they choose, at the prices annexed.

Atlantic Monthly	$3.25
The Century Magazine	3.60
St. Nicholas	2.60
Scribner's Magazine	2.60
Harper's Magazine	3.25
Harper's Weekly	3.25
Harper's Bazar	3.25
Harper's Round Table	1.60
American Kitchen Magazine	.75

Let all who send to us for the above periodicals take notice that, after receiving the first number, they must write to the publication itself, and not to us, in case of any irregularity, or if they wish to have the direction changed to any other post office. The money which is sent to us for these periodicals we forward promptly to the various offices, and our responsibility in the matter then ceases.

DON'T be satisfied with any other preparation. Ask for Pond's Extract and insist on getting it.

A GOOD ANECDOTE.—That is a very good story about King Cheops and the pyramid which the Paine Furniture Co. prints in another column. It illustrates the fact that no person can predicate his enjoyment of furniture until he tries it. If one-half the people in this city knew the comfort of modern furniture, they would send their old, unfashionable chairs and sofas to the auction-room tomorrow.

Photography Simplified.

Picture taking with the Improved Bullet camera is the refinement of photographic luxury. It makes photography easy for the novice—delightful for everybody.

LOADS IN DAYLIGHT with our light-proof film cartridges, or can be used with glass plates. Splendid achromatic lens, improved rotary shutter, set of three stops. Handsome finish.

Price, Improved No. 2 Bullet, for pictures 3½ x 3½ inches, $10.00
Light-proof Film Cartridge, 12 exposures, 3½ x 3½ .60

EASTMAN KODAK CO.
Booklet Free. Rochester, N. Y.

SAVE ½ YOUR FUEL
By using our (stove pipe) RADIATOR. With its 120 Cross Tubes, ONE stove or furnace does the work of TWO. Drop postal for proofs from prominent men.
TO INTRODUCE OUR RADIATOR, the first order from each neighborhood filled at WHOLESALE price, and secures an agency. Write at once.
ROCHESTER RADIATOR COMPANY,
41 Furnace St., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A Matter of Taste
That people who have tried different chocolates prefer
WHITMAN'S Instantaneous Chocolate
to all others. It is distinctively delicious—distinctively pure.
Your grocer has it in 1 lb. and ½ lb. tins.
STEPHEN F. WHITMAN & SON, Philada.

BROWN'S French DRESSING
For Ladies' and Children's Boots and Shoes
Ask your dealer for Brown's French Dressing and accept no other.

ELY'S CREAM BALM is a positive cure. Apply into the nostrils. It is quickly absorbed. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; samples 10c. by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York City

BIOGRAPHICAL.

HON. JONATHAN NEWTON HARRIS.

New England Congregationalism has included in its ranks few such substantial, influential and useful laymen as Hon J. N. Harris of New London, Ct., whose sudden death from heart disease Sunday, Oct. 18, has saddened a wide circle of friends. Born in Salem, Ct., Nov. 18, 1815, he has since 1833 resided in New London, from which point as a center of business operations he amassed a fortune which has been held in the spirit of Christian stewardship. To Mr. Moody Mr. Harris has been a tower of strength, having given at one time $50,000 to the Northfield School as well as generous support to the Mt. Hermon School over the river. Perhaps his most famous benefaction was the establishment of the Harris School of Science in Kioto, Japan, which is connected with the Doshisha University. For this purpose he devoted a gift at the outset of $100,000. Other interests and enterprises of the American Board were dear to him and few of the corporate members have been relied on more implicitly in times of emergency, as well as for the steady support of the work. He was hardly less devoted to the Y. M. C. A., of whose international committee he has been a member.

Mr. Harris was honored in the city, where he established a beautiful home, having been mayor in 1856 and 1862. He served the city also in both branches of the State legislature. He was one of the oldest members of the Second Church, where his natural qualities of leadership were constantly recognized and employed. He was a man of simple tastes devoid of ostentation, strong in his adherence to the fundamentals of evangelical religion, genial in spirit—in short a fine example of the Christian man of wealth.

REV. JESSE BAILEY.

Jesse Bailey was born in Woolwich, Me., and graduated at Bates College in 1887. He was the principal of Talladega College, Alabama, from 1887–89. In 1892 he graduated at Yale Divinity School, and was ordained to the gospel ministry by the Emmanuel Church of Watertown, N. Y., July 28 of that year. Soon after he was united in marriage to Miss Thalia Mitchell of South Britain, Ct. He quickly endeared himself to his congregation, but this his only pastorate was destined to be of short duration. In November, 1892, he became ill. He resigned in September, 1894, and sought for health in the rare climate of Colorado. Two years longer his iron will battled the disease, and he passed bravely on to the better land at Buffalo Creek, Col., Sept. 9.

A well-attended memorial service was held by his loved Watertown church Sunday, Sept. 20, at which addresses were made by the present pastor, Rev. S. G. Heckman, and others.

REV. MILTON S. PHILLIPS.

Mr. Phillips, who three years ago was obliged on account of failing health to resign the charge of the church in Chaplin, Ct., died in Highland, Cal., Sept. 7. He was born in Roxbury, N. H., Feb. 15, 1853. He began his preparation for the work of the ministry at Drury College and graduated from Yale Seminary in 1883. He engaged in pastoral work at Blue Springs, Mo., Long Ridge, Stony Creek and New Haven, Ct, going to Chaplin in 1892. After being released from his duties there he went to California and as he at first improved in health he accepted a call to the church at Highland; after a few months, however, he became unable to preach and his congregation were obliged reluctantly to give him up. His wife and three children survive him.

REV. LEANDER THOMPSON.

Mr. Thompson died in Woburn, Oct. 18. He was born in the same town March 7, 1812, graduated from Amherst in 1835 and from Andover Seminary in 1838. From 1839 to 1843 he served as a foreign missionary in Syria, but on account of failing health returned to this country, where he engaged in pastoral work in South Hadley and West Amesbury, Mass., and in Wolfeboro, N. H. For the last fifteen years he has been unable to preach, but has accomplished considerable literary and historical work.

REV. WILLIAM H. BEARD.

Mr. Beard, who died in South Killingly, Ct, Sept. 2, after a long illness, was born April 1, 1836. He graduated from Union Theological Seminary in 1865 and was ordained at Freedom, Me., Nov. 19, 1867. He was engaged in pastoral work at Harwich, Mass., Wilton, Me., and had been pastor of the church at South Killingly since 1873. He leaves a wife and three sons, one of whom is already in the ministry.

TIME TELLS THE STORY.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES do Good Work DURING A LIFETIME.

There is a big difference between the cost of making a first-class sewing machine, embodying the best of materials and workmanship, and one made in the cheapest manner. The buyer of the cheap machine soon pays the difference of price in the constant cost for repairs, to say nothing of its annoying inefficiency.

Results Make Reputation.

Singer Machines, either lock-stitch or chain-stitch, are the successful result of long experience and constant improvements in the endeavor to make nothing but the best sewing machines for family use. The accomplishment of this result requires six of the largest, best-equipped factories in the world, the best inventive talent of the age, and the constant employment of twelve thousand workmen. Singer Machines are sold only by our employees, and not through dealers or department stores.

The Value of Reputation.

A reputation based on half a century's experience, dealing directly with the women of the family all over the world, is unique, and stimulates a worthy pride. THE SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY aims to maintain its well-earned reputation for fair dealing during all time. It is permanent, its offices are in every city in the world, and parts and supplies for its machines can always be easily obtained.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

"SEWING MACHINE MAKERS FOR THE WORLD."

THE MAGEE IDEA

The highest quality at the lowest cost. It is the difference between cheap ranges and ranges cheap — between value and cost.

"MAGEE" RANGES

are made from the cook's standpoint. They embody every device, every convenience, every scientific improvement consistent with good cooking and saving in fuel. Once tried, always used. The name MAGEE is a guarantee of quality in ranges and furnaces. Descriptive circulars free. For sale by leading Dealers.

MAGEE FURNACE COMPANY, 32-38 Union St., Boston.

Western Agency, 86 Lake St., Chicago. Pacific Coast Agency, 27 New Montgomery St., San Francisco.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

URIC ACID GRAVEL, ETC.

DR. J. T. LeBLANCHARD, Professor Montreal Clinic, S. M., S. N., V. U.: "I have used BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in the most obstinate cases of Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, in Stone of the Bladder, in Uric Acid Gravel, with the most efficacious results."

Sold by Druggists. Pamphlet free.

Proprietor, Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va.

PRICE REDUCED FROM $25.00 to $10.00.

The Electropoise TRADE MARK

CURE WITHOUT MEDICINE.

THIS MOST WONDERFUL TREATMENT now within the reach of all.

The above price will continue till further notice. $10.00 by Express, $10.25 by Registered Mail, with Book of Directions complete. Do not miss this opportunity.

L. A. BOSWORTH, 36 Bromfield St., Room 18, Boston, Mass., General Agent for New England States.

The Corn won't linger longer after it's treated with A-CORN SALVE. 15c. box — druggists or by mail. GIANT CHEMICAL CO., 205 Cherry Street, Philada. TRADE MARK

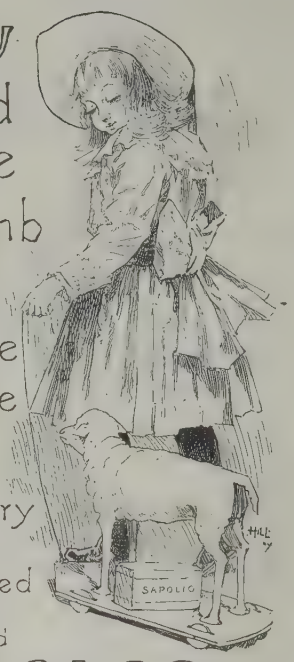
ESTABLISHED 1836.
ISAAC RILEY,
Successor to Baird & Riley,
PLUMBER AND SANITARY ENGINEER,
85 Joy St., Near Cambridge St., Boston.
Telephone, Haymarket 294.

Does Your Hair Fall Out?

Is it getting thin—lessening in volume? If so, I can help you. If totally bald do not write. Select family patronage for ten years. Send self-addressed stamped envelope to Miss RACHEL T. WYATT, Centerville, Mass.

IT WILL SERVE THE INTERESTS of all concerned if, in correspondence suggested by announcements in our ADVERTISING COLUMNS, mention is made of the fact that the advertisement was seen in The Congregationalist.

Mary had a little lamb With fleece as white as snow And every time she washed it well she used SAPOLIO



IVORY SOAP

Copyright, 1896, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cin'ti.

A fine complexion is too rare
To run the risk of losing;
But everyone who takes good care
(All other kinds refusing)
To get pure Ivory, grows more fair
With every day of using.

The Cyclist's Necessity.

POND'S

WILL CURE CUTS, BURNS, BRUISES, WOUNDS, SPRAINS, SUNBURN, CHAFINGS, INSECT BITES, ALL PAIN, AND INFLAMMATIONS. . . . . .

USED INTERNALLY AND EXTERNALLY.

GENUINE IN OUR BOTTLES ONLY, BUFF WRAPPERS, SEE OUR NAME, POND'S EXTRACT CO., NEW YORK, 76 FIFTH AVENUE.

EXTRACT

USE POND'S EXTRACT OINTMENT FOR PILES.

Sent by mail on receipt of 50 cents.

....THE....

Unit of Value

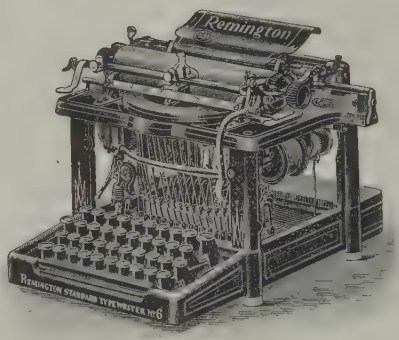
in Typewriters is the

REMINGTON

It sets a known and tested

Standard

of excellence.



Every one knows what it represents —the Best Work with Least Labor, Enduring Service, Unequaled Economy and Convenience. The Number 6 Model

BEARS THE STAMP OF

Unqualified Public Approval.

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT,
327 Broadway, New York.

Ian Maclaren on The World Sorrow The A. M. A. Jubilee

Volume LXXXI Number 44

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 29 October 1896

Two Thoughts.

WHEN I reflect how small a place I fill
In this great teeming world of laborers,
How little I can do with strongest will,
How marred that little by most hateful blurs—
The fancy overwhelms me, and deters
My soul from putting forth so poor a skill;
Let me be counted with those worshipers
Who lie before God's altar and are still.
But then I think—for healthier moments come—
This power of will, this natural force of hand—
What do they mean, if working be not wise?
Forbear to weigh thy work, O Soul! arise
And join thee to that noble, sturdier band
Whose worship is not idle, fruitless, dumb.

EDWARD CRACROFT LEFROY.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, OCT. 23.

Mrs. Abell presided and read Ps. 91, also a part of Isa. 41, speaking of God's merciful care for his children and the advantages of cheerful service.

Miss Emily Wheeler brought to the meeting her mother's message of love and thanks for the prayers which had been offered for her family and for all the workers and work at Harpoot. She also spoke of the comfort they had in the testimony of many Armenians in this country to her father's missionary work, even from some who had opposed his methods. She enlisted the sympathy of all present as she showed under what terrible strain her missionary associates are now laboring.

Many were present who had attended the jubilee of the A. M. A. Mrs. Henry Fairbanks wondered if those who can attend the meeting from week to week appreciate the privilege and the possibility of the uplift which it may give. Speaking for Vermont Branch, which has recently held its annual meeting, she said, "Our word is a word of good cheer." Mrs. Savage of Chicago expressed the same friendly fellowship for the W. B. M. I. Mrs. William Carr, who has recently gone with her husband to the church at Greeneville, Ct., spoke of the work of Eastern Connecticut Branch and the efficient leading of its president, Miss Gilman.

Mrs. A. L. Clark of Kingston, R. I., spoke of the interest felt in Dr. Bridgman of South Africa, who has recently died, and Mrs. Alexander of Providence, coming from the same branch, gave her impression as she attended this meeting for the first time and remembered, "Other sheep have I" Mrs. Buel of Plainville, Ct., coming from Hartford Branch, related an experience in a little country auxiliary, where one who had many times been invited to attend the monthly meeting finally came to get rid of the importunity, began contributing five cents a month, then seven, then ten, then fifty, and last year, from an income of $200, made herself a life member of the Woman's Board, besides her monthly offering.

Old Colony Branch was reported with its recent annual meeting and a fuller treasury than last year. Mrs. Strong, who attended the meeting at Toledo, said it was "a real old-time missionary meeting," but that congratulations over freedom from debt must be much modified by the fact of the retrenchment which had made this possible. Special prayer was offered for the workers at Mardin and covering all the calendar topics of the week, many ladies taking part.

THE ETHICS OF TAXATION.

At the Boston Ministers' Meeting Mr. William Lloyd Garrison emphasized the evils of overtaxation from the days of the feudal system to the present era. This matter is at the bottom of the Armenian distress and at the root of the social uprising in our own country. After pointing out what, in the speaker's opinion, constitutes the unsatisfactoriness and injustice of indirect taxation as well as of taxes on income and personal property, Mr. Garrison proceeded to explain the theory of the single tax, which he considers a simple and attainable remedy for our social ills. The proposition is in brief to abolish all taxation save one single tax levied on the value of bare land irrespective of all improvements. The effect of this measure, he says, would be to encourage and reward labor, to put a stop to speculation in land and to provide an equal opportunity for every human being to gather nature's bounty according to his strength and skill. Advocates of this theory deny that any one holds a just title to land. It is necessary that people should hold a tenure and have the use of land, but they should pay for this, not to the individual, but to the Government for its support. The speaker made the remarkable statement that a tax amounting to three per cent. on the land values in Boston would make it possible to raise the same revenue for municipal purposes that we do today.

Mr. Garrison's paper called forth animated questions and discussions, after which Mrs. Susan Fessenden was given a few moments to tell of the shameful treatment of the 320 Armenian refugees who have landed in New York. She recently visited that city to arrange with the commissioner of immigration for the release of 100 Armenians for whom she had pledges of work and homes, but this official is determined to insist on the fulfillment of the last letter of the law. He requires for the Armenians what is required for no other immigrants, not only a promise of work and homes, but a pledge of $1,000 for every individual. Mrs. Fessenden earnestly requested the Boston ministers to sign a petition to Secretary Carlisle. Prompt action must be taken or next Saturday the poor Armenians will be sent back in the vessel which brought them to our shores.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc., published under this heading at ten cents a line.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

JAMES W. ELWELL, President.
REV. W. C. STITT Secretary.
W. C. STURGES, Treasurer.

Educational.

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY.
Oldest and best known in U. S.
Established, 1855.
3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES.
4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-paged Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & CO.

MAINE, BANGOR.
BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.
Choice between two courses of study, Classical and English Biblical, in Junior year; one course in Middle and Senior years. Optionals in Hebrew and Cognates, and in Greek. Entrance examination on Wednesday, Sept. 2, 9 A. M. Apply to Prof. C. A. Beckwith, or Prof. G. W. Gilmore, Bangor, Me.

MASSACHUSETTS, BRADFORD.
CARLETON SCHOOL for Young Men and Boys. College preparatory and general course of study. Individual teaching. Gymnasium bowling alley, etc. Circulars. I. N. CARLETON, Ph. D.

NEW LONDON, N. H.
COLBY ACADEMY.
$200 to $250 a Year. Coeducational. 44th Year. Send for Catalogue. Rev. GEO. W. GILE, President.

MASSACHUSETTS, SOUTH BYFIELD.
DUMMER ACADEMY (Home School).
Founded 1763. Thorough training for College and Technical Schools. PERLEY L. HORNE, A. M.

MASSACHUSETTS, BOSTON.
College of Physicians and Surgeons.
Men and women. Rules of Assoc. Am. Med. Colleges 17th year opens Sept 16. Part tuition for clinical service. 20,000 med. calls in '95. Near Boston City Hospital. AUGUSTUS P. CLARK, A.M., M.D., Dean. (Send for Catalogue.) 517 Shawmut Ave., Boston, Mass.

THE CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
SOLE MAKERS OF THE BLYMYER BELLS
FOR CHURCH SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM &c.
Catalogue with 2500 testimonials. Prices and terms FREE.

BELLS
Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

GAZE'S UNIVERSAL TOURS.
52D YEAR.

NILE TOURS — Illustrated program of our NILE TOURS, Season 1896-97, sent on application. Sole agts. for the Thewfikieh NileNav.Co.

ORIENT, EGYPT AND PALESTINE — OUR ORIENTAL TOURS, visiting GIBRALTAR, ITALY, EGYPT, HOLY LAND, etc., leaves New York JANUARY 16, FEBRUARY 13 and APRIL 3.

SO. FRANCE AND ITALY — OUR regular South France and Italy parties, visiting Southern EUROPE and ENGLAND (a delightful two months' tour), leave New York monthly. All above tours under personal escort, and every expense included. Illustrated programs free. Mention Tour wanted.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED

INDEPENDENT TICKETS EVERYWHERE — As Official Passenger Agents for all Transportation Lines, we furnish tickets at lowest rates everywhere—Europe, the Orient, and Round the World; BERMUDA, NASSAU, MEXICO, WEST INDIES, etc.

WRITE FOR TOURIST GAZETTE AND SAVE MONEY.

Post Free Upon Application.

H. GAZE & SONS, Ltd.,
113 Broadway, New York, or
W. H. EAVES, New England Agent,
201 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

JAPAN-AMERICA LINE.
New Route to the Orient.

Great Northern Railway
Duluth—St. Paul—Minneapolis
TO Seattle, Washington.

Nipon Yusen Kaisha
TO HAWAII—JAPAN—CHINA
Australia and India.

Native agents of the Company at foreign ports speak English and are in a position to render valuable service to tourists, students, temporary residents, and shippers.

Through rates and bills of lading to all Oriental ports. Special rates for Missionaries. For freight, express-parcel, and passage rates, sailing dates, and other information apply to railway or steamship agent, or address

F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn.

WORLD'S FOOD FAIR
and HOME CONGRESS,
Mechanics' Building, Boston,
Daily Until Saturday, November 7.
10 A. M. to 10 P. M.
Two Hundred Dealers in Food Products Distribute Samples to the People.

Most distinguished men and women in the land participate in Home Congress. Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer of Philadelphia lectures every afternoon on "Therapeutics of Diet."

Five "Centurion" Bicycles given away.

Four hundred Souvenir Spoons given away every day to first four hundred women purchasing tickets of admission.

Bazane's magnificent $10,000 water color of Niagara Falls on free exhibition.

A subway filled with attractions for the multitude. Salem Canet, Latricain's Brigade and Boyle O'Reilley Bands, also the Fadettes, St. Augustine's Band, Knowlton & Allen's Singing Orchestra, etc. Nothing like it since the Peace Jubilee.

ADMISSION 25 CENTS.

EUROPE AND THE ORIENT.
TWELFTH SEASON.

SELECT PARTY will leave New York January 5, 1897, by express steamer "Columbia," 106 days' tour through ITALY, GREECE, SYRIA (DAMASCUS), PALESTINE, EGYPT, the NILE (to first cataract), the Riviera (Nice), SWITZERLAND, FRANCE and ENGLAND. Strictly first-class; exceptional advantages. For particulars of winter and summer tours address MRS. M. A. CROSLEY, 502 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, or Norwich, Ct.

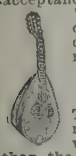
The St. Denis,
BROADWAY AND ELEVENTH STREET,
Opposite Grace Church, NEW YORK.
EUROPEAN PLAN.

"There is an atmosphere of home comfort and hospitable treatment at the St. Denis which is rarely met with in a public house, and which insensibly draws you there as often as you turn your face toward New York."

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST., BOSTON.

VON BULOW'S WIFE.

Bulow gave Wagner his wife, saying, "Master, I am proud to think I have something worthy of your acceptance"



We have something worthy of your acceptance—a handsome "Bay State" Mandolin, perfect in tone and perfect in workmanship, for the extremely low price of $8.50.

The "Bay State" instruments are pronounced by experts to be the finest in the world. We have in stock cheaper Mandolins than the above, and others costing ten times this price; but for a substantial, serviceable instrument at a low price no other instrument manufactured can compare with it.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

JOHN C. HAYNES & CO.,
453-463 Washington Street, Boston.

HERVE D. WILKINS,

the celebrated organist, says:

"I regard your organs as an illustration of the best ideas extant in regard to organ building."

Church, Chamber and Aeolian Pipe Organs.

Catalogue and specifications cheerfully furnished.

Farrand & Votey Organ Co.,
Detroit, Mich.

SOME PIANO BARGAINS.

IVERS & POND Baby Grand. Almost new, used only at recitals; perfect condition inside and out. Exquisite tone and action. Usual price $675. Special price only $400.

CHICKERING UPRIGHT. Handsome rosewood case; elaborate carving; slightly used, but in fine condition. Good tone and action. A great bargain at $240.

IVERS & POND UPRIGHT. Beautiful antique mahogany case. Style discontinued from last catalogue. Has been rented a short time, but is in fine condition throughout. Beautiful tone, easy action. Special price only $250.

We include handsome stool and scarf, prepay railway freights, and sell on easy installment payments. If you can arrange to come to our warerooms and look over these and other bargains, it will pay you to do so. If this is inconvenient, full particulars will be sent by mail. Bargains in NEW UPRIGHTS.

Ivers & Pond Piano Co.,
114 Boylston Street, Boston.

Two-thirds of the Church Cushions in this country are made by us. If your church has our Patent Elastic Felt Cushions, the most they will ever need is new covers. After forty years' use in All Souls' Church, New York, the Pastor writes: "In excellent condition, and likely to outlast those who sit on them."

Our book, "Church Cushions," and a two-foot sample cushion sent for the asking.

OSTERMOOR & CO.,
116 Elizabeth St., New York.

CHURCH REMODELING.

THOMAS W. SILLOWAY, Church Architect,
10 Park Square, Boston.

Mr. Silloway's long practice in building or remodeling over 400 church edifices enables him to save and utilize all the valuable parts, and for a comparatively small outlay produce a building preferable to a new one of much greater cost. He proposes to continue the work of remodeling as a specialty, and tenders his services to committees who would practice economy, and where the means are limited.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Paragraphs 625
- Fading Color Lines 626
- The Encroachments of the Saloon 626
- Certain Gains of the Campaign 626
- A Marsh Rose 627
- The Christian in Politics 627
- Current History 628
- In Brief 629

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
- The Interior 630
- The Northwest 631

CONTRIBUTIONS:
- Two Thoughts—cover poem. E. C. Lefroy 621
- The World Sorrow. Ian Maclaren 632
- The Return to Common Sense. Z. Swift Holbrook 633
- "The Nonconformist Conscience" and the National Uprising. Rev. F. E. Clark, D.D. 633
- Charity Chance. Chap. XVI. Walter Raymond 634

THE HOME:
- Hymn—a selected poem 636
- Paragraphs 636
- The Rich Young Ruler. Wilmot Chipman 636
- A Hammock in the Kitchen. Clara Marcelle Greene 636
- The "Commandment with Promise" 637
- Scientific Kite Flying. George Ethelbert Walsh 637
- Mothers in Council 638
- Indian Children's Christmas 638
- Closet and Altar 639
- A Clever Parrot 639
- Keeping a Family History—a selection 639
- Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 640
- Corner Scrap-Book 640

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for Nov. 8 641

Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for Nov. 8-14 642

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 642

LITERATURE 643

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
- The State Meeting in Nebraska 650
- The Idaho Association 650
- The Wyoming State Meeting 651
- Accessions to the Churches 655

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 622
- The Ethics of Taxation 622
- The Sheats Law Dead 635
- The Celebration at Princeton. I. O. R. 645
- The A. M. A. Jubilee 646
- Notices 650
- Business Outlook 655
- Biographical 655
- Two Sides of the Shield 656
- Campaign Facetiousness 657
- The Institutional Church League 658
- Marriages and Deaths 659

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday,
At 1 Somerset Street, corner of Beacon Street.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.

On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 11½ inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract. READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

See that the letters S. H. & M.

are stamped on the back of every yard you buy from the reel

NONE OTHER GENUINE

If your dealer will not supply you, we will.

"HOME DRESSMAKING," a new book by Miss Emma M. Hooper, of the Ladies' Home Journal, telling how to put on Bias Velveteen Skirt Binding and other valuable points, sent for 25 cents postage paid.

S. H. & M. Co., P.O. Box 699, N.Y. City.

THE BEST IN

Millinery

At Lower Prices Than Elsewhere.

Trimmed Hats and Toques. Our milliners have just turned into our Parlors on the second floor a fresh lot of Trimmed Hats and Toques, correct in design and made of fine imported materials. The prices are $5.00, $6.00 and $8.00—would be double these figures in the average millinery store.

Ladies' and Misses' Untrimmed Hats. Every shape that Fashion says is right in Untrimmed Hats for Ladies and Misses is shown in our department on the street floor. Trimmings of all sorts near at hand. Prices the lowest.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,
The Leading Millinery House,
90 to 98 Tremont St., Boston.

The Congregationalist . . SERVICES . .

THIRTY-THREE SERVICES READY.

100 Copies, 60 Cents, postpaid.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST,
1 Somerset Street, Boston.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS in the World.
PUREST BELL METAL (COPPER AND TIN).
Send for Price and Catalogue.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

NEW CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

HAIL THE KING!—A new service of Scripture and Song by Rev. ROBERT LOWRY. Delightful music, embracing solos, quartets and choruses. 5 cents.

Christmas Annual, No. 27.—Seven new, bright Carols by favorite composers. 4 cents.

Recitations for Christmas Time, No. 7.—Eight pages admirable selections for this celebration. 4 cents.

The Capture of Santa Claus.—Dr. W. H. DOANE'S recent Christmas Cantata. A happy combination of pleasing dialogue and mirthful songs; one of the best offered. 30 cents.

Christmas Chimes for Little Voices.—A very popular service by Mrs. W. F. CRAFTS and H. P. MAIN. Kindergarten features a special attraction. 6 cents.

Send 30c. for a Copy of the new book . . . SACRED SONGS NO. 1.
By Sankey, McGranahan and Stebbins.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
215 Wabash Ave., Chicago. 76 East 9th St., New York.

A NEW HARVEST SERVICE
In the Autumn Time.

By MARION WEST. With original music and recitations for main school.

HARVEST FRUITS, GOLDEN GRAINS FOR LITTLE GLEANERS, GATHERING IN THE HARVEST, all three for Primary Department.

Harvest Recitations, 15 Cents, postpaid.
Harvest Concert Book, 50 Cents, postpaid.

Complete lists of others free.

HENRY D. NOYES & CO.,
13½ Bromfield Street, - - - - Boston.

Christmas Music.

Glory in the Highest. A Concert Exercise for Sunday-Schools. Hartsough & Fillmore. Beautiful new music. Recitations on separate sheet. Price, 5 cts.; 50 cts. per doz.; $4.00 per 100, not prepaid.

Santa Claus' Reception. Gabriel's latest and best Cantata. 30 cts.; $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid.

The Great Light. Sacred Cantata for Choirs, by Finley Lyon. 30 cts.; $3.00 per doz., not prepaid. New Anthems and Sheet Music. Catalogues free.

Fillmore Bros. 119 W. 6th St. Cincinnati, O. or 40 Bible House, New York.

THE NEW BOOK.

SACRED SONGS No. 1.

By IRA D. SANKEY, JAMES McGRANAHAN, and GEO. C. STEBBINS.

Will be ready for use by Mr. D. L. MOODY, at the Series of Meetings to be held at Cooper Union, New York, November 9th.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 is of same size and style as Gospel Hymns No. 6.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 has an unusually large number of new and attractive songs by the authors and others.

SACRED SONGS No. 1 is furnished cheaper than any of the previous issues. In boards, 30 cents by mail; $25 per 100 by express.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Christmas Services for the Sunday School with new Carols and Recitations, also new features not found in others, send 15c for samples of our 3 latest. Cantata—Santa Claus and His Elves, very fine. 30c. A 16 page Xmas music catalogue FREE. GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO., Chicago, 940 W. Madison st, New York, 44 E. 23rd st.

Published this Day:

NUMBER 105.

THE OLD

FARMERS' ALMANACK

—FOR—

1897.

ROBERT B. THOMAS.

WILLIAM WARE & CO., Publishers,
BOSTON.

PRICE TEN CENTS.

"300 ORDERS IN 3 WEEKS;" "10 orders in every 12 calls;" "$5 to $10 profit every day in the year." Terms free; outfit 30c.; money refunded. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub., Boston.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

Companion. A lady with several years' experience as nurse would like a position as companion. Accustomed to reading aloud, traveling and taking responsibility. References given and asked. Regular nursing not desired. Address P. O. Box O, Warner, Merrimac Co., N. H.

The Council MANUAL for a Congregational Church.

Prepared by the Committee of seven appointed by the National Council of Congregational Churches for that purpose.

The Manual is printed in two parts, separable if desired. Part I. is the Church Manual, which contains:—1. A code of By-Laws; 2. Statements of doctrine as set forth in the Burial Hill Declaration of faith, adopted in 1865, and the one prepared by the National Commission of 1883; 3. A form for the reception of members.

Part II. contains information and suggestion essential to those not familiar with Congregational history, principles, and usages, and of value to all. It contains:—1. A brief sketch of Congregational history; 2. The principles and working of our polity; 3. The method of organizing a Congregational church; 4. A few forms of letters missive; 5. Forms relating to the dismission of church members.

Price 10 cents; twenty-five copies, 7 cts. each; 100 copies, 5 cts. each. Postage additional. In leatherette covers, 20 cts.

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,
Boston and Chicago.

YOU CAN GET MONEY IF YOU WANT IT

$5, $10, $25, $100, $500 or even $1000. There is $11,500 which THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL has set aside soon to distribute among 440 people. Do you want some of it? You cannot exactly get it for the asking, but it is almost as easy. Write to

The Ladies' Home Journal
Philadelphia

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes, of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

Ready
Wednesday, October 28.

THE CENTURY

Beginning the New Volume.

NOVEMBER NUMBER

ALL NEW FEATURES

"Campaigning with Grant"
BY GEN. HORACE PORTER

FIRST instalment of a remarkable series of papers by the man who was closest to General Grant. Pen-pictures of Grant as a man and as a soldier, and of campaign life and scenes. Full of anecdote and humor; richly illustrated.

First Chapters of a Great Novel of the American Revolution

"HUGH WYNNE, FREE QUAKER
Sometime Brevet Lieut.-Colonel on the Staff of his Excellency George Washington"
BY DR. S. WEIR MITCHELL

THIS powerful romance, Dr. Mitchell's masterpiece, is a story of the American Revolution and of Philadelphia society from 1753 to 1783. Washington, Franklin, Lafayette and other famous men figure in it. Illustrated by Howard Pyle.

First Chapters of a Novel by F. Marion Crawford

"A Rose of Yesterday," a romance of modern life in Europe, begins in this number. New features will be announced from time to time. A series of engravings by Cole, of old English masters, begins also in the November number, which contains a most interesting table of contents, including the article on "Election Day in New York"

by Ernest Ingersoll, with striking illustrations by the new artist Jay Hambidge. Other artists represented are Boutet de Monvel, Castaigne, Louis Loeb, C. A. Vanderhoof, Max F. Klepper, F. H. Lungren, C. S. Reinhart, Harry Fenn, W. H. Drake and Peter Newell.

Sold everywhere; 35 cents. Yearly subscriptions (which should begin with this issue), $4.00. All dealers take subscriptions, or remittance may be made to The Century Co., Union Square, New York.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 29 October 1896 Number 44

A MINNESOTA LETTER.

IF you will send me a few sample copies of The Congregationalist I will put them in the hands of some of my people. There are so many papers that are cheap in price, but with more wind than matter in them, it is hard to get people to subscribe to a really good paper. I suppose it can only be got at by degrees.

I have enjoyed the sample copies you sent me. I take pleasure in subscribing. The Congregationalist seems to be breathing the air of the times, and, if it proves to be so, thus meeting my want, I shall become a permanent subscriber. This year I drop two periodicals that I believe I have outgrown, and experiment with others that promise well. Yours very truly,

CHURCH CLUB AGENTS

SHOULD BEGIN WORK

NOW.

Send for Terms and Sample Copies.

Cumulative Commissions for New Subscribers.

TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

6 Months for $1.00

3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

THE Sheats Law has been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of Florida. That law made it a crime punishable by fine and imprisonment for a white person to teach colored children in a private or public school, occupying the same building with them. The law was especially aimed at a school of the A. M. A. at Orange Park. The national council of Congregational churches had called on the A. M. A. to spare no pains to test the constitutionality of the law. Public opinion had emphatically pronounced the law infamous previous to the decision of the court. But it takes a long time for the public opinion of the nation to get down to Florida. The author of the law, which bears his name, has been re-elected superintendent of the schools of the State, though by a diminished majority. We print elsewhere an account of the proceedings at the hearing. It will be seen that the decision of the court is based on a technicality only —on the point that the title of the act is inadequate—and it is quite possible that the next State legislature may remove the defect which the court has pointed out, and thus again the act may become law. Florida may yet need emphatic admonition by the moral sentiment of the nation to save her name from lasting contempt.

The new life stirring in Boston Congregationalism is showing itself in quiet but effective ways. One is the starting of the Young Men's Club, to which we referred last week. The pastor of one of our most flourishing suburban churches devoted a good portion of his anniversary sermon the other day to a vivid setting forth of the condition of Boston Congregationalism in the heart of the city. He did not hesitate to point out specifically the discouraging elements in the situation, but he also made it clear to his congregation of well-dressed and comfortably located suburban Christians that they have a great measure of responsibility for the sustaining of Congregational forces in the city proper. He proposes to go further and to bring as many of his congregation as possible in line with the new Congregational Church Union. This organization, it will be remembered, undertakes to supply a mechanism through which Congregational sympathy and help may operate to the mutual good of all our churches. We should like to see other pastors in and about the city taking up and discussing concretely and frankly the relations of their respective churches to the denomination at large. No church, either from the point of view of its own growth and permanency or from the point of view of its Christian duty, can ignore its obligations to its sister churches. Especially at this time, when the ebb and flow of population changes the situation so rapidly, do individual churches need a better understanding of one another and a more effective method of co-operation.

The New England Sabbath Protective League and the Watch and Ward Society have done a notable service to the cause of good morals by securing the conviction of the proprietor of the Boston Theater for holding a Sunday evening performance under the name of a sacred concert. Judge Gaskell, in his charge to the jury, gave the following definition of sacred music: "Such music as is used, or by common acceptation is fit and appropriate, for use in religious worship or upon occasions where the spiritual motive is appealed to or the moral sentiment invoked." Though this definition thus given has not the force of law it has the force of truth and honesty, and coming from a judge of our Superior Court it ought at least to put an end to the gross violations of our Sunday laws by opening theaters on Sunday to present what is called by blasphemous travesty a "sacred concert."

Our readers will remember the division in the Chicago Presbytery over the case of Rev. F. B. Vrooman, who has been preaching for several months for the Kenwood Presbyterian Church. Although there was at first a good deal of anxiety in regard to his views, still the Presbytery, by a vote of 69 to 28, decided to proceed with his installation. On the ground that his expressed opinions were plainly opposed to the doctrinal standards of the church, an appeal was taken from the action of the presbytery to the synod. The synod met at Danville, Tuesday, Oct. 20, and appointed a committee of twenty-five to consider the matter and take final action. After being together for more than a day and carefully examining all the documents bearing on the case, the committee decided, fifteen to eight, to instruct the presbytery to return Mr. Vrooman his papers and thus refuse to recognize him as eligible for the ministry of the Presbyterian Church. Although an appeal may be carried to the General Assembly, it is not probable that any will be taken. Mr. Vrooman was once pastor of the Salem Street Church, Worcester, Mass.

One of the most revolting of the long list of massacres in Turkey occurred a few weeks ago at Hasskeuy. The place is just outside of Constantinople on the Golden Horn. A private letter of an American citizen tells from an eyewitness the horrible story. When the band of murderers arrived before the American school located there they formed in line. The leader stepped in front of them and offered a prayer which was distinctly heard by many of their waiting victims. He prayed that their arms might be strong, their blows sure, and that their hearts might not falter till their work should be thoroughly done. Then the houses were broken into, helpless human beings were cut down, shot and beaten to death by scores. None of the killed were citizens of the United States, but the property of American citizens was destroyed and the American flag was pulled down, dragged in the dirt and torn in pieces. No apology has been offered by the Turkish Government for this insult to our flag, no indemnity promised for the property destroyed which belonged to our citizens. Still, our Minister Terrell has cabled to Washington that the relations between the United States and Turkey are "perfectly cordial." A saying of Mr. John Fiske seems appropriate in connection with Mr. Terrell's message: "A government touches the lowest point of ignominy when it confesses to an inability to protect the lives and property of its citizens."

Why is it that so many pastors fail to notify their people of great denominational rallies like that in Boston last week? It would not be hard to find scores of churches within a hundred miles of Boston in which neither at preaching service nor at prayer meeting was any announcement made of this series of brilliant meetings. We are not disposed to make fetiches of our benevolent societies nor to consider attendance upon their anniversaries the most important duty of the average church member. But, in view of the fact that these societies are undertaking to do the work of our churches, we think that both courtesy and a sense of Christian responsibility should lead pastors to secure as large a representation of their own people as possible when these great anniversary gatherings are within easy reach. The church which sends two or three or half a dozen men and women to drink in the inspiration of large and enthusiastic missionary meetings is sure to experience a salutary uplift itself when its delegates return. So if interest in the great work of Christ throughout the world does not make pastors alive to the opportunities before their people, a regard for the vitality and spirituality of their own flocks might well induce them to try to have their lay membership represented on such occasions.

The Herald of Gospel Liberty positively declines to discuss political issues. But it takes this stand, not because it fails to comprehend these issues—for it claims to understand them fully—but, as it affirms, because it is impelled by its own interests to be neutral. It claims to be "set for heralding certain great principles," but these are not political. It declares that, as its editor fears to drink or to swear or to steal, "so we 'fear the consequences' of using the paper, ink and type of many brethren, their real property, for the propagation of political principles which they oppose." This frankness is delicious. Are we to understand that the editor is really opposed to the political principles held by those whose real property he is using to make a religious newspaper? If so, we do not wonder at the plaint with which he covered the first page of his last week's issue, whatever may be thought of the wisdom of doing it. It is perfectly natural that he should follow his confession with the charge that The Congregationalist takes its position because "its subscribers are principally advocates of the polity which its editorials so vehemently preach," and that then he should aver that his silence on politics requires more courage than speech. If we might venture so far, we would suggest that the name of our contemporary be amended slightly, as follows: The Herald of Gospel Liberty, Limited.

FADING COLOR LINES.

An associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States addressed a great audience in Tremont Temple, Boston, last week. On the platform with him sat a Negro, one of a class which the Supreme Court once decided had no rights which a white man was bound to respect. Near Justice Brewer, also, a Chinaman sat, one of a class which the Supreme Court has declared ineligible to American citizenship. On the same platform was an Indian, one of a class whose treatment by law and custom during the last hundred years has been justly characterized as "a century of dishonor."

All these gentlemen made addresses. There was a noticeable absence of complaint that the races which have been discriminated against by our laws have not been accorded their rights. That fact was not ignored, but it was not made the keynote. The Negro, the Chinaman and the Indian pleaded for aid to secure what one of them called "the stuff which makes men"—that is, education. This was the predominant sentiment of the jubilee meetings of the A. M. A. last week. Its glory is that it is furnishing to the despised races the stuff which makes men. It has steadfastly done this during years when its work was appreciated only by a few. Its worth is gaining wider recognition. The time is drawing nearer when those who possess the stuff which makes men will recognize as men those who have that stuff, whether they be white or black or red or yellow. President Washington of the Tuskegee Institute for colored pupils was invited, the other day, to deliver an address before the faculty and students of Trinity College in North Carolina. That is a venerable institution for the education of white youth. President Washington's address was received with enthusiasm. He and the half dozen citizens of his own race were treated with faultless courtesy. The students bade them farewell with their college yell, just as they might have said good-by to the governor of their State. This is the first time, we believe, that a Negro has been invited to give an address at a Southern white college. It marks the fading of color lines. Education levels men up. When brains and hearts stand together, the color of the skin counts for little.

Justice Brewer spoke the sentiment which will prevail when he said that in the advance together of the different races in this country is to be realized the full brotherhood of man. Not color but manhood must be the test of the citizenship which is fellowship in our republic. Southern whites are coming to realize this more fully in their relations with the Negroes of the South; the people of the prairies and the Rocky Mountains are coming to feel that this test must measure their judgment of the Indian, and the citizens of the Pacific coast are being persuaded that the same test must be in justice applied to the Chinaman. It takes time and patience and effort to learn these things and to impart them to others, but results already gained are worth the effort. Sectional and color lines have their place. As distinguishing races and peoples in this country of vastly diversified resources they are valuable. But as barricades they are perils. Negroes have the same interests at stake in government which white men have. Southerners require the same general conditions as Northerners, Eastern citizens with Western, for a peaceful and prosperous country. We hail with joy the fading of color and sectional lines which divide them.

Ignorance emphasizes color lines. White men of intelligence recognize intellectual and moral worth in those Negroes and Indians who have it. But they are not all ready to recognize the wisdom and the duty of giving opportunity to gain such worth to those who do not possess it. In urging that mission on the white race the A. M. A. has done that race a great service. In showing what Christian education can do for the Negro it has done him a still greater service. By bringing the white man to recognize the possibilities of manhood in his black and red and yellow brethren, and by bringing the despised races to be worthy of the respect due to manhood, that society is doing the whole country a service which deserves still wider recognition and more generous support.

THE ENCROACHMENTS OF THE SALOON.

The suburbs of Boston have in recent years blossomed into new beauty. She has encircled herself with boulevards and parks, and these have invited many men of wealth to build beside them fine residences. One of the fairest of these growing suburbs is in the neighborhood of that beautiful cemetery, Forest Hills. Naturally, then, when it was proposed to transfer to that vicinity a saloon license, many persons appeared in remonstrance. A small army of property holders came before the police commissioners to protest against the intrusion of this nuisance. These were re-enforced by representatives of churches and by ministers who were eager to resist the entrance of a saloon into a community of church-going people. The blight of a bar is the worst calamity that can fall on the residential district of a city.

The advocates of the saloon pleaded that it would be elegantly fitted up, an ornament to the neighborhood and very attractive. But this was one of the most potent objections against it. Is a roadhouse more welcome because it is costly and inviting? Are our wives and daughters safer to walk from one home to another in the evening because the drinking men they may meet have bought their liquor over an elegant bar? Is the saloon thrust in among our homes less tempting to our young men because it is furnished elegantly? Is the damage to real estate for residential purposes lessened by making the liquor business of the neighborhood conspicuous?

These questions are pertinent to the saloon wherever it stands. But they ought at least to settle the matter in communities where the people do not want it. If the majority of the citizens of a city prefer to have saloons it is certain that the majority in residential districts do not want them near their homes. If they cannot be abolished they ought at least to be limited to the localities where the majority of the people want them and where police protection can best be secured. Minneapolis has already proved the great advantage of such limitation of the saloon. We heartily welcome the suggestion of the chairman of the board of police commissioners that a similar limitation should be adopted in Boston. Let the saloons be kept within the territory already occupied by them, and let that territory be narrowed as far as possible.

CERTAIN GAINS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

It becomes always those who maintain a hopeful outlook upon the world to seize upon aspects of contemporaneous life which carry with them large promise for the future. Despite ominous tendencies at work in the body politic, there is much of encouragement in the phases of the political campaign.

It looks, for instance, as if we were nearer than ever before to our American ideal—the rule of the people. We have seen how, in the case of each of the great political parties, plans and expectations of old-time political managers have been largely frustrated. This was somewhat noticeable at the St. Louis convention, was the most conspicuous fact at the Chicago convention, and has been illustrated over and over again since those great gatherings, particularly in the Eastern States in the ranks of the Democratic party. The war horses of many a hard fight, the astute wire-pullers, men who for years have been accustomed to hold the reins and, perhaps, in many instances, with a measure of wisdom and success so far as practical politics go, have been to a large extent discredited, and for the present, at least, overthrown.

If other bosses come up in their place, if Mr. Hanna is managing one campaign, for instance, in place of Mr. Platt or Mr. Quay, and Senator Jones another, instead of Senator Gorman, it does not alter the fact that there has been a shifting of leadership due to a considerable degree to the desire of the people, which must ever and again manifest itself in American politics, to force new measures and new men to the front. We by no means sympathize with all the ends which our fellow-citizens are proposing for themselves and this nation, but we do regard it as a cheering sign when citizens of all degrees and of all parts of the country are aroused to a sense of their obligations, their opportunities and their power, and we have such a trust in God that we believe he will overrule and guide the onward movement of this current of popular thought and feeling.

Then, too, the American people are learning more from this campaign than from any for many a year. They are thinking, reading, debating. They are trying to find out for themselves on what rest the foundations of national and personal prosperity. Most of them, to be sure, are still in the primary school learning the A B C of tariff and monetary legislation and it will be a long time before subjects which tax the mental energies of great minds will be grasped by the average man with any large degree of comprehension. But the American people will know more about these questions in November than they did in May and the character of this campaign may impart a certain educational flavor to all succeeding ones. If so we shall get rid of excessive partisanship, and shall learn calmly and patiently to work out together the many problems which confront us and which are yet going to be tremendously important and serious whatever the result of the election next week.

We should bear in mind, too, that many a man will cast his vote this year with more moral enthusiasm than he has ever brought to the ballot box before. There are thousands of young men who during the last two or three presidential campaigns have been apathetic with regard to the questions at issue. The real difference between the two parties did not seem to them sufficient to justify taking off their coats and swinging their hats. Many of them had acquired in college halls the ability to see on both sides of a question and had come to feel a fine scorn for stereotyped campaign buncombe and claptrap. Today, however, many of these very men are aroused and ardent. They feel something of the same thrill that their fathers felt in 1860, when they cast their first vote for Abraham Lincoln. They are taking active part, for the first time, in the canvass for the election of men to the legislature and to Congress. They are eager for Nov. 3 to come, when they can deposit a vote which to them will possess more meaning and sacredness than any they have ever cast, simply because the issue, to their eyes, is so clean-cut and reaches down so deep into the region of honesty and honor that they can see only one thing to do and they yearn to do that speedily and efficiently.

A MARSH ROSE.

The morning was cold and clear after a thunderous night of drenching rains. Out of the north the wind blew swiftly and steadily, as if to fill some great southern emptiness left by the storm. It bent the broad blades of the wild grasses by the riverside until they, too, reflected the morning sun as the troubled surface of the water reflected it in waving broken lights and darks. The village streets showed in drenched borders and washed banks and sullen pools the effects of the storm, but the roadside grass was dry, the dust was beaten hard, the broad arch of the sky was cloudless, only a line of shattered clouds—mere rifts and fragments low down in the west—told of the track the storm had taken.

Once we were clear of the village street and the charm of autumn laid siege to the heart in a hundred delicate suggestions and approaches. At every step she offered some token of her regard. The hanging jewels of the barberry, delicate purple edgings of the Japanese creeper on a cottage wall, a crimson dewberry vine running out from a tangle of thicket like an invitation, a wayside clump of trees roofed in with the broad leaves of the grape under whose eaves the black clusters hung—these were her tokens. Byways that led to the river bank were tempting, and the reaches of the stream of a deep cobalt blue in sheltered places, where one brown sail bore a fisherman's boat merrily down against the tide; but the marshes were before us, and beyond the marshes the white sand dunes and the blue sea. And the thought of the sea draws the hearts of men as it draws the streams of the mountain and the valley with longing and desire. It is so vast, so all comprehending, so ready to receive our secrets and bury them in its cool depths, so impartial in its sympathy and its disdain! If there shall be no sea in the eternal life, the reason must be found in the assurance that men shall be satisfied, needing no suggestions from vague horizons and outward moving sails of hopes to be fulfilled, of havens upon whose still waters cities of peace look down, no undertone of music that never wearies in its accompaniment to our changing moods.

At the edge of the marshes where the road crosses their outlet stands the familiar, the typical house. In its accidents, as the passer-by regards them, of size and shape and apparent comfort, it may vary, but in the essentials it is always the same. There are boats at the shore, and one, which is filled with earth and brilliant with flowers and vines, zinnias and marigolds and nasturtiums, in front of the door. Fish poles lean against the bank and a torch holder for night fishing. The geese are taking their after breakfast siesta in the road, and lift their heads from under their wings at the sound of footsteps. This particular house has a magnificent elm tree in front, from which a broad platform is built to the door. Standing there one sees the blue stream, the play of green and brown and red on the level spaces of salt meadow and the tongues of marsh island crowned with dark oak groves that shut them in, and, far away, a great bare hill, sentinel like, looking over white dunes that hide the ocean from our sight.

From this point onward we have entered the enchanted land—by causeway and bridge, through the oak openings, whose sunlit glades are vivid purple with low growing asters; across hill pastures, where the bay leaves are turning bronze above their clustered waxen berries and wild rose hips are everywhere; along the curve of marsh shores, where some high tide has piled its brown wreckage of reed stem and salt grass that escaped the rake of the haymaker, and waifs and strays of the shore, among which a king crab has been uplifted to his undoing.

Beyond all is the wide hill, its lower slopes covered with neglected orchards hung thick with red and golden fruit. Then begins a steep ascent on which the sweet fern clumps show black against the green. Around a shoulder comes our first glimpse of the broad blue ocean. A few more steps on the brown turf and, from the summit, we overlook the varied world of which this hill forms a fit central point. All around us is the tangle of marshes, in front the sand hills and the sea, on the horizon's edge the Isle of Shoals, to the south Cape Ann and, far away to the north, Agamenticus. Landward the village spires, the hills that grow in numbers and crowd and hinder each other as the eye travels westward, and one blue distant summit towering over all on the northwestern horizon.

The north wind brings the crystalline air which makes all things visible. It will suffer no illusions—not even as to the wanderers independence of food and shelter. Winter comes in its touch, for we shiver and turn away even from river and inlet and the mysterious stretches of the blue sea. The glimpses of the village steeple through the wood vistas have a friendly look as we retrace our steps. A spray of marsh rosemary with its elusive color pleases for a moment as a suggestion of the morning's delight, and then, among the scarlet hips we discover one exquisite, doubly and trebly welcome, wild pink rose—the flower which grows in an unimagined perfection on these capes and shores—and the whole year of beauty and delight is linked together for us in a moment. The tyrannous wind and the outrushing tide are battling in a tumult of broken waters as we cross the bridge, and with one lingering retrospect prepare to resume the air of businesslike intentness proper to the village street. If the rose betrays us it will be only to men who have an eye for the beauty of God's world. And when it, too, is faded the rose of memory will still be ours.

THE CHRISTIAN IN POLITICS.

The Christian, because he is one, should take the utmost interest in politics. The kingdom of God never will come fully upon earth until righteous principles dominate in government as well as in private life, and until good men, men whose purpose is to serve God, control public affairs. It is the Christian's privilege and duty to use every effort to accomplish these results.

To set an example of obedience to law is a primary Christian obligation. If there be cases in which one rightly may refuse to obey a law which is believed to be iniquitous, they are very rare. The quickest and safest way of defeating such an evil statute is to obey it even while protesting against it. Its mischievous consequences will soon cause it to be rescinded. To disobey it furnishes excuse and example for the disregard of unobjectionable laws.

The spirit of loyalty to law promotes caution in law-making, and a true Christian appreciates the vital importance of creating and maintaining a sound public spirit, which will permit only wholesome and righteous laws to be enacted. He regards politics and legislation always in their relations to God as truly as to man. He is a true patriot and his love of country is the more intense because he sees the divine hand in national history and comprehends something of the divine purposes for mankind in the fulfillment of which his own nation has a share.

He is not blind to the national mistakes and sins, nor to the excellences, or even the superiorities, of other nations. He is no bigoted partisan. He scorns unworthy political methods and distrusts those men, however able or brilliant, whose ruling motive evidently is personal ambition. He is not above doing humble services for his fellow-citizens, nor does he shrink from undertaking large responsibilities when they devolve upon him legitimately.

He has positive convictions and avows them boldly, yet he seeks to be tactful and good-natured. He can believe in the conscientiousness of those who differ from him. He tries in politics, as everywhere else, to imitate Christ as closely as he can. He believes that God reigns over nations as truly as over individuals, and it is his prayer that this truth may be accepted universally.

What a power one such Christian citizen exerts! Thank God, there are many such. The respect and admiration which are rendered them are sufficient proof that religion and politics need not be regarded as incompatible.

CURRENT HISTORY.

The College Bred Man in the Present Crisis.

One who has kept in touch with every changing phase of this remarkable campaign must have noticed the unusual interest in it which college bred men have revealed. Some college presidents and professors have not hesitated to go on the stump. More have freely communicated their views to the public through magazines and newspapers, while under-graduates and graduates have thrown themselves earnestly into the hard work of vote winning as well as into some of the more scenic and ephemeral aspects of the contest. Preliminary polls of the voting propensities of students and professors have excited much interest. The result invariably has favored the McKinley-Hobart ticket and the gold standard. This has been as true of institutions in South Carolina, Nebraska and Washington as in those in Maine and Pennsylvania. In this connection the following table from the New York Tribune is interesting:

Name of College.	Faculty. Sil.	Faculty. Gold	Students. Gold.	Students. Sil.
Bates College, Lewiston, Me....	0	13	250	25
Middlebury, Vt.....	0	10	90	10
Harvard.....	—	—	1,911	109
Dartmouth.....	—	—	371	27
Williams.....	0	18	*	—
Wesleyan.....	—	†	(a)	—
Hillsdale, Mich.....	0	15	93	15
Knox, Ill.....	0	24	312	51
Pennsylvania, Gettysburg.....	1	15	136	34
Hamilton.....	0	§	135	12
Franklin, Ind.....	2	9	60	25
Morningside, Io.....	1	7	75	15
Leland Stanford, Jr.....	6	60	400	100
University of Virginia.....	—	§	(b)	—

* Majority. †Unanimous. (a) Great Majority. § All. (b) Four-fifths.

Turning from fact to theory, it is doubtful whether the place of the college in the life of a republic has been better described lately than it was in Prof. Woodrow Wilson's oration at the Princeton sesqui-centennial celebration last week. He said:

The growth that is a manifestation of life is equitable, draws its springs gently out of the old fountains of strength, builds upon old tissue, covets the old airs that have blown upon it time out of mind in the past. Colleges ought surely to be the best nurseries of such life, the best schools of the progress which conserves. Unschooled men have only their habits to remind them of the past, only their desires and their instinctive judgments of what is to guide them into the future; the college should serve the state as its organ of recollection, its seat of vital memory. It should give the country men who know the probabilities of failure and success, who can separate the tendencies which are permanent from the tendencies which are of the moment merely, who can distinguish promises from threats, knowing the life men have lived, the hopes they have tested and the principles they have proved. . . . Three thousand miles of sea, moreover, roll between us and the elder past of the world. We are isolated here. We cannot see other nations in detail, and looked at in the large they do not seem like ourselves. Our problems, we say, are our own, and we will take our own way of solving them. Nothing seems audacious among us, for our case seems to us to stand singular and without parallel. We run in a free field, without recollection of failure, without heed of example. It is plain that it is the duty of an institution of learning set in the midst of a free population and amid signs of social change not merely to implant a sense of duty, but to illuminate duty by every lesson that can be drawn out of the past.

President Cleveland at Princeton.

President Cleveland said practically the same thing in his dignified, patriotic, noble utterance at the same remarkable academic celebration. Wilson, the historian and biographer of Washington, and Cleveland, the man of affairs and responsible Executive, agree in this, that, to quote President Cleveland:

Obviously a government, resting upon the will and universal suffrage of the people, has no anchorage except in the people's intelligence. While the advantages of a collegiate education are by no means necessary to good citizenship, yet the college graduate, found everywhere, cannot smother his opportunities to teach his fellow-countrymen and influence them for good, nor hide his talents in a napkin, without recreancy to a trust. In a nation like ours, charged with the care of numerous and widely varied interests, a spirit of conservatism and toleration is absolutely essential. A collegiate training, the study of principles unvexed by distracting and misleading influences, and a correct apprehension of the theories upon which our republic is established ought to constitute the college graduate a constant monitor, warning against popular rashness and excess. . . . A constant stream of thoughtful, educated men should come from our universities and colleges, preaching national honor and integrity and teaching that a belief in the necessity of national obedience to the laws of God is not born of superstition.

But Mr. Cleveland does not stop there. He becomes more concrete in his thought:

When a desire is apparent to lure the people from their honest thoughts and to blind their eyes to the sad plight of national dishonor and bad faith, I would have Princeton University, panoplied in her patriotic traditions and glorious memories, and joined by all the other universities and colleges of our land, cry out against the infliction of this treacherous and fatal wound. I would have the influence of these institutions on the side of religion and morality. I would have those they send out among the people not ashamed to acknowledge God and to proclaim his interposition in the affairs of men, enjoining such obedience to his laws as makes manifest the path of national perpetuity and prosperity. . . . I believe it is not a superstitious sentiment that leads to the conviction that God has watched over our national life from the beginning. Who will say that the things worthy of God's regard and fostering care are unworthy of the touch of the wisest and best of men? I would have those sent out by our universities and colleges, not only the counselors of their fellow-countrymen, but the tribunes of the people, fully appreciating every condition that presses upon their daily life, sympathetic in every untoward situation, quick and earnest in every effort to advance their happiness and welfare, and prompt and sturdy in the defense of all their rights.

Here spoke the son of a Christian clergyman, the descendant of God-fearing New England ancestors.

The Political Outlook.

Ere another issue of this journal is edited and read voters will have visited the polls and recorded their will. Every indication points to an unprecedented participation in the contest, to more or less delay in counting the vote and announcing the result, and speedy adjustment of business to the decision. Chicago is recognized by all as the storm center, and feeling runs so high there that we should not be surprised to read of bloodshed. The insult offered last week to Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle in his own State, Kentucky, indicates how desperate is the dominant party in Kentucky, and how short-sighted it is, too, for the spirit that prompted the insult is such that its display has driven many who had intended to vote for Palmer and Buckner into declarations of purpose to vote for McKinley and Hobart. Messrs. Hanna and Jones of the Republican and Popocrat National Committees have been fulminating at each other. The latter attempts to induce the laboring men of the country to believe that it is for their interest to elect Mr. Bryan, because otherwise they will become serfs. The former in his declarations asserts that Mr. Jones and Mr. Bryan are deliberately endeavoring to array wage-earners against their employers, class against class. The letter of Hon. W. R. Morrison of Illinois, chairman of the Interstate Commission, assailing the record of Governor Altgeld of Illinois, and denouncing him as an unworthy leader, is calculated to settle the fate of the latter in this campaign; and the withdrawal of some of the Populist electors in Georgia and their declarations of intention to vote for Mr. McKinley is indicative of the mixed condition South and West as the outcome of the vain attempt to make Democrats and Populists merge their interests.

Mr. Bryan will make ten speeches a day the last three days of the campaign, and all in Chicago. Mr. Reed will at the same time be working on the Pacific coast, and ex-President Harrison in Indiana. The managers of both parties claim the victory by about the same plurality, but all tests or estimates made by non-partisan journals prophesy the election of Mr. McKinley.

The Death of Ex-Speaker Crisp.

The sudden death of Hon. Charles F. Crisp of Georgia, just as he was about to be elected United States Senator, removes from the ranks of Southern public men one who had won a higher place than his attainments merited. He succeeded Hon. Roger Q. Mills as leader of the Democratic minority in the House of Representatives, and when that party became the dominant one he naturally became Speaker of the House. The records of Congress while he was in power reveal no enactment of constructive legislation and much that was destructive, but the chief characteristic of the House while he presided over it was its incompetency. As the leader of a minority he had capacity, as Speaker of the House he was not a success.

Anglo-American Relations.

If sources of authority, usually reliable, are to be trusted the British minister to the United States, when he visited our State Department last week, bore documents from Downing Street, London, which make it certain that President Cleveland will be able to announce in his annual message that Great Britain and the United States have come to an understanding on the Venezuela boundary question and on the details of a general arbitration treaty. In fact, the most ominous cloud on the horizon now is Venezuela herself, and the fear that she will balk when we have done our utmost for her. This last summer expert scientists representing Great Britain, the United States and Canada were commissioned to visit Alaska and then report authoritatively upon a method of controlling the seal fur industry in the Bering Sea. It is understood that they have agreed upon a report which will satisfy all concerned, and put an end forever to the possibility of dangerous misunderstandings. Scientists have a way of settling speedily problems that politicians squabble over interminably. They see what is to be done and report what they see.

The United States and Turkey.

Our minister to Turkey, Mr. Terrell, is reported to have expressed in forcible terms his dislike—to put it mildly—of all those who question at all the cordiality of the relations between the United States and Turkey. If by this he means that there is anything more than a more perfect understanding between the two Powers, then we are sorry. Civilization and barbarism should not have "cordial" relations. Whether it is due to the tenor of Mr. Olney's dispatches of state, or the menace of our fleet off Smyrna, or a hint from Russia, we do not pretend to say, but the fact is that concessions are being made by Turkey. We chronicled last week the permission granted to Armenian families to join the heads of those households resident in and citizens of this country. Since then the Department of State has received word that Turkey is prepared now to negotiate a treaty which shall assure the inviolability of Armenians returning to Turkey with passports guaranteeing their American citizenship. This voluntary action of the Porte is as surprising as it is welcome. It should not, however, be allowed to obscure the greater questions at issue between the two Powers, nor do we think it will. American citizens need consular protection in the interior of Turkey. Damage done to mission property must be settled for, adequately and promptly.

Turkey and the Powers.

Not until Lord Salisbury speaks at the Guild Hall banquet will the British people know aught of that which has been done by their foreign minister, while the public has been so insistent in telling him what he should do. It may prove that he has fallen in with the popular demand that Great Britain make concessions to Russia and return to the pro Russian policy which once characterized British diplomacy. In that case Germany and Austria may well believe that the triple alliance of which they were dominant members has ceased to hold the balance of power, and a new and more formidable triple alliance has arisen. Once let the principle of a Russian-French-British alliance be granted and it then becomes a question of method and detail in arranging the terms. What shall Great Britain pay to enter the compact? Shall Cyprus be restored to Turkey? Shall Egypt be given over to France just as the work of reformation of Egyptian finance is well under way? These and other questions must be answered, and it will be interesting to see whether the British public will as gracefully accept the practical fruits of the new policy as it vehemently clamors for it—in theory. The royal marriage in Rome last week between the heir apparent to the throne of Italy and Princess Hélène of Montenegro never could have been consummated if Italy had not won the assent of the papacy and Russia. Neither could the recent treaty between Italy and France respecting Tunis have been negotiated unless Italy was preparing to shift from her place as an ally of Germany and Austria to that of a power desiring a closer understanding with Russia and France. Moreover the understanding between Great Britain and Italy has been such of late that the latter would hardly make so important a change of policy did she not know that in so doing she had the approval of the former. Before such a coalition how impotent the sultan would be! And yet there is little reason to believe that the partition of Turkey would follow, although Abdul Hamid's deposition might. Meanwhile, as diplomats contrive and as Christian Europe awaits their decision, the work of massacre does not cease, and reports from Constantinople indicate a waxing, rather than a waning, of Mussulman fanaticism. Letters from Harpoot, just received at the American Board rooms, describe the massacre of Armenians at Egin, and place the number of the massacred as 2,000. Many of them were women and children.

Spain's Plight.

The latest news from the Philippines records rebel victories and a growing conviction that Spain has a task on her hands there which would tax her to the utmost even were her credit good and her hands not tied in Cuba. The rebels seem to have special delight in attacking monasteries and ravaging the property of the Catholic priests, and naturally. There, as elsewhere, they stand with the government, exciting it to impose heavier taxes, to bear down with a stern hand on all the rising aspirations of the common people. The certainty that the next Administration will act in Cuba's behalf, if this one does not, is influencing events in Cuba now. That our interference would be tolerated, if not welcomed, by certain British interests has been made apparent by the editorials of some of the London journals during the past week. The present chaotic condition of industry and commerce cannot be tolerated much longer, while the atrocities on both sides, though chiefly on the Spanish, make interference on the ground of humanity seem to be warranted. Spain's credit on European bourses is so low that she cannot borrow more, and the poverty of her common people is such that they will resist further taxation.

NOTES.

The Society of Colonial Wars, through its Connecticut chapter, has placed a bronze memorial tablet on the Judges' Cave rock near New Haven, marking the site of the safe shelter and hiding place of the regicides, William Goffe and Edward Whalley

The majority of the judges of Massachusetts Supreme Court have just rendered a decision affirming the right of employers to resort to injunctions restraining representatives of labor unions from patrolling in front of their premises and intimidating would-be laborers by threats or otherwise. Judge Holmes and Chief Justice Field dissent.

The murder of Mr. Andrus of Yonkers by the explosion of a dynamite bomb in his business office is so suggestive that it deserves recognition here. Modern applied science is a two-edged sword. It can cut in two ways. Dynamite and intricate machinery in the hands of murderers, and bicycles as the silent steeds of robbers and footpads, make life today very insecure and render policemen less effective than ever.

At the meeting of the directors of the Catholic University in Washington, D. C., last week, the liberal or American party is said to have won. Bishop Keane's resignation as one of the directors was not accepted, and three names were sent to Rome from which the pope is to select a new rector, and all of those so named are said to be men in sympathy with the ideals which Bishop Keane had for the university. Father Conaty of Massachusetts, who is one of the three, was educated by the Jesuits, be it noted.

The re-election by the legislature of Vermont of Justin S. Morrill to his seat in the United States Senate will enable this venerable public servant, if he lives until March 4, to surpass Benton's hitherto unprecedented record of long service in the Senate, Benton serving five full terms, while Mr. Morrill bids fair to enter upon, if not complete, six terms. Inasmuch as Mr. Morrill served twelve years in the House before entering the Senate, it will be seen that he has officially served his State and the nation over forty years. Both he and Vermont are open to congratulations, he on the constituency that trusts him, she on the man who serves her.

The Treasury Department is requiring bail or security for such of the Armenian refugees at the port of New York as seem to be incapable of providing for their own support, and well-to-do Armenians in New England and the Salvation Army in New York are giving the required bonds. It is to be hoped that such resolutions as the A. M. A. passed at its Boston meeting last week will make the Treasury Department officials disposed to be lenient in construing the immigration law. America cannot well afford to even seem to shut the door in the face of those who have been fortunate enough to escape from the "Great Assassin's" clutches.

Lord Salisbury's ultimatum to the Chinese legation in London last week probably saved the life of an educated Chinaman guilty of conspiracy against the ruling powers in China. He had been forcibly captured while walking London streets and made a prisoner within the legation's walls. "Hands off," said Great Britain. Documents just published show that Li Hung Chang's mission to the United States, in part, was the effort to secure a readjustment of trade treaties so that the Chinese revenue may no longer suffer from the effects of exchange between a silver standard and a gold standard country. Li Hung Chang's appointment as minister of foreign affairs would seem to indicate that the result of his recent visit to Europe and America had seemed good to his imperial ruler, the emperor of China.

IN BRIEF.

"This is a campaign of education." So we are told on every hand. Just what has it taught you of the principles of our Government and the duties and privileges of citizenship?

Fifty young Jews of Baltimore, graduates of Johns Hopkins University, have formed an organization, the Maccabeans, for the purpose of carrying on charitable work among the Russian and Polish Jews in East Baltimore.

European capitals have long had what is called their "reptile press." New York now seems to have at least one journal subsidized by the sultan of Turkey, whose unenviable task is to try to make black seem to be white.

Few will dispute the saying of the preacher at the recent convention of Connecticut Universalists that "the surest way to generate a conviction of the practical mission of the Universalist Church is to connect its life and purpose with the cause of Jesus Christ."

Keep in mind the timely and important suggestion that Founder's Day, Nov. 8, be observed by all the friends of Mt. Holyoke College as a time of special gifts. General giving, even though the individual amounts be small all along the line, will produce large results.

The man who can read the two pages of fresh, accurate news from the leading American institutions of learning published each Wednesday in the Boston Transcript, and not feel a thrill of pride in his country and a debt of gratitude to the Transcript, must lack mind and soul.

Our scholars were not overlooked at Princeton last week. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on Professors G. P. Fisher of Yale, C. M. Mead of Chicago and J. H. Thayer of Harvard; and the degree of Doctor of Laws on Prof. George T. Ladd of Yale and President Angell of Michigan University.

During Queen Victoria's long reign she has been engaged in thirty-eight wars with about twenty different nations and tribes. She has been victorious in them all. Many of her conquered enemies have been savage tribes, where her soldiers were simply doing police duty. That, however, is often the highest service of an army.

Minister Terrell cables that "the relations between Turkey and the United States are perfectly cordial." So far as Mr. Terrell is concerned these relations will probably continue cordial so long as he remains in that country as the official representative of the United States. After that some effective steps may be taken to secure indemnity for property of American citizens destroyed in Turkey.

Contrasting the present with the past, October with January, one is forcibly reminded of De Tocqueville's observation, "An American attends to his private concerns as if he were alone in the world, and the next minute he gives himself up to the common weal as if he had forgotten them. At one time he seems animated by the most selfish cupidity, at another by the most lively patriotism."

Good Bishop Whipple at the Mohonk Indian Conference, this year, at seventy-four years of age, seemed to have renewed his youth. Certainly he never pleaded more tenderly in behalf of his beloved people, the Indians. That he knows how to plead he has demonstrated, for he is taking back to them his young bride, who, no doubt, will add much to the bishop's future service. Many good wishes will follow them.

Congregationalists, according to the report of the Commissioner of Education, have more students in theological seminaries than any other religious denomination in proportion to church membership—twelve in 10,000. The most important things next to be done are to exalt the quality and increase the quantity of the church membership. Then all reasonable calls for ministers will meet with ready response.

These are days when conservatism is asserting its authority in Illinois. The Synod of Illinois refuses to indorse the action of the Presbytery of Chicago in admitting Rev. Frank Vrooman to membership; and the Illinois State Baptist Association last week refused to indorse the Divinity School of Chicago University by a vote of 72 to 22, opposition to Pres. W. R. Harper's views being responsible for the verdict.

A few months ago Presbyterians held a great meeting in Carnegie Music Hall to raise money for missions, with President Cleveland and Dr. Talmadge as the chief attractions. The amount given and pledged was about $6,000. A few days ago the Christian Alliance held a meeting in the same building under the lead of Dr. A. B. Simpson and raised $112,000 for missions. How can the difference between the results of the two meetings be explained?

Popular ignorance of the Bible has been frequently illustrated of late in political speeches. For example, Mr. Bryan has within a few days made Solomon, the richest man named in the Bible, offer the prayer of Agur, "Give me neither poverty nor riches"; and he has put into Job's mouth the speech of Elihu, whom Job treated with silent contempt, "Great men are not always wise." Does not this sentence suggest that public speakers should not quote the Bible without first learning who wrote their quotations and what their authors meant to say?

So greatly aroused was one lay attendant upon the A. M. A. meetings that he went back to his own church and proposed that on Sunday, Nov. 1, an A. M. A. jubilee rally be held. At that time he and five of his fellow church members, who were also at the Boston meetings, will speak. Their hope is to reproduce, on a small scale, the anniversary. Special literature will be distributed and pledge cards circulated. Though the church is not large or wealthy it intends to do its share toward wiping out the debt, which, despite the generous contributions last week, is still large.

While every item of intelligence concerning the Catholic University at Washington deserves to be recorded and studied, it should not be permitted to monopolize the attention of the public when turned to educational matters at the capital. The corner stone of the Hall of History, the first of the buildings of the American University there, was laid last week. Bishop Hurst of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the foster father of this institution, in his speech called attention to the fact that George Washington first recognized the propriety of a great university at the national capital.

The quiet glen in the Grampian Hills which Ian Maclaren has immortalized is not averse to reaping some tangible benefit from its sudden leap to fame. An enterprising resident of Logiealmond has opened an inn which bears the appropriate name of Drumtochty House, and of course no reader of the Bonnie Brier Bush visiting the region therein described would stop anywhere else. We understand that a kindred commercial instinct has shown itself in Kirriemuir, the town of which Barrie writes, and the incoming tourist is saluted with this sign: "This is the Window in Thrums. Ginger ale and root beer sold here."

The Bishop of London has been made Archbishop of Canterbury and primate of all England. His name is Frederick Temple, and he is seventy-five years of age. From the time of his graduation at Oxford in 1842 till 1869 he was a teacher, and since 1858 has been head master, of Rugby School. He was Bishop of Exeter from 1869 to 1885, when he was appointed Bishop of London. Dr. Temple is, we believe, a Broad Churchman, scholarly and tolerant in spirit. He was one of the authors of the famous Essays and Reviews published in 1860, and some years later he supported Mr. Gladstone's measure for the disestablishment of the Irish Church.

Here is an instance—rare, we trust—of the ignorance occasionally to be found even in cultured Boston. Within a few days a passenger in an electric car asked what that spire was, indicating Park Street Church. The conductor said: "That's Park Street Baptist Church. It's run by the same folks that have Tremont Temple over there" Shades of Dr. A. L. Stone and Ezra Farnsworth! This is almost as good as the announcement in the Tribune of Cambridge that the missionary meeting at Shepard Memorial Church last Sunday evening would be "an overflow from the greater American Board meeting in Boston."

The Evangelical Alliance, in view of conditions in this country that awaken serious thought, sends out the suggestion that the ministers in each community observe Tuesday, Nov. 17, as a "quiet day." It is proposed that they meet together for conference and prayer, looking to the spiritual quickening of themselves and their churches. The Alliance seems to have been moved to this suggestion by the remembrance that the great missionary movement of this century is traced to a concert of prayer by ministers of the United States and Great Britain. The full text of the suggestion, and any further information desired, may be had by addressing Rev. Dr. Josiah Strong, secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, 105 East 22d Street, New York.

"Divisional option" is said to be the method which the League of American Wheelmen will adopt in settling the question of Sunday racing during the next year. That is, because "France and Mexico score their greatest successes on that day," because "California is very warm under the collar over the Sunday racing rule" and wishes Sunday racing, therefore Massachusetts, Ohio, New York and the other great conservative commonwealths must give way in their opposition to Sunday racing and permit "divisions" which do wish it to have it even if they do not. The L. A. W. now has 70,000 members, most of whom care nothing for its racing department, and many of whom certainly will leave it when it changes its present consistent attitude of opposition to Sunday racing everywhere.

The Synod of New York met in Brooklyn last week. It honored Dr. Storrs by complimentary resolutions in view of the approaching fiftieth anniversary of his pastorate of the Church of the Pilgrims, and he made a characteristic and felicitous reply. The synod took steps to try the New York Presbytery for its disobedience of the injunction of the General Assembly not to take under its care the students of Union Seminary, this being the substance of the assembly's action. This proceeding may be intended in the interests of peace; whether it is or not, such is likely to be the result. For the temper of the Presbyterian Church in New York State has so changed within the last five years as to make almost impossible a repetition of the scenes which were formerly witnessed in the New York Presbytery over questions connected with the standing of Dr. Briggs.

History and mythology have their apple of discord, but apples of concord are now being freely sent in large quantities from the country to the city. From the reports thus far made both the recipient and the giver are being blessed. In addition to the undertaking suggested by Mr. Moody, and now in operation under the care of the Boston City Missionary Society—900 bags of apples having just been received and half as many more being expected soon—another movement of a like nature has been inaugurated. This latter offering had its inception in the offer of a carload of apples made by a lady in Milford, N. H., to the Associated Charities of this city. The letter was turned over to Rev. R. B. Tobey with the request that he answer it, and if possible assume charge of the fruit distribution. Close following the acceptance of this offer came that of all the railroads centering in Boston to ship in fruit free of charge, and the no less generous offer of a Long Wharf firm of a storage warehouse and free cartage from the cars to this distributing depot. A dozen carloads of fruit are already in sight, which means that thousands of Boston's poor will receive a supply of apples before Thanksgiving. Some idea of the magnitude of the work may be learned from the fact that sub-stations for distribution have been established in Roxbury, South End, North End, East Boston and Charlestown.

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Echoes from Toledo.

The Ministers' Meeting Monday morning was of more than ordinary interest. Secretary Hitchcock and the business committee had arranged to devote the morning to a report of the meeting of the American Board at Toledo. In order to save time and secure a full report certain topics had been assigned brethren present in Toledo upon which to speak. Secretary Hitchcock pointed out the need, now that the debt has been paid, of increased income so as to prevent the great suffering which retrenchment has caused. The fact that our own churches here in Chicago are on an average giving less to the Board than the churches of other associations was not a pleasant fact for their pastors to contemplate. Dr. Willard

Scott insisted upon the necessity of greatly increasing gifts in order that the work in hand may not be hindered. Mr. E. W. Blatchford called attention to the paper of Hon. E. P. Wheeler. Dr. Johnson spoke encouragingly and approvingly of the action taken in regard to Japan, and Dr. Loba was not despondent over the condition of things in Turkey. Drs. Gilbert and Humphrey regarded the meeting as one of the best of recent years and Rev. W. A. Nichols of Lake Forest, who was born two years before the Board was organized, spoke hopefully in regard to the present outlook. President Fisk had words of praise for Dr. Packard's sermon and Dr. Storrs's address Thursday evening. Three minutes each were granted Dr. Henry Blodget of China and Rev. Mr. Smith of India. In the closing address of the morning by Dr. Goodwin, emphasis was put upon the need of more prayer. The proposal of the New England Church was approved that each church in the association be asked to adopt a resolution calling upon the President to take such action at once as will secure indemnity for the destruction of missionary property in the Turkish empire and absolute safety for American citizens who are in the empire for the sole purpose of preaching the gospel.

A Lively Club Meeting.

The first gathering of the Congregational Club for the season came Monday evening, and as usual was at the Auditorium. Under the general topic of A European Night we heard from three of our brethren who had passed their vacation across the water. Rev. W. W. Leete gave a clear and interesting account of his trip with The Congregationalist's party to England and the Continent, and made it so vivid that it was easy to imagine ourselves with him on his tour. He was happy in his description of the reception of the New World Pilgrims both by the Established Church and by Nonconformists, and did not fail to recognize the courtesy which these brethren abroad had shown. Rev. Q. L. Dowd, with a friend, went over parts of England and Scotland on a wheel. They also went up and down the Rhine and saw a good deal more of the villages that skirt the river than ordinary tourists see. Mr. Dowd's account was sufficiently humorous to make the information it gave exceedingly interesting. It will be surprising if his experience does not induce some other ministers to try and repeat it next year. Rev. J. B. Silcox confined his report of his summer outing to three sermons which he heard. The sermon which impressed him most was by Canon Wilberforce, in which the hope was expressed that God would finally overcome sin and save all those who have been brought under its power.

A letter was read by Mr. Blatchford from Dr. C. F. Gates of Harpoot, calling attention to the fact that more than 600 pupils have entered Harpoot College, a large increase over the attendance of any previous year, and to the further fact that, in spite of all that the region has suffered, the amount of money paid for tuition is only about a third less than in more prosperous times. The club ordered a cablegram of sympathy and pledge to stand by him in his work sent Dr. Gates. Strong resolutions were also passed expressing admiration for the courage with which our missionaries in Turkey have stood at their posts, and calling upon the President to do everything in his power to render it safe for them to continue their work and to obtain indemnity for the property destroyed.

There was considerable discussion over a resolution affirming it to be the conviction of the club that the election of William McKinley would be promotive of the interests of good government, honesty and integrity. For a time it seemed as if the opposition to any action was going to be strong enough to prevent any satisfactory vote being taken, but when it came to the final decision the majority for the resolution was overwhelming. In the straw vote, which was also called for, it was found that out of 148 present four were for Levering, two for Bryan, two for Palmer and 139 for McKinley. One person refused to vote because he objected to what he was pleased to call the political action of the club. FRANKLIN.

FROM THE NORTHWEST.

A Civic Revival.

The Good Citizenship League of Minneapolis had its beginning about eight months ago, through the union of two initial movements working along different lines for the betterment of municipal affairs. Its object is to help secure and maintain an "honest, efficient, law-observing, non partisan city government."

In aid of such a much needed reform the league is publishing a little paper widely circulated. It is full of well attested and sworn cases, also reports of Grand Jury findings, showing that our present city council has been ruled by a corrupt "combine" which has voted for a list of measures every one bearing the marks of extravagance and corruption. Almost to a man the same names appear as favoring this series of questionable measures. These bills were denounced by the press when they were passed and sound business men individually protested. But now that these protests have a solidly organized form, the public conscience is becoming thoroughly aroused.

Branches of the central league have been organized in all the wards but one, and for the thirteen aldermen the league has had the direct or indirect influence in placing eleven names in nomination, nine of whom will certainly be elected. So thoroughly are the wards becoming aroused that in some cases they have appointed five or ten of their leading citizens to be present at every council meeting to see how their representative talks and votes. The seats in the chamber formerly occupied by "bummers" and ward heelers are beginning to be filled with representative citizens. A leading paper has just published a scathing editorial against one of these "combine" aldermen, defying him to meet their charges, and the alderman does not openly meet the challenge, fearing that still worse results would follow. Whatever hardships the financial stress has caused, at least one benefit has come in the thoroughly awakened conscience of our taxpayers to the cold fact that they are being robbed. The healthful sign of all this indignation is spreading rapidly among all our best citizens, and time and money are given freely to enforce the long needed reform—that a municipality is a business corporation and not a political grab-bag.

Minneapolis has never experienced such a revival of civic righteousness. The "good fellow" is no longer a guaranty for the candidate's election. The people are insisting that aldermanic candidates shall have some other visible means of support than their confessedly inadequate salary of $500, so that the temptation to form dishonest combines for the purpose of plundering the honest taxpayers may be as far removed as possible. This league has come to stay and the quiet, thoroughgoing work which it is doing is sure in time to carry terror to the heart of the machine politician. As yet they have undertaken no form of work save aldermanic reformation, but investigation is being made by committees looking toward other lines of civic reform.

Educational Outlook.

The University of Minnesota, with its 2,500 and more students, is crowded to its doors in all departments. The board of regents have just taken action, going into effect next year, in raising the standard for admission. Being assured of numbers they are taking the next position for a university in this region, emphasizing more and more the quality of their students. They have also taken a strong position against students who are conditioned, making it very difficult for them to continue their course unless they show determination to remove these conditions as promptly as possible.

The attendance at Carleton College is larger than was anticipated, and the outlook aside from finances has never been as encouraging as this year. On account of the shrinkage in valuations and carrying some provisional gifts for the college, Carleton, with some other Western institutions, is suffering from the stress of the times. But the faculty in their heroic self-sacrifice are doing more than their share toward meeting this deficit. Dean Goodhue, the first teacher in the college, is in the field and is giving all his time this year to raising funds. Fargo College and Windom Institute both rejoice in an enlarged attendance, and each is meeting the financial problem heroically.

The Contest.

Mr. Bryan came and went. His reception at St. Paul was ordinary, but more enthusiastic in Minneapolis, Duluth and in northern Michigan. With one or two exceptions the cities and larger towns throughout the Northwest show decided gains for sound money, but the rural districts north and west in Minnesota will poll a strong silver vote.

The gubernatorial fight in Minnesota is especially hot, and leading business men are working day and night to keep this commonwealth from falling into that blighted list of Populistic States which would seriously impair our credit at the East. As things look now the chances for Lind's election are nearly as good as those of the present incumbent. Wheat is going up, and this means millions of dollars to the farmers of the Northwest alone. This effectually silences the silver men's cry of low prices for wheat, and means thousands of votes for sound money. Gold will win, and it only remains to be indicated by how large a majority.

Personal.

Rev. James McAllister, pastor of the Fremont Avenue Church, Minneapolis, has just resigned to accept a call to Alpena, Mich. This is an institutional church, doing excellent work, and Mr. McAllister will prove to be the right man for the place. We congratulate Alpena on securing him, but we shall miss him from our good fellowship. Aside from the good work which he has done in his church, he has also been active in civic reform. J. A. S

The World Sorrow.*

By John Watson, M. A., D. D. (Ian Maclaren).

It must seem to detached minds a work of perfection that, while each of us has to bear his own burden, certain people cannot be content without also adding the burden of the world and tasting a double share of sorrow. No one, however, may judge this sorrow to be light or fantastic, for this were to shut his eyes to facts and to deny a conspicuous trend of present day thought. Many strong thinkers have sorrowfully abandoned the idea of divine government, some ordinary folk have lost the comfort of religious faith, hot heads have preached the "Red Terror," kind hearts have thrown away their enthusiasm on impossible schemes, young people have committed suicide because the creation "groaneth and travaileth in pain." Our fathers quarreled with their neighbors and argued themselves into madness over metaphysical mysteries, such as the sovereignty of God. But a large number of serious people are chiefly concerned today about the problems: "Is there any heaven beyond the grave?" and "Why are so many of our brethren living in hell this side of the grave?"

No one can read a newspaper without feasting on horrors and having his optimism very rudely shattered. In Africa English troops are shooting down savages with arms of scientific precision; in Asia Mohammedans are butchering Christians with every circumstance of brutal barbarity; in America white mobs burn Negroes to death; in Europe armed hosts wait the signal for war. Rich people grow richer and more luxurious, flaunting their extravagances, their insolences, their vices in face of the world; poor people herded together in great cities grow more discontented and bitter in their squalor and poverty. The ancient fear of God, with reverence, loyalty and purity, seems to be almost dead, and a hundred signs go to prove that pleasure is fast becoming our God. In spite of a growing humanitarianism, gross outrages are still perpetrated on dumb animals, on helpless women, on innocent children. What must be the sum of one day's misery over the world!

Perpetual moanings from the troubled sea
Of human thought, and wails from the vexed wind
Of mortal feeling, fill our life's wide air.

Times there are when we decline to remember this Inferno and refuse to look over its brink. We are disgusted and offended by any reference to its tragedy, and would prefer that it should be discreetly covered from sight. The news from this far country hinders our full enjoyment in the Father's house. It comes between us and our ease so that we cannot laugh and talk and eat and sleep so pleasantly with such pictures forced on our eyes, with such stories in our minds. Certainly the chronicles of life, either on battle-fields or east ends, are not appetizing or agreeable reading, but the reason why we shrink from reading them is not our sensitive tenderheartedness but our fastidious selfishness. If such wickedness is being done and such agony being endured it is right and necessary that we should know, and cowardly if we refuse to know. He is less than human, to say nothing of Christian, who can walk the streets of a Western city at midnight, or read the reports from the consuls in Armenia without being wrung.

Various questions force themselves upon the most sluggish mind beneath the shadow of this Gethsemane, and the deepest has to do with God. We are driven past the victim and the oppressor, past laws and governments to the source of power and order. Where is God, what is he doing, how does he feel about this horror? If one of us had the authority would he not in one hour bring this immense misery to an end? And One has almighty and supreme authority. Why does he make no sign? Goaded and maddened by the contradiction of the situation—the love of God and the sorrow of men—earnest and reverent minds are driven to abandon one side or the other, and since none can deny the sorrow they give up the love—which means giving up God, for it were better to believe in no God than in a cruel or indifferent God who would not lift a hand although the world were filled with blood and tears. People who cannot believe in a greater devil are not to be counted heretics; their unbelief is a tribute to the honor of God. The worst heretics are those who have no difficulty about the government of the world, because they have comfortable homes and have suffered no wrongs. Their faith is not religion—it is only Pharisaism and selfishness.

This fact of world suffering is perhaps our darkest problem, and it cannot be faced without touching another and earlier. Something goes before suffering and that is sin, and it is amazing that we make so much of the one and think so little of the other. No doubt there are people in this world who suffer without having sinned—the vicarious victims of the race; but it still remains true that if men had obeyed the law of righteousness written in their hearts this world had not been a Gehenna. Were men to keep Christ's commandment of love, there is hardly any form of human misery that would not be ended in two generations. It is, therefore, missing the mark to conclude that this world is misgoverned unless one be sure that the government has been obeyed, and, as a matter of fact, we all know very well that the opposite has been the case. Every one does more or less what he ought not to do, and comes into collision with law, and so his fingers and other people's are burned. The punishment is severe, but then that does not prove that the world is an anarchy, it rather proves a very just and strong government.

It may of course be urged that this only pushes the difficulty a stage farther back and raises the hopeless question: Why God permitted evil? Here the most daring speculator gets beyond his depth and is certain to be carried away. We can only be clear on one point—that liberty of choice implies the possibility of choosing wrong, and that liberty of choice is essential to the formation of character. There is no danger that a slave should wander from home, for ere he got any distance he had been caught and brought back. Slaves can be shackled and confined. They are saved from becoming prodigals, but under this régime they can never grow into men; they will remain undeveloped, weakly, neutral, neither good nor evil, mere human chattels. It is the glory of a son that he is free; it is his perilous privilege to go astray. As a free man he departs into the far country and plays the fool. So it comes to pass that he suffers desperately, and comes back in hunger and rags. When he does return it will not be as he went out, but wiser, stronger, better in nature.

If the end of Providence were to secure this race in a garden of Eden, lapped round with comfort, where no one should ever taste hunger or pain or loss, then let it be freely granted that this world is a conspicuous failure. It is so badly arranged and so loosely governed that it would bring scandal on a human monarch. Things are so much out of joint that we are obliged to seek for another working theory of life than the garden one, and we find it in the New Testament. Jesus and His apostles teach that the supreme success of life is not to escape pain, but to lay hold on righteousness, not to possess but to be holy, not to get things from God, but to be like God. They were ever bidding Christians beware of ease, ever rousing them to surrender and sacrifice. They never complained of their own hard lot, but rather considered that it was gain. Winds blowing off the snow breed hardy men, and fierce seas breaking on rocky coasts make skillful seamen; and if the mind of God was to compel this race up the arduous road that leads to perfection, our dark experience is an open secret.

It is a shallow optimism that would take a rose-colored view of the world, whose moan ought ever to be in our ears. It is an inexcusable pessimism that denies the progress of the race with the centuries. Today there are wars at a time and in places; once it was war at all times and everywhere. Today so many women are the victims of man's sin; once all women were his slaves. Today a massacre fires our blood; once it was an ordinary event. Today the poor are at least helped; once they were left to perish. The agony of one age is the birth of a better life for its child, and every martyr gains some good for those following. It is a ghastly struggle any way one looks at it, but it is not meaningless nor fruitless. The day breaks slowly and the sun as yet hardly pierces through the banks of black cloud, but the east is glowing and the darkest is past.

Above all, it ought to be a strong consolation to every one bitter and perplexed about the sorrow of the race that God is its partaker. Whatever might be his wise and gracious purpose, and however necessary and proper might be his means of fulfilling it, it were still a trial to faith to imagine him watching from a distance and a place of peace this hurly-burly of sin and pain and shame and despair. It is another thing when he comes through Jesus his Son into the midst of the battle, and himself receives its most cruel wounds, when down the ages he is touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and in the midst of the throne there is a Lamb as he once was slain. There is hope and strength in this remembrance that the sorrow of the world is the sorrow of God and the Redeemer of the world is God himself.

*Copyright, 1896, by John Watson.

THE RETURN TO COMMON SENSE.

BY Z. SWIFT HOLBROOK.

Fanaticism is zeal not according to knowledge, and it finds expression not only in the sphere of religion but in ethics and economics. Not long since the churches heard the cry, "Great is Diana," and all strained their eyes in the direction of the tumult and commotion. A Daniel had come to judgment in the form of a new philosophy, and it was ushered in with brass bands and booming of cannon. For a season it looked as if new and revised editions of Hopkins, Porter, McCosh and Fairchild would necessarily follow. But the town clerk appeased the people, and upon careful and sober thought the new philosophy proved to be a modified form of Hopkinsianism as preached by Dr. Nathaniel Emmons to a preceding generation. The equation was simply this: Self equals zero, neighbor equals unity. The churches have thanked the new philosophy for its zeal and enthusiasm, and have endeavored to profit thereby, but the fundamentals of Christian ethics are still the same—God equals infinity, neighbor equals unity, self equals unity. The good will inspired and commended by Christian ethics was seen to be fundamental, for it glowed in three directions—upward, outward and inward; toward God, neighbor and self. Hence religious love, if it exist at all, must find fruitage in piety, altruism and self-interest.

In economics we heard the shout, "Great is Diana," and the noise for a time seemed to obscure some simple axiomatic truths. This time it was socialism. Men were to be made honest, industrious and thrifty—and therefore contented and happy—by act of Congress. It only required enlarged conceptions of the duties and functions of the state, reducing the rights of the individual to zero, and behold! peace and prosperity would come to all, regardless of individual merit. Men were to be made equal by law, not through liberty, without which true equality is impossible, but by that creature of the state—authority. The new equation was this: The state equals unity, the individual equals zero.

The town clerk again appeased the people, and upon sober reflection we find the new philosophy is simply a return to the democracy of Aristotle. It denied every fundamental that came over in the Mayflower, and gave the lie to the rights of the individual as enunciated by the founders of Congregationalism and that have dominated for three centuries in New England. It simply laid hands upon the natural rights of man.

In politics the cry is now heard, "Great is Diana." A new system of finance has been proposed as a cure all for our periodical hard times, and if only a majority of the people can be made to vote for it some axiomatic truths in finance must be set aside at the behest of enthusiasts. Demetrius, the silversmith, has called together the workmen of like occupation and said, "Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth." "And when they heard these sayings they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians."

A few of the truths that ought to be taken to heart in these, the final, days of the campaign are these:

The Government cannot control the laws of supply and demand and hence it cannot regulate the markets. Human wants and the utilities of products to satisfy those wants will defy legislation as easily as do the laws of nature or the laws of the mind. Gold and silver are products no less than oats, wheat, coal or iron and no magical quality is imparted to them because they are used also as money. This simply increases the demand for them as metals and thus enhances their value as products. Gold and silver are the free children of the markets and not the slaves of Government nor subject to its legislative control. Mr. Bryan's failure to recognize this is illustrated by one of his speeches in Congress when he said it might be necessary to forbid by law the use of gold and silver in the arts.

Measured in units of labor the relative cost of gold and silver is close to their market values and that is not their money value. A gold dollar has 100 units of bullion value in it, a silver dollar has 53 units and a paper dollar has no intrinsic value. The only reason that all our money passes at par is simply because of confidence in the Government to redeem it. Confidence is the basis of commercial life and prosperity.

The free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 will not increase the real volume of our currency but will diminish it, for it will destroy the confidence in the ability of the Government to maintain the parity. The result will be silver monometallism. The volume is made up of quality no less than quantity.

Our Government did not deposit gold and silver in the rocks nor determine the relative amount of labor required to bring them forth and smelt them. It did not fix their relative abrasion nor create the demand for their use in the arts, and much less did it control the preference of civilized nations for gold as a standard. Our Government, therefore, cannot say what shall be the market value of gold and silver. It might as well attempt to fix the relative nutriment in wheat and oats. If it can, the first thing to do is to increase the price of oats by a decree that the bicycle and trolley car shall eat oats and thus undo the crime they have committed in demonetizing the horse.

"THE NONCONFORMIST CONSCIENCE" AND THE NATIONAL UPRISING.

BY REV. FRANCIS E. CLARK, D. D.

Seldom in all the long centuries of her history has Great Britain seen anything like the moral uprising begotten of her intense indignation at the Armenian atrocities. The nation seemed slow, perhaps, in arousing herself to the horrors of the situation, but now that she is fully awakened her righteous wrath seems almost too deep for words. In all parts of the United Kingdom indignation meetings have been held to protest against the cruelty of the Turk and to send resolutions to those in authority on the burning question of the day.

In every church congress and assembly and conference, in a multitude of Christian Endeavor conventions and Sunday school gatherings, in fact, wherever the people of the free churches come together, this question is the all absorbing theme.

Perhaps the culmination of this holy indignation of a great people was witnessed in the City Temple Oct. 5. The great church was filled to overflowing as soon as the doors were open, though it was long before the hour for commencing the services, and such brilliant lights of the Nonconformist pulpit as Dr. Price Hughes, Dr. Parker, Dr. Clifford, Rev. F. B. Meyer and Mr. Albert Spicer were among the speakers. Dr. Parker's speech aroused the audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. "The striking feature" of this address, said a reporter for the British Weekly, "was its deep solemnity. One saw the great preacher playing with skilled hand upon the hearts of his audience. After one terrible passage, he said, amid the heart-stricken silence of the audience, 'In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost I would uproot Turkey from the soil of Europe.'" Dr. Clifford, too, was received with unbounded enthusiasm. "If England would go on making and passing resolutions for another year," he cried, in ringing tones, "they would be but blows upon the waves of the sea. Deeds, not words, are what we want. Let us substitute the concert of the peoples for the concert of the powers."

It is very noticeable that in the expression of sympathy and of burning indignation the Nonconformists take the lead. They furnish the speakers, the church, the audience. In fact, it is the much derided "Nonconformist conscience" which is again to the fore. Unless all signs fail, it will again sweep before it the time serving, timid conservatism of the country, and compel the authorities to act in the interests of humanity and righteousness. Gloriously has Mr. Gladstone come to the front once more in this controversy. His great speech at Liverpool seems to have turned the tide in favor of a broader humanity and brotherhood, and if in any degree he had lost his place in the hearts of Nonconformist Christians he is now thoroughly reinstated. "On this question," exclaimed Mr. Price Hughes, amid the wildest cheers that were ever heard in the City Temple, "the English people are represented by William Ewart Gladstone."

"The Grand Old Conscience Keeper of Europe" is the new title which his admiring friends have given to the great statesman of Hawarden. It is not to be supposed that the Conservative circular papers are pleased with this moral uprising. Many are their jibes in these days as of yore at "the Nonconformist conscience," and they find it excrutiatingly witty to poke fun at Dr. Guinness Rogers and Dr. Tymms, chairman of the Baptist Union, and all the rest of the leaders of public opinion who have so freely expressed their minds. The Pall Mall Gazette is perhaps the most unscrupulous of the Tory organs and it does not hesitate to call Mr. Gladstone "the Grand Old Atrocity-monger." "What a pity it is," adds the Gazette, with clumsy hilarity, "that the Radicals did not hit upon Dr. Guinness Rogers for the premiership right away, instead of balancing the rival claims of Lord Rosebery and Sir William Harcourt. He knows exactly how the thing ought to be done; they don't."

And now, as a sequel to these events, like a thunderclap out of a clear sky, comes the resignation of Lord Rosebery as leader of the Liberal party. He declares himself as out of sympathy with Mr. Gladstone's position and as receiving support in his views on the Armenian question from a very small portion of the Liberal party. Hence these tears and this resignation. Another case of the power of "the Nonconformist conscience." Ever since Lord Rosebery ostentatiously patronized the race-course and amid the cheers of the jockeys led away his victorious horse, as if to defy the above mentioned "conscience," his star has been waning. For some time he has not been a prime favorite with those who form the rank and file of the Liberal party, but his apparently timid position on the Eastern question, so different from the outspoken utterance of Mr. Gladstone, has capped the climax, and he evidently feels that there is an ever-widening gulf between him and the great mass of his constituency.

"What will be America's attitude?" I am frequently asked. "If England should go to war single handed for the sake of the Armenian and for the sake of humanity, would America stand idly by and allow her to fight the battle alone with united Europe against her? Or, still worse, would she take this opportunity to satisfy old grudges by sending out privateersmen to ravage England's commerce and to harass her upon the seas while she fought Europe on the land?" I cannot speak for America, but I do not think that I am far wrong in believing that such a thing could never be, and that the daughter land would stand side by side with the mother country, if, in such a righteous cause, the dogs of war should be let loose.

CHARITY CHANCE.*

A SERIAL STORY BY WALTER RAYMOND.

XVI. THE END.

Charity had taken apartments—two rooms the size of cupboards—in a little street near the residence of the Porters, and here she worked in peace. Her only luxury was a daily paper, which she searched for a review. The purchase was an excitment, like drawing from a lucky bag; but once or twice she drew a prize. They were praising her, she found, in terms sometimes extravagant, which pleased her none the less. But work and solitude began to tell upon her. She wanted to speak to some one. This feeling grew so strong that at last she determined upon an expedition. She would call upon her publisher.

It was a hot July morning, and she walked down Paternoster Row.

The firm of Pickering & Co. announces itself in letters of blazing gold, which he who runs may read, and without difficulty she found the house. She entered a sort of warehouse, where a clerk was writing at a desk, and asked if Mr. Pickering was disengaged.

"What name?" inquired the youth, shortly.

"Miss Chance."

His manner changed. Alighting from his high stool with alacrity he requested Charity to "step this way, if you please," ushered her upstairs to a waiting-room, invited her to take a seat, and assured her Mr. Pickering would not be long.

She waited some minutes, and the time seemed endless. Mr. Pickering probably cherished no great desire to see her. She began to wonder at her temerity in calling, and to wish she had not come. Two large etchings adorned the wall, and she got up and stood looking at one of them. Then the door behind her opened. She turned round quickly and was face to face with Alfred Prentice.

"Charity!" he cried, with rapture, just as when he met her unexpectedly in the wood. "How glad I am! I was going to write and came here today to be sure of your address."

As he stepped toward her she recoiled with aversion from his out-stretched hand. At once he stopped. His manner changed. But trouble had taught her much. A finer sense had replaced the freshness of her inexperience, and when he spoke again she could feel the vanity at work beneath his words.

"I wanted to congratulate you upon your book. It is fresh and sweet. A new note. Delicate, passionate and shy, like the whisper of some woodland bird, yet fierce in its relentless grip on an inevitable human destiny."

His voice sank into a whisper as he spoke of the bird he did not specify, and he clenched his fists and crushed the tragedy of all humanity between his set teeth.

Then he thought of himself, and became low and mellow as of old.

"But above all I felt something due to you, and still more to my own heart. When we loved each other so madly, and I would have carried you away," he raised his hands toward heaven to show how far he would have carried her, "the greatness of your soul overcame me. You showed me the crime I was committing and the inevitable consequence. I knew my weakness, and at least had strength of mind to flee. Your story touched me deeply. I saw your soul suffering the burden of another's wrong, and my heart melted with pity. I could not write. Then, the sorrow of my own poor life was thrown open to the world. Ah! sad, sad! All is sad!"

Moved by the picture of his own magnanimity, he was quite overcome, His eyes filled with tears. Unable to proceed, he turned away and covered his face in his hands.

The girl took one quick, impulsive step toward him. Doubtless he loved her, whatever his misfortunes, and love demanded sympathy at least. Then the recollection of his coldness to her distress rushed into her mind. He could never have loved her. With sudden insight she perceived that this man deceived himself, and had no stake in human life. Imagination and he played a game of chance, with mere words for counters.

Recalled to himself by her movement, he came toward her.

"Please do not speak to me, Mr. Prentice," she cried, impatiently. "The past is gone and better forgotten."

Her tone was so angry and contemptuous that it hurt his pride, but the smart of the injury completely restored him. He continued to explain himself.

"Then your book came into my hand. Again I was about to write, when I read of the terrible affair at Babblemouth. I dared not intrude upon your sorrow at such a moment."—

"What do you mean?" she interrupted him.

He looked at her in astonishment.

"Is it possible you have not heard of Poltimore-Briggs?"

"I have heard nothing."

At once his manner became quite commonplace. He had no emotion to expend on a mere historical fact.

"He committed suicide by throwing himself over the cliff. The jury brought in an open verdict, but his affairs were in an awful state, and everybody knows what really happened. He had been living on the money of your little crippled friend for years. He was her trustee, and spent every penny or lost it in speculations. They thought he had run away. That yacht we sailed in was seized and sold. They found his body by the rocks where we lay becalmed after he had been gone a week."

"Mr. Pickering will see you now," said a voice beside her.

The clerk was standing by her elbow. She had not heard him come into the room. Like a person hypnotized and obeying a suggestion, she followed him along a passage, and was shown into an office. As she entered, a large man, with red hair rose from his chair behind a table strewn with books and papers, and greeted her most cordially.

"How do you do, Miss Chance? I am most happy to make your acquaintance. You want to hear about your book. Well, I am glad to say it is going well—fairly well. We've pushed it in every way—advertised it heavily—almost too heavily, perhaps." Here he smiled benignly. "And it has been well reviewed. You would like to see some notices."

He laid upon the table before her a large volume, into which press cuttings had been pasted.

It should have been a moment of eager anxiety and triumph, but Charity could not read a word. Mr. Pickering was there as large as life. She saw him. She heard clearly every word he uttered, and she stared upon the open page. But she was not there at all. This was all a dream. The real Charity was far away at Babblecombe with poor Aunt Helen, deceived and penniless! What could become of her in such a situation? Mr. Pickering stood rubbing his hands.

"And what are you doing now, Miss Chance?" he asked, with friendly condescension.

There was a pause whilst the question pierced its way through her preoccupation. A minute later she remembered having heard it and replied in haste: "I am finishing another book."

"We shall be very pleased indeed to see it, Miss Chance."

He nodded his head and in smiling expectation awaited her reply.

But Charity did not answer. How could poor Aunt Helen support the want of those requirements which wealth had always provided? That was the thought which kept her dumb.

Such reticence on the part of a budding authoress was rare. A suspicion crossed the mind of Mr. Pickering that Charity must have been approached from elsewhere.

"Of course, Miss Chance," he exclaimed, in quite a lordly way, "we can do much better for you with a second book. We should increase the royalty and the advance. Of this I am quite sure—no one in the trade could do better for you than we."

Still no response. Nothing but a direct question could win a word from Charity.

"We might be able to run it in our magazine." He went on now very serious, and stroking his fat chin. "On consideration, I think we should like to look at what you have done at once. If it is suitable and we give you, say, a hundred pounds for serial publication, and then"—

*Copyrighted, 1896, by Walter Raymond.

The girl looked up with disconcerting suddenness.

"How quickly could you let me know?" she asked.

"In the course of a day or so we would communicate our"—

She gave him no time to finish his sentence.

"I will fetch it at once and bring it to you. I hope there will be no delay. I am going into the country. I will give you my address."

She glanced at the table. He handed her paper and a pencil, and she wrote, "Care of Miss Graham, Babblecombe House, Babblemouth." Then, before he could cross the room to open the door for her, she was flying down the stairs.

"Somebody has made that girl an offer," he muttered to himself. "I should really like to know how much they have said."

But Charity had only one thought—to bring her precious manuscript and get to Babblecombe as quickly as she could. She looked for no train. She made no plan, but hurried thither and back, and at last must wait an hour upon the platform before she could depart.

She would return, and throw her arms around the little cripple's neck without words or explanation, trusting only to the abiding power of their love. And she would keep her in poverty, and pay the debt of many years, and tend her as no hireling hands can ever tend.

It was evening when she reached the hilltop and once more looked down upon the little mansion in the coombe. How quiet it all was! Not a leaf of the ivy stirred. There was no one in the garden, and Jan Sprake was not in the yard.

She had brought nothing home, and above the cottages she stopped the hired fly she had taken at the station, and got out. She would rather walk down unobserved.

The door was open, and she went in as if she had but come back from the town. She wandered across the hall and into the drawing-room. The French window was closed and fastened, and the place had the close air and wore the dusty look of a room not used.

A spirit of change and disaster brooded everywhere. The things remained unaltered, but something had fled. No open book lay upon the table, no paper had been dropped in haste upon the floor. And the chairs stood back against the wall, lacking significance.

She heard a sound—a man's step hastening out of the house. She ran back, just in time to catch sight of the departing figure of Bibberly, the bluff, fox-hunting, local practitioner, whom Miss Graham regarded with contempt bordering on abhorrence. Then Aunt Helen must be ill—ill indeed to submit to his presence. How carefully he closed the door to make no noise!

She went upstairs and listened. She was afraid this suddenness of arrival might be ill-timed, and she did not know what to do. From the room where Miss Graham used to sleep came a low moan.

Charity stealthily opened the door and looked in. The little cripple lay upon a low chair beside the open window. The evening breeze bulged the white curtain and fanned her face. Her cheek was yellow like parchment and bloodless like death. Yet her senses were alert, for the shrewd gray eyes, brighter than ever and very large, glanced round as the quickening current of air told her that some one was silently entering the room. At once they glistened with delight. She had gone too far upon the journey of life to feel surprise. She tried to beckon with her finger as of old.

Charity ran to her.

"I was just thinking of you, child. Kiss me, Charity. Put your hair against my cheek. I knew you would come. Graham has been reading to me, Charity. Charity, you have it all, dear."

She quivered with excitement. In the intensity of her feeling her voice broke into a whisper.

The girl did not understand.

"Don't you remember what I once said? Soul, or passion, or a great heart. Graham has been reading to me—the book—my book—for I made you, child. He was sent for when the—when the trouble came, and he stays here for the present. He sat up with me last night. I made him go and lie down. I cannot sleep because of the pain and the maid has run in for the draught. The Mortimers have gone to a garden party today and so I was alone. I was thinking of you. I knew you would come."

She paused and gazed into Charity's eyes with such affection that the girl could not speak.

"It will be a very short time now, Charity," she said, sadly. "I am quite ready and have thought of everything. But I don't want to go. I want to stay—I want to stay more than ever."

Her thin hands firmly clutched the girl's shoulders, as though upon the secure stability of that young life her drifting spirit could anchor itself to earth. Then she became resigned.

"But everything is arranged and my mind is at peace. The thought of John Sprake troubled me. For when the horses had to be sold what was he to do? And he had been here twenty years, always faithful and safe. But what do you think, Charity? He has taken the George Hotel! I wrote to the justices about him. He has been really a wonderful man, so steady and saving. I can't think how he saved it all on fifteen shillings a week. But it was such a relief, child." One illusion at least had never been dispelled and she smiled upon the girl as she went on. "Charity, there is the house and land, and £700 in the bank that were not drawn out. That will keep you, just keep you, dear."

Suddenly she summoned all her energy. She raised herself in the chair. She spoke and pointed in the old way that Charity had never dared to disobey.

"Go and knock at Graham's door, child. Tell him to come at once."

Graham came in haste. He and the girl stood side by side, and through the window shone the last glow of the evening sun. It astonished Charity to see how greatly he was changed. A new ruddiness of travel was on his face. Trouble had hardened his will and given character to his features.

"What did you want, Aunt Helen?" he said tenderly.

Miss Graham looked at them, and the old desire came back. One last gleam of romance flashed from her departing soul, vivid as the momentary streak of flame that sets on fire a western cloud.

"Marry," she cried; "marry at once. There will yet be time. And I shall see the wish of my heart."

He turned toward the girl in doubt. Even if she would marry him, could he dare to take advantage of the weakness of this moment?

"Marry!" repeated the little cripple with wilder urgency.

The girl saw his hesitation. He was poor and unfortunate. The disgrace and death of his father must forever overshadow him like a cloud. She could understand all that. Her heart went out toward him with a force of love it could never have known in the old summer days. She could comfort him and help him—yes, and earn money for him, too, if he would only ask her now.

As he looked the light of love came into his eyes.

"Charity," he whispered quickly, "we have never broken it off."

"We have never broken it off," she echoed.

With a smile of satisfaction the little cripple sank back exhausted, and said no more. She had got the wish of her heart, and that night she slept.

In the cold gray of early morning she passed away content.

They were married that summer in the little church beside the cliff looking down upon the quay, where Charity was left a waif. No one ever knew whence she came. They sold the little mansion and left Babblemouth at once, and no one asked whither they went.

Her signature is on the register, and that is all.

FINIS.

THE SHEATS LAW DEAD.

On April 10 last seven teachers of the Orange Park Normal and Industrial School were arrested for alleged violation of the Sheats Law, and bound over for trial before the Clay County Circuit Court. The court sat Oct 19, and on the 21st a hearing was had upon the legal questions involved. Messrs. Bisbee and Rinehart had been retained by the A. M. A., and the senior member appeared to argue the case for the defense. The indictment was defective, but the State's attorney was allowed to file information to strengthen it. Two of the indicted teachers, being present, voluntarily made known facts to sustain the indictment against themselves in order to get a judgment on the main question—that of the constitutionality of the law itself.

The counsel for the defense argued that the law was invalid on account of its vague terms and conflicting provisions; that it was unconstitutional in that the body of the statute contained more than the title indicated; that it was arbitrary and unreasonable, creating an offense where none existed, thus exceeding the police powers of the State; that it needlessly abridged the natural rights of property, contract and personal association, so conflicting with the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution; that it discriminated against the rights of teachers to pursue their lawful and useful profession by laying on them such restrictions as are imposed on no other workers; that it was founded on distinctions of color pure and simple, thus infringing on the Fourteenth Amendment. The State's attorney replied, but without breaking the force of this impeachment. Without hesitation the Court, Justice R. M. Call presiding decided that the statute, by exceeding in the provisions of its body the scope of its title, was unconstitutional and so null and void.

The Orange Park school, against which the statute was aimed, and which has suffered considerably from it, is thus left free to continue its useful Christian work. It is peculiarly gratifying that this decision has been rendered in a Florida court, by a Florida judge and under the Florida constitution The decision brings great cheer to all the friends of the school. T. S. P.

The Home

HYMN.

[Written for the annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Association, Boston, Oct. 28.]

O Love Divine, thou strong to save,
Life's central, solar heat,
A triple blessing would we crave
Before the mercy seat.

On all thy sheep unshepherded,
Unfolded, lost in night,
On all our land's dark places, shed
The glory of thy light.

On those who do thine high employ,
Who speed thy gospel grace,
Uplift for their exceeding joy
The shining of thy face.

To us whom these thy heroes shame,
Us of the dim desire,
Vouchsafe the sacrificial flame
And Thy consuming fire.

Behold, we kneel till thou shalt bless,
Till on life's troubled springs
Thou rise, the Sun of Righteousness,
With healing in thy wings.

—Katharine Lee Bates.

Are Congregationalists becoming snobbish? The query is prompted by rumors which reach us, from time to time, that while strenuous efforts are made to secure the attendance of all the congregation at pastor's receptions and other social gatherings, yet there is no recognition of humbler members outside the church edifice. Can this charge be sustained? Is it a condition confined to cities, or does the spirit of caste penetrate into rural communities as well? But is it quite Christian to be friendly and affable as we linger at close of prayer meeting, or meet in church parlors for committee work, and then give the cut direct on the street or at the shopping counter? What is the fact in your church? Is the little fox of caste spoiling the vine of Christian unity?

It is a bit dangerous, however, to ask questions in this department. We inquired, a few weeks ago, how women might simplify their lives in order to gain more time for higher purposes, and an avalanche of replies has swept down upon us. It is significant that whatever else was proposed the unanimous cry was for deliverance from the bondage of dress. No one advocated mannish or other extreme costumes, but all plead for liberty to wear really elegant dresses at least more than one season without feeling obliged to alter the style. One woman, occupying a high social position, writes: "My husband buys an expensive dress suit and wears it five years. Why should I not have something always ready for state occasions? Let it be beautiful and 'costly thy habit as thy purse can buy' but let it be fashioned in a way that will not make me feel out of date in comparison with others." Another says, "I'm appalled when I consider how much time I've actually been obliged to give this last year to the wardrobes of myself and three daughters. This has taken more time than any other one thing." But who thus "obliges?" And how shall we emancipate ourselves?

No man ever has evolved from his own being a greatness that will evangelize the world. The secret of human greatness lies in what it finds out of divine law, not in what it originates. No one can give inspiration who is not himself inspired.—Rev. D. O. Mears, D.D.

THE RICH YOUNG RULER.

BY WILMOT CHIPMAN.

That the subject of our text was rich and young and a ruler is not so much our point now as the fact that our equal is near us today. To this young man Jesus gave an invitation no less personal than that which he gave to the humblest among his fisher disciples. Into the eyes of the ruler looked the eyes of one who, humanly speaking, was his peer. Do we ever look quite straight into the eyes of an equal and say, "Follow Christ," or do we skip him and make up to conscience by trying somebody else's equal?

A college Y. M. C. A. man was once telling of the good work at stables and wharves, whereupon he was asked to interest the society in one of the students, an attractive fellow of orthodox antecedents. The Y. M. C. A. man looked grave and said: "We don't do much with those athletic fellows." We do not have to be very brave in order to meet the poor and ignorant. We fall back upon laid-up resources and are sure of safety in populous paths. The real face to face work, however, may be where we walk abreast with the rich and educated.

The question was asked some time ago whether or not any one had tried to convert the sultan. To come nearer home, who is ready to take that exacting class in the Sunday school of youth from wealthy households? What peer is he hunting for who knows half a dozen languages, and possesses two, at least, of the ten talents? That tall lad, who decided two years ago that he did not quite like his teacher; that second one who, in coming to a new place, did not think it worth while to keep on in Sunday school; and still a third, who calls the hour inconvenient. What fisher of souls has picked these out for a Greek Testament class at his own house? What half-dozen men are meeting to pray for the conversion of another half-dozen in the morning congregation? What beautiful girl has asked even two other girls—and they would follow her anywhere—to join her week by week in a missionary meeting for a special field?

But, you say, the initiative has been reversed. The first "rich young ruler" did the seeking himself. Very true. Do not press the parallel. Accept the difference. It is enough for the present purpose to query whether or not one's duty may not ever come in the guise of one's equal. He is rich, you object. Yes, but he has not been steeped in riches for seventy years. Something within him tells him that he might be still richer. He is young. All the more he would take hold upon eternal years. He is a ruler. All the more readily would he find it a joy to look up to a personal Master. He has all the faults of his triple endowment. Then you won't be in doubt about him when he shall have been won over. Is he sensitively put together? So are you, even to morbidness; you are the very one to respect that sensitiveness. Is he high spirited? Are you yourself quite sure where a real nobility shades off into false pride? His parents, you happen to know, were of the best New England stock. Shall we, then, try to save every other people and skip the best New England stock? When you kneel down at night do you never whisper to that ear which hears no insincerity that one of your deepest causes for gratitude is that your father and mother were of this stock?

Then, perhaps, on the whole, the worst thing about him is that he is only one. You cannot organize him. You cannot amuse him or condescend to him or walk roughshod over him. He is only one. All the better for you. Perhaps, after all, he is to be the one who will give the last touch toward bringing in the kingdom. Perhaps—who knows—if you look into his eyes with all the spirit looking through yours, and in a simple frankness talk out of what you say you care the most for, the first personal question asked may not be yours but his: "What shall I do?"

A HAMMOCK IN THE KITCHEN.

BY CLARA MARCELLE GREENE.

Why should all the "cozy corners" and downy cushions and soft devices for snaring ease be arrogated to the parlor? That member of the family most in need of them is the housewife. She cannot often retire to her room nor can she take her calico dress and her tired feet to the parlor for a ten minutes' repose. If she does so reckless a thing her ever alert eyes immediately discover a tack out of the carpet or dust on the piano stool, which move her at once to the hammer or the dust cloth and so convert her moment of rest into a half-hour's reaching and stooping and running to the back door to shake the dust cloth. For who ever stooped to remove a bit of dust from one thing but a whole battalion of chair legs and tables, busts, books and bric-a-brac came charging on to assert their similar claims?

All intelligent women have come to recognize the important relation between cookery and the family welfare. The digestion of the family is its regulator. It follows that many women are cooking their own food well in preference to hiring stupidity to spoil it for them. The assumption of this position demands some hours of every day in and about the kitchen. Many a woman is not physically equal to the task. She is overtired. She feels good for nothing when the work is done.

Yet the children praise the biscuits and the husband rejoices over his steak, perfectly broiled, and his comfortable saving of six or seven dollars a week in the wages and board, in wear and tear of a servant. So the housewife pushes on, impelled by the family stimulus and her own desire. Her vigilance, her forethought, her constant attendance are the price she pays for good food, a neat table and an orderly house. What can be done to ease the burden? A few minutes' rest several times a day would break the perpetual strain and give relief. But how? There are the chairs, perhaps an old rocking chair. She can sit down. But ten minutes in the recumbent position have more restorative power than an hour of sitting upright. She can go in and lie down on the sitting-room lounge, but she might forget and something might boil over or burn. So while the teakettle comes to a boil, or the potatoes finish baking, or the last moments complete the rising of the rolls, a woman will often stand and wait.

Cushions and couches are obviously impracticable. How about a hammock? Yes, a clean, light, short hammock, with braces at each end, and costing eighty or ninety cents, right across that corner out of the way of the table and the stove. Put up two strong hooks, and when occasion requires it can be unhooked and out of the way in a moment. Stretch one across there and see how many times a day the household divinity will be lured into it. She will sometimes take her after dinner nap there, but she will find herself saving her ten-minute installments of strength without counting.

The writer knows one woman who does all her reading, mending and family letter writing, with a pencil, either sitting or lying in such a hammock. And that "cozy corner" is so cozy that all the members of the family playfully contend for it. A rocking-chair is in part satisfactory, but unless it has arms it is not restful, and with arms it is apt to be clumsy. Then, too, the rockers are aggressive, and one is always rocking on Jimmie's fingers, or the cat's tail, and getting one's nerves torn into shreds by shrieks. No, of all contrivances for economy of the housekeeper's strength, try the hammock in the kitchen.

THE "COMMANDMENT WITH PROMISE."

The first week in October witnessed a unique reunion. Three old ladies, wife and widows of Congregational ministers, journeyed from their respective homes in Washington, D. C., Manchester, Vt., and Chicago to meet together with a fourth sister in New York city. Three of these sisters are over eighty years old, one of them eighty-six, but a strong desire for a few days' reunion enabled them to overcome obstacles of travel. The daughter of one of them who, with her husband, opened wide hospitable doors, deemed it a blessed privilege to aid in the fulfillment of the plan. God smiled upon them with successful journeys, bright sunshine and bright flowers of his own giving. Many thoughtful attentions were bestowed by friends and relatives near at hand, while loving thoughts and tender prayers were breathed from afar by the absent children and grandchildren who rise up and call them blessed.

More than ninety years ago the father brought his young bride to New Haven, where he remained as a Congregational pastor for thirty years. There the family of seven grew up, and five went to make their homes in Congregational parsonages in New England. These dear old ladies have spent their lives in the atmosphere of a Christian home, where God was daily recognized, old age was reverenced, the faithful performance of duty inculcated, gentle courtesies practiced and home pleasures enjoyed.

Two elderly friends joined them for a day, and very happy were the six reviewing the years together, calling up childhood days and mischievous pranks, the pleasures of their youthful social life connected with Yale students and courting theologues, and the many happy gatherings of later years before death had made the first break in the band of brothers and sisters. As they talked the minds were alert, interested in questions of the day as well as in the past, the characteristic gesture was seen, the humorous sparkle in the eye, and each face shone with happiness. An old music-book was produced and the two musical sisters sang duets—The Messenger Bird, The Bird's Release and Happier Hours. Then a veritable benediction seemed to fall as the voices of all blended together in the old family hymns—"While thee I seek, protecting Power," "My dear Redeemer and my Lord" and "O could I speak the matchless worth."

M. C. H.

SCIENTIFIC KITE FLYING.

BY GEORGE ETHELBERT WALSH.

The past year has been the greatest kite flying season ever witnessed in the United States, and the air has been literally full of small and large kites, domestic and imported, cheap and expensive ones. The sport that was always supposed to belong peculiarly to the youth of our land has suddenly been taken up by men—gray-headed professors and profound students of science being among the leaders. Like the Chinese pastime, kite flying seems to have become a popular "fad" in this country, that would make our ancestors turn in their graves if they could but see the enthusiastic exponents of the sport.

But a little closer observation reveals the fact that kites are no longer constructed solely for the pleasure their appearance among the clouds give, and the old-time sport has developed into a science and work. The Chinese may continue to fly their curious kite representations of birds, beetles and animals, and the boys of our land construct the old conventional type of American kite that Benjamin Franklin used to bring the electricity from the clouds, but the ardent students of kite flying, the scientific followers of the work, enter upon fields heretofore unexplored and consider the kites valuable only so far as they accomplish some definite results. It is neither for the pleasure of seeing the kites float bird-like in the air, nor to experience the thrill of the cord in the hands that hold the kite that they devote their time and attention to the work.

Men of this or any other generation little realized that kite flying would some day develop into a useful science, and that the floating piece of paper and sticks would help the mariner in reading the weather. Yet this seems to be what we may expect. The Weather Bureau at Washington has entered into the spirit of the work and everything is being done by it to help along kite flying. Already it has co-operated with several of the professional kite flyers to ascertain definite and useful results.

The object to be obtained is to register the condition of the air currents and atmosphere at various distances above the earth. Observatories and weather stations have long been established on Mount Washington and other high elevations, and their services are incalculable. The strata of air that surrounds the earth is often quiet, while five hundred to five thousand feet above it the wind is moving at a tremendous velocity and the temperature shows a variation of many degrees. As these layers of air ascend and descend according to their relative weight and the general atmospheric disturbances, often precipitating a storm, it is quite important that a complete knowledge of them should be obtained at all hours of the day. Storms of great violence are sometimes caused suddenly by atmospheric changes some distance above the earth, which could have been easily predicted had the Weather Bureau been in possession of the proper data. How to secure the necessary records of the higher layers of air has been a perplexing problem for many years. Mountains do not cover the whole land, and high observatories cannot be constructed in sufficient numbers to do much good.

At first the Weather Bureau attempted to use balloons for the purpose of registering the higher atmosphere of the earth, but these were very clumsy and unsatisfactory. Direct communication with the earth could not be had at all times, and the balloons were apt to float away just when needed the most. Little in fact could be accomplished in this way.

But it is quite different with the modern kites. These are built on such a large scale that they will carry heavy instruments over a thousand feet into the air, and by means of small wires the records of the changes in the atmosphere can be registered below and sent right on to Washington. The observations of the upper layers of air are of little value unless they can be obtained simultaneously in thousands of different places, and the facts sent to headquarters at Washington within a few seconds. By a system of kite flying it is hoped that the temperature of the atmosphere, the course of the winds and their velocity can be registered automatically in all parts of the country at distances from the earth varying from one hundred to several thousand feet. If such results can be obtained the Weather Bureau would be able to extend its field of labors and predict with more certainty the changes in the weather.

Another purpose to which the kites are put is to photograph the country below. Small cameras are attached to the large kites and by means of a string views of the surrounding country are taken at different hights. How serviceable these photographs would be in times of war is a mooted question. It is supposed that in time the science will be developed far enough so that a kite can be made to float over an enemy's camp, fort or intrenchment, and perfect photographs be taken of the place. The photographs taken at such an altitude are rather blurred and indistinct and objects are extremely small, but by a process of enlargement they may be made more valuable.

The kites used for scientific purposes depart from the old rules of construction known by every schoolboy. To begin with they are tailless, and any one who has made a kite knows how difficult it must be to construct one that will fly even with a short tail. Sometimes a whole dress and several bed sheets must be torn up into strips to make a tail sufficiently long and heavy enough to balance and steady a large kite. In fact, the construction of the tail is often the most difficult part of kite flying that a boy has to meet, for upon its proper length and weight seems to depend the success of the enterprise.

But the modern kites have sticks of bamboo and paper prepared for the purpose so light and yet tough that they will float easily. This paper is put over the sticks so loosely that it forms a sort of balloon when the wind strikes it. When floating in the air it is supported in the same way as a parachute, and, consequently, no tail is needed to steady it. It is sometimes difficult to get these kites up, and frequently several small ones are first floated and attached to the large one by strings, which gradually pull it upward until the upper currents of air strike it.

People who are willing to work for the Lord are never kept waiting long for an opportunity.—Ram's Horn.

Mothers in Council.

A COMMON SENSE QUESTION.

I am not a college graduate, but I claim to have an average amount of intelligence, and I am desirous to bring up my two children on the kind of food that will give them mens sana in corpore sano. My own observation, as well as my common sense, confirm the truth that there is an intimate connection between tempers and diet in growing children. Still I get little satisfaction from what I read on the subject. There are too many technical terms like "calories" and so on, the explanations of which are as blind as the words themselves. I do not care a fig, for instance, for the constituent parts of a potato—so much starch and cellulose and protein—but I would like to know if potatoes are a judicious article of diet for my sturdy boy of ten and my delicate, nervous girl of fourteen. Do you know of any practical book on the subject that will help? A PLAIN WOMAN.

Many other women are in exactly the same position as the writer of this letter, but they fail to see that the way to gain light on these subjects is to study the composition of foods and the work each food principle has to do in the human body. Any woman of average intelligence learns the comparative wearing qualities of silk, wool, cotton, linen and their combinations, and selects her wardrobe accordingly. A mother who clothed her children in cotton when they should wear wool would be criticised by her neighbors, and with reason. Nor would it be any excuse that she did not know how to distinguish between the fabrics. She should learn the difference and the advantages of each. No mother is fitted to care for her children without some acquaintance with common remedies for childish ailments. How much more should she know about the foods which go to build up these wonderful little bodies.

It does seem sometimes as if there were many long words and scientific phrases in books on diet, but if women would spend half the zeal in mastering these that they do in searching for new recipes such technical works would cease to be dry reading. The value of a food is not measured by its bulk, but by the amount of heat or force it will yield. For a comparison of values of different foods there must be a unit of measure, and that is a "calorie."

If we know the composition of the potato, that it contains no fat and little protein, but is mainly water and starch, we shall see that it is not an article of diet which will give strength or be valuable in building up new tissues. But it has its place in combination with other foods to prevent an excessive use of meats, which are too stimulating for children. Among the most helpful books along this line are Mrs. Abel's Practical, Sanitary and Economic Cooking and How to Feed Children by Louise E. Hogan.

A HAPPY THOUGHT FOR SUNDAY AFTERNOONS.

THE D. J. S. C. E.

There was wailing in the parsonage. Mamma had been seized by a big giant named headache and carried off by him to be shut up in a darkened room, and papa must go and preach at the anniversary of some society with a long name. Ted and Mildred felt abused. There was a firm conviction in their small heads that papa belonged to them exclusively for at least part of Sunday afternoon, and underlying this the comfortable assurance that mamma was always sure to be at their disposal when needed. But now the long afternoon stretched out before them like a dreary waste. Sunday school lessons for next Sunday had been dutifully learned before dinner. Sunday school papers had likewise been read. And they were tired of reading, anyway. Mildred's small conscience, inherited from a long line of New England ancestors of Puritan principles, was struggling doubtfully with the question as to whether it would be right to spend the afternoon playing with her dollies, when the difficulty was solved, and a bright ray of light shot out across the gloom, by papa's happy thought, called back to them as he ran down the steps, "I should think the dolls ought to have a Junior Endeavor Society."

The very thing! Of course they ought. Why had they never thought of it before? Even Ted's fine masculine scorn of dolls and their doings did not prevent him from thinking this a field worthy of his attention. Up stairs, two steps at a time, to the nursery, where on the bed, in most exemplary Sunday quiet, sat the twelve dolls, all unconscious of the new sphere of activity into which they were about to be ushered. In a short time even baby Lena had opened her sleepy eyes and been shaken awake by the energetic, self-appointed superintendent, Mildred, who, in a speech of great vigor, called the meeting to order, and without waiting for any remarks from the floor announced to the astonished dolls that they were now a Junior Endeavor Society and must have their first meeting.

"No, a D. J. S. C. E. it must be," said Ted, "Doll's Junior Society of Christian Endeavor, of course," and the name was at once unanimously adopted. The making out of the program, choice of subject, selection and copying of appropriate verses to be distributed among the members—this was Ted's part. Then, with rare chivalry in a ten-year-old boy, he cheerfully effaced himself from public view for the remainder of the meeting, content to act only the part of invisible voice for the dolls when their turns came to speak, while the superintendent conducted the exercises according to the following PROGRAM.

Singing.
Lord's Prayer.
Singing.
Junior Endeavor Verse Prayer (in concert).
Catechism on Life of Christ.
Singing.
Responsive Bible Reading.
Roll-call.
Prayer Meeting Topic, led by Gwendolen May.
Announcing of Subject.
Asking of Questions.
Talk on Subject.
Singing.
Sentence Prayers.
Mizpah Benediction.

Following this came the business meeting, when a constitution was formally adopted, each doll signing the pledge as an active member. The election of officers followed, and if there were any secret jealousies or heart-burnings not a face betrayed so improper a feeling. Miss Gwendolen May, the oldest of the circle, was unanimously elected president, and took the chair with quiet dignity. Baby Lena—still in long clothes—was chosen vice-president, "because she is too little to talk, and vice-presidents never have to do anything." So she occupies the chair with the president, Miss Gwendolen's arm securely about her. Six committees are promptly filled, not a doll refusing to do anything asked of her. With a fine sense of the fitness of things, O-ki-ku, the Japanese doll, Dinah, of African blood, and Isaac, the boy of Jewish descent, were appointed the missionary committee. Kathleen, with the beaming countenance and extremely wide-open eyes, is made chairman of the lookout committee. Rosalie, with the most sweetly devout and seraphic face ever seen on doll, is chairman of the prayer meeting committee, while Rebecca, the hospital nurse, in cap and apron, is to head the humane committee. The two baby dolls, in long white dresses, form the sunshine committee, "because, you know," says Mildred, "babies always make a home so happy and sunshiny."

So the new society was fairly launched and papa and supper-time came to bring the exercises to a close before the happy children were ready to leave their new occupation. "O, this has been the beautifulest Sunday," said Mildred, as she was dancing her way to bed that night. "Yes," said Ted, "and now we are sure of something nice to do all by ourselves every Sunday afternoon. And every Sunday since the D. J. S. C. E. has held its meeting, not a member missing, and with a different program each time, which requires a good deal of time and thought and searching of the Bible for texts on the part of the small superintendent and her assistant. Just now the missionary committee are hard at work preparing for a missionary meeting next Sunday.

This is not the whole story. One night there was a big, grown-up Endeavor meeting in a church near by, and Dr. Clark, the president of all Endeavorers, big and little, came from Boston to be there. Great was the enthusiasm of the parsonage children when they heard that he was coming home with papa and mamma. "Then he must make an address to our D. J. S. C. E." they both exclaimed in one breath. And sure enough next morning a special meeting of the society was called immediately after breakfast, and Dr. Clark accepted his invitation to be present. Every one of those twelve dolls has been so puffed up with pride ever since to think that their society, if not the first D. J. S. C. E. in the world (which they think it is), is at least the first to be visited by the national president, that I think they will have to have The Sin of Pride for the subject of their next meeting. MRS. CHARLES A. SAVAGE.

Orange, N. J.

INDIAN CHILDREN'S CHRISTMAS.

Within the past few years many Indian children have been introduced to Santa Claus, and now look forward to his annual visit with as keen anticipation as do the little white children who have always been his friends. That all Indian children may know the joys of the glad season is the earnest desire of the Young People's Department of the Women's National Indian Association. Last year over 3,000 gifts were sent out, bearing messages of peace and love, and teaching deep lessons of the universal brotherhood of all who love the Christ and celebrate his birthday. The department now asks that all who have influence with young people, whether as parents, teachers or leaders of various societies, will interest them in these brown-faced, bright-eyed children of the far West. Addresses of schools will be furnished on application, also lists of desirable gifts and all necessary information. While barrels and boxes of presents are desired, small mail packages are welcomed, too.

In writing, please inclose a stamp for the reply, and state about how many gifts can be provided. Address the chairman of the department, Miss Marie E. Ives, P. O. Box 1065, New Haven, Ct.

THE WICKED ANGLER.

"Tommy," said the visitor, "have you read the books in your Sunday school library?" "Some of them," he replied, rather doubtfully. "Can you tell me what happened to the boy who went fishing on Sunday?" "Yes, he caught three catfish and an eel." "How do you know that?" "'Cos I was him."—Washington Star.

The happiness of life may be greatly increased by small courtesies in which there is no parade, no annoyance, and which manifest themselves by tender and affectionate looks, and little kind acts of attention, and giving others the preference in every little enjoyment, at table, in field, walking, sitting or standing.—Sterne.

Closet and Altar

When prayer brings no solace to your weary heart try praise.

Into the clear consciousness of the indwelling Christ as the secret principle of spiritual life we all require to come to experience the reality and fullness of his saving power. No distant Christ can wipe away our tears, bear our heavy burdens, purify our hearts from sin and impart unto us sufficiency of strength for daily toil and sacrifice. Until the personal presence of Christ becomes the profoundest fact of consciousness no real test has been made of his power to comfort, to quicken and to save.—James M. Campbell.

There is scarcely any character under which Christ in his manhood is represented by which he comes so near and dear to us as that of Friend. Man is made a social being and a large portion of our earthly enjoyment springs from the society of our friends. Now Jesus meets this deep want of our nature. But let us remember that while it is the true friendship of man that Jesus offers us, it is also that of God. We may have an earthly friend who is neither wanting in constancy of affection nor in willingness to make any sacrifice to aid us, but he is deficient in ability. In the dark hour of our extremity he stands by, it may be with a tearful eye and a bleeding heart, but utterly helpless to assist us. But it is not so with Jesus. Never can we be beyond the grasp of his powerful hand. His resources are not only boundless, but they are available when we most require them.—Robert Boyd.

O Lord, fulfill thy will.
Be the days few or many, good or ill,
Prolong them to suffice
For offering up ourselves thy sacrifice.
Shorten them if thou wilt,
To make in righteousness an end of guilt.
Yea, they will not be long
To souls who learn to sing a patient song.
Yea, short they will not be
To souls on tiptoe to flee home to thee.
O Lord, fulfill thy will.
Make thy will ours, and keep us patient still.
Be the days few or many, good or ill.
—Christina Rossetti.

Almighty and loving God, before we go forth to our labor we would look up into thy face. Throughout the succeeding hours, amid the throng of engagements or the monotony of life's commonplace, may we hear thee saying, I am with thee. May the Holy Spirit keep us ever walking in the light of thy countenance. We pray for our companions in life's pilgrimage, for the feeble and ready to halt, for the despondent and oppressed, for the poor and sick and forlorn. May we cheer them with our songs, so that the valley of weeping may become a well of joy. Help us to hearten them with our courage, cheer them with our love and bear their burdens so far as we may. May thy presence be realized by all thy children, breaking in on them as the dawn on the night. Teach us to do the thing that pleaseth thee, and let us hear thee speak as from the opened heaven, This is my child, in whom I am well pleased. We ask it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

A CLEVER PARROT.

Having occasion recently to pass over the Vermont Central R. R. I fell in with a very clever parrot. A lady occupied a seat nearly opposite the one in which I sat and the parrot was in a cage in a seat which was turned to face hers. Suddenly the bird called out, "Polly wants to go upstairs." His mistress said to him, "Polly want a cracker?" To our surprise the bird answered, "No, no, no, no." Pretty soon, having evidently repented, the bird called out, "Polly wants a cracker. Polly wants a cracker." As there was no response to this, he shouted again, "Bad boy, naughty girl, bad boy, naughty girl." The brakeman entered the car and called in the tone which only a brakeman can possibly assume, "Northampton." Cocking his head on one side the parrot called in the same drawling tone, "North-hamp-ton." There was a general laugh following this, when to our surprise Polly doubled himself up and laughed just as the people in the car had done.

An old gentleman was present who was seriously afflicted with a cough. The parrot listened for some time and finally after the gentleman had had a spasm of coughing exactly repeated the sound. In came the brakeman and called out, "Change for Turner's Falls." The parrot at once repeated the same. After this outburst there was a period of silence on the part of the bird and the car became quiet, each one reading or busy with his thoughts. Imagine the surprise of the people in the car when the parrot called out, striking the first two notes of the long meter Doxology exactly, "Praise God." The amusement and surprise of the passengers were expressed in many loud laughs, which Polly repeated at once.

When the lady alighted at Greenfield she asked the brakeman whom Polly had imitated so many times if he would kindly assist her in getting off the train. He replied: "I will take everything you have off but the parrot. I will not touch him." He seemed to feel that there was something uncanny about the bird and I am not sure but we all somewhat sympathized with him. It was the brightest and most clever parrot I ever saw. C. J. R.

KEEPING A FAMILY HISTORY.

A long winter evening or a stormy day is good opportunity for forming or arranging a cabinet of family curios, to which may perhaps be added some of only local associations. We slight inexcusably the record of the places that are really dearest to us, and are often at slight pains to preserve and label and keep together the mementoes which are truly priceless.

Such a collection would be a tangible record of the family history, and would often give a reality to dimly remembered personalities, as only the things they have made or used can do. So let us not fail to have this cabinet, and let us put in it at once the quill great-grandfather used in his schoolmaster days, the tiny pewter porringer of great great-grandmother's, the arrowhead from the land grandfather cleared, grandmother's small, rusty scissors and bodkin, the seals, the ancient ring and ear jewels, and whatever else is a tangible record of the earlier lives. The making of such a collection is more properly a home and a joint household task—as it may be a common happiness—because the older members of the household will doubtless have tales to tell of the objects themselves, or of their owners, tales which will be more vivid and charming with the things themselves at hand. . . .

A family journal is not a new idea, but it may be made a very precious thing. The making or the adornment of it may well occupy more than one long evening. For it may include not only the record of events but pleasures—of father's Western trip and mother's one long outing; the list of the guests at Frances's wedding, or at Ned's birthday party, with a bit of the bride's gown, or the traveler's dress, or a leaf from the birthday wreath. Beside the date of the moving may be pictures of the old home and the new; some photographs, though they be but "minettes," add to the interest of the growing story; and if one possess a kodak, or the gift of ready sketching, there is no limit to the graphic touches which may be added to it.—Portland Transcript.

If you can make nice cake

you are the one to appreciate Cleveland's Baking Powder. It makes just that delicate, dainty kind of a cake that the expert cake maker strives for.

If you are not a cake maker, we can help you become one. Send for "How to Make Nice Cake," with our cook-book, free for stamp.

Cleveland Baking Powder Co., New York

·Absolutely Pure·Delicious·Nutritious·

The Breakfast Cocoa
MADE BY
WALTER BAKER & CO. LIMITED
DORCHESTER, MASS.
COSTS LESS THAN ONE CENT A CUP.
NO CHEMICALS.
ALWAYS ASK YOUR GROCER FOR WALTER BAKER & CO'S. BREAKFAST COCOA MADE AT DORCHESTER, MASS. IT BEARS THEIR TRADE MARK LA BELLE CHOCOLATIÈRE ON EVERY CAN.
·AVOID IMITATIONS·

The Conversation Corner.

YOU will remember this picture as the ideal "Conversation Corner," representing our different ages—Captain Myles and dear old grandmother, with her knitting-work, for our elderly members, the gentleman at his right (intended by the artist for D. F.) and the lady at the table (from whom he appears to be looking away) for young folks, and the children seeing and hearing for themselves, as usual. I like that simple picture, for they all seem to be at home and having a good time.

Let us hear from the old folks first.

[BEYOND THE MISSISSIPPI.]

Dear Mr. Martin: I cannot tell you how delighted I am to have the poem, "The Little Graves." I was intending at an early day to hunt our city library for the old reader, and failing there, to look in all the bookstores. I did not learn it in the West, but among the hills of New Hampshire, where I was born in 18—. MRS. ——.

O, that isn't so very long ago—I was born a year or two before that myself. Here is another old piece wanted:

[ON THE PENOBSCOT.]

Mr. Martin; Dear Sir: I am an old Cornerer, but still want to learn—where I can find "The Young Reader," a book I used to read in at school some fifty-five years ago. It had this bit of poetry in it, which always pleased the boys every time it was read in the class:

> A white old hen with yellow legs,
> Which laid her master many eggs,
> Which from her nest the boys had taken
> To put in cake or fry with bacon.

This is all I can remember about the old hen, but wish very much to find the book and know what became of her. I cannot tell the author. The older classes were reading in the National Reader and the American First Class Book. J. W. P.

I thought I had it on my top shelf, but though I find the American Preceptor, the Understanding Reader, the English Reader, the Village Reader, the Popular Reader, the Rhetorical Reader, American Popular Lessons and others, there is no Young Reader. Neither can I find a copy in the antiquarian bookstores. But probably the lady with the knitting needles or the one beyond the Mississippi, or some other, can answer the question. The Young Reader was compiled by John Pierpont.

[IN THE OLD COLONY.]

Dear Mr. Martin: . . . I was interested in a gentleman's numismatic letter in the Corner [June 25]. If there is any demand for common United States coins I should like to make the same offer to help the boys along. I have a few, as follows: Ten nickel cents with the eagle, 1857, 1858; sixteen five-cent pieces without the "cents." K.

The offer is to give them to the boys for their face value. Send a return card to me for Mr. K.'s address if you want his coins.

Here are letters from two young ladies of the same age, I judge, as the one in the picture!

[CENTRAL MASSACHUSETTS.]

My Dear Mr. Martin: . . . Here is a ? for your Cornerers. A newspaper, not long ago, spoke of 30,000 tarantulas being shipped from a port in California. To what possible use could they have been put? The paper did not tell where they were to go, nor whether they were alive or dead. MISS N.

I have a tarantula's nest in the Cabinet, but have never cultivated the acquaintance with the insect once its tenant. If the popular idea of the unpleasantness caused by the sting of one tarantula is correct, I do not see what any one wants of thirty thousand of them! There is a certain wasp with the complimentary name of Pompilus formosus, which has a great liking for tarantulas and invites them into its underground parlors in generous numbers, first paralyzing them with a sting and keeping them till its young need them for food. Perhaps the thirty thousand were ordered by an agent of these tarantula-killers, as they are commonly called! Will not some of our California members enlighten us?

[NEW JERSEY.]

My Dear Mr. Martin: . . . You see I am crazy for a bicycle, and as you know almost every boy and girl in the world I thought you might know some one who is collecting minerals. My uncle, Professor ——, was professor of mineralogy in —— ——, New York, and went all around the world collecting specimens, from which he gave us pieces, in all more than one hundred and twenty. I am not so fond of minerals as I am of a bicycle, so if you know of any one who is collecting them, please tell me. Most of them are from one to three inches in diameter, and I will send a list to any one who would think of buying them. MISS A.

The trouble is that "almost every boy and girl in the world" whom I know are also riding on bicycles and steer clear of stones, instead of seeking them! But perhaps this one may want them:

[MAINE.]

. . . I am much interested in minerals and want a cabinet for them soon. I would like to exchange with some one who is interested in the same. One day this summer I received a small box of minerals from a friend in Turkey, whom I have never seen. He sent them by a missionary returning to these shores. Could you recommend any standard works on mineralogy? CHARLES MCC.

I referred the question to a superintendent of schools and he recommends the Guides for Science Teaching published by Heath & Co., especially: Hyatt's About Pebbles (10 cts); Richards's First Lessons in Minerals (10 cts.); Clapp's Observation Lessons on Common Minerals (30 cts.); Crosby's Common Minerals (40 cts.) I will add Dana's Minerals and How to Study Them, for Beginners (Wiley, N. Y., $1.50).

One of those children at the window has been standing there a long time with a little box in his hand—here is what he says about it, with my apology for keeping him waiting so long:

SAUGUS, MASS.

Dear Mr. Martin: I found some fossil fern prints in some stones that were taken from Round Hill on the bank of the Saugus River, and I thought you would like them for the Corner Cabinet, so I send you one by this mail. JOHN. L.

Thanks for the beautiful little specimen; wouldn't Charles McC. like to get hold of it?

CAMBRIDGEPORT, MASS.

Will you kindly inform me whether there is any book published which is devoted entirely to sea shells—one giving the names and characteristics of some of the more noted varieties? MISS W.

Emerton's Life on the Seashore (which you can buy at Whidden's naturalist's bookstore, 18 Arch Street, for $1.50) is perhaps the best recent book, unless you wish to pay $10 or $15. The American Tract Society published years ago a capital little book, entitled Frank's Search for Seashells, but you might search all along shore for that in vain.

Mrs Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

How the President Is Elected. The first presidential election which I attended was when I was eight years old. I remember that I came home from the Town Hall very much disappointed, because "they did not tell who was President." That was in the country, and perhaps we did not know until the "carrier" brought around the weekly "Gazette," the next Monday afternoon, and left it at the "brick store." In these days we usually know who is to be the next President the morning after election. But, strictly speaking, he is not elected on election day. That is, the people choose electors, and the electors choose the President. The electors are voted for in each State separately—as many men as there are representatives in Congress and United States Senators from that State, the two answering to the Senators being called "electors at large." The electors who are elected on the first Tuesday of November meet in their respective States on the second Monday in January and cast their vote for President and Vice-President. This vote is carefully transmitted to the President of the Senate in Washington and on the second Wednesday in February all these electoral votes are counted in the presence of both houses of Congress and the result declared by the president of the Senate. But, as a matter of fact, the electors always vote for the regular candidates of the party by which they are selected, so that when you learn next Wednesday morning which ticket of electors is chosen in each State, you will know who is to be the next President of the United States.

The List of States. To help you to think it over beforehand, who will be elected, I have made out a list of all the States, with the number of electors in each. There are forty-five States in all, Utah having been admitted into the Union since the last presidential election. There are 447 electoral votes and 224 are necessary for a choice. You can read the latest news from different States, and put down against each State whether Mr. McKinley or Mr. Bryan will receive its votes. I think that it will be safe to give Vermont and Maine to the first, and Alabama and Arkansas to the second! Probably you who live in other States are equally sure about their vote also. I suppose the result will be determined by the vote in three or four States which are together in the list, beginning with Michigan. Guess those right and you will solve the question!

Maine,	6	Tennessee,	12
New Hampshire,	4	Kentucky,	13
Vermont,	4	Ohio,	23
Massachusetts,	15	Michigan,	14
Rhode Island,	4	Indiana,	15
Connecticut,	6	Illinois,	24
New York,	36	Wisconsin,	12
New Jersey,	10	Minnesota,	9
Pennsylvania,	32	Iowa,	13
Delaware,	3	Nebraska,	8
Maryland,	8	Kansas,	10
Virginia,	12	North Dakota,	3
West Virginia,	6	South Dakota,	4
North Carolina,	11	Wyoming,	3
South Carolina,	9	Colorado,	4
Georgia,	13	Nevada,	3
Florida,	4	Montana,	3
Alabama,	11	Idaho,	3
Mississippi,	9	California,	9
Louisiana,	8	Oregon,	4
Texas,	15	Washington,	4
Arkansas,	8	Utah,	3
Missouri,	17

Familiar Names of Presidents. Many of the candidates for the presidency received, in the heat of the campaign, pet names, usually bestowed in compliment by their admirers. Some of them were very significant and are worth remembering. You may be able to add to the list:

Washington. Father of His Country.
Jackson. Old Hickory. Hero of New Orleans.
Harrison. Tippecanoe (and Tyler too).
Van Buren. Little Van.
Henry Clay. Harry of the West.
Taylor. Old Rough and Ready.
Buchanan. Old Buck.
Lincoln. Honest Old Abe.
Douglas. The Little Giant.
Grant. Unconditional Surrender.

L. H. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR NOV. 8. 1 Kings 8: 54–63.

THE TEMPLE DEDICATED.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

We followed last Sunday Solomon's work in erecting the temple, but as yet it was only a magnificent building. So Solomon brought the ark from its resting place in Jerusalem and the old tabernacle with its furniture from Gibeon and gathered all the priests and Levites together, with representatives of every town [ch. 8: 1], and held a solemn service of dedication. For two weeks the nation paused in its ordinary work and centered its thought in the new temple [2 Chron. 7: 9]. In this splendid service Israel showed the cause of its prosperity and the difference between itself and other nations. That difference was represented by two facts—a holy temple and a holy people. Two questions, therefore, call for thoughtful answers:

I. What made the temple holy? We see from this lesson that the structure which human hands had built was made a temple by

1. The divine presence. When all the preparations were completed, the cloud filled the house and the presence of the Lord made it the house of the Lord [v. 11]. When that presence was at last withdrawn the temple was no better than any other building. It became a monument of Israel's disgrace [ch. 9: 7–9]. A nation is great with God in the midst of it. When it casts him off it loses its life. The church building still indicates the presence of God with his people, but his manifestation of himself is not limited now as it was then. The Hebrews regarded the temple as his one dwelling place on earth [v. 13; Ps. 132: 13, 14]. There only could the people offer sacrifices to him [Deut. 12: 5, 6]. Toward that building their prayers must be directed [v. 30; Dan. 6: 10]. But God is not now more truly present in one place than another, except as he spiritually manifests himself to devout worshipers [John 4: 23]. Their presence seeking him hallows a church building and makes for the time a temple of any place where they meet [Matt. 18: 20].

2. Sincere worship. Because of Solomon's prayer God hallowed the house and made it the place in which men realized that he saw them and thought on them. But today every home and, indeed, every heart may be made a temple of God.

> For man the living temple is;
> The mercy seat and cherubim
> And all the holy mysteries
> He bears with him.

3. United worship. Neither king nor priests alone could dedicate the temple. All the people were there to find forgiveness, consolation, exaltation. "So the king and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the Lord." God is with no people who relegate their worship to priests or leaders.

4. True worshipers. Not prayer and praise alone brought Jehovah to dwell in the temple which human hands had built for him, but walking in his ways and keeping his commandments [v. 58]. No splendor of forms and ceremonies, no gorgeous furniture or priestly vestments can make a church building a house of God. But a gathering of people who love and obey him makes any place holy.

II. What makes the people holy? The true church is not the building, but the children of God joined together in service and worship [Eph. 2: 20–22]. Christ offered himself a sacrifice that he might make a holy church [Eph. 5: 25–27]. Our work toward this end is of the same nature as Israel's work when God lived among them and they built the temple. It includes:

1. Faith in God's promises [v. 56]. Every year adds to men's knowledge of him and of his preciousness. He was more to David than to Abraham, and more to Solomon than to David. Every act of mercy that he had done to the fathers was a further disclosure of himself for their children. The life of the Hebrew nation under Solomon was its confidence in God. How much greater is our inheritance! How much richer the church of Christ is now! When Solomon lived God manifest in Christ Jesus was only a prophecy.

2. Desire for God's presence. "The Lord our God be with us, as he was with our fathers: let him not leave us nor forsake us." Not only for what he could do for them, but for what he was, they desired him. To desire God is to delight in his words and to enjoy his character. Therefore his Word is read and his deeds rehearsed in his church. Those who love him will worship him in his house. It is said that men can worship God anywhere, but as a fact in experience they do not long continue to worship him anywhere when they have ceased to desire to meet with his people in his house.

3. Obedience to God's will. To walk in his ways and to keep his commandments is the only way to live with a constant sense of his presence. No one loves God who does not think his thoughts and do his deeds [John 14: 23]. Therefore teaching and preaching will always be prominent in the public services of the church. "His commandments and his statutes and his judgments" must be made known in his temples in order that he may dwell in them.

4. Continued communion with God [v. 59]. Solomon's petition was that his prayer, in which the people had joined, might be fresh every day—literally, "the thing of a day in its day." When God dwells in a church the spirit of prayer is in the community around it. The petitions offered in it are repeated in closets and at family altars as utterances of fresh adoration, desire and love. Then church spires pointing upward truly represent communities which, united, make a strong and happy nation, the fountains of whose strength and joy are in God.

5. Giving the gospel to all mankind [v. 60]. "That all the peoples of the earth may know that the Lord, he is God; there is none else." He chose the people of Israel and dwelt with them, but not because he loved them alone. Their peculiar honor was that he chose them for a world-wide mission. The promise to David was that the Messiah should spring from his loins. That promise was continued to Solomon. The life of temple worship was in the truth that the God who dwelt there was the Saviour for the whole world. He is in no church whose mission is limited to itself. No church is so poor that it cannot share actively in giving the gospel to the world. That is its chief mission.

Here, then, we have found the significance of the dedication of Solomon's temple. Sincere, united worship from true worshipers brought the nation into union with God as its sovereign. The people there heard the wondrous promises he had made and the wonderful way in which he had kept them. Their desire for his presence was thus kept alive and increased. Their motives to obedience were strengthened as their knowledge of his commandments was made more clear. They were trained to daily worship, whose fruits were constant obedience; and this knowledge of God and of their mission to give him to the world ennobled them.

Such divine gifts, in far greater measure, are ours. Once God dwelt in the midst of his people in a temple made with hands, but he gave to the world a far richer blessing when "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." Then the only begotten Son withdrew his bodily presence in order that the Holy Spirit might be given to men. He waits to manifest his presence in every life that will invite him. He makes a temple of every renewed heart. He dwells in every company of believers who have covenanted together to obey him. His presence in all the land will make a prosperous people who will be a blessing to the whole world.

Begin Work Early

if you want to, but you won't have to work late anyway, if you use because it washes clothes quickly. Try Sunlight Soap next wash day and you will know what easy washing means.

Sunlight Soap

Less Labor Greater Comfort. Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson & Harrison Sts., New York.

Liebig Company's Extract of Beef

is the essence of all that is best in beef. Only the best parts of the best cattle, raised by the company on their own grazing fields in Uruguay, are used. That's why it is the best, and for over thirty years unapproached for purity and fine flavor.

For improved and economic Cookery
For refreshing, nourishing Beef Tea

Food for the Baby

If mother can't nourish it; if it is pale and thin, try

Somatose

Mother's Milk.

Somatose is a powder made from the most nourishing elements of meat, and used in proper proportion with sterilized milk forms the best substitute known for mother's milk. Send for formula, mailed free.

At druggists, in 2-oz., ¼, ½ and 1 lb. tins.

Also the following combinations, Somatose-Biscuit, Somatose-Cocoa, Somatose-Chocolate — each containing 10 per cent. Somatose. Very convenient and palatable preparations.

Pamphlets mailed by Schieffelin & Co., New York, agents for Farbenfabriken vorm. Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfeld.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

ISAAC RILEY,

Successor to Baird & Riley,

PLUMBER AND SANITARY ENGINEER,

85 Joy St., Near Cambridge St., Boston.

Telephone, Haymarket 294.

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN'S SERVICE TO SPAIN.

BY S. E. BRIDGMAN.

We had kept in touch for many a year with Spanish mission life as conducted by William H. Gulick and his wife, one of Holyoke's most loyal daughters. But six weeks with them and in their country has revealed far more than we ever dreamed of their trials and bitter experiences as well as their success. For over a quarter of a century they have been at the head of Spanish missions. Only a few hours from Paris, where American tourists gather by the thousands, yet rarely have they had the personal presence of their friends to cheer and encourage. We think of Spain as a civilized land where idolatry is as rare as in our own country, and perhaps for this very reason undervalue the need of special work. Mr. and Mrs. Gulick find the Spaniards a noble, generous and loyal people but ignorant, superstitious and devoted to the Roman Catholic faith. They look upon our American Protestants as intruders, and when they dare they persecute them and hinder their work in every way possible. Within a short time it has been openly said, "Would that the days of the Inquisition could return and these heretics be blotted out." Our teachers are as isolated and tabooed as in the darkest districts of the South, and the Cuban rebellion only makes the distance between them and the Spaniards wider than ever.

Mr. Gulick has an immense burden on his shoulders. He must be a financier in order to attend to the management of all the Spanish missions under the A. B. C. F. M; he must be a statesman and be able to understand the intricacies of Spanish law as to customs, duties, marriage and civil relations; he must be a cool, clear-headed diplomat, able to meet the highest officials of the realm on questions connected with his work. Mrs. Gulick must be not only careful and wise but progressive and wide-awake, impressing her personality upon the Spanish people. Recently she has found it a difficult and delicate matter to deal with the intensely patriotic girls of her school, who are as thoroughly in earnest on the Cuban question as their parents.

The story of Mrs. Gulick's life for the past quarter of a century is full of pathos. She has seen her first-born pass away in circumstances of peculiar suffering, because of the cruelty of a bigoted Spanish nurse, the only one available. She has had to live in the most economical way to save for the Board. As an instance of her economy in this line, when we were in Spain she had occasion to visit the officials in Madrid and elsewhere, and we planned to travel with her. She smilingly remarked, "I shall be delighted to journey with you for a week, but if I do you must ride with me in a third-class car, for I never travel in any other; we cannot afford it." Rarely do American travelers, even the poorest, take any other than the first-class carriages in Spain. The rude accommodations are but a trifling annoyance, compared with the smoky, filthy, vermin covered crowd, yet this refined American woman has patiently endured such discomforts for twenty-five years, from love to the cause of Christ.

One who has never visited Mrs. Gulick's San Sebastian home can hardly realize the daily annoyance and inconvenience experienced for long years in the building itself. It stands on a fine street and is quite imposing without, but within the sanitary arrangements are poor, the kitchen is small and dingy, the rooms for study and the dormitories inconvenient, requiring persistent care to keep the students comfortable and healthy. It is the constant anxiety on this score, added to the duties of teaching, which has made the life of this missionary in many respects far more wearing than if her lot had been in South Africa or India. The owner of the building is a Roman Catholic and will do absolutely nothing towards repairs or making the changes demanded. A few years ago Mr. Gulick earnestly desired funds for erecting suitable buildings on one of the most charming sites of the city, which at that time was in market at an extremely low price. The opportunity was lost and now the price for that site has greatly advanced.

Mrs. Gulick's present invalidism, we think, is due in part to her anxiety as to the support of the missions. She has time and again, when really physically unable, sought pecuniary aid personally, and stinted herself and family to help the work. But she has lived to see the graduates of the International Institute for Girls scattered throughout Spain, and as teachers, wives, mothers, exerting a wide influence. In many a city in this old Catholic, bigoted Spain we have found pastors and teachers who, through the influence and noble lives of the household gathered at 40 Avenida, San Sebastian, are doing a superb work, notwithstanding the opposition and hindrances placed in their way.

We had the pleasure of speaking to the young ladies of the San Sebastian school and found them as bright and interesting as the girls in College Hall at South Hadley. They were refined in manner and dress, and it was a pleasure to look into their responsive faces and see the appreciative sparkle of their black eyes. In the parlors they sang for us in Spanish and in English, with the pure Castilian voice that was full of melody. The mental caliber of these young women is evidenced by the fact that some of them outrank the male students in the University of Madrid, and have compelled the respect of those who once hissed them at the matriculation examinations. One of the professors, astonished at the scholarship of the girls, asked, "Who are your teachers?" "We were educated at Mrs. Gulick's school," was the answer. His surprised exclamation, "What, taught by women! They your only teachers!" was an involuntary tribute to woman's ability as an educator.

MRS. ALICE GORDON GULICK.

Mrs. Gulick is now seeking restoration to health in a sanitarium in this country, and we trust the prayers of a host of friends will be assured and her beautiful and useful life spared for many years. May her pathetic appeal for funds touch the hearts of those who in this extremity desire to see Spanish missions heartily sustained.

Rev. Dr. George C. Lorimer of Tremont Temple has been drawn into the not altogether creditable controversy now raging among Southern Baptists as to whether the Baptists of England practiced immersion prior to 1641, and it is not surprising to find him saying: "Suppose I am wrong in my sincere belief that the Baptists of England did immerse prior to 1641, what then? And suppose I am compelled to abandon that belief? Is my loyalty to the teachings of Christ and his apostles to be impugned, and am I henceforward to be held as one under suspicion in our great denomination? Surely not. Surely our own people have not forgotten the brightest pages in their annals, and would hasten to condemn a man who has given his life to the interpretation of the people on account of an historical mistake?"

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. H. A. BRIDGMAN.

Topic, Nov. 8–14. The Most Interesting Thing I Know About Foreign Missions. Acts 17: 16–31.

The success of a meeting with a topic like this depends not on the leader, but on the variety and aptness of individual answers. It will be a good test of the knowledge of foreign missions which the rank and file of Christian Endeavorers have. And it will be a capital thing if the raising of the questions causes a general consultation of the missionary encyclopedias and biographies of the heroes of foreign fields, of the headquarters for literature issued by the various denominational societies. Perhaps for the first time it may dawn on some mind that the foreign missionary movement is interesting even to the verge of fascination. In the annals of what other branch of the Christian church shall we find more thrilling and wonderful adventures, more inspiring self-devotion, greater unforeseen and indirect issues of endeavor and more signal providential oversight and care?

To me it is interesting that persons want to go on foreign missions; that year after year the choicest flower of our young manhood and womanhood present themselves for such service; that little by little they overcome the barriers of a different tongue, of totally different traditions and customs, and in due time succeed in establishing centers of light and blessing. I like, also, to notice how the work is amplified as the years go on; how schools and hospitals and theological seminaries spring up as a natural and necessary fruit of the gospel seed; how the essentials of a Christian society and the laws that govern human intercourse among Christian persons come to be as marked within a limited area as they are in the most favored parts of nominally Christian countries.

If pressed to a comparative judgment, coming from recent contact with missionaries in the meetings of the American Board, I should be inclined to say that the most interesting thing about missions which I know is the reacting influence upon those engaged in the work. It means something that certain families become noted for the participation in the foreign work of parents, children and children's children. It means much that almost every missionary here in this country on a furlough yearns for the time to come when he can return to his field. Do we not see here a fulfillment of Christ's promise to those who leave much in order to follow him? The church at home may become indifferent to foreign missions, may even cherish doubts as to their wisdom and expediency, but the missionaries at the front never lose their confidence that God intends by human instrumentality to bring the nations to himself. So we ought to quicken our lagging faith and lukewarm zeal by looking into the shining faces of the missionaries, whose whole-souled devotion to Christ has brought its own reward in lives purified, mellowed and ennobled.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, Nov. 1–7. The Christian in Politics. 1 Pet. 2: 11–17.

What is our duty in obeying laws, in maintaining just laws, in choosing rulers; in promoting public spirit, confidence in the body politic, the reverence of the nation for God?

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

Literature

BOOK REVIEWS.

THE CHRISTIAN DEMOCRACY.

This volume, by Rev. Dr. J. McD. Leavitt, is in a familiar vein. It is in the form of lectures and reads as if it must originally have been delivered to an audience. The style is decidedly rhetorical and at times almost impassioned. The work is the fruit of elaborate and careful study, and it is packed with historic information which is clearly and tellingly expressed. The author, whether purposely or not we do not know, has made a strong argument for Congregationalism. He insists upon, and successfully demonstrates, the existence of a Christian democracy in the earlier churches. Then he describes the gradual development of the hierarchical system. Then he goes on to explain how the papacy grew up and became corrupt, and how the Reformation resulted and what its nature was. And he concludes by prophesying and exalting the triumph of Christian democracy once more. Although the book contains little which has not been said before, it is so comprehensive, graphic and practically serviceable that it deserves to be a success and doubtless will be.

Moreover, one meets now and then with a thought which is unhackneyed, if not original—for instance, the distinction between "stone" and "rock" which the author draws in the famous passage in the sixteenth of Matthew, relating to Peter. Notable skill, also, has been exhibited in the characterization of the successive great councils of the church and in portraying the frequent inconsistencies of their action and the still more frequent bickerings and wirepullings out of which those actions grew. No one can study the facts, as here presented, without perceiving how weak is the claim of authority when made by any special branch of the church as such. And one is forced to conclude, with the author, that it is safest to trust the individual Christian to study his Bible with the aid of an enlightened conscience in order to determine the teachings of God to mankind.

The chapter on Anglicanism is worth the attention of those who regard the Anglican church as "The Church." With all respect to the honorable history and the eminent usefulness of the members of that body, their exclusive claim is conspicuously unjustifiable and in these pages this is demonstrated. To our thinking Dr. Leavitt has devoted needless space to the Fathers of the Church. Yet there is a certain value in the testimony which he cites from them. Without ranking among the most scholarly works of its class in form and style, the volume certainly deserves a high place in the confidence of Christian readers. [Eaton & Mains. $1.50.]

RELIGIOUS.

Heaven Every Day, or Common Sense Christianity [Thomas Whittaker. 50 cents], is from the pen of T. F. Seward. It is not only enjoyable but also profitable for the Christian reader. Few will accept everything in it but few will fail to enjoy most of it. The author apparently regards the reunion of Christendom as practicable and is forgetful of certain evils which probably would result therefrom. But the book is characterized by good sense, deep spiritual earnestness and a personal magnetism which impresses the reader.

A Daily Thought for a Daily Endeavor [Baker & Taylor Co. $1.25] has been compiled by Eleanor A. Sutphen and Eliza P. Sutphen. It is offered as a Christian year book of courage and good cheer. It is one of those pleasant and serviceable volumes which supply religious reading and material for spiritual meditation for each day. Texts of Scripture with selections in verse and prose passages from writers of more or less distinction have been grouped with discrimination, and the publishers have done their part of the work tastefully.

In Cheerful Philosophy for Thoughtful Invalids [E. T. Clarke & Co. 50 cents] Mr. W. H. Clarke offers a little miscellany of narrative, philosophy and religious suggestions which is well adapted to its purpose.

STORIES.

Rev. S. R. Crockett in his new novel, The Gray Man [Harper & Bros. $1.50], has taken for his period the time of King James in Scotland, and his hero is squire to a Scotch noble and a prominent actor in the long feud between the two branches of the Kennedy clan. The narrative is written with the author's customary vividness and intensity. The characters are drawn with exceptional power and herein lies the special strength of the book. There is comparatively little description of scenery, and the accounts of special occurrences, such as the fight in Edinboro, although spirited and effective, ordinarily are not such striking proofs of the author's rare abilities as his portrayals of the widely differing types of character which appear and re-appear in his pages. Yet it must be admitted that in certain scenes, notably those in the Cave of Death, he has illustrated a descriptive power which seldom has been surpassed in its way. It is difficult to believe that such fiends in human form ever existed, even in the wild and semi-barbaric Scotland of the time, but we have no reason for supposing that the picture is inaccurate, and it certainly affords superior material for the purposes of the author and he has exhibited again his always complete and at times fairly bewitching mastery of his art. The atmosphere of the book is gloomy and at times oppressive, yet even in this it is doubtless true to the life of the period described, and throughout there runs an undercurrent of cheery, sterling manhood and tender womanhood which grows more and more evident until it dominates the outcome. Whether or not the story be regarded as equally inviting with his earlier productions, as to which we have some doubt, it will not diminish his wide and honorable reputation in authorship.

A little in the same vein, as a narrative of wars and love, is Amyas Egerton, Cavalier [Harper & Bros. $1.50], by Maurice H. Hervey. It deals with the reign of King Charles the First and portrays the experiences of a young cavalier, hardly more than a boy, who was one of the foremost of King Charles's supporters, and whose loyalty and daring led him into perilous adventures and nearly to death. The author has caused the hero to make somewhat too rapid progress from boyhood to manhood, in view of the fact that only a year or two is covered by the narrative, but the tale is well told. It furnishes a vivid picture of the Loyalist side of the great controversy and the book is not only exciting but profitable reading for the boys and girls. The only serious exception which we take to it is that it does not do justice to the better aspects of the character of Cromwell and his Ironsides.

The White Shield [F. A. Stokes Co. $1.00], by Bertram Mitford, also is a fighting story and ranks with the foregoing in interest. But its scene is South Africa, and its actors are Zulus and their foes, and it reminds the reader forcibly of the works of Mr. Haggard. It deals with warfare necessarily from the barbaric point of view, but we do not find anything that is likely to have an injurious influence, and it certainly possesses intense and lasting interest and portions of it exhibit a high quality of literary merit.

It is a striking contrast to take up Mrs. Cliff's Yacht [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.50], by F. R. Stockton. We will not lessen the pleasure of those who have not read it as a serial by outlining the plot, but will merely say that the vagaries in which the author's active fancy delights to indulge are illustrated here in a serio-comic manner, which is highly entertaining. No small part of the attractiveness of the book, to our thinking, is due to a certain blandness of style, which is almost indescribable but which adds a delicate finish to the absurdities which are narrated.

Marie Corelli is one of the most popular of modern authors, and deservedly, but there is an immense difference between her best work and her poorest. In one or two recent books she has seemed to be controlled too much by a spiteful disposition to sneer at the world of authors and critics, as though she believed that it had failed to do her justice, and to boast of the popular approval which her books nevertheless have received. This is in bad taste and there is too much of it in her new book, The Murder of Delicia [J. B. Lippincott Co. $1.25]. Moreover, in her laudable desire to hold up to contempt the frivolous and brutal, and often immoral, practices which too largely prevail in fashionable society, she has gone to an undue extreme and has overdrawn her picture extravagantly. The consequence is a painful book. Delicia, the heroine, although one would gladly admire and sympathize with her and cannot help indorsing her general views of life and conduct, nevertheless often is an unnatural and somewhat tiresome heroine, and however much of hearty sympathy one may have for the author's motive, one can but regret that the excellent material in her pages has not been put to a more effective use. There is no particular reason made apparent why Delicia should have died, but one is very glad to get done with her and with the book.

Marcus Clarke, the author of Heavy Odds [J. B. Lippincott Co. $1.00], has a painfully vivid conception of the depths of meanness and rascality to which some men sink and he has done his best to describe them in this book. There is brightness and beauty in it, here or there, but in the main it is a simple picture of the gradual entanglement of one or two of the prominent characters in their own snares, or in the consequences of their evil doings. The book probably was not written to point a moral, but it does point one, and an important one, very clearly. But it is by no means pleasant reading.

Lady Val's Elopement [J. B. Lippincott Co. $1.00], by John Bickerdyke, is lighter reading, more chatty and even superficial. It is too long, but it is bright, amusing and touches wholesomely upon sundry social questions. It is a good book for the train or the hammock.

The reader of Artie [H. S. Stone & Co.], by George Ade, probably will be disgusted by his early impressions. The book at first appears to be an elaborate and careful study in slang, and to have nothing else in it. But if he will read on he will find that it is a study of the development of manhood which, in spite of its disagreeable form, is worth his attention, and which to some degree undoubtedly is true of the life of many young men. The author shows a keen discrimination and somewhat remarkable descriptive powers, and we have laid down the book with a respect for him and for it, and a feeling that it may prove positively uplifting and helpful to some readers, which we were very far from having in regard to it at first.

A new number of the Unknown Library is A Village Drama [Cassell Publishing Co. 50 cents], by Vesta S. Simmons. The scene is in the West and the occurrences have a distinctive Western flavor, yet much of the book might have been written of the rural East. It is a character study, vigorous rather than delicate, but exhibiting real ability and not without considerable interest.

In A Book of Martyrs [Charles Scribner's Sons. 75 cents], by Cornelia A. Pratt, are eight short stories, most of which already have appeared in print. They are good specimens of the effective manner in which some writers have learned to impress a point in small compass. They illustrate genuine literary ability and frequently are strikingly dramatic, and a spirit of nobility pervades them all.

Of the new and beautiful Riverside Edition of the writings of Harriet Beecher Stowe, we have The Minister's Wooing, The Pearl of Orr's Island and Agnes of Sorrento. The publisher's work in print, paper, illustrations and binding bears evidence to the high degree of perfection which has been attained by the best American makers of books. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Each $1.50.]

EDUCATIONAL.

In the series of Eclectic English Classics, three more numbers are published. They are The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin, Tennyson's Princess and four books of Pope's translation of Homer's Iliad [American Book Co. 35, 20 and 20 cents.] They are issued in the familiar style of this series and are neat and tasteful little volumes, well adapted to their purpose. The books of the Iliad included are the first, sixth, twenty-second and twenty-fourth.——The Eclectic School Readings is a different series, from the same publishers, and Defoe's Robinson Crusoe [50 cents] edited by Kate Stevens, and Fifty Famous Stories Retold [35 cents], compiled by James Baldwin, are sent us. The stories are such familiar ones as King Alfred and the Cakes, Pocahontas, Cornelia's Jewels, Damon and Pythias, etc.

Allen and Greenough's well-known edition of the Select Orations of Cicero [Ginn & Co. $1.40] has been revised by Professors J. B. Greenough and G. L. Kittredge, and although it follows mainly the original lines has been so thoroughly rewritten and so considerably enlarged as to be practically a new work. Educators are so familiar with the former edition and its characteristics that this new edition needs but brief mention in order to secure it their careful attention.——Dr. Willard Humphreys has edited Selections from the History of Alexander the Great [Ginn & Co. 55 cents], by Quintus Curtius Rufus, as a volume of the series of school classics. It is intended for beginners in Latin and is enriched by notes and other aids somewhat more freely than would be natural in the case of more advanced scholars, but it is well adapted to do good service.

Prof. O. B. Super has completed an Elementary German Reader [Ginn & Co. 45 cents] in which is a skillfully made selection of stories and poems adapted to the needs of young students, and it seems to be admirably suited to its object, but the type is rather trying to the eyes, and we do not believe in the policy of altering the text of selected portions even when the alterations are frankly acknowledged.——The American Book Co. sends us the Second Year in French [$1.00], by L. C. Syms. The author's other book, intended for first year study, has proved a success and this is offered as a sequel to that. It is upon essentially the same plan, special attention wisely having been bestowed upon the subject of verbs.——Prof. B. F. Sledd and Hendren Gorrell, Ph. D., have edited La Princesse de Cleves [Ginn & Co. 70 cents], by Madame de Lafayette, and have supplied an introduction and notes, thereby making an attractive little volume for the student of French.——No. 1 of A Second Year's Course in French Lessons and Exercises [D. C. Heath & Co. 25 cents] is a volume in Heath's Modern Language Series, and is by Mr. C. H. Grandgent. It is intended to follow his First Year's Course and is an arrangement of ninety lessons. It is a thoroughly scholarly production as well as simple and clear in arrangement.

A Practical Arithmetic [Ginn & Co. .75 cents], by G. A. Wentworth, puts special emphasis on the solving of problems and is a sequel to the author's Elementary Arithmetic. Its principal peculiarities are one or two changes in the common order of arrangement, of no great importance. It is a well edited and handsomely printed volume for daily use.——Students of the higher mathematics will find Prof. Webster Wells's New Plane and Spherical Trigonometry [Leach, Shewell & Sanborn. $1.25] a revision of the author's former work in which are some new features and which apparently leaves little to be desired as a text-book.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In view of the present outpouring of admiration for the late Robert Louis Stevenson it is almost a heresy to suggest that any of his productions fall short of almost ideal perfection. Nevertheless we have been unable to read his account of experiences and observations in the Pacific, which is entitled In the South Seas [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.50], without a somewhat oppressive sense of the length of the narrative and its frequent repetitions. That it is charmingly written, for the most part, is true. So far as concerns style some of the descriptions are hard to be surpassed. The character pictures are invariably superior and yet—can it be that the inherent interest of the subject is not great?—one grows weary again and again as he reads. If the book were two-thirds as long it would be one-third better, but it does reveal afresh much of the rare literary grace and skill of its distinguished author, although in a very different manner from that of his stories, and also much of the charm of his personality, and it does portray the life of the Pacific Islands with minute clearness.

An Illustrated Flora of the Northern United States, Canada and the British Possessions, by Nathaniel Lord Britton, Ph. D., and Hon. Addison Brown, is the first volume of a projected series of three works, which will cover the whole botanical field of the region bounded on the south by the southern line of Virginia, on the west by the 102d meridian and on the north by the Arctic regions. Professor Britton is himself responsible for the text, with the assistance of specialists in several groups. The peculiarity of the book is that every species is figured, and, so far as practicable, in its own natural size. This, together with the completeness of scope and inclusion of the latest information on its topic, makes the volume of extreme value as a book of reference, while its moderate price brings it within the reach of all botanical students. It fills a gap, accomplishing for American botany what has already been done for Great Britain and Northern Europe. The mechanical execution of text and drawings is admirable. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $3.00.]

The enthusiasm of the Browning Societies began the making of a concordance to his works, but the task, though brought to completion with reference to several of the poems, was finally abandoned as too costly and difficult. We have, instead, A Phrase Book from the Poetic and Dramatic Works of Robert Browning, by Marie Ada Molineux, Ph. D., with an added index of significant words not elsewhere noted. Miss Molineux has rendered a service to the lovers and students of the poet which will bring her their hearty gratitude. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $3.00.]

Music Study in Germany [Macmillan Co. $1.25], by Amy Fay, edited by Mrs. Fay Pierce, published originally in 1880, is out in its sixteenth edition. One hardly needs to say more than that in order to testify to its attractiveness, but we will add that its charm is due, not merely to what it contains about music, but also to the author's delightful way of describing her life in general, the friends whom she made, and kindred matters. It will long retain its deserved popularity.——Nugæ Litterariæ [Roberts Bros. $1.50], by William Mathews, contains brief essays on literary, social and other themes. The author has a remarkable power of saying ordinary things in an unusually interesting way. The commonplace, so to speak, is his chosen realm, but there is nothing commonplace about his pages. Many of his paragraphs are short stories, and his book will do good service in entertaining the reader and in pointing many a useful moral acutely although unobtrusively.

The War of the Standards [G. P. Putnam's Sons. 75 cents], is by Judge A. W. Tourgée. Its sub-title is Cash With Credit versus Cash Without Credit. It is a timely discussion of the currency and kindred topics, is well adapted to do good service during the present campaign and is a book whose usefulness will by no means be ended when the campaign shall have closed. Of course it defends a sound currency.——Dr. Andrew D. White's little pamphlet, Fiat Money in France [D. Appleton & Co. 50 cents], also deserves mention in this connection as a learned yet popular little historical study, strikingly apt and telling in relation to present issues.

Dr. P. M. Wise has prepared a Textbook for Training Schools for Nurses [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.25]. It is a good example of expert work, the fruits of which are condensed into a small but sufficiently comprehensive and serviceable volume.——The Nursery Book [Macmillan Co. $1.00], by L. H. Bailey, has reached its third edition. It deals with the nursery in the horticultural and not the domestic sense, and is a thoroughly valuable and commendable work.

NOTES.

—— All of Sir Walter Besant's works now are in the hands of Messrs. Chatto & Windus of London.

—— Rudyard Kipling's new novel, Captain Courageous, has been sold for $7,000 to the proprietor of The New Review.

—— The first edition of Mr. S. R. Crockett's new story, The Gray Man, contained 35,000 copies, and was all called for at once.

—— The Boston Public Library has received from Col. T. W. Higginson his collection of volumes relating to the history of women. It numbers about 1,000 books.

—— The death of George Du Maurier will add interest to the reading of The Martians, his latest story, which the Harpers are issuing in their monthly magazine. He had completed the story and some of the illustrations.

—— The centennial of the discovery of the art of lithography was observed in New York on Oct. 16, 17. The most complete exposition of the products of lithography ever known was held in the Lexington Avenue Opera House. A prominent feature of it was a large and valuable collection of lithographs and engravings made by and belonging to Mr. C. R. Milne, of Owensboro, Ky., who was a lithographer in New York city from 1833 to 1854, and probably was the pioneer in that business in this country. The art was invented by Aloys Senefelder of Munich, near the end of the last century. The first lithographic prints published appeared in 1796 and were pieces of music, and the art was introduced into England in 1800, and was then called polyautography.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN. By Harriet Beecher Stowe. 2 vols. pp. 333, 476, $1.50 each.
HOUSEHOLD PAPERS AND STORIES. By Harriet Beecher Stowe. pp. 496. $1.50.
A QUIET ROAD. By Lizette W. Reese. pp. 79. $1.00.
THE SPIRITUAL SENSE OF DANTE'S DIVINA COMMEDIA. By W. T. Harris. pp. 192. $1.25.
TALKS ABOUT AUTOGRAPHS. By George Birkbeck Hill. pp. 191. $3.50.

Lee & Shepard. Boston.

TECUMSEH'S YOUNG BRAVES. By Everett T. Tomlinson. pp. 356. $1.50.
THE ROSEBUD CLUB. By Grace Le Baron. pp. 178. 75 cents.
A MANUAL FOR CHINA PAINTERS. By Mrs. N. Di R. Monachesi. pp. 291. $1.25.

Roberts Bros. Boston.

A CAPE MAY DIAMOND. By Evelyn Raymond. pp. 325. $1.50.
THE BLACK DOG. By A. G. Plympton. pp. 230. $1.25.
JERRY THE BLUNDERER. By Lily F. Wesselhoeft. pp. 255. $1.25.
LITTLE DAUGHTER OF THE SUN. By Julia P. Dabney. pp. 209. $1.25.

Little, Brown & Co. Boston.

CARMEN. By Prosper Mérimée, translated and illustrated by E. H. Garrett. pp. 118. $2.00.

Silver, Burdett & Co. Boston.

SYRIA FROM THE SADDLE. By Albert P. Terhune. pp 318. $1.50.
PLANE GEOMETRY. By George D. Pettee, B. A. pp. 253. 75 cents.
HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES. By W. A. Mowry, Ph. D., and A. M. Mowry. pp. 437. $1.04.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

THE NEW ARITHMETIC. By W. W. Speer. pp. 154. 40 cents.
ALLEN AND GREENOUGH'S SHORTER LATIN GRAMMAR. Condensed and revised by J. B. Greenough, assisted by A. A. Howard. pp. 371. $1.05.

George H. Ellis. Boston.

THE POWER OF SILENCE. By H. W. Dresser. pp. 219. $1.50.

W. A. Wilde & Co. Boston.

SERAPH THE LITTLE VIOLINIST. By Mrs. C. V. Jamison. pp 298. $1.50.
THREE YOUNG CONTINENTALS. By Everett T. Tomlinson. pp. 364. $1.50.

D. C. Heath & Co. Boston.

GUIDES FOR SCIENCE TEACHING: Insecta. By Alpheus Hyatt and J. M. Arms. pp. 300.
LE CONSCRIT DE 1813. By Erckmann-Chatrian. Edited by O. B. Super. pp. 210. 65 cents.

Joseph Knight Co. Boston.

THREE CHILDREN OF GALILEE. By John Gordon. pp. 279. $1.50.
THROUGH LOVE TO LIGHT. By J. W. Chadwick and Amie H. Chadwick. pp. 211. $1.25.
FRIENDLY TALKS ABOUT MARRIAGE. By G. W. Shinn. pp. 122. $1.00.

D. Appleton & Co. New York.

GENIUS AND DEGENERATION. By Dr. William Hirsch. pp. 333. $3.50.
PIONEERS OF SCIENCE IN AMERICA. Edited by William Jay Youmans, M. D. pp. 508. $4.00.

The Macmillan Co. New York.

THE TEMPLE SHAKESPEARE: Venus and Adonis and Rape of Lucrece. pp. 107, 125. Each 45 cents.
THE OTHER HOUSE. By Henry James. pp. 388. $1.50.
POETICAL WORKS OF WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. Edited by William Knight. Vol. VII. pp. 416. $1.50.
A CATHEDRAL PILGRIMAGE. By Julia C. R. Dorr. pp. 277. 50 cents.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

STORIES AND LEGENDS FROM WASHINGTON IRVING. pp. 312. $1.50.
QUESTIONS OF THE DAY: A General Freight and Passenger Post. By James L. Cowles. pp. 155. 75 cents.
BOHEMIA. By C. Edmund Maurice. pp. 533. $1.50.
THE WRITINGS OF THOMAS PAINE. Edited by Moncure D. Conway. pp. 521. $2.50.
ABOUT CHILDREN, WHAT MEN AND WOMEN HAVE SAID. Arranged by Rose Porter. pp. 221. $1.00.
CONCERNING FRIENDSHIP, AN EVERYDAY BOOK. Compiled by Eliza A. Stone. pp. 209. $1.00.

Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.

FOR EACH NEW DAY. Arranged by Delavan L. Pierson. pp. 379. $1 25.
DWELL DEEP. pp. 192 75 cents.
CHOSEN OF GOD. By Rev. Herbert W. Lathe. pp. 306. $1 25.
THE MAKING OF A HERO. By Mrs. G. A. Paull. pp. 87. 50 cents.
"PROBABLE SONS." pp. 120. 50 cents.

Frederick A. Stokes Co. New York.

REVENGE! By Robert Barr. pp. 308. $1.25.
THE HEART OF PRINCESS OSRA. By Anthony Hope. pp. 301. $1.50.
FAIRY TALES FAR AND NEAR. By Q. pp. 196. $1.50.
LITTLE MEN AND MAIDS. By Frances Brundage and Elizabeth S. Tucker. $1.25.

T. Y. Crowell & Co. New York.

THE LIFE OF SIR WALTER SCOTT By J. G. Lockhart. 2 vols. pp. 357, 295. $3.00.
BENEATH THE SEA. By George M. Fenn. pp. 421. $1.50.
WALTER GIBBS, THE YOUNG BOSS. By Edward W. Thompson. pp. 361. $1.50.
AFTER COLLEGE, WHAT? FOR GIRLS. By Helen E. Starrett. pp. 27. 35 cents.
THE GOLDEN RULE IN BUSINESS. By Rev. C. F. Dole. pp. 70. 35 cents.
THE PATHS OF DUTY. By Rev. F. W. Farrar, D. D. pp 77. 35 cents.
THE STORY OF A BUSY LIFE. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D. pp. 275. $1.00.

Longmans, Green & Co. New York.

HISTORY OF SCULPTURE. By Allan Marquand, Ph. D., L. H. D., and A. L. Frothingham, Jr., Ph. D. pp. 293. $1.50.

R. F. Fenno & Co. New York.

THE MIST ON THE MOORS. By Joseph Hocking. pp. 170. 75 cents.

Biglow & Main Co. New York.

COLLEGE HYMNAL. pp. 272. 80 cents.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

THE ORACLE OF BAAL. Edited by J. Provand Webster. pp. 374. $1 50.
SWEPT OUT TO SEA. By David Ker. pp. 297. $1.50.
PHILIPPA. By Mrs. Molesworth. pp. 328. $1 25.
BETTY OF WYE. By Amy E. Blanchard. pp. 258. $1.25.
THE CHRISTIAN YEAR. By John Keble. pp. 335. $1.50.
A TAME SURRENDER. By Capt. Charles King. pp. 277. 75 cents.
THE MYSTERY OF THE ISLAND. By Henry Kingsley. pp. 256. $1 25
TWO LITTLE WOODEN SHOES. By Louisa de la Rame (Ouida). pp. 240. $1.25.
UNDER TWO FLAGS. By "Ouida." 2 vols. pp. 412, 396. $3.00.

A. C. McClurg & Co. Chicago.

THE SCRAPE THAT JACK BUILT. By Ottilie A. Lilyencrantz. pp. 248. $1.25.
THE METHOD OF DARWIN. By Frank Cramer. pp. 232. $1 00.
SCIENCE SKETCHES. By David S. Jordan. pp. 285. $1.50.

A. R. McCabe & Co. Chicago.

LIFE-TIME HYMNS. pp. 287.

PAPER COVERS.

Cong. S. S. & Pub. Society. Boston.

THE COUNCIL MANUAL. pp. 71. 10 cents.

D. C. Heath & Co. Boston.

BIGARREAU By André Theuriet. Edited by C. Fontaine, B. L., L. D. pp. 62. 25 cents.
SELECTIONS FOR SIGHT TRANSLATION. By Mary S. Bruce. pp. 34. 15 cents.

United Evangelical Publishing House. Harrisburg, Pa.

THE HEART OF A JEW. By Mark Levy. pp. 103. 25 cents.

Bible Institute Colportage Association. Chicago.

SUNDAY TALKS. By Josiah Niel. pp. 122. 15 cents.

W. B. Saunders. Philadelphia.

FEEDING IN EARLY INFANCY. By A. W. Meigs, M. D. 25 cents.

MAGAZINES.

October. UNITARIAN.—SUNDAY.—GOOD WORDS.—FORTNIGHTLY.—NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC.—BIBLIA.
November. FRANK LESLIE'S.—PENNY.—CASSELL'S.—NINETEENTH CENTURY.

THE CELEBRATION AT PRINCETON.

BY I. O. R.

All that foresight and preparation had done to make the inaugural of Princton's university career successful after 150 years of college life was carried to triumphant success by the brilliant enthusiasm of the students, alumni and friends of the institution. The presence of the representatives of the great schools of Europe and America, the participation of President and Mrs. Cleveland in the parade, the brilliant decorations and illuminations emphasizing the contrast between the one central building with its great historical associations and the multitude of structures devoted to the modern uses of the university, none of these to the thoughtful observer could compare in interest with the army of students, beginning with the little groups of old men and ending with the full companies of recent graduates, which marched on the night of the torchlight procession before the President of the United States and the president of the university.

The sesqui-centennial observances began with the delivery of several lectures or series of lectures by invited guests from European universities in the week preceding the celebration proper. On Tuesday, in consonance with the Christian spirit which has always been dominant in the college management, the opening services were religious, including a sermon by President Patton, whose theme was the relation of religion to university teaching. This was followed by a formal reception to the guests, including accredited delegates from more than a hundred colleges, universities and learned societies at home and abroad. New England was represented by Presidents Eliot of Harvard, Smyth of Andover, Tucker of Dartmouth, Hyde of Bowdoin, Hall of Clark, Hartranft of Hartford, Walker of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Buckham of Vermont, Carter of Williams, Professor Kimball of Amherst, Dean Fisher of the Yale Divinity School, Hon. William Everett of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and Professor Van Vleck of Wesleyan.

Wednesday was student and alumni day. The anniversary ode—a dignified and spirited poem called The Builders—was read by Henry Van Dyke, and the oration by Prof. Woodrow Wilson. Both found much of their inspiration in the stirring scenes of the Revolution and the heroic figure of President Witherspoon, and in both a just pride in the history of the institution was joined to a high sense of the obligations of a university in dealing with the problems to be solved and the work to be done for the nation in the future. The excitement of a football game, which had for spectators one of the most learned and dignified bodies ever gathered about the "gridiron" field, the reception of President and Mrs. Cleveland on their arrival from Washington, and the brilliant torchlight procession, reviewed by the presidents from the steps of old Nassau Hall, rounded out the day.

Thursday was the actual anniversary of the founding of the college. In the beautiful new Alexander Hall President Cleveland gave an address; the long list of honorary degrees was read, closing with the statement that President Cleveland had declined for himself the title of Doctor of Laws; gifts for improvement and endowment amounting already to $1,353,291 were announced; and the university name was formally assumed.

A great celebration has rarely been held at such a high level or carried through to such triumphant success. The friends of Princeton have reason to be proud of her past history, and their confidence in the administration of today is amply justified by the spirit in which the present opportunity has been used and by the pledges made for the future.

1846. The American Missionary Association Jubilee. 1896.

Last Week's Celebration in Boston of the Anniversary.

CHARACTERISTICS: Able addresses, formal and informal, large and enthusiastic audiences, inspiring music, and harmony between a noble history, corporate patriotism and an environment full of patriotic suggestion. An exceptionally fine program, eminent ministers and laymen and workers from the fields participating.

Nearly ten thousand dollars raised to assist in extinguishing the debt, reducing it to about $56,000.

The Boston of 1846 would not have given the officials or constituents of the A. M. A. the welcome that they received last week. To be sure, at that time there were many here who deplored the lethargy in Boston's churches and the condonation of slavery by our denominational societies. They were the choice few, however, the remnant, the leaven that was to leaven the lump.

And yet withal the A. M. A., in view of Boston's earlier and later history, could not have selected a more fitting place to celebrate its jubilee. The new Tremont Temple, where most of the meetings were held, is on the site of the old building where Horace Mann, Theodore Parker, Wendell Phillips and Charles Sumner thundered forth against slavery. Faneuil Hall, where the noon rallies were held, is the sacred edifice in which liberty of thought and liberty of speech have always ruled. Governor Wolcott, who welcomed the association in behalf of the commonwealth, is a scion of an old liberty-loving family, and Josiah Quincy, who welcomed the delegates to the city, is the fourth Josiah Quincy to win a high place in Massachusetts's list of intelligent, liberty-loving public servants.

THE EXTERNALS.

Tremont Temple, seating 2,700 persons, was crowded at two of the sessions and comfortably filled at most of them. The stars and stripes, the seals of the commonwealth and the city and appropriate mottoes appended to the walls and strung from pillar to post made the external aspect pleasing and inspiring. Swiftly moving elevators took those who desired to travel so to the lower rooms of the Temple, where in Lorimer Hall and its adjacent committee-rooms the delegates found that the committee on arrangements had made every provision for their comfort and intelligent distribution to their places of entertainment. Few will dispute the assertion that rarely has so large a gathering been so admirably cared for.

The scenes at some of the sessions were inspiring. When Bishop Tanner, the Negro, and Bishop Galloway, the white Southern Methodist, greeted each other as Christian brethren one realized that history had been made. The scene when the telegram from Florida announcing the overthrow of the Sheats Law was read defies adequate description. The Doxology welled up spontaneously. Handkerchiefs and flags waved lustily. Nor will those who witnessed it and heard it soon forget the Jubilee Quartet's rendering in Faneuil Hall of the Battle Hymn of the Republic. Singers as well as auditors were moved to tears, and the nether depths of patriots' hearts were profoundly stirred.

THE FORMAL WELCOME.

Bostonians present at the opening session had just reason to be proud of the spokesman for the Commonwealth, the city, the churches. Hon. Roger Wolcott, the acting governor, is never at a loss for finished words, and he is especially happy in addressing philanthropists and patriots, for he is to the manner born. He was felicitous in his development of the thought that organizations like the A. M. A. have an immortality of life which no individuals, however consecrated, possess, and his clear recognition of the trespass done to the Negro and the Indian in the past, and the need of atonement by society now, showed that he is prone to go to the roots of things.

Mayor Josiah Quincy's remarks were well-meaning and orthodox enough on the doctrine of the brotherhood of man, but they revealed a trace of ignorance as to the exact scope of the work of the association. But what of it? A modern city mayor can't know everything. The public are fortunate if he knows a "job" when he sees it and has courage enough to veto it. Mayor Quincy possesses these virtues.

Rev. Dr. S. E. Herrick's welcome on behalf of the churches was clean-cut, hearty, honest in its confession of Boston's past sins, and statesmanlike in its interpretation of the nation's and the association's histories during the fifty years from 1846 on. What could be more searching or true than this:

> It is less than fifty years ago that one minister of Boston wrote his South-side View of Slavery, and the daughter of another penned Uncle Tom's Cabin. The one book sizzled for a time like green wood and went out, and now lies like a blackened cinder upon the ash heap of defunct literature. The other burst into a clear flame at the start, and burns still with undimmed radiance, which promises to place it in the great canon which will some day hold the survival of the fittest in the history and prophecy of our nation's life; and one has to get on a high plane of view to say, what is nevertheless preëminently true:

> What a blessing was that terrible war! The penalty for ages of immeasurable wrong—but what a blessing nevertheless! All God's penalties are such. They scorch, they scarify, they consume; but they purge, they purify and cleanse They clear the vision of nations and of churches, as of men. The war dissolved the fetters of iron that bound the Southern slave; but it loosened the worse fetters of selfishness and worldliness that were upon the souls of Northern Christians. It unified Northern charity even as it compacted Northern patriotism.

President Gates's replies to these addresses of welcome were appropriate and eloquent.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

It reported the reduction of the debt from $96 000 to $66,000, owing to an increase in gifts and legacies of $26,000 over 1895 and the enforced retrenchment in expenses and work.

Measuring the capacity and possibility of the Negro by those who have attained highest powers, the race and the association's work among it are abundantly justifying the hopes of their friends, and the policy of the association to provide schools for higher education is proving so successful as to make it imperative that it should be adhered to inflexibly.

Among the highlanders of America, the mountain whites, the society now has nineteen schools and 2,405 pupils. In this work the old-fashioned academy has a large place. Great results are apparent, and leaders are being trained who will have far-reaching influence. The mountain churches have increased to fifty-six. The Congregational polity is being followed and is doing much to cultivate fellowship. Y. P. S. C. E. work is flourishing.

The churches in the South now number 218, the pastors 127 and the members 10,708, twenty-six new churches having been organized during the year; but the outer fringe of the work to be done has only been touched.

The work among the Indians is thriving and changing, thanks chiefly to the labors of the missionary on the field and Christian men at Washington. Legal changes for the bettering of the civic status of the Indian do not, however, affect his character. Decrease in the supply of the funds now makes the rapidly expanding opportunities seem tantalizing. Decreased enrollment in the Indian schools means lack of funds, not lack of opportunity. The Alaskan mission has been reopened, and successfully.

There are now nineteen schools among the Chinese in this country, 166 pupils in which give evidence of conversion. No part of the field probably shows a greater degree of Christian zeal and consuming sacrifice. Women have contributed $29,021 during the past year and they have taken 152 jubilee shares.

This report was presented and read by Dr. A. J. Lyman of Brooklyn.

THE TREASURER'S REPORT.

Following is the summary of the annual report of the treasurer, presented in person by Mr. H. W. Hubbard:

RECEIPTS.

Donations (of which on account of Jubilee shares, $20,237.21)	$184,551.13
Estates	86,642.22
Income	15,040.73
Tuition	38,490.44
Slater fund, paid institutions	6,500.00
Refunded from Arlington Mission fund	7,752.11
Sale of property	1,422.00
Total	$340,798.63

PAYMENTS.

Amount expended	$311,223.33
Credit balance on the year	$29,575.30

DEBT STATEMENT.

Oct. 1, 1895	$96,147.81
Credit by payment on debt	29,575.30
Debt Sept. 30, 1896	$66,572.51

ENDOWMENT FUND.

Estate Mrs. O. P. Atterbury, New York, balance	$250.00

DANIEL HAND INCOME ACCOUNT.

Balance on hand Oct. 1, 1895	$5,918.99
Income during the year	68,830.44
	$74,749.43
Payments	70,567.20
Balance on hand Sept 30, 1896	$4,182.23

Receipts for current work	$340,798.65
Receipts, endowment fund	250.00
Receipts, income Hand fund	68,830.44
Total receipts for the year	$409,879.09

DANIEL HAND ENDOWMENT FUND.

Estate of Daniel Hand, received during the year	$305,025.00

Income only for education of colored people.

THE SERMON.

Dr. Abbott's text was, "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren," and it led naturally to a discussion of the brotherhood of man. He set forth in his characteristically able way the distinctive contribution which each of the great historic nations has made to the thought of the world. The Jews exalted the idea of righteousness, the Greeks stood for the search for truth, the Romans proclaimed and illustrated order in human society, the Germans worked out the idea of liberty. America, without failing to repeat all these great messages of the past, must utter its own particular message, the brotherhood of man. Going on to define more precisely what this means Dr. Abbott affirmed first of all that it calls for just and equal rights before the law, in the second place for equal individual opportunities, thirdly, equal political rights and, fourthly, that all the redemptive influences that are operating among the more favored classes shall also be brought to bear upon the inferior races.

